What is believed to be the largest playable band instrument in the world is a tuba owned in Los Angeles, weighing 90 pounds and standing more than five feet high.

BRIBERY IS CHARGED

Special Committee in Woodstock Makes Its Report.

Several Suspicious Cases Are Mentioned In the Finding—County Official Approached Minister and Offered Bribe to Latter to Induce Toll-Road Owner to Sell Out—Royal Commission Should Be Requested.

Woodstock, Sept. 14.—The special committee appointed by the County Council to investigate the charges of bribery and corruption in connection with the purchase of the toll roads of the county reported to a special meeting of the council yesterday.

The report mentions specific instances that have suspicious aspects, and in one case tells of a prominent county official having approached a clergyman, and promised a large sum of money if he would induce the owner of the toll road between Woodstock and Ingersoll to sell out.

Other similar cases are cited, and with the report was submitted a letter from D. O. Cameron, solicitor, of Toronto, who stated plainly that the duty of the council was, in the face of the evidence, to demand the issuance of a royal commission and the prosecution of the alleged guilty parties. The investigating committee had a detective agency gathering the evidence, and parties were interviewed in Chicago, Denver, Toronto, Hamilton and other cities.

Inspected by Mr. Haldane.

London, Sept. 14.—Secretary of War Haldane, accompanied by General French, inspected the Q.O.R. at Basingstoke Monday, and yesterday Chaplain Lloyd placed on behalf of the regiment, a wreath on General Wolfe's tomb at Greenwich. The Duke of York's School has been completely refurnished.

During a lull in the manoeuvres the Leicesters organized an athletic meeting. Pte. Walsh beat Sergt. Crane and Pte. Gurney of the Leicesters, successively. Pte. Dent threw Pte. Grey, while Pte. Samuels, in wrestling, beat Pte. Henry.

Arrangements for the coronation include a larger representation of contingents of troops from Canada than on the last occasion, and probably also from Australia and South Africa.

It is also felt that the rapid expansion of Canada demands an impressive delegation of colonial Premiers, who, with other officials, will naturally receive invitations.

Earl Grey Quite a Dancer.

Sydney, N.S., Sept. 14.—The steamer Earl Grey sailed for Pictou yesterday, where she will be joined by His Excellency and the vice-regal party, which went west on Monday's express.

During Earl Grey's visit to Sydney he and the countess visited Westmount, a suburb of the city, incognito. His Excellency called on Mrs. Crawley, a centenarian, who was totally unaware of the distinguished personage she was entertaining. Noticing a violin hanging on the wall, Earl Grey took down the instrument, and told his hostess if she would play, he would dance. The old lady struck up "The Flower of Edinburgh" and His Excellency cut the pigeon wing like a four-year-old.

Bryan Sees Victory.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 14.—Regarding the result of the Maine election, W. J. Bryan said yesterday: "I am very much pleased to learn of the Democratic victory. The fact that we elected two out of four Congressmen, as well as governor and Legislature, gives it a national significance, which it would not have if it were merely a victory for state officers.

"Taken with the returns from Vermont, it indicates that the revolt against the Republican party is as pronounced in the east as in the west, and would seem to make it certain that there will be a Democratic majority in the next Congress."

Gave No Warning.

Kingston, Sept. 14.—For the death of his wife at Gananoque, Robert G. Johnston has brought action against the Thousand Islands Railway Co. for $5,000 damages. While driving over the tracks Mrs. Johnston was killed, it is claimed, due to the negligence of the company in not giving warning by blowing the whistle or having a watchman. He also claims that the company had no legal right to operate a siding where the fatality occurred.

Means Merger of Roads.

Boston, Sept. 14.—Luciue Tuttle yesterday resigned the presidency of the Boston & Maine Railawy. Charles C. Mellen, president of the New Haven Railway is acting president.

The placing of Mr. Mellen at the head of the Boston & Maine means the political consummation of the merger of that road with the New Haven Railway, which has generally been accepted as a fact for the past year or more.

To Centralize Government.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 14.—A recommendation that the administration of Alaska, especially the judiciary, be better unified and the power of the Government be centered on one spot, will be made to President Taft by Wiskershaw, who passed through here yesterday, after making a 6,000 mile tour of inspection of Alaska.

Called a Stratford Man.

Collingwood, Sept. 14.—The Collingwood Presbyterian Church has unanimously extended a call to Rev. T. Thompson, M.A., of Stratford, to become its pastor, the stipend to be $1,500 and the interest of $4,000, willed by the late Alex. Brust for the purpose of augmenting the pastor's salary.

Sustained the Call.

Brantford, Sept. 14.—At the September meeting of the Paris Presbytery, in Zion Church here yesterday, the call of Rev. Mr. Matheson of Chatsworth to Knox Church, Embro, was unanimously sustained.

The argument advanced in favor of a new phonograph which has its records in the form of endless belts is that it is possible to provide much longer selections than by the older methods.

DEMOCRATIC MAJORITY.

Political Surprise In Maine Amounts to a Complete Revolution.

Portland, Me., Sept. 14.—Complete returns of the vote for state senators and representatives in the election on Monday gave the Democrats substantial majorities in both branches of the Maine Legislature, which next year will elect a United States Senator to succeed Eugene Hale, a Secretary of State, State Treasurer, Attorney-General and Commissioner of Agriculture. The new legislative body will also probably be called upon to carry out the declarations of the Democratic party platforms of recent years, and re-submit to the people the liquor prohibitory amendment to the constitution and to repeal the Sturgis liquor law enforcement act.

According to unofficial complete returns, the Legislature will have a Democratic majority of 36 in joint ballot. The Senate will consist of twenty-one Democrats and ten Republicans, and the House will have 88 Democrats and 36 Republicans. The last Legislature consisted of 122 Republicans and 60 Democrats, the Republicans having fifteen majority in the Senate and 47 in the House.

Practically complete returns last night on the vote for governor gave Frederick W. Plaisted, Democrat, 73,644, and Governor Bert. M. Fernald, Republican, 64,912, a plurality for Plaisted of 8,732, as agaist a plurality of 8,064 for Governor W. T. Cobb, Republican, four years ago.

Another Democrat Victory.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 14.—Returns from Monday's state elections are still incomplete. The Democrat state ticket, however, has been elected by a majority ranging from 15,000 to 20,000. Constitutional amendment No. 10, providing for the initiative and referendum has probably carried, although by a much smaller majority than estimated yesterday.

It is claimed the several counties that voted "dry" last year, will show a majority for license when the full returns are recorded.

Goldwin Smith's Estate.

Toronto, Sept. 14.—The will of the late Goldwin Smith disposes of $832,859.55, of which $592,350 is in Ontario. After bequests totalling some $50,500, and succession dues, $80,000, are paid, the balance, aggregating over $700,000 goes to Cornell University at Ithaca, New York, with which he was formerly connected, and which always held a foremost place in his affections. The gift is absolutely to be used by the board of trustees for the promotion especially of liberal studies, languages, ancient and modern, literature, philosophy, history and political science, for which provision has been made in the new hall, which bears my name, and to the building of which my wife has contributed.

The will says as to the art museum: "I bequeath to the art museum of Toronto all my pictures, portraits, or engravings, and statuary which belong to me in the Grange, and also my scrap-book and autograph book and any books on art which may be in my library and for the purpose of confirming my wife's devise of the Grange property to them I hereby devise and bequeath to them upon the same conditions as the devise to them in my wife's will, all right, title, and interest I may have or may have acquired in any manner whatsoever to the Grange property, as more particularly described in her will, and as occupied by me since the time of my marriage."

Warns Against Separation.

Winnipeg, Sept. 14.—Sir George Doughty roused the members of the Canadian Club in Winnipeg yesterday by a fine patriotic address, in which he sounded a warning against separation from the rest of the Empire.

"Some say that Canada might walk alone," he said. "I hope if she ever tries to do so she will walk warily, and that that time will be far distant because, however much Canadians might think they have got on, I would suggest to you that the more important you become the more your provinces are known throughout the world for their richness, the more certain will foreign nations jealously look upon you, and the more surely will they covet what you have got."

Rabies Prevalent Over the Line.

Albany, Sept. 14.—State Commissioner of Agriculture Pearson, stated that rabies had broken out in Westchester County. Heads of suspected canines sent to Cornell University for examination contained positive evidence of the disease. A quarantine is enforced at Scarsdale and Yonkers and Mount Vernon, New Rochelle and Ossinging are being closely observed for any outbreaks.

Another newly-infected district was reported in Niagara County, where the towns of Lewiston and Royalton have been put under quarantine.

Will Live In Winnipeg.

Toronto, Sept. 14.—Following the recent appointment of Rev. Dr. Chown to be general superintendent of the Methodist Church, Dr. Chown stated last evening that he intended making his new headquarters in the West. He will go west in October and do considerable work there, but will not remove to Winnipeg until next spring.

Cut a Third of the Charge.

Kingston, Sept. 14.—Word from Ottawa says that in regard to the bill sent the city by the G.T.R. for the cost of the subway at Kingston Junction, the Railway Commission has reduced the company's charges against the city and county by $2,200, making a saving of $1,100 to the city.

Chief of Police Arrested.

Portsmouth, O., Sept. 14.—Chief of Police W. N. Davidson was arrested yesterday charged with violating the local option laws. He had treated some friends to samples of whisky he had brought back from Chillicot, where he attended a convention of police.

Would Be Sorry to Leave.

Kingston, Sept. 14—Archbishop Gauthier says he has received no word of his reported transfer to Ottawa. He speaks in the highest terms of the people of Kingston of all denominations, and says he would be very sorry to leave.

In Nuremburg, Germany, there still are in use more than 1760 houses that were built in the sixteenth century and more than 3500 erected in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

WORLD'S DEBT TO CANADA

A Wonderful Achievement

Discovery of "Fruit-a-tives" has meant health for all

Canada's fame does not rest solely on her furs and wheat fields. Her rise in the esteem of the world is not due to her Cobalt mines. It is the work of her great men that has made her great. A graduate of McGill University has won lasting renown for his original researches in the realms of Physics.

Everyone knows that fruit is wholesome, when eaten judiciously. Physicians generally recognize the fact that fruit juices have a beneficial effect on the various organs of the body.

It remained for a Canadian physician to discover a process whereby the medicinal action of fruit could be so increased as to make the intensified juices a wonderful cure.

"Fruit-a-tives" is this combination of fruit juices and tonics. Since its introduction to the public, "Fruit-a-tives" has met with a success accorded to no other medicine in the world. The reason is plain. "Fruit-a-tives" is the one remedy that is actually made of fruit, and is the only remedy that naturally cures Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Headaches, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Backache, Kidney and Skin Troubles. At all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c., or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

"CATCH MY PAL" UNION.

A Temperance Movement That Is Sweeping Great Britain.

Great Britain and Ireland are now being swept by a strong temperance movement which is being directed by the Irish Protestant Total Abstinence Union, or, as it is better known, the Catch My Pal Society. Its origin was singular.

July 13, 1909, Rev. R. J. Patterson, LL.B., a Presbyterian clergyman in the city of Armagh, happened to pass a lamp post around which stood six men, some of whom were recovering from the effects of a drinking bout the day before. One of the men suggested half in jest to Mr. Patterson that he should try and induce his companions to take the pledge. A conversation followed, and the six men promised to go the manse three days later as the curfew rang and take the pledge. The men carried out their undertaking, signed the pledge, and the union became an accomplished fact and grew rapidly.

From Ulster the organization spread to other parts of Ireland, and now branches are to be found south, east and west. Then the channel was crossed, and several of the large industrial centres in Scotland came under the influence of the movement, branches being formed in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Paisley and other towns.

The churches have taken a very laudable part in this organization and have worked tirelessly in promoting the cause.

The wonderful effect of the movement has surprised even those who hoped most from it. In many cases hardened drunkards have become the best pledge keepers and the anxiety of the quondam inebriate to reform his boon companion has stirred the emotion of the most phlegmatic onlooker. The result is that in every town there are at least a score of members who, in the past deemed to be hopeless slaves of drink, are now living as respectable citizens. Moreover, trade has revived. Men are now paying their debts. Children are being better fed and clothed and a higher standard of living prevails among the people.

John Was Stung!

Some time ago John Burns, M.P., who is nothing if not precise in his methods, had an amusing experience with a policeman whom he suspected of breaking the law. While out walking one day "Honest John" observed a constable in deep conversation with a man in civilian dress. Just as Mr. Burns was nearing the two the civilian suddenly drew something out of his pocket and handed it to the policeman. Scenting a disregard of the law against tipping in the force, Mr. Burns was quickly at the policeman's side. "Open your hand!" he demanded in stentorian accent. For a moment the constable hesitated and looked very confused. "Open your hand!" repeated the now furious Mr. Burns. Slowly the policeman obeyed and extended his open palm, revealing to the M.P.'s puzzled gaze neither a piece of silver nor even a penny, but—a large cough drop! The next moment "Honest John" had disappeared.—London Ideas.

Origin of Kilts.

It will doubtless surprise many Scotchmen to learn that the kilt as at present worn is only a modern fancy costume and is not of Scottish origin at all. The honor of its invention is due to two Englishmen—an army tailor who accompanied Gen. Wade's forces to Scotland in 1719 and Thomas Rawlinson, overseer of some iron works in Glengarry's country. For more than a century previously, indeed, the tartan plaid had been the common garb of the highlanders, but it was all in one piece, wound in folds around the body, leaving the knees bare. Prior to the adoption of the tartan, which probably took place about the close of the fifteenth century, the long, loose saffron colored skirt, the real "garb of old Gaul," was the highland dress.—London Mail.

"Pin Money."

In days long ago pins were so expensive that husbands gave their wives certain allowances just for the purpose of the costly luxury; hence we call the money given to a woman for her own special use "pin money." Five centuries after pins were invented the peddlers sung the following rhyme as they went through the streets in London:

Ten rows a penny, O!
Isn't that a many, O!
Silver heads, golden points,
Ten rows a penny, O!

Uncle Sam's Troops Demoralized Says Inspector-General.

Report of Gen. Bell Declares That the Field Army of the Republic Is Unfit For Service, Transportation Is the Same as It Was Before Civil War, and Marching Capacity Is Poor—Woods Changes Training.

Washington, Sept. 14.—If fearless criticism is calculated to benefit the army, then Uncle Sam's soldiers should profit much from the comment upon their condition and abilities contained in the annual report of Inspector-General Garlington, just made public. One inspector points out a whole battalion of artillery starting for the Phillippine service without a single field officer and one of the batteries commanded by a second lieutenant of less than two years' service. An inspector-general declares that this absence of captains from their commands is "the most fruitful source of professional disease in the line of the army to-day."

In one department nearly a third of the line officers were absent from duty with their commands.

The time for specialization in the army has arrived, in the opinion of another inspector-general. He says: "We try to crowd too much upon the officer and enlisted man of the line. That is, we try to teach all of them everything, instead of specializing and only teaching each as much as he can learn well with ordinary application."

Inspector-General Bell declares that the field army is wholly unprepared for field service. He says the new regulations are almost entirely theoretical or dependent upon the experience of European armies. Our transportation is the same as at the beginning of the civil war, for our army has so far failed to make use of automobiles, traction engines and other modern appliances in the field. The weakness could be quickly developed if the present annual manoeuvres could be replaced at least once by the march of a complete army corps. Very few of our officers have ever marched with more than a regiment."

Major Bell says: "While our infantry is composed of the best material in the world, and is probably as well, if not better, trained in the use of the rifle than that of any other army, its marching capacity is below mediocrity, and yet it is admitted to-day that the fate of the battles of the future depends, as it has in the past, upon the marching capacity of the infantry."

To remedy these conditions, Major-Gen. Woods, chief of staff, yesterday issued orders which will change materially the training of the army. All inspector-generals will be required to submit the troops to an annual inspection in the field, designed to show efficiency of the troops.

Chinese Get Back at Alderman.

Windsor, Sept. 14.—Incensed because Ald. Keough has suggested that a license fee of $50 be placed on their establishments, several Chinese laundry proprietors are said to have banded together for protection, and, incidentally, to rebuke Keough for such a thought.

The Chinamen have about completed negotiations for a long lease on the old Charter homestead, in the same block in which is located Ald. Keough's fine residence. It is understood they will convert the house into a big laundry establishment, in spite of any protests residents in the neighborhood may make. The home of Police Chief Wills is directly across the street from the proposed laundry.

The Triangle In Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Sept. 14.—The golden triangle sent out by St. Patrick Chapter, Toronto, was received with much ceremony by Prince Rupert Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, last evening.

The reception was attended by a number of the members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, now in this city, Messrs. Fred Jacobi and David Bruce, representing the St. Patrick Chapter of Toronto. The triangle goes to Wascana Chapter, Regina, on the 14th; Alberta Chapter, Calgary, on the 15th, and Vancouver on the 20th.

Found Famous Picture.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—Purves Carter, the English art expert, who has just returned from Ontario, states that he has found the famous Durer picture of Sir Thomas Moore, who was chancellor to Henry VIII., and who lost his head on account of a disagreement with his master on matrimonial affairs. The artist will not say where he found the picture, but says that it's discovery will create an uproar in art circles.

Wreck on Norfolk and Western.

Roanoake, Va., Sept. 14.—A special on the Norfolk and Western Railway, bearing President L. E. Johnson and General Manager N. D. Maher, was wrecked at Delorme, West Virginia, yesterday. Neither President Johnson nor Mr. Maher was hurt, but F. L. Woolwine, foreman of engineers, and Engineer E. D. Burton, were killed.

Lynched Two Negroes.

Tiptonville, Tenn., Sept. 14.—Will Sharp and Bob Bruce, negroes, who for seven or eight years have worked on various farms over the county, were lynched Monday night by a mob of about forty men for an attempted assault on two little daughters of Jack Dowing, at their home at Connersville.

Hurled Her Baby From Window.

New York, Sept. 14.—Seized with a sudden fit of insanity in her home on Broadway, Brooklyn, yesterday, Mrs. Esther Jaffe, 27 years old, hurled her three-months-old baby from the window of her apartment on the third story. The child was dashed to death on the pavement of the court below.

LEAVING FOR HOME.

Notable Visitors to Montreal Are All Getting Away.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—Cardinal Gibbons, who was the guest of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy during the congress, left yesterday morning for New York, en route for Baltimore, and Cardinal Logue will follow in a few days. Archbishop Bourne will leave for Portland to-day, en route for New York, and daily both American and European prelates and priests are leaving the city.

Archbishop Bourne stated yesterday that he had never seen such an orderly crowd in his life as that of Sunday. London itself, offering few demonstrations similar in magnificence to that of the closing day of the great congress.

Yesterday morning, His Grace of Westminster had a long interview with Henri Bourassa, M.P.P., who had taken exception to the English prelate's statement that if the west is to be brought into the Catholic fold it must be done by means of the English tongue. After the interview his grace told the press that all misunderstanding had been overcome.

Award Now Irrevocable.

More Wealth Than Wit

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 15.—It has cost Rev. William Williamson, an aged clergyman, of Dundalk, Ont., several days' time and over a hundred dollars in expenses to prove that John McPherson, a horse trader, was guilty of fraud in selling him a worthless horse for $65. Nevertheless, when the Magistrate convicted McPherson this morning, the clergyman pleaded so hard for him that the prisoner was given his freedom.

Portugal Joins Spain Against The Church.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

LISBON, Portugal, Sept. 15.—King Manuel of Portugal has joined forces with King Alfonso of Spain, and has closed up a too aggressive Jesuit monastery in the fight against the domination of the Clericals. The prospects are for a long and bitter campaign all over the peninsula.

Many People Search For Prominent Woman

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

ALMONTE, Ont., Sept. 15.—A number of searching parties, under the direction of the Town Council and Chief of Police, are scouring the country in this district, digging into swamps and dragging rivers for some trace of Mrs. James MacDougall, a prominent, well-to-do woman, who has disappeared suddenly.

RESCUED IN STORM, HE REWARDS FISHERMAN.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 15.—When Captain Eugene Turnavick, owner and commander of a fleet of fishing vessels on the Labrador coast, reached this city to-day, he received a check for a thousand pounds from Bartlett-Coutts, a wealthy landowner of the Shetland Islands. Last July, during a terrible storm off Labrador, Turnavick picked up Bartlett-Coutts and his bride in their yacht. They were on a honeymoon cruise and ran into bad weather. Their crew of three men was swept off the decks, and the couple were clinging to the rigging when Turnavick saved them and sent them home.

ADVISE PRECAUTIONS TO AVOID TYPHOID.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 15.—Several doctors who were spoken to to-day regarding epidemic of typhoid all over the Province advise careful dieting and avoidance of drinking unboiled or unfiltered water as a preventative of further spreading of the disease.

ACCUSED MURDERER'S FATE IN HANDS OF JURY.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 15.—The case against Michael Candy, charged with murdering one policeman and seriously wounding another when they were arresting him for stealing a pair of boots, was concluded this afternoon and given to the jury. The judge's charge was strongly against the prisoner.

RIDDLING THE EXPERTS.

Crippen's Lawyer Weakens Evidence of Doctor.

London, Sept. 15.—Under shrewd and merciless cross-examination yesterday by Attorney Arthur Newton, Dr. Pepper, the Government analyst, practically repudiated much of his former testimony, and admitted that it was impossible to determine the sex of the remains supposed to have been the body of Belle Elmore Crippen from an anatomical study of them.

Pepper's admission leaves the question of the body's identity dependent upon a few strands of hair found in curlers near the body, another lock of hair found knotted in a man's handkerchief, and the remnant of a woman's undervest.

The evidence of the hair, however, was rendered practically valueless by Pepper's admission that the hair found in the curlers was dark, while that in the handkerchief was light and much shorter than that in the curlers.

Pepper testified that the person who removed the viscera of the body must have been both a student of anatomy and a clever surgical operator, as the work equalled that of a professional surgeon.

Pepper added that the scar on the body, by means of which the prosecution is also trying to prove the identity, was probably old.

"What makes you think the scar resulted from an operation?" Newton asked.

"Because from the nature of it, and its position, it could hardly have come from an accident," Pepper replied.

Dr. Pepper earlier in the day admitted that when he first saw the remains of the woman supposed to have been Belle Elmore Crippen, he thought they were animal remains. It required close inspection, he said, to determine that they were remnants of a human body.

After Pepper left the stand, the hearing was adjourned until Friday.

Miss Leneve is rapidly breaking down. Her periods of elation yesterday were always followed by moments of depression. That she is on the verge of a nervous collapse was shown by her convulsive actions, which she made every effort to hide.

Tried to Do Customs.

New York, Sept. 15.—Eugene Higgins, the millionaire carpet manufacturer of Yonkers, who ran foul of the customs authorities on Monday, when he returned from Europe, arrived at a settlement yesterday, by which he was allowed to pay the foreign value of the articles seized, plus the duties. In all, it cost him about $3,000 to regain possession of the goods for which he had paid originally $1,960.

Dr. Adolph Menn of Chicago, a passenger on the same liner, who failed Monday to declare jewelry appraised at $1,000, paid an additional duty of $70 yesterday on wearing apparel he declared at $300, and on which he had already paid $18 at the pier, but the jewelry is still held by the Government.

Money In Aviation.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 15.—At the close of the official prize competition in the Harvard-Boston aero meet last night the management gave out this statement of the awards, by which it is seen that the English aviator, Claude Grahame-White, wins more than double the aggregate sum won by all the other professional aviators combined. He wins the Boston Light prize, $10,000; bomb dropping prize, $5,000; speed, first prize, $3,000; altitude, second prize, $2,000; duration, second prize, $1,000; distance, second prize, $1,000; getaway, first prize, $100; total, $22,100.

Ralph Johnstone won $5,000; Walter Brookins, $4,250; Glenn Curtiss, $2,000, and Charles Willard, $50.

Revising Greek Constitution.

Athens, Greece, Sept. 15.—King George yesterday opened the session of the specially-elected chamber, which is charged with a revision of the constitution.

His Majesty reminded the Deputies that their mandates were limited to a revision of the non-fundamental clauses of the constitution, and urged them to devote themselves to their difficult task with patriotism, with the object of ensuring a realization of the national ideals.

There is a great popular enthusiasm over the Government's new program.

C.N.R. to Erect Car Shops.

Vancouver, Sept. 15.—A. D. MacRae of the Canadian Northern announced yesterday that car building shops for the entire system, with 5,000 men employed, will be erected at Port Mann, the company's townsite on the Fraser River.

The company will this winter clear its entire 2,000 acres of townsite and put lots on the market in the spring.

Banks Must Strengthen.

Washington, Sept. 15.—During the next few weeks the few national banks in the United States which are rated as "weak," will have their last chance to strengthen themselves or get out of business.

The 105 examiners, through whom the Government feels the pulse of the national banks, have been instructed to carry that ultimatum.

Fly at Your Own Risk.

Paris, Sept. 15.—The French insurance companies have definitely decided to insure no aviators for the present at any rate.

TWO MEN ARE KILLED

Step Out of Way of Freight and Are Struck by Express.

J. W. Morwood of Welland and James Lloyd of Stratford, While Crossing a Trestle at Jordan Harbor, Are Killed Instantaneously and Frightfully Mangled—Mr. Morwood Was For Twenty-Five Years a Merchant.

St. Catharines, Sept. 15.—Stepping aside to avoid a freight train coming from the west yesterday towards this city, J. W. Morwood of Welland and James Lloyd of Stratford were struck by express train No. 5, running at a high rate of speed in the opposite direction, death being instantaneous. The men had been walking along the Grand Trunk tracks from Jordan to Vineland, and were on a very high trestle midway between the two stations when the accident occurred. Their bodies were thrown with great force against the freight train and frightfully mangled.

There was little trouble in identifying the Stratford man from the contents of his pockets, but it was some time after the accident that the other body was identied as that of Mr. Morwood. He had been in business in Welland for about a quarter of a century, and only two weeks ago retired. He was on his way to visit his sister, Mrs. Fry, at Vineland, when death overtook him. At Welland he was one of the most prominent citizens, and was highly respected. H. R. Morwood of the law firm of German & Morwood, is a son.

Dr. J. M. Jory, coroner, decided to hold no inquest, but will go to the scene of the fatality to examine for himself into the facts. The trestle is the property of the railway company, and, while quite generally used, the men had no business there.

Coronation June 21.

London, Sept. 15.—Circumstantial evidence points to the date of King George's coronation as Wednesday, June 21, 1911. This conclusion may be adduced from the fact that when the stewards of the Jockey Club, in fixing the date of next year's meeting, decided upon June 20, and the three following days for the Ascot meeting, they were privately instructed by Lord Marcus Beresford, who is to control King George's racing stable when the cessation of court mourning will permit him to remove hisshorses from the care of the Earl of Derby, to choose a different date. It was suggested that a week earlier, June 13, would meet with the requirements of the court.

When the arrangements for the coronation of King Edward were completed in 1902, it was decided that the ceremony should take place on the first Wednesday after Ascot.

Already the Earl of Norfolk is busily engaged in preparing a list of the "eligibles" for invitation to the ceremony in Westminster Abbey, and attending to the thousand and one other details in connection with the ceremony.

Tried to Smuggle Strikebreakers.

St. Catharines, Sept. 15.—It cost Moses Levinsky, supposedly a Toronto pedlar, a pretty penny to try and get two Buffalo tailors, Max Badiner and Benjamin Doctor, across the line into Canada. They wanted to go to Hamilton to act as strikebreakers. The two men were sent back by the inspector at Bridgeburg because they could not produce $25.

Meeting Levinsky in Buffalo, he took the men across on the ferry, but inspectors all along the border had been notified, and the three were immediately arrested and Badiner and Doctor each assessed $20 and Levinsky $100.

To Fool Suicides.

Pittsburg, Sept. 15.—At the twelfth annual convention of the National Retail Druggists' Association, in session here yesterday, an anti-suicide resolution recommended the restriction of the sale of carbolic acid to a mixture of one-third each, acid, glycerine and water—"a preparation that may be taken by would-be suicides in large quantities without causing death"—while another, having for its object the suppression of the "dope fiend," demanded that proprietary medicines containing cocaine, chloral, morphine, codeine and other drugs be sold only upon prescription.

Forest Fires Do Great Damage.

Vancouver, Sept. 15.—Forest fires are doing great damage in the Delta district between here and Blaine. Great Northern trains are badly stalled because of burned-out bridges at Ferndale and other places. It is reported that three children of the family of William Morrison of Aldermore, were burned while their father was away, but there is no confirmation of this.

The Pope Is Ill.

Rome, Sept. 15.—The Pope is seriously ill, and consultations are being held by his physicians regarding his condition. It is said that worry over reverses which the church has sustained recently in Spain, France, Austria and Germany has caused his sickness. A complete rest will be ordered by his doctors.

C.M.A. In Portage la Prairie.

Portage la Prairie, Sept. 15.—The members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association were given a royal reception on their arrival in this town yesterday. The visitors were met at the station by representatives of the City Council and Board of Trade.

Deciding Tire Value.

The general utility of any make of Automobile Tires is not decided by the appearance of a sample tire after it has gone one or two thousand miles—the average cost per mile per tire is arrived at by running a car on a particular set of tires, and then making the comparison of the cost of the tire upkeep. Dunlop Tires give a low average cost per mile, for besides the quality that goes with them, the Dunlop Company is ever anxious to satisfy the users of Dunlop Automobile Tires.

CURRENT EVENTS.

As a suggestion only. Why not hold the Belleville Fair two or more weeks earlier, before the chilly blasts of fall have arrived?

One of the most important things in Municipal life in this city is the appointment of an Assessor. Nothing has been heard of this for some time. Is it put off and neglected for any good reason? Perhaps some Alderman has an Assessor under his hat that he may spring upon our civic body at any time. Watch out!

It looks now as if Belleville will have within two years three railroads running into it. This is not counting our present connection with the north country. When this is established there is nothing that will keep Belleville back. All that is needed is push and energy to make it one of the best manufacturing cities in Ontario—"A Bigger and Better Belleville."

The Galt Reformer says that Galt is the best lighted town in Canada. Well, Belleville is not, but when we get our new sewers, new school, new police station, Front Street paved and other public improvements; and, mark you, we are going to have them all, none can say we are not moving in the right direction. Then, perhaps, some future Council will look to the proper lighting of our city. Let there be light and plenty of it.

A man named Ess, of Buffalo, aged 66 years, has just married a girl of 22 years. When Ess came to sign his name the future Mrs. Ess said to him: "Sign it as you do the cheques."

ONTARIO'S FIELD CROPS.

It is estimated that Ontario's field crops will amount in value to about $205,000,000, which is an increase over the production of last year of about $35,000,000. The farming community of the Province will be the richer by this amount than they were a year ago, a fact well worth the consideration of those seeking some indication of the business outlook of the next six or eight months. The total production is greater than the combined production of the three Provinces of the Northwest. Nor has the Province nearly reached the limit of productiveness. The exhibit of grain and vegetables from New Ontario shown at the National Exhibition is proof conclusive of the great scope for further settlement and cultivation this Province has in her northern country.

See that the robbery of $57,000 worth of Alaskan gold and substitution of lead is puzzling the Seattle (Wash.) Assay Office. We have always been opposed to this "something just as good" idea. anyway.

So the clamour is for a non-partizan election for the council. Of course there will be no politics in the next election. There never is.—Kingston Whig.

An automobile authority estimates that the sale of cars this year will amount to $240,000,000, with net profits of from 10 to 18 per cent, for the manufacturers. The output of cars is calculated to be about 180,000.

The G. T. R. report a scarcity of brakesmen at Belleville, and anybody applying at the local station will be given transportation to that city.

Orillia is trying to capture a smelting industry, whose plant and equipment is to cost $25,000 and whose employees will receive $25,000 per annum in wages. It wants to bonus this company; but the vote polled was not sufficient to authorize it. Now it proposes to mask the bonus by "selling" to the company a ten-acre site for $1! Surely it is time this bonusing system was abolished. We had heard so much about the cheapness of Orillia's electrical power that we had thought Orillia had outgrown this system.—Hamilton Times.

The King has expressed pleasure at seeing at Balmoral a detachment of the Queen's Own Rifles, which corps is now at Aldershot, getting ideas of how military training is carried on at headquarters. It can be believed also that the royal expression was sincere. The Queen's Own is one of Canada's best militia regiments, and has on all sorts of occasions shown that it understands how to act in manner creditably to itself and to its country.—Montreal Gazette.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speeches in the West have stirred up some of the Ontario newspapers to look up his record of Free Trade. Here is what the Chatham Planet finds it to be:

1896. Just before the election assures the manufacturers that he won't hurt them.

1897. Takes over the National Policy.

1903. Claps on the Surtax.

1904. Brings in the anti-dumping clause to increase the protection enjoyed by manufacturers.

1896-1910. Gives $16,000,000 in bounties.

1910. Assures the West that he really is a Free Trader all the time and that he is working gradually towards low duties.

The Canadian Associated Press, the organization of Canadian newspapers which brings a special daily cable service of news of particular interest to Canada, furnished its clients with much the most complete report of the findings of The Hague Tribunal on the fisheries dispute which found its way across the Atlantic. It beat out all the United States news agencies including the powerful Associated Press of the United States. This is the second great news achievement during the present year of the Canadian Associated, the other being its unrivalled report of the British elections.—Manitoba Free Press.

MEETING WITH SUCCESS EVERYWHERE.

A long unbroken success is the record of that famous dialect comedy, "Ole Olson," which is to appear at Griffin's Opera House to-night. The play was produced in 1891, but it went a-begging for several years prior to that time before managers could be induced to look upon it with favor. The Swede, as the central figure, seemed to lack their confidence, although it introduced on the stage a brand new dialect and an ingenious conception never before dreamed of.

Ben Hendricks saw a future in this novelty which other managers had lost sight of, and early realized the growing Scandinavian population of the great Northwest, which should give it liberal support, and upon that and his former study of the character in his native haunts, was at least willing to give it a trial, which he did entirely to his own satisfaction, and the chagrin of the "wise managers" who had prophesied his failure. "Ole Olson's" initial tour netted a profit of over $50,000 and Ben Hendricks became famous in almost a single night, and is now a great favorite as a delineator of the Swedish dialect character. In short, he has become in his particular line a parallel to Denman Thompson in the "Old Homestead." Both plays treat admirably the unsophisticated life of a simple but honest people.

The present season finds "Ole Olson" in the west after an absence of two seasons, and its return will be welcomed as of yore. It will be the same old "Ole," with the same good old story that has always pleased so well, but all new music and songs of the class that dispels dull care. That is what the public want. The supporting company will be practically the same, always pleasing. "Never went out on a cheap scale yet," said Mr. Hendricks last August in New York City, when, in his usual painstaking way, he was personally preparing this attraction for the road.

A Fashionable Display at Ritchie's.

Crowds of ladies thronged Belleville's biggest store to-day in response to the announcement that The Ritchie Company would hold their regular autumn opening. Since the Spring opening, still further improvements have been added to their beautiful Millinery Parlors by the addition of some very fine new cases for the protection, as well as the display, of the hats.

The pleasure one may take in the so-called frivolities of fashion is no small item in the sum of human happiness, and the increased facilities for providing good clothing for everyone, and, above all, in the tendency to make even the least expensive hats and gowns representative of good taste and true art, was very evident in the display made by this firm to-day.

As the hat is the crowning feature of costume, and as the portrayal of millinery is an important object of this house, let us turn to a brief survey of the styles.

The new hats for Fall and Winter exhibited no startling changes, unless it be in the very considerable heightening of the crowns in the smaller and medium sized hats. Another new note has crept into the season's millinery with the cap-like Turban, slanting over the eyes with a pointed effect in front, and rising high at the back with crests of plumes or coque feathers. Another characteristic contour is seen in the backward or retreating inclination of the trimming of many of the high crowns, slanting toward the rear and thence upward and outward.

Dominating the season's fashions is the becoming mushroom brimmed hat in all sizes. Many of the small mushroom shapes are long at the back and have a little poke effect. Turbans for street wear will be much sought after, all very high in the crown, and usually with a round top. Close fitting hats of the Charlotte Corday style are freely shown, and for dress wear the beautiful large French models, with low, round crowns, and with a tendency to greater width, will be correct. Many of these long hats have satin tops, with facings of velvet, and are simply trimmed, relying for grace upon their beauty of line and richness of material.

Real Paradise feathers and osprey are fashionable for trimming, and are necessarily expensive, but beautiful effects are produced by the liberal use of aigrettes, pompons, and fancy hussar mounts in the cheaper feathers. Of these, a splendid variety were on exhibition, and we were informed that an important feature of this department is the supplying of smaller milliners and those desirous of doing their own trimming with feathers and materials which the firm import direct from the makers abroad in large quantities.

Black will be much in evidence this season, also black in combination with white, and black with pink, while a new shade of tomato red and the yellow and mustard shades combined with black are fashionable. Blue in the tones of Dauphin and King's blue will be much worn.

We noticed a very attractive display of children's hats, showing that the little folks have been well remembered.

Miss Stubbs, who has the management of this department, has made a very favorable impression with the ladies of Belleville and vicinity, and she, no doubt, felt justly proud to-day, when her splendid exhibit met with such marked appreciation.

Those who visited the department on the top floor devoted to Carpets and House Furnishings, were delighted with the elaborate display of rich rugs, curtains and drapery materials. The house is devoting special attention to this department, and have competent men who are capable of advising regarding any decorating in this line.

The firm was disappointed that a number of their choicest styles in coats and costumes did not arrive for opening day, but they will be in stock in a day or two, and these, added to the splendid showing made to-day in these lines, will complete a full assortment of all that is the latest. The season will decidedly be a separate coat season, and these garments are long and warm looking. Many tweeds and broad twill materials are used, as well as plain beavers in black and colors.

The front store is well stocked with all that is new in Silks, Dress Goods, Trimmings, Gloves, Hosiery and notions, as well as the more staple lines of Linens and heavier goods. Surely people have no need to go out of town for their Dry Goods with such a stock as this right in their midst to choose from, and courteous salespeople ready to give them their best attention and assure them of a "square deal" every time.

Heavy Revenue From Succession Duties.

BIG INCREASE IN AUGUST—CORNELL TO PAY ALL THE TAX ON GOLDWIN SMITH ESTATE.

There was a big increase in succession duties for the month of August. This year's figures are $51,973, compared with $15,482 last August.

The estimated total for the twelve months ending October 31st is $650,000.

The papers in regard to Goldwin Smith's will have not reached the Succession Duties Office yet. The whole estate will be taxed on a basis of 10 per cent., both for the private legacies, and the bequest to Cornell. According to the terms of the will, the University will pay for the dues not only in its own share, but on the rest as well. If the bequest to Cornell had been made six years ago, it would not have carried any succession due at all. Until 1905, when Colonel Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, had the law changed, all gifts to charitable or educational institutions were exempt. Now, however, bequests to institutions outside of Ontario are taxed with the full succession dues.

LILLIPUTIAN DYNAMO.

PERFECT IN EVERY DETAIL, WEIGHS A QUARTER OF AN OUNCE.

A lilliputian electric dynamo, perfect in every detail, but weighing only a quarter of an ounce, was shown at work at the session of the Paris Academy of Science. Its constructor is a French mechanician named Trevet.

This dynamo is 3-5 of an inch long 1-2 an inch wide and 3-5 inch high. The coil is 1-4 inch in diameter and is wired with 5 1-2 feet of silk insulated copper wire 1-500 inch in thickness. A tension is indicated of 3.5 volts by a current of 0.2 ampere, but as to its power there is no instrument sensitive enough to record it. While at work the toy machine, made a sound like the humming of a bee.

The Responsibility for Tires.

Kentucky Woman Says She Will Run for Congress.

Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp Will Make Race on Platform Opposed to Liquor and Tobacco.

CALLS UPON "CHIVALROUS" MEN TO WORK FOR HER.

Says There Is Nothing in the Constitution Which Prevents Her Helping Make the Laws.

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 14.—Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, president of the State W.C.T.U., has announced her candidacy for Congress in the Seventh district against J. Campbell Cantrill, Democrat, and M. C. Rankin, Republican.

She will run independently on a platform opposed to liquor, white slave traffic and tobacco. She qualifies the tobacco plank in her platform by stating that as between the tobacco trust and the farmer she is for the farmer.

She calls upon the "chivalrous" men in the district to vote for her. She declares she is eligible to serve in Congress because there is nothing in the constitution which prevents her helping make the laws. She declares the question of a woman so serving must be settled some time and it might as well be done now.

Baldheads Will be Scarce When Parisian Sage is Better Known

It Keeps Women's Hair Soft and Glossy Says Elizabeth House

No man likes to look older than he is. Every woman on earth absolutely abhors such a condition.

You may be 30 in years, but if you are baldheaded or grey, people will surely take you to be many years older, and you will be helpless to prevent.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. If it were not for the little destructive germs working with a persistency worthy of a better cause, there would be no baldness.

It is guaranteed by J. V. Doyle to make hair grow and stop falling hair; to cure dandruff in two weeks; to stop itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Parisian Sage is the most invigorating, satisfying and pleasant hair dressing made; it makes the hair soft, luxuriant and handsome; it is especially praised by women who have beautiful hair. Parisian Sage is for sale by J. V. Doyle, at 50 cents a large bottle, or charges prepaid, from the Canadian makers, Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle.

"I have only used one bottle of Parisian Sage, and, of course, I cannot praise it as much as if I had used more, but I find it a good tonic for the hair.

"It keeps the hair soft and glossy, the scalp clean, and makes the hair grow long, and stops falling hair.

"I recommend it to any one as a good tonic."—Elizabeth House, Manchester, Conn.

MAN AND WOMAN.

London Advertiser.

The advent of the hobble skirt recalls to the male mind the fleeting character of fashion. And yet in spite of the kaleidoscopic changes in dress and hair styles, there is nothing new under the sun. The mode makers are constantly repeating themselves. In the spacious days of great Elizabeth many of our modern styles were created. The stomacher, the farthingale, and rustling taffeta skirt were the ancestors of a long list of female effects which have flourished since that splendid age when lords and ladies wore whole manors on their backs. Even the present gigantic outcropping of woman's hair is no new thing. Great Eliza, Mary Queen of Scots, and all the belles of Shakespeare's London wore switches and rats in great profusion. Hair was in such demand that the mothers of London were afraid to allow their curly-headed children to appear on the streets alone, for the hair hunters kidnapped many a boy and girl for their golden tresses

We are inclined to think that the gigantic coiffure and lavish use of rolls, rats and switches originated in a despairing effort on the part of Elizabethan ladies to outdo the men of the time in extravagance. For the gallants of that age, Sir Walter Raleigh and the Earl of Leicester being the leaders, were peacocks of glittering plumage before whose splendor of attire, fine silk hose, rainbow doublets, enormous ruffs, feathered hats, and jewelled shoes, the aspiring female plumed herself in vain. The Elizabethan wanted to be conspicuous, and it must be conceded that he succeeded.

The modern woman is also indebted to him for the art of padding. Many a lean gallant went to court with his yellow hose stuffed full of bran or sawdust and his manly breast puffed out with wool. He walked in constant fear of nails. Not infrequently a courtier came to grief by catching his artificial contour on a treacherous tack, and walked across a room to accost his lady fair while he was losing a gush of bran at every step.

But, alas! the old days are gone when man was a bepadded, becurled and perfumed bird of paradise. What a dun, drear world man lives in now. His one aim is to be inconspicuous, to dress like other men. He will wear short coats, black shoes or tan shoes, according to the style; he will place his tie pin towards the north or towards the south as the sartorial artist decrees, but the mass of men refuse to be stampeded into individuality of costume. The most democratic thing in the world is the dress suit. It is the despair of tailors. London tailors some years ago tried to change it by bringing in colors, but they failed to shake male conformity. There is a catholicism of clothes as well as of religion. Man is the conformist of to-day, woman is the heretic, who blossoms into a new sect of finery every season. The Pope has just condemned female finery, but we fear that this heresy will be ineradicable.

Average Western Crop 12 Bushels to Acre.

FOR ENTIRE WEST IT RUNS NEARLY THAT FIGURE—AUGUST WAS A GOOD MONTH.

Ottawa, Sept. 15.—A bulletin of the Census and Statistics Office, issued yesterday, says that during August the situation with regard to the field crops of the Dominion showed great improvement over July. In the older Provinces the grains have matured well, and have been harvested and saved in fine condition. The estimate for the Dominion for wheat, oats and barley is 445,420,000 bushels, which is 129,188,000 bushels less than the final estimate for last year.

The estimated production of wheat for the whole of Canada is 122,785,000 bushels, of oats 283,247,000 bushels, and of barley 39,388,000 bushels, as compared with 166,744,000 bushels of wheat, 353,466,000 bushels of oats, and 55,398 bushels of barley in the final estimate for last year.

In the Eastern Provinces the increase of wheat is 3,633,000 bushels, of oats 23,219,000 bushels, and of barley 625,000 bushels.

The loss in the Western Provinces, exclusive of British Columbia, is a result of the great drouth of July, which reduced the area harvested by 22 per cent. for wheat, by 24 per cent. for oats, and by 31.5 per cent. for barley.

The estimate for Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta is 99,890,000 bushels wheat, 92,201,000 bushels oats, and 14,723,000 bushels barley, being an average of 11.89 bushels per acre for wheat, of 20.96 bushels for oats, and of 14.49 bushels for barley on the area sown, but of 15.24 bushels wheat, 27.91 bushels of oats and 21.22 bushels barley per acre on the area reaped.

Bridal Trip On Motorcycle Soon Meets Disaster.

BUILT FOR TWO, NOVEL CONVEYANCE WAS TO CARRY JERSEY COUPLE TO ATLANTIC CITY

Mercerville, N.J., Sept. 14.—A novel honeymoon trip planned by George Bell, a machinist, of this place, brought him to grief, and his bride, who was Miss Edith Lamar, is now confined to her home here, suffering from severe bruises. It will be at least a month before the bride's injuries will permit her again to start on her honeymoon trip. A motorcycle, built for two, was the cause of the disastrous and sudden ending of the trip.

Since he became engaged, four months ago, Bell has been building a tandem motorcycle. He kept his plans secret, not even taking his fiancee into his confidence. He placed two pairs of handlebars and two seats on the cycle and planned to ride on the front seat himself, and have his bride occupy the one in his rear. The person on the rear seat had practically nothing to do but hold on tightly to the handlebars.

Two days before the wedding he exhibited his contrivance to his fiancee and took her for a spin, informing her that with her consent they would use the machine to go to Atlantic City, where they intended to spend their honeymoon. The girl was delighted with the motorcycle.

After the ceremony the couple, surrounded by admiring friends and numerous curious persons, started on their novel trip.

The accident occurred while the couple were nearing Burlington. The bridegroom had all the four cylinders on the machine working in good shape. He was running full speed, but was kept so busy watching the road and machinery that he did not have time to converse with his bride. Just outside of Burlington the motorcycle struck a stone and threw Mrs. Bell onto the road.

The bridegroom was not aware of the disappearance of his bride until he had gone a distance of about ten miles. He was almost crazed with grief, believing that the girl was lying on the road dying. He finally located the spot where Mrs. Bell had been bumped from the machine, and was much relieved to learn that she was being cared for at a nearby farmer's home.

He has already offered the tandem for sale.

TIPLESS HOTEL A SUCCESS.

TRIED IN LONDON FOR A YEAR AND FOUND TO WORK WELL.

The experiment of a non-tip hotel in the Strand in London has proved a success. Since the establishment was opened a year ago there has not been a vacant bedroom, a record which could not be equalled by any other London hotel. Every day the management had had to refuse visitors. Altogether nearly a quarter of a million guests have stayed at the hotel during the 344 days it has been open.

The success of the hotel, the directors believe, is mainly due to the non tip rule. Guests are forbidden to offer any servant of the hotel a gratuity and any servant found accepting one is instantly dismissed. People know exactly what it is going to cost them before they set their foot in the hotel and when they pay their bill there is no need for them to put their hands into their pockets to tip anybody.

Although the rule against tipping is rigidly enforced by the management there have been visitors who have insisted upon offering gratuities. In order to protect the servants from temptation the management has had to request these visitors either to abide by the regulations or to seek accommodation elsewhere.

The management has had no difficulty in securing plenty of waiters and chambermaids despite the fact that they receive no tips.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

STORBECK IS HIS NAME.

Walker Finds Big Boer the Equal of Jack Johnson.

London, Sept. 14.—Hugh D. McIntosh is not going to have it all his own way in the world search for a white champion to snatch the laurels from Jack Johnson. Mac's rival is coming from the most unexpected source. It is none other than Reggie Walker, the South African sprinter, who took Rector, Kerr and Cartmel into camp in the sprint for the Olympic championships.

Walker is sending for John Storbeck to come to England from his South African farm. Storbeck is a young Boer farmer, who came over to English amateur championship in a few punches. Storbeck, who is 21, stands fully six feet one inch, and weighs, when fit, about 205 pounds. He is a game, hard-hitting fighter and with some more experience may make trouble for the white men who have designs on Johnson.

When Jimmy Britt was in South Africa last winter he saw Storbeck box on several occasions and on returning to England informed his friends that if they sent the big Boer up for the championships he would win them in a walk.

This search for a white man is going to prove some harrowing game, and more than one reputation is going to be blasted before success has perched upon the banner of the knight errant. The opening of McIntosh's campaign in London will be signalized by one of the greatest gatherings ever witnessed around an English ringside. If Bombadier Wells proves to be the winner over Sergeant Sunshine he will be sent right against the rest of them.

AFTER MORE HONORS.

Mr. Charles Wilmot and family left to-day for Ogdensburg, N. Y., to attend the exhibition there. He took with him his three celebrated ponies, namely, Bathgate Swell, Warwick Shrimp and Gold Cup.

PROFESSIONAL HOCKEY FOR BELLEVILLE.

Mr. N. E. Irving, Secretary of the Ontario Professional Hockey League, who is in the city, has made arrangements with Dr. Yeomans and Mr Richard Arnott to form a professional hockey team, which will enter the League next winter. In all probability Peterboro will also enter.

Jack Marks, formerly of this city, who is well known throughout Ontario will manage the local league.

Mr. Arnott intends to make an addition to the rink with a capacity of 700 reserved seats.

If two other clubs in Eastern Ontario will join the pro. ranks, a four club district will be formed in Eastern Ontario; if not, Peterboro and Belleville will enter the western league.

LOCAL HORSES AT MONTREAL SHOW.

Children's day at the coming big Horse Show to be held at the Arena on the 27th inst., will be Saturday the 1st of October, when the afternoon performance will be entirely devoted to the pony classes. On this matinee it is being arranged to have the show made as interesting as possible, so that the young ones, as well as the grown-ups. can appreciate the horses exhibited. Among these are the three famous ponies entered by Mr. Charles Wilmot, of Belleville, Ontario, named Warwick Shrimp, The Golden Cup and Bathgate Swell. This trio, of renown are entered for the single and double harness classes, the under-saddle numbers, and for the jumping.

Mr. Norman T. Wilson, of this city has also entered her two ponies to be exhibited on the afternoon of the 1st of October. They are the Rosebery and the Blueberry. They are entered in the harness, saddle and jumping numbers. In addition to these, the following have entered ponies in harness; Mr. James J. Burnett, of Montreal; Mr. Thomas Coughtry, of St Laurent; Miss Dorothy Milne, of Westmount; Mr. A. W. Jacobs, of Montreal; Master James Rodd, of Montreal; Mr. P. McDougall; Mr. Donnell C. Smelzer, of Montreal, and Mr. J. Douglas Stuart, of Westmount.

Burglars Busy In This District.

Burglars are busy in this section of the community and, judging from their operations yesterday afternoon, and what they took away, they are of the professional class. The scene of their operation was on the Marshall road in Sidney Township, just west of the city limits.

The residences visited and looted were Mr. Charles Vanderwaters and Mr. George W. Sills, which are in close proximity to each other. At the time the inmates were in attendance at the fair. At Mr. Sills' place about $20 in money was taken, one ladies gold chain, small links, one silver watch with flowered case, one ladies' gold ring with opal setting and a razor From Mr. Vandewaters' residence a gold ring, a pair of gold rimmed spectacles and a few other small articles were purloined.

It is stated that two other places near by were visited, but nothing of value is missed.

There is at the present time no clue as to who the crooks are.

Schooner Damaged By Fire Last Night.

The schooner W. J. Suffel, owned by Capt. Gilbert of this city, was last night partially destroyed by fire. The vessel was anchored at a point just south of the Grand Junction dock, and about 8 o'clock a fire broke out apparently in some part of the cabin. The interior of the schooner was badly wrecked. How the fire originated is not known. The Suffel was a good boat of 450 tonnage, and had been in commission all the season. The insurance, we are informed, will only partially cover the loss sustained. The fire brigade was not called out, as it would have been impossible to reach the burning vessel.

OBITUARY.

PETER J. O'SULLIVAN.

Mr. Peter J. O'Sullivan, a resident of the Township of Tyendinaga, passed away yesterday. Deceased, who was in his 35th year, was unmarried. He was a member of Reid's Catholic Church and a man who was esteemed by all who knew him. Two brothers and four sisters, all residents of Tyendinaga, survive.

GOVERNMENT JOBS.

Drudgery, Low Pay and Slow Promotion Are the Rule.

Persons who do not reside in Washington can form no adequate idea of the pressure brought to bear on senators and representatives for positions in the government service. Men and women, young and old, troop to the capitol every day with this refrain:

"I want a job, and I know you can get it for me if you only try."

As a matter of fact, it is an extremely difficult thing to secure positions in the service now that civil service is the rule in all the executive departments. This, however, is an advantage rather than a disadvantage to the office seekers. Especially is this true of the men who make the applications, for when a man goes "into the government" he practically condemns himself to amount to nothing for the rest of his life. There is scarcely an opportunity for any but the slowest promotion, and a government clerk who gets more than $1,500 a year is playing in fine luck.

To one young man who was anxious to get such a job a western representative once said:

"Young man, you will have more chance for a future if you go back home and maul rails. You might as well cast yourself into the sea with a millstone about your neck as to go into a government department and expect to accomplish anything."

Nevertheless it is hard to persuade the office hunters of this. They expect to have easy hours and a comparatively easy wage. They get these, but added to them is drudgery for life, a treadmill existence unlighted by the hope of achievement or fame. When they marry and rear families their former "easy wage" cannot keep them out of debt, and this once accumulated in Washington remains.—Popular Magazine.

LIGHTNING BOLTS.

The Safest and Most Perilous Places in a Thunderstorm.

What is the safest place in a thunderstorm? The question is apropos at the moment, and T. P.'s London Weekly supplies some answers. As a rule, the safest place is inside a building which is provided with a perfect lightning conductor. The conductor, however, must have no defects. If it be broken or have a faulty earth connection it is then a source of grave danger. In an ordinary dwelling house, unguarded as it usually is against lightning, a safe place is the middle of the largest room, where one is away from the walls; or a still safer precaution is to lie on an iron bed drawn out from contact with the wall.

The most dangerous places in the house, we are further told, are near the bell wires or an open window or the fireplace. Outside the house the places of danger are proximity to walls and buildings and iron fences. Another danger is a crowd. The vapor which rises from a crowd tends to lead a flash toward the crowd. In the open country one of the most dangerous places is the bank of a river. Avenues of trees, lakes and hedges are likewise dangerous. If any one doubts the danger of a hawthorn hedge let him take his stand at a safe distance during a respectable storm and watch the effect. The lightning will dart along the hedge like sheets of fire. If the observer gets wet to the skin, so much the better for his safety.

Parisian Burglar's Ingenious Device.

A new device for robbing flats in Paris was hit upon by a man who is now in jail. Dressed as a workingman and carrying a bucket filled with a mysterious compound, he was in the habit of calling at flats, saying he had come by the landlord's orders to disinfect the place. During the operation such an unpleasant smell was emitted that the tenant hastily decamped to the room farthest removed from the scene of "disinfection," leaving the coast clear for the burglar. The latter at length presented himself at a flat which happened to be occupied by the landlord himself, and a few minutes afterward he was handed over to the police.

NEWSBOY PROFITS.

A Good London "Pitch" Brings Its Owner Big Returns.

The smart street newspaper-seller usually earns more money than the average clerk or mechanic. This surprising statement was made recently by the head of the publishing department of a well-known London newspaper, who furnished some remarkable figures concerning the profits made by street newsboys, and incidentally revealed a curious feature of the newspaper-selling business.

While there are hundreds of youths who obtain copies of the morning and evening papers direct from the offices and secure the full profits, there are hundreds of others who are supplied by middlemen. That is to say, one man will go down to the office, buy enough papers to supply, say, a dozen youths, jump on his bicycle, and take them to the particular locality in which he has taken a stand or worked up a connection.

A short distance from a certain railway station every morning will be seen a man with piles of the various London newspapers busily engaged in supplying over a dozen boys who stand outside the station to sell the papers. These boys are actually employed by the news vendor, who pays them salaries ranging from $2.50 to $5 a week; and after all expenses are paid he makes a profit of over $15 a week for himself.

"Is it surprising," the publisher remarked, "that youths avoid shop and factory life when, by working from 5 a.m. until 9 p.m., and again, say, from 4 or 5 p.m. until 8 or 9 p.m., they can earn between $10 and $15 a week. I am referring now more particularly to the boys who are lucky enough to get pitches outside stations. Of course, there are hundreds of other boys who do not make anything like that amount, but even the youngest reckons on making $2.50 to $3 a week.

"Pitches outside stations are exceedingly valuable, and it is no uncommon thing for a man to pay anything from $100 to $500 for the privilege of selling his papers there. Many of these middlemen scarcely do any work at all. They secure a good pitch, employ an assistant for about $6 a week, and leave the running of the concern to him, and a very profitable business it is, too."

Australia's Hinterland.

The one problem in Australia which really overshadows every other, says an English paper, is that of the huge rich, unpeople northern territories—not only that section of the north which is at present controlled from Adelaide but the whole of northern Australia. It is an even greater problem than that of immigration, which to some extent forms a part of it. Here are enormous stretches of well-watered land capable of growing wheat, vast grazing areas, auriferous belts, rich tropical lands, innumerable natural products, deep rivers, and fine harbors. The portion known as the Northern Territory contains little more than 1,000 white inhabitants; the rest is populated on the same scale. There is need for a very rapid awakening of Australian opinion upon this vital issue.

One of the strangest petitions ever received by a police magistrate has been presented at Calcutta. A young Bengali, with his forehead covered with heavy caste marks, entered the witness-box during the hearing of applications, and handed to the magistrate a stamped paper praying for an order to have his life sacrificed before the goddess Kali for the benefit of the Government, and also for the people of Hindustan. It added that the comet which had been appearing nightly in the heavens was a very bad sign, and the petitioner who signed himself Prani Nath Sadhoo, wished to become its victim. The magistrate declined, and told the Bengali to go home and pray to avert the evil happenings which might follow the comet, as that might prove more efficacious than the loss of his life.

Flower Lessons.

Mother Nature's flowers can show
Lots of things a child should know.
Four o'clocks will tell the hours
When they open wide their flowers.
Sunflowers bend to where the sun
Sinks when all his work is done.
Dandelion puffs, you know,
Tell you when it's time to go
If you blow their fluff away.
Pansies make fine dolls for play.
"You love butter," you are told
By deep cups of yellow gold,
And the daisy's petals white
Tell your fortune fair and bright.
Lots of things a child should know
Mother Nature's flowers can show.

—Youth's Companion.

The ...Veiled Lady...

perb loveliness as she entered or departed. The spell of her glorious voice was on him; and Victorine, (pouring oil on a blazing fire), had artfully completed the picture. When Josef came back with the cordial, the Count's orders to Victorine were: "Go up and tell her all! Say the house is even now watched by the police! She will be arrested! She is alone and friendless; frighten her! I know she has not a moment to lose for safety! You can order her music master to come back in three days. How easy for you to say you were a waiting-maid in my establishment, where your husband was valet. Beg her to appeal to me. I will save her! She may be arrested any moment! I will even hide her here!" he said, with a sinister smile. "Now, go! and come back soon to me. You can come down with her, if you can induce her to save herself! Remembers your future reward!"

The sparkling eyes of Victorine beamed assent.

"Go! Spare her not! But I alone can save her! You know what to say!" Victorine, with the cordial, entered Irene Gordon's room. She was astounded to see her already busied in rapid preparation for leaving. Victorine sharply said: "Mademoiselle, I fear you will not be able to quit this house safely!"

Irene's face was ashen. She brokenly said, "Why?"

"The police are watching it, and have even dogged me all day yesterday and to-day!"

A knock sounded at the door. "It is Duprez! Tell him not to come for a week! I will write him! Say that I am ill!" gasped Irene, now desperate. Victorine returned from her mission. "I must not put myself in her power," Irene thought. "My God! The awful punishment! My brother! The police! This is the work of that fiend Jenks! He has hunted me down!" She sprang up defiantly. "I will not die on the scaffold," she swore in her heart. "Better by the knife!" She shuddered, a spasm of rage seized her.

"Victorine! I must leave here at once! You must aid me! I will reward you! Will you help me away and stay here until I am safe?"

"Madame!" said Victorine, coldly, "I dare not face our severe laws! There is but one way!"

"Speak!" cried Irene eagerly. "Anything to prevent this disgrace!" She dared not tell the sly maid, that she feared Beverly Seaton's eye as much as the halter. "Anything, if I can only go at once."

Victorine repeated her lesson. When the woman, who walked up and down the room, had finished, Irene Gordon (her face buried in her hands), said in a harsh voice, "How does the Count know of this?"

"He was my old master, and I told him, for I was afraid. Madame is quite a stranger to me!"

Irene Gordon walked alone into her boudoir. Standing before the glass, she gazed at the ripe glowing beauty of her matchless face; the superb loveliness of her swelling figure, the Venus lines of a wondrous symmetry, showed their matchless charms to the eyes of the self-devoting fugitive.

"At last!" she murmured. Walking swiftly to the door, she quietly said, "Go down and ask the Count if he can receive me in fifteen minutes! Then come back and dress me! Knock three times when you return." The woman, a sly smile curving her lips, hastened down stairs. Irene Gordon locked the door, and, hastening to a half-packed trunk, thrust a dagger in her bosom. "The hard conditions of Life and Liberty," she muttered; "there's always time for Death!" For she feared to meet the ghost of murdered Egbert Neill, waiting for her at the gloomy river. In five minutes, Victorine, with regained composure, re-entered, giving the signal. The reward was in her grasp.

"Monsieur le Comte will receive you in fifteen minutes. He has sent his man out to explore. There are two policemen at the front, and one at the rear of the house,—at the courtyard stairs."

"Quick! Dress me!" said Irene, with fevered eagerness.

Victorine, deftly plying her fingers, continued: "The Count will have his man and myself at once remove all your luggage to his apartments. I will stay here, and Josef will keep guard. The Count will help you away to-night in disguise. He is a powerful noble!"

"But how?" cried Irene, assisting with trembling fingers to robe herself.

"It is the night of the Opera Ball, Madame, and the Count can safely take you away, disguised, in his carriage." Irene was silent. In ten minutes the toilet was finished. In ten more, the smaller articles were gathered together. In street costume, (with wraps, and a portmanteau, hastily gathered up by Victorine), Irene Gordon stepped over her own threshold, heavily veiled. She descended the stairs with the air of a captive queen, and walked proudly over the threshold of Max Stahrenstein's salon.

With one last throb of her wild passionate heart for Jack Gordon, (heart-hungry, far away in the snows of the western prairie) she seated herself. "It is over!" she vaguely dreamed, and fell senseless in her chair.

The iron doors of Fate had closed on her forever. She was a wife no longer; only a hunted fugitive!

As high noon boomed from the bell of Notre Dame, Beverly Seaton and Horace Jenks met at the Cercle, in the reception room. Seaton was hollow eyed. "See here! I won't talk until you breakfast!" Jenks was resolute. In half an hour Seaton learned of Jenks' final resolve.

"We must trust some one! I shall send a party and have arrangements made to quietly examine all this woman's belongings at once. We must verify matters, and get some actual proofs! It will take a little money. I have already sent a man to sound the only party who can do it. You must take a rest! You look ill! I will have to be in the club here to-night. That cursed Stahrenstein may demand another tilt for fortune's sake. I have won heavily from him, and I can't leave him; but I will have news of the possible success of our plan by midnight, and when we can effect it. Don't you go near there again till I tell you! It would spoil all!"

Seaton (worn out and nerveless) drank a glass of heavy wine, and then threw himself on a bed in one of the club apartments. He little thought that a wink to Baptiste from Jenks caused that prosaic Rustighella to give him a good draught of the opiated wine, occasionally used, when late seances gave an unusually good opportunity to fleece some neophyte!

When eight o'clock sounded from the gilded mantel clock in Count Stahrenstein's salon, the Hidden Prima Donna, (pale and resolute), was listening to Max Stahrenstein's quiet and explicit directions for the escape! The Count was graceful, polished and kindly. In mere vacuity of purpose, she had dined in silence. "Oh! to be on the road!" Josef reported the removal of the entire personal luggage of the would-be fugitive. Victorine was arranging the preparations for a voyage, assisted by the nimble valet. No one had visited the rooms. No callers.

"Is there no other way?" Irene queried, when the Count ceased explaining.

"None safe or sure! I have already ordered a locomotive and car. We will drive to the 'Bal de l'Opera.' Josef will see all the luggage at the station in safe hands. He will wait for us with a carriage. We will be at the main entrance at one o'clock. The last regular trains leave at one o'clock; our special will leave at two. We will run right on to Geneva, then over to Constance. There you are safe, and (in two days) you shall be able to defy the world at Furstenfeld. There will be a good maid with Josef, and Victorine can wait here. I leave my maitre d'hotel in charge. He will watch over her till all is quiet; then she can come on and join you. I will send Josef back with her. The whole world cannot find you at 'Schloss Stahrenstein' against my will. You can defy pursuit. I have a box, so that you can rest at ease at the Ball."

"And you will have no trouble with the police?" the Diva anxiously said.

"Mademoiselle; a man of my rank is free from vulgar interference!" the Count smilingly said.

Irene looked at the clock, half past eight. "How long these hours here!" she thought. "Would to God it were two, and we were under way!"

"Will we not be observed, as we leave here?" again demanded the frightened song bird.

"No; I shall have several carriages come in, apparently in confusion. Josef will cover our departure. He is skilful."

"And my luggage" Irene queried, still unsatisfied.

"Je m'en charge de tout! Josef will load two baggage wagons with some of mine and yours all mixed up. He will leave mine a la gare. It is only a blind."

"Ah! I see now!" said the captive Diva; "but my costume? Shall I not attract attention at the Ball in my walking dress? I might be followed by that!"

"Mademoiselle!" said the Count, smiling, as he rose and bowed. "If you will consult Victorine, you will see I have also thought of that! It will be necessary for us to mingle a little with the throng, for your safety. You must be thought, for this night, a Queen of Beauty! Josef will bring your entire travelling costume in the carriage with him. I have provided a heavy domino mantle. Once in the car, your maid can arrange you. The costume need not come back; it would lead to detection. It is yours to dispose of. Leave your keys with Victorine. She will arrange everything and Josef will bring them. We are safer out of the house now. I will await you and we will go at once to the Opera Ball. The boxes will be filled when we arrive. We will leave at one."

Irene, spurred by fear, arose and passed into the rooms where Victorine awaited her. As she turned and slightly bowed, she caught a glimpse of Max Stahrenstein's eyes in the vast mirror. She trembled as she passed the door.

"Never!" she cried, as her eyes fell upon the royally rich costume displayed in her temporary boudoir.

"Does Madame prefer a French prison?" the cold voice of Victorine hissed in her ear. Irene,—Irene now without a name, gave herself helplessly into the hands of the triumphant French woman.

When Victorine, with a sly, mocking smile, said, "Viola! C'est fini! Madame est vraiment superbe!" the singer gazed at herself in wonder; as Victorine carelessly tossed the dagger, lying on the couch, into the open portmanteau.

Irene helplessly handed them to the overjoyed maid. She stole a glance at herself before Victorine clasped a long white Austrian cloak around her. The fleecy folds swept the floor. In the rich sheen of warmly tinged silk fleshings, (an audacious exposure), with the richest white silk accessories, a jewelled girdle around the waist, and flashing diamond stars on a diagonal, broad white silk shoulder sash, the black velvet mask crowned with her golden hair, she stood a trembling Aphrodite, a marvel of loveliness, as Victorine clasped the white cloak.

"Allons! Madame!" said Victorine, throwing wide open the doors, and grasping the heavy-hooded domino mantle, which would veil all semblance of the concealed beauty, Victorine passed out into the hall.

Girdle Empire With Cheap Cables.

London, Sept. 15.—At the conference of the Institute of Journalists, Robt. McMillan of Sydney, Australia, moved a resolution expressing the view that the time had arrived for binding the Empire together in a girdle with cheap cables.

Henniker Heaton, in supporting the motion, contended that the cables were now in the hands of operators of a cable ring. They should be bought out at the market price by the Governments of the world.

The first step was to call a conference of the postmasters-general of Europe and then another with the United States. The resolution carried.

Booker to Join Outlook.

OWES HER LIFE TO

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Vienna, W. Va. — "I feel that I owe the last ten years of my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Eleven years ago I was a walking shadow. I had been under the doctor's care but got no relief. My husband persuaded me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like a charm. It relieved all my pains and misery. I advise all suffering women to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — MRS. EMMA WHEATON, Vienna, W. Va.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Whitney Outlines Position in Interview in London.

Denies the Charge That He Favors a Policy Which Will Increase Cost of Living in Great Britain—Is Anxious to See an End to the Present Drifting—Favors Chamberlain Policy of Imperial Solidarity.

London, Sept. 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In consequence of his alleged desertion, by his views here, on Canada, Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, has given an interview to The Standard, recapitulating his views on imperial questions.

Sir James Whitney urges the desirability of Canada establishing herself in the British market and strongly deprecates any reciprocity arrangement with the United States. The accusation that he favored a policy which would raise the cost of living in England, he styles scandalous misrepresentation. He would have nothing to do with any policy having that affect, but he is unable to see any possibility of any such result. Canada could supply wheat as cheaply as the United States and the Argentine, and the refusal of Britain even to discuss the proposals for imperial preferential trade are deplorable and may well prove disastrous.

Dealing with the strong desire of Canada to weld the Empire on the strongest lines, Premier Whitney said "We don't care whether you make free trade or tariff reform the basis on your part for commercial arrangements. But for goodness sake let us stop drifting and agree to sail a definite course. The only live imperial policy before us is that enunciated by Chamberlain. Let us get around the table and discuss it as business men, as loyal sons of the fathers by whom our splendid heritage was won. If free traders cannot see their way to make the Chamberlain policy a subject of discussion, let them produce an alternative policy of their own. We will examine that and anything to make a step forward, anything to prevent a backward movement which may naturally occur.

New Ships for Canadian Lines.

London, Sept. 15.—The C.N.R. next week opens a weekly service between Bristol and Montreal. The Voltarno, with accommodation for 1,500 steerage passengers, is to be put on the St. Lawrence route.

Emigration is to be better catered for by the various lines, who are also being urged to pay attention to the question of better communication with Newfoundland.

Got the Countess' Jewels.

Winnipeg, Sept. 15.—The Countess of Antrim, who passed through here a few days ago on her way to the coast, was robbed of jewelry valued at many thousands of dollars, and priceless from the fact that some of them were family heirlooms, while at the Royal Alexandra, on Saturday night. She will visit her son, in business in British Columbia.

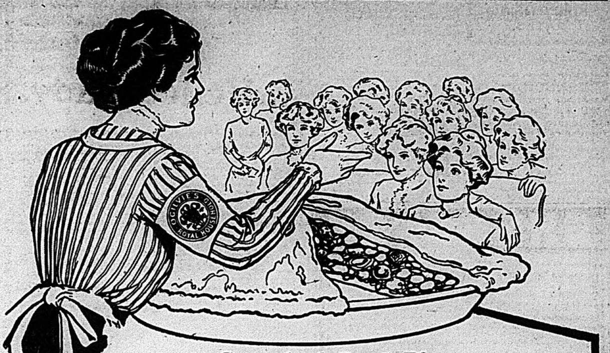
When boiling milk for a custard powder, sprinkle the bottom of the saucepan with sugar; this dissolves and forms a layer, and so prevents the milk from burning, no matter how long it boils. It applies to any sweetened milk.



Secret of Good Pies

PIE CRUST, more than any other delicacy of the oven, ought to be tempting and appealing to the taste. You do not eat pie as a nerve tonic or to strengthen your appetite. You eat it for pleasure mostly.

results every time—more healthful, digestible and nourishing than if made from ordinary flour.

And the reason is that ROYAL HOUSEHOLD having a larger percentage of high quality gluten, assimilates more readily and is more satisfying than ordinary flour, and comes out of the oven flakier, more tender and more digestible.

Ogilvie's Royal Household Flour

You want it, of course, to taste good. At the same time you want the crust to be light, flaky, wholesome. Above all things you don't want it tough, indigestible and not safe to eat.

Now, pie crust properly made from OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is always good food, the absolute uniformity of this best of all flours eliminates failure entirely. You get the same delightful

Pies made from "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" taste better and are better than pies made from other flour—much more delicious, better in every way.

Be sure to try "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" when next you make pies. It is the finest flour in the world not only for pastry but for bread and all family baking.

"OGILVIES BOOK FOR A COOK" containing 125 pages of tried and tested recipes will be sent free to any user of Royal Household Flour who asks for it.

Katie Frick a Bright Little Blind Girl.

Little folks who possess all their senses will surely sympathize with Katie Frick, a little deaf, dumb and blind girl, who is making wonderful progress in acquiring an education. Katie lives in Pennsylvania and the state has given money that she may be educated. When Katie was six she lost the use of eyes, ears and voice and the fact that she was not born in that condition has been a great help to her teacher, as she remembers many things she saw before becoming blind. Katie was taught to count by means of wooden blocks, learning quickly and easily. Her greatest triumph and pleasure came, however, when she learned to write and was able to send a letter to her parents. It is believed that in time she may be taught to speak. At present she converses by placing her fingers on the lips of those speaking, as shown in the picture above.

Is 110 Years Old.

New Zealand has an interesting old pioneer in Henry Burling of Waikanae. Henry is 110 years of age, and came from England in 1840. Just to show the young fellows how to do it in the small township where he resides he opened the football season last year by "kicking off" at the opening game. Mr. Burling and his grandson both draw the old-age pensions. His eldest son is eighty-five, but cannot draw the pension as he is too well off. The grandson is well over sixty-five.

Wireless In Polynesia.

The Australian Government has decided to adopt the recommendations of the conference of representatives of the Admiralty, the Commonwealth, New Zealand, and Fiji for linking up the British islands in the Pacific by wireless telegraphy. The scheme provides for the establishment of high-power stations at Sydney, Doubtless Bay (New Zealand), Suva, and Ocean Island, and medium power stations in the New Hebrides and the Solomon Islands, all to be controlled by the Government.

A Sign of the Times.

One of the most up to date of signs—it is truly a sign of the times—has been erected at Margate, on the southern coast of England, by an enterprising firm of that town. It faces the English channel and advertises the ground on which it stands as an "anchorage for aeroplanes." So many aviators have made or tried cross channel flights that numerous landings of "airmen" on the coast of England may be expected in the not far distant future, and the Margate firm purposes to be on the ground early.—Kansas City Star.

Roman Boat In London.

A Roman boat which was dug out during the excavations for the new county hall at Lambeth is about fifty feet long, with a sixteen foot beam. It contained shreds of Roman pottery, bones, iron nails, glass gaming buttons, iron studded soles of footwear, a coin of Tetricus in Gaul (A. D. 268-273), a coin of Carausius in Britain (A. D. 286-293) and a coin of Allectus in Britain (A. D. 293-296). The coins show that the boat is about 1,000 years old.

Buried In Her Piano.

A woman professor of music who recently died at Marseilles, France, has been buried in her piano in obedience to her final wish. She gave as her reason for this strange request that the happiest hours of her life had been spent at her piano. Owing to the great size of this original coffin an immense grave had to be dug.

Australian Military Training.

The compulsory training of lads in the Commonwealth between the ages of fourteen and eighteen years will probably commence on or about January 1st next. The only persons who will be exempt from the new system will be those who live at long distance from convenient centres of population. The Commonwealth is to be divided up into districts for the purpose of the training. In each of these districts there will be a militia area officer, who will be assisted by two permanent staff sergeants. The staff sergeants will be in charge of the drill instruction, and the militia officer will carry out the administrative work. It is proposed to appoint the militia area officer next month, and they will then be required to attend a special school of instruction.

On the Running Road.

"He hardly knows what office he's runnin' for. Almost any one he happens to bump into will do. Just wants somethin' or other to give him a runnin' reason. A rainbow would answer if it would stay long enough for him to get to the end of it!"—Atlanta Constitution.

A Queer Case.

"When are they to be married?"

"She doesn't know. She is worried because she is not quite sure of herself."

"That's a new one on me. I thought a girl worried when she wasn't quite sure of the man."—Pittsburg Post.

Cause of the Drop.

"Miss Passay is furious with that society reporter."

"Why so?"

"He published the announcement of her approaching wedding under the column headed 'Late Engagements.'"—Life.

Franklin-Morden.

A quiet but very pretty house wedding was solemnized yesterday at 1181 4th Ave. West, when Ethel Gertrude, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Morden, was united in marriage to Thomas Carlyle Franklin, eldest son of the late Rev. and Mrs. Geo. Mark Franklin. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. T. C. Morris, pastor of the First Methodist Church. Promptly at twelve o'clock the bride, who was becomingly gowned in a frock of pale blue shantung silk, tastefully trimmed with soft folds of blue satin and rich creamy lace, entered the drawing room on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march from Lohrengrin, played by Miss Gertrude E. Munro, one of the bride's girl friends, prettily gowned in cream embroidered mull. The bride carried an armful of white chrysanthemums, while the same graceful flower was used as a decoration throughout the house. Another girl friend of the bride, Miss Blanche Cox, of Kingston, was maid of honor, wearing a dainty gown of cream silk mull. The wedding party took their places under a white slipper filled with trailing myrtle vine and ferns. Owing to the recent death of the groom's father, only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present. The bride's mother was attired in soft grey silk, with touches of mauve, and wore a bunch of purple asters. The groom's mother wore a becoming gown of rich black silk. After the wedding breakfast was served the happy couple left by C.P.R. on a short honeymoon trip, the bride wearing a suit of navy blue cloth and Paisley waist, tan boots and gloves, her hat being navy beaver with tan trimmings. The bride was the recipient of many pretty and useful gifts. The out-of-town guests were Miss Jean Franklin, of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Morden, Penetanguishene, and Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Morden and children, of Simcoe, and Miss Blanche Cox, of Kingston.—Owen Sound Times.

Miss Morden was formerly a resident of this city for some time.

THE DELINEATOR FOR OCTOBER.

In The Delineator for October Erman J. Ridgway uses the words "Mein Freund," spoken by the Kaiser to Mr. Roosevelt, as a text for editorials that reveal the strong personality which is shaping the magazine on broader lines each month.

The leading article of the month is a description of "Women's Fight Against Graft in San Francisco," by Elizabeth Gerberding, who was one of the leaders of the Women's League of Justice. Mrs. Gerberding's startling story of what happened to the California reformers is really a tale of a modern inquisition in which many an advocate of civic righteousness suffered social and commercial martyrdom. Such a daring and circumstantial arraignment of corrupt government never has been published in any magazine that makes a direct appeal to women.

"The State Fair," by E. W. Randall and William Kirkwood is a study of the development of the educational possibilities of the annual events that once meant a combination of vegetable exhibits and horse races. The second instalment of Anne Forsythe's experiences while "Seven Times a Servant," sets forth what happened to the college girl when she tried to be a waitress in a New York apartment. Emily Post answers the question, "What Makes a Young Girl Popular?" and Gwendolen Overton writes of "The Exclusive Society of Mexico."

The fiction includes "Each in His Own Tongue" by Louise M. Montgomery, a tale of rare quality; "The Harnessing of Pegasus," by Grace MacGowan Cooke, one of the author's best short stories, and "Mrs. Bankhurst to Dinner," a charming bit of comedy. "The Unforeseen," a serial by Mary Stewart Cutting, reaches a climax of compelling interest.

"The Man's Magazine" page is, as usual, amusing and original, a clever bit of burlesque that persons of every class will enjoy.

REFORM THE HIGH SCHOOLS.

A strong case for the reform of High Schools and Collegiate Institutes is made by Norman Paterson in the current issue of The Canadian Courier. It is pointed out that in order to keep the boys on the farm, agricultural counties must establish agricultural High Schools which will train the farmers' sons in the principles of farming. The present High School curriculum tends to drive young men into the universities and the professions. Similarly, the Technical High School should replace the present institution in all manufacturing towns. This has already been done in Berlin and several other important industrial centres in Ontario. Here the young men are given a liberal education, but in addition are taught the simpler forms of working with wood and iron, as well as being given elementary training in the making of tools and the use of machinery.

In brief, a High School education should be a help to the great industries of the country, commercial, industrial and agricultural. It should not confine itself so closely to the making of teachers, doctors, lawyers and dentists. It should develop all that is in a youth, without giving him false ideas as to the nobility of industrial and agricultural pursuits. It should be practical as well as theoretical.

Infraction of By-Law

Two grocery keepers, Messrs. R. Fenn & Son and A. Gael, were this morning summoned before the Magistrate charged with keeping their places of business open after 7.30 p.m., contrary to a by-law passed by the Council authorizing the closing of such places at 7.30 p.m. The case of Fenn & Son was enlarged until Wednesday next.

The charge against Gael was investigated and he was acquitted, but he was warned against continuing the practice of keeping open after the hour stipulated in the by-law. Mr. Porter, K.C., who appeared for Mr. Gael, contended that his client was a vendor of postage stamps, and, as such, under the law he was compelled to keep his shop open later than 7.30. Mr. Mikel, K.C., City Solicitor, appeared in the case on behalf of the city.

The Manifestations Of Eye-Strain

Continued.

There is no rule as to its position; this varies with the individual. In some it is superficial, akin to neuralgia; in others, deep-seated.

It may be a dull, heavy ache, difficult to localize accurately, or it may be a sharp, shooting lancinating pain that seems to originate in a tender spot on the scalp or forehead. Some describe the pain as an opening and shutting of the skull, others as if a nail were being driven into the vertex.

But the commonest form of eyestrain headache is a pain over one or both brows, often termed "brow ague." Again, the time of the headache varies; it may be a permanent headache or periodic, and it may appear to have no direct association with excessive use of the eyes.

Early morning headache is a very common form of ocular headache, and this astonishes most patients, as they imagine that the night's rest should have removed the possibility of this

Belleville Fair Was A Great Success.

FINE WEATHER, LARGE CROWDS GOOD EXHIBITS AND OTHER ATTRACTIONS UNITE TO MAKE THIS ONE OF THE MOST SUCCESSFUL FAIRS EVER HELD HERE.

The Belleville Fair for the year 1910 was brought to a close yesterday under most favorable auspices. Ideal weather prevailed and in consequence there was one of the largest crowds upon the grounds ever seen at a fair here. A conservative estimate placed the attendance at 3,500, not a few of whom were children, owing to a half holiday in the city schools. The youngsters visited every part of the fair and all wore a happy smile. The special attractions upon the platform in front of the grand stand was of special interest to them and even the elder spectators. The officials of the fair put forth every effort to present to their patrons a bill of fare that would be pleasing, and in that respect they were eminently successful. Every detail was carefully looked after, and as is the case always where concerted action is in motion, success crowned their efforts. The officials are certainly entitled to congratulate themselves upon the success of the Belleville Fair. There is every reason to believe that when the balance sheet is struck there will be found a nice sum on the right side of the sheet. It was without doubt one of the best, if not the best fair held in the city.

Yesterday's Events.

The events yesterday were carried off with neatness and despatch. The program was varied and entertaining and one that held the attention of the audience to the close. Of course the greatest interest centered in the trials of speed. They were two splendid exhibitions of speed namely, the 2.50 class 1-2 mile heats and the free-for-all mile heats. The latter event attracted much attention and was certainly a good exhibition of the speed possessed by the three horses which contested it. As upon the previous day no time was announced from the Judges' stand.

Free For All.

There were three entries for this event namely, Jimmy Direct, owned by C. Teal, Trenton, Ned Wilkes owned by W. Fanning, Lindsay, and Edward the King, owned by Geo. Powell of this city. Only three heats were necessary to determine the winner, and in each heat the horses finished in the order named. Whilst no time was given out it was apparent that some good time was made. The heats were certainly no walk-over for the winner, as at the finish of each heat the three horses were well bunched together in passing under the wire.

Jimmy Direct, C. Teal, Trenton,	1	1	1
Ned Wilkes, W. Fanning, Lindsay,	2	2	2
Edward the King, Geo. Powell, Belleville.	3	3	3

There were six entries for this event which was run in half-mile heats best three in five. Three heats were enough to determine the result. Black Prince, owned by L. C. McColl, of Brighton, taking three straight heats. Guy M., owner by Mr. J. Brintnell, of this city, captured second money. It was a good race and immensely enjoyed by the spectators. Owing to six horses starting, Mr. Carnew the starter was compelled to call them back several times in some of the heats before a good start was secured. All the heats were well contested the decisions for second and third places being exceptionally close. The summary in this event is as follows:

Black Prince, L. C. McColl, Brighton,	1	1	1
Guy M., J. Brintnell, Belleville,	3	2	2
Windsor Belle, L. Ketcheson, Belleville.	2	4	5
Brino V., G. Vassaw, Trenton,	6	3	3
Helmore, W. J. Orr, Belleville.	4	5	4
Major Hamburg, Ashley Stock Farm, Foxboro,	5	6	dr

Running Race.

In the farmer's running race there were two entries, namely, Mr. R. C. Morrow's horse and Mr. W. W. Anderson's horse. The judges had no difficulty in deciding the winner, as the former horse won by a good margin.

Ladies' Single Driving.

There were five lady drivers who entered in this event and they were judged upon the track in front of the grand stand. The ladies handled the ribbons in such a manner as to call forth loud applause from the spectators. The result as announced by the judges was as follows:

Miss A. Wilmot, 1st.
Mrs. C. Wilmot, 2nd.
Mrs. H. Ketcheson, 3rd.

During the afternoon specialties of a high order were given by the Japanese and Malvern troupe. The famous Clan Johnstone troupe was also present and delighted the spectators with the bag pipes, sword dancing and jigs.

The I. O. O. F. band rendered a very acceptable programme of music and Mr. Bert Daniels gave two cornet solos, which were well rendered and loudly applauded.

High Jumping.

A feature of especial interest was an exhibition given of high jumping by Mr. C. Wilmot's celebrated pony Bathgate Swell, ridden by his daughter, Miss Aubrey Wilmot. The pony cleared the hurdle at 5 1-2 feet, which feat called forth loud applause from the spectators.

Notes.

Mr. J. F. Fitzsimmons of Rochester was the expert judge of horses, and Messrs. A. Crozier of Beachburg and Mr. A. M. Campbell of Maxville expert judges on cattle. These gentlemen whilst having a rather arduous task did it well.

Nothing occurred during the two days to mar the pleasant proceedings.

Before the crowd dispersed Col. Ponton, President of the Fair, spoke a few words from the Judges' stand thanking the spectators for their attendance, the judges for the duties they performed and the other officials of the Fair.

When the hour of 6 o'clock arrived nearly everything had been removed from the grounds.

The officers and directors of the Fair for this year were as follows:

Officers— President, Col. W. N. Ponton, 1st Vice President, W. C. Farley; 2nd Vice President, Chas. Weese; Secretary, R. H. Ketcheson; Treasurer, G. G. Horton.

Directors — W. W. Anderson, Stanley Welbanks, G. Campbell, H. K Denyes, H. Emerson, L. W. Marsh W. J. Thrasher, Frank Dempsey, R J. Garbutt, E. W. Brooks, C. Sulman, W. Hanley, L. R. Terwilligar, E. Mallory, W. Carnew.

Committees who assisted Exhibitors and Judges — Horses: Clases 1, 2, 3 4 and 5—W. J. Thrasher, Chas. Weese, W. Carnew, L. R. Terwilligar.

Horses: Classes 6 and 7.—W. M. Anderson and Chas. Weese.

Cattle: Classes 8, 9, 10 and 11 — W Hanley, H. K. Denyes, E. Mallory.

Sheep and Swine: Classes 12 to 19 —G. Campbell, R. J. Garbutt, S. Welbanks.

Poultry and Carriages: Chas. Sulman, W. C. Farley.

Hall: H. Emerson, L. W. Marsh, R. H. Ketcheson.

Mining News.

J. G. McNulty, manager of the Wilbur Mining property for the Hawthorne company, was in Kingston yesterday and stated that he had just returned from Sherbrooke, Que., where he had ordered a great deal of machinery for Wilbur. He stated by the end of the year there would be three mines in operation. It was the intention soon to start the work of rebuilding the K. and P. railway spile wharf here for the shipment of the ore. The company will have its own vessels, and bring return cargoes of coal from Oswego and Charlotte.

Strike Riots Cost Brockville Big Sum.

BILL FOR BOARDING MILITIA RUNS UP TO $1,112.72—OTHER EXPENSES.

Brockville, Sept. 14.—Brockville has been assessed $1,129.72 for the boarding of the local and out-of-town militia stationed here during the G. T. R. strike riots. The bills have all been received and the accounts passed.

The G. T R. also claim $44.13 for repairs to the damaged part of the station, during the night of the riot, July 22. The damage amounted to $11.13, while the repair work was $33. The Council has left the question of settlement till it finds out why it cost so much for the repairs, in proportion to the damage done.

Reuben Lee, the young man who has been in jail awaiting trial on a charge of placing an obstruction on the tracks of the Canadian Northern Railway near Forfar on July 22nd last, has been declared an imbecile and is now in jail awaiting what action the Attorney-General will make in the case. He was brought before his honor Judge Reynolds this morning and the evidence of Dr. R. N. Horton and Dr. Giles B. Murphy taken.

New Holder Used as Advertising Proclaimers.

Ald. Elliott of the Kingston City Council, chairman of the civic light heat and power committee, is being commended for being energetic in advertising the sale of gas this year. The columns of the newspapers have been utilized freely but the latest scheme of the chairman is to have painted on the new gas holder, forty feet high, the words in large letters "Cook with Gas." The advertising has resulted in the addition of a large number of customers, and the committee will likely continue its present methods. Manager Folger reports that the plant has had a most successful year.

Automobile Tire Service.

Not only in service, but in economy of service, Dunlop Tires give a low average cost per mile, because there is quality in the tire to begin with. That quality is in itself a guarantee of service, and is backed up by the ready willingness of the Dunlop Company to thoroughly satisfy every user of Dunlop Automobile Tires.

Cheered the Queen's Own.

London, Sept. 15.—Headed by the band of the Irish Guards, the Queen's Own Rifles marched from Nine Elms station across London through throngs of applauding and admiring people to the Duke of York's School, Chelsea, where they remain during their stay. At several schools along the route of march the children were grouped. They cheered lustily and waved their flags in honor of the Canucks.

King Edward's Horse, the mounted territorial regiment, composed of colonials resident in London, entertained the Q.O.R. at a brilliant dinner in the Holborn restaurant. Col. Fortescue presided, supported by Lord Strathcona, Sir G. H. Reid, high commissioner for Australia, and the officers of the Q.O.R. The highest tributes were paid Sir Henry Pellatt for his patriotism, the chairman remarking that the visit of the Q.O.R. was unique in history, the service of which to the Empire it was hard to overestimate.

Col. Pellatt, who was enthusiastically received, spoke of the many useful military lessons the Queen's Own had already learnt, which would be useful to those they had left behind in Canada.

Lord Strathcona said that the Q.O.R. were a credit to Canada. He was proud of Sir Henry Pellatt and his regiment. The visit to England would serve more closely to unite the Empire.

Commander Criticized.

Ottawa, Sept. 15.—The Free Press, the local Government organ, criticizes severely Commander Roper for having talked on the navy question the other day, and says: "The principle involved is so serious a one that Commander Roper should be told by his superior officers that the first duty of a sailor is to keep his mouth closed. He is entitled to his own opinions upon matters of political controversy, like every other individual, but he should understand that in Canada, as in England, the person who should express the official opinions of the Department is the Ministerial head, and not any of his advisers."

Stole Stamps.

Wichita, Kan., Sept. 15.—W. F. Naftzger, until a week ago president of the Fourth National Bank of this city; Frank S. Burt, ex-chief of Wichita, and John Callahan, alleged leader of a gang of bank and postoffice robbers, were indicted by a federal grand jury here yesterday on charges of conspiring against the Government and receiving and disposing of stamps, which it is charged they knew were stolen from the Government. The value of the stamps mentioned in the indictments is $1,500.

Honored In Brussels.

Brussels, Sept. 15.—Armand Hubert, Minister of Industry and Labor, gave a luncheon in honor of Hon. W. L. M. King and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux. Among the invited guests were officials of Canada's exhibit at the exhibition. After luncheon Messrs. King and Lemieux were received by the Minister of Foreign Affairs at the Foreign Office.

Mr. King was received by the King of the Belgians at the royal palace.

Caspar Whitney a Bankrupt.

New York, Sept. 15.—Caspar Whitney, the author, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy yesterday. He gives his liabilities as $36,157, and his principal unsecured creditor as Robt. Bacon, ambassador to France, whose claim amounts to $29,000 for money loaned.

Whitney's assets consist of $75 in a bank.

May See the Fight Pictures.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 15.—It looks now as if the Johnson-Jeffries fight pictures would be shown in St. John after all. An outside concern is seeking a license, and the mayor intimates rather plainly that he will not interfere in the matter, although some time ago he refused to grant a license to local parties to show the pictures.

TAKE OVER UTILITIES

Resolution Is Passed by Trades and Labor Congress.

Warm Discussion Occurs Regarding the Breaking of Franchises—Enactment of a Law to Guard Against Petty Theft of Tools Is Desired—Socialist Resolution Against Militia Service Defeated.

Fort William, Sept. 15.—After a strenuous session yesterday morning the Trades and Labor Congress adjourned for the day to take a trip on the harbor and to visit the Canadian Northern grain elevators. The congress' solicitor, J. G. O'Donoghue, Toronto, read his report yesterday morning, which was referred to a special committee. The following resolutions were dealt with yesterday morning:

An amendment to the Lemieux Act to make it illegal to approach conciliators by 'phone, letter, personally or by any other method while the investigation was going on, was voted down.

To appeal to the Minister of Militia to prohibit military exercise and drills on Labor Day. Some delegates said this was becoming prevalent and deprived labor men from participating in Labor Day demonstrations when they desired.

To seek the enactment of a law making it difficult for petty thieves to sell carpenters' and other mechanics' tools to pawnbrokers and second hand dealers. The resolution asked that the seller prove his identity as owner of the tools before he can dispose of same. Another to establish a monthly magazine under the auspices of the congress.

A perennial resolution introduced by Socialists, making it prohibitory for union men to enlist in the militia, was voted down.

To enforce the Ontario Act referring to running boards on street cars.

The resolution that provoked a lengthy and heated discussion was as follows: "That provincial laws be enacted which will enable the public to take over and operate any public franchise utility if at any time the people so decide, irrespective of any existing franchise previously granted."

The two main opponents to this resolution were Alphonse Verville, M.P., and S. L. Landers, Hamilton. They argued that labor organizations believed in keeping agreements inviolate, and it would be placing the labor congress in a ridiculous light to ask for legislation to violate agreements.

At least a score of delegates spoke in favor of the resolution and denounced Messrs. Verville and Landers. They argued that a corporation should not be considered as being aggrieved when a franchise was taken from it. It squeezed the people when it had a chance, and should be given a dose of its own medicine. Some argued that the law permitted public franchise corporations to expropriate, irrespective of the choice of the owners, and the same right should revert to a municipality and political division. The resolution carried with but the two opposing votes.

Teddy a "Vulgar Blusterer."

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 15.—The annual meeting of the permanent committee of the Young Egypt party, the aim of which is autonomy, opened yesterday, and afforded an opportunity of which several Egyptians availed themselves, to attack former President Roosevelt, because of his speeches at Khartoum and London. Among the epithets applied to the colonel were "Vulgar blusterer" and "self advertiser." The committee sent a telegram to London demanding the immediate evacuation of Egypt by the British Government. A message was also sent to the Khedive of Egypt asking for the re-establishment of the Egyptian Constitution.

Lashed Girl Prisoner.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 15.—Women's clubs and a number of civic organizations of Atlanta are preparing vigorously to prosecute Supt. Fanning of the Fulton County Convict Camp, for the lashing of Anne Clare, a young white prisoner.

He admits that he administered 110 lashes with a heavy strap, because, he says, that was the only way he could silence the woman.

Canada Scores Here.

London, Sept. 15.—A member of the special Danish commission who lately visited Canada to study the system of packing, collecting and transporting meat and dairy produce, says the methods employed in the United States cannot compare for cleanliness and despatch with those in every day practice in Canada.

Best Defence Force In World.

Johannesburg, Sept. 15.—Premier Botha, in a speech here, said the best defence force in the world could be formed in South Africa. He asked the co-operation of the British in forming such a force, and suggested Lord Methuen as organizer. If another was wanted, his old war friend, Lord Kitchener, would do.

Coughing Killed Him.

Windsor, Sept. 15.—James Allen, a prominent Amherstburg citizen, town councillor two terms and aspirant for mayor, dropped dead yesterday as a result of a violent coughing spell which affected his heart.

Died a Centenarian.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 15.—Ann, widow of James Holt, who died yesterday in her 106th year, had been in remarkably good health until ten days ago.

Because a new railroad bridge in Switzerland is on an important line, strategically, it has been provided with a chamber which can be filled with dynamite to wreck the structure in event of war.

SISTER'S TRIP.

Sister's home from her trip,
  And she's panting for breath.
She's unpacking her grip,
  Talking us all to death—
What she did, what she saw,
  What she heard, what she said—
Sis is working her jaw—
  How she slept, how she fed,
How she danced, how she sang
  And was encored again.
Thus she ends her harangue:
  "I met four dandy men."

Sister's home from her trip.
  Father, mother and I Haven't opened a lip
  For a nay or an aye.
It was fine! It was great!
  All the meals were immense,
And she tipped as she ate.
  What cared she for expense?
Everybody was kind
  And so good—but, oh, then
That brings back to mind,
  She met four dandy men.

Sister's home from her trip.
  All the neighbors have heard
What she saw on the ship
  And all things that occurred,
And I fear many days
  Will have come and have passed
Ere her paean of praise
  Shall be silenced at last.
Sister's home from her trip,
  Let me tell you again,
And while on the ship
  She met four dandy men.

—Edgar A. Guest in Detroit Free Press.

A Real Nice Man.

Lady (in the art gallery)—Show me the face of the woman you adore.

Salesman gallantly hands her a mirror.

Ah, Who Knows?

"Do you know," she said, "I didn't want to come to this place at all. I had an idea that it would be awfully stupid."

"And haven't you found it stupid?" he asked.

"You know I haven't."

"How should I know?"

"No place could be stupid if you were there."

"It is very nice of you to say so."

"I shall be very sorry when you leave. It has been the most glorious week of my life."

"I am glad to know that, but I hope there may be many more glorious weeks in store for you."

After he had gone to the tennis court and left her alone on the wide veranda she sighed and said to herself:

"How sad it is that a woman is denied the right to tell a man she cares for him! Who knows what would have happened if I might have told him all?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Liked the Other Kind.

It was in a "down east" village that the young man met his sweetheart—a charming country beauty. When he returned to the city he sent her a jar of cold cream to keep her cheeks as fresh as the budding rose.

On his next visit he asked her how she liked his little gift.

"The taste was very nice," she said with a sickly smile, "but I think I like the other kind of cream best, dear."—Lippincott's.

Return Ticket For Him.

Baseball Fan—Some time ago you told me about a bird of a pitcher you found in a bush league. You took him in hand, didn't you?

Manager-Captain—Sure! But I found that particular bird was worth more in the bush than in the hand.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

"Don't make me laugh. But I'll tell you what did happen."

"What?"

"A fellow I was engaged to once bought me an ice cream soda."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Postal Work.

Ascum—Say, what is the difference between a fourth class and a third class postoffice? Do you know?

Wise—Well, in the former the postmaster always finds time to read all the postal cards himself; in the latter sometimes he doesn't.—Catholic Standard and Times.

THE SURE WAY OUT.

Marrying an Extravagant Woman Cures a Sensitive Man.

Once upon a time there was a man who was sensitive.

If he wore the wrong gloves at a wedding breakfast and found it out afterward he brooded over the matter for weeks.

If he made an after dinner speech and some one remarked that they had heard a better one it worried him so that he couldn't eat.

If he tried to do some public good and the local paper came out and insinuated that he was a grafter he wore himself out trying to show what his motives really had been.

If a public servant insulted him he used up days in getting even by taking his case up to the heads of the corporation.

If a friend was absentminded and treated him carelessly he imagined there was something wrong between them and lay awake from 12 until 5 in the morning thinking up some plan to get even.

He was a collector of grievances. Nothing was too small for him to pass by.

People began to avoid him. They were afraid he would resent whatever they did because they hadn't treated him any better.

Thus he went from bad to worse.

One day, however, he woke up to his condition. He knew that something was wrong. And so he consulted a certain philosopher. The philosopher plied him with questions, thought for awhile and then whispered something in his ear.

"That or nothing," said the philosopher.

Several years afterward the man was met by a friend.

"As I remember you," said the friend, "you were an impossible sort of creature—always brooding, always wondering why every one was so unjust to you."

"Yes," said the man.

"But now every one likes you."

"Do they?" said the man absently, starting to move along.

"Certainly. Tell me, how did you manage it—how did you recover?"

"Easy enough," said the man. "I consulted a philosopher."

"And what did he advise you to do?"

"He advised me to marry an extravagant woman. Since then I have been so busy that I haven't had time to resent anything."—Life.

She Knew Her Own Father.

There is a dainty five-year-old girl who is the delight of a fashionable apartment hotel in Philadelphia. Much association with grown people has given her many serious little ways which contrast strongly with her tender years.

Of late she has been saving her pennies to buy a birthday present for her father, and as the time draws near she has been much in doubt as to what she should get.

Recently she was in a street car with her mother when an inspiration came.

"I know what I'll buy father for his birthday," she said.

All the passengers smiled at her eagerness and listened indulgently to hear what she might say. Looking at her mother, she said, so audibly as to be embarrassing:

"I'll buy him a bottle of beer."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Youth.

I was started on a train of reflection when I saw him devouring her with his eyes.

"If he knew how she disagrees with people," I mused, "would he fletcherize her more?"

Probably not. I had to confess that deliberation is not of the character of unthinking youth.—Puck.

Hard Work.

Principal—But why?

Teacher—I've been working an hour, and I can't make him see the difference between a flathead and a level headed man!—Cleveland Leader.

A Riot In Colors.

"Soakwell's nose looks as if he had worn a mustard plaster on it."

"Yes. I'm so sorry for his dear wife. She had just ordered her spring dresses in pale blue and green."

Oh, Joy!

"Don't you love to see the happy little children going to the beach?"

"Yes, especially if they are the noisy ones who live next door."—Buffalo Express.

Grace.

"Has he any saving grace?"

"Why, yes; he has a penurious daughter of that name."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Applying the Heat.

"My supper's cold!"
  He swore with vim,
And then she made
  It hot for him.

TO-DAY'S SPECIALS.

Police Raid Moving Picture Show in Montreal and Find Hundreds Looking at a Vicious Dog Fight.

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 16.—The police swooped down last night on an alleged moving picture show in the French district and found hundreds of men watching a very bloody dog fight. The canines were in the thick of the battle and the spectators were betting freely on their favorites when the police appeared on the scene. This morning in the police court twenty-five of the men were arraigned, and were remanded for a week until proceedings can be instituted against the proprietor of the place.

Decrease In Birth Rate in Montreal.

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 16.—Not only among the Protestants, but also the French Canadian families, has the birth rate declined this year, according to the report of the Medical Health Officer, and this city loses its record of having the largest birth rate of any city in the world.

Paint Will Be Dearer.

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 16.—It's a far cry from the flax crop to prices of paint to ordinary individuals, but the leading paint manufacturers here say that, owing to the partial failure of the flax crop this year and the scarcity of other ingredients, paint will cost a good deal more in the future.

Brotherhood of St. Andrew In Conference

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 16.—Three hundred delegates are here to attend the conference of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. The meeting opened here this morning. Representatives are present from all over the Dominion.

Ice House Was Burnt.

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 16.—A fire at Point Ste. Charles destroyed an ice house this morning, and the flying sparks accompanied by a high wind threatened to destroy the G. T. R. shops there. The fire caused much excitement, but was extinguished after a three hours' battle. Damage to the extent of eight thousand dollars was sustained.

Australia Wants All Red Route.

(Intelligencer Special.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 16.—A. J. Fraser, from Sydney, Australia, is here to-day to see Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Canadian Government about the encouragement of an "All Red" route from Great Britain to Australia, to go through Canada via Quebec, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

Firemen Suffer From Burns and Shock.

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 16.—Firemen O'Hague, Blaire and La Rivere are in the hospital, suffering from severe burns and shock, and the paint oil manufacturing plant of McArthur, Corneile & Co., in the wholesale district, is in ruins, as the result of a bad fire this morning. The loss is estimated at fifty thousand dollars.

Montreal Plumbers Want More Money

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 16.—Six hundred plumbers will go out on strike to-morrow afternoon unless their employers grant an increase of pay and accede to other demands, which is thought to be unlikely. This was decided on at a secret meeting last night of the plumbers. This city will then be face to face with a general strike of the building trades.

DEATH FOLLOWS OPERATION.

(Intelligencer Special.)

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 16.—Following an operation for appendicitis, Dr. James Morston McCarter, of Verona, formerly of Almonte, died in the hospital here to-day.

DEATH ON THE RAIL.

(Intelligencer Special.)

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Sept. 16.—Geo. East and David Graham, sectionmen on the Grand Trunk, were instantly killed in a dense fog near here this morning by the Flyer, which ran them down. Both men were married and leave families.

Blew Out His Brains With a Revolver.

(Intelligencer Special.)

BEAMSVILLE, Ont., Sept. 16.—Robert Russ, aged 76, driven temporarily insane with various painful diseases, placed a revolver to his head and blew out his brains yesterday. He was buried to-day.

FEDERATION OF LABOR FAVORS EIGHT HOUR DAY.

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 16.—The Canadian Federation of Labor this morning unanimously declared in favor of an Eight-Hour Day Bill, and will appeal to the House of Commons for it.

MANY VICTIMS OF CHOLERA IN RUSSIA.

(Intelligencer Special.)

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia, Sept. 16.—It is estimated that the cholera epidemic has already claimed a hundred thousand victims and is still rapidly spreading.

BANK OFFICIALS UNDER ARREST FOR STEALING.

(Intelligencer Special.)

ATHENS, Ont., Sept. 16.—A sensation was caused here this morning when the police entered the Farmers Bank branch at this place and arrested Manager Robert Cughen, charged with stealing nine hundred dollars. Melvin Forrest, a clerk in the same institutions, was also arrested, charged with the theft of five hundred dollars. Before the Magistrate, Forrest pleaded guilty and Cughen not guilty. Both prisoners were remanded.

EXCITING TIMES AT ST. JOHNS, QUE.

(Intelligencer Special.)

ST. JOHNS, Que., Sept. 16.—Startled and frightened by the report that a bad gang of United States crooks are heading this way, dragoons are guarding the thoroughfares, and a posse of detectives are in nearby villages. Bank managers and storekeepers are all going about armed to the teeth.

SMASH ON INTERCOLONIAL; NOBODY HURT.

(Intelligencer Special.)

QUEBEC, Que., Sept. 16.—An Intercolonial fast freight train has been derailed here and a number of cars smashed to splinters, but all the train crew miraculously escaped serious injury.

Alleged German Spy Arraigned.

London, Sept. 16.—Lieut. Helma, the alleged German spy, was arraigned yesterday, charged with having committed a felony in obtaining information concerning the Portsmouth defences, for the purpose of communicating the same to another state.

The case was adjourned to Sept. 20.

Killed When Almost Rescued.

Mahoney City, Pa., Sept. 16.—After being entombed for twenty-four hours in the Knickerbocker colliery, and on the point of being rescued alive, John Korisky, a miner of Shenandoah, was crushed to death by a second fall of roof. All of Wednesday, the entombed man talked to the rescuing party.

Hand Was Cut Off.

Brantford, Sept. 16.—Edward Van Camp, a well-known foreman of the Massey-Harris Co. here, had his hand cut off while at work on a joiner yesterday.

Thieves Cleaned Him Out.

Kingston, Sept. 16.—J. Geverson of Brockville was robbed of $105 and a gold watch by two strangers.

London's Big Bell.

"Big Ben," the bell in Westminster clock tower, London, is known the world over, but it is incorrectly named. Sir Benjamin Hall, the first commissioner of works, during whose tenure of office the clock was erected, had far less to do with it than Lord Grimthorpe, who designed it and was the moving spirit in its erection. In justice to him it should be known as "Old Grim."

"A bill collector, dear," was the husband's reply.

"And what did you say to him, Dick?" continued the wife.

"Remember, Richard, there are ladies present," broke in his mother-in-law.—Yonkers Statesman.

GLOCKLING IS ELECTED

Toronto Man Again President of Trades Congress.

He Defeats James Watters of Victoria on First Ballot—Socialist Resolution Calling For Co-operative Ownership of Wealth Instead of Public Ownership of Utilities Will Entail a Long Discussion.

Port Arthur, Sept. 16.—The Congress of Labor adjourned last evening an hour late, after a strenuous session. William Glockling, Toronto, was elected president, over James Watters, Victoria, and James Somerville, Moose Jaw, Glockling having a plurality vote in the first ballot. R. P. Pettypiece of Vancouver was elected fraternal delegate over Samuel Hadden, Toronto and E. W. A. Odell, Hamilton. Calgary beat Guelph for the next session of the congress.

The sessions will not likely finish, as in past years, on Friday evening with a night session, as the delegates have accepted an invitation to a moonlight excursion to-night, and there are still to report the most important committees.

Delegate Joseph Gibbons of the Toronto Street Railway Employes, made an appeal yesterday for an amendment to the Railway Act, to compel street railways to provide centre aisles in cars and abolish running boards entirely.

Delegate J. H. Barnett of the Toronto Iron Moulders made a strong plea on behalf of better sanitary conditions in foundries, and his resolution carried.

The principal resolution to be discussed yet is the usual "Socialist resolution," which asks that the constitution be amended by striking out clause six, which pledges the congress to public ownership of street railways, telephones, gas and electric light plants, etc., and to insert in its stead a paragraph calling for the co-operative ownership of all means of wealth production, distribution and exchange This resolution may take several hours, but will hardly pass.

Purse For New Professor.

London, Sept. 16.—To-day the Rev. Griffith Thomas sails for Canada to take up his work as a professor in Wycliffe College.

An illuminated address was presented to him containing the signatures of the Bishops of Durham, Oxford, Newcastle, Liverpool, Sodor and Man, and Ossory, Bishop Taylor-Smith, Bishop Ingram, the Dean of Canterbury, Archdeacon Maden, Prebendary Webb-Peploe, and Canons Barnes, Lawrence, Christopher, Girdleston, Streatfield and Denton Thompson, Prof. Dawson Walker, Principal Guy Warman, Lord Kinnaird and others, expressing on behalf of Rev. Mr Thomas' many friends in England very deep regret at parting with him and sincere appreciation of his great service rendered.

He was presented with a purse of 500 guineas, while his wife was given a gold pendant.

Tried to Burn Dormitory.

Andover, N.H., Sept. 16.—An attempt to burn the girls' dormitory at Proctor Academy Wednesday night was frustratde after a blaze had been started. Mrs. Eugene Sawyer, the matron, is in danger of death to-day from a blow delivered by the incendiary in making his escape. Mrs. Sawyer on entering the basement suddenly at about 8 o'clock, discovered a strange man in the act of applying a match to a pile of wool.

Understanding Is Reached.

Tokio, Sept. 16.—Asserting that it has the highest authority for denying the report that the visit of Herr Dernberg to Japan presages a German Japanese convention, The Osaka Mainichi declares that the Japanese Foreign Office believes the German Crown Prince's visit to China is the outcome of an alliance or intimate understanding between Germany, America and China, which will probably be announced in March, 1911.

Tim Candy Will Hang.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—Tim Candy who shot and killed two constables because they tried to recover some rubber boots he had stolen, was found guilty yesterday afternoon and sentenced by Justice St. Pierre to be hanged on the 18th of November.

Candy made a long plea for mercy, saying that the second-hand man tempted him to steal them. The revolver was pointed low and he did not intend to kill.

Borden Goes Camping.

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—R. L. Borden, Opposition leader, accompanied by Geo. Perley, M.P., Argenteuil, chief Ontario Conservative whip, left yesterday for Rheo Bay, on the Upper Ottawa River, where he will go into camp for a week or ten days.

A little later Mr. Borden will address a number of political meetings in Ontario.

DEFEAT FOR GEN. BOTHA

South African Premier Meets With a Personal Reverse.

Johannesburg, Sept. 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The first general election in the new South African Union took place yesterday. Returns are still very incomplete, only 66 seats out of 121 having reported. The indications, however, are that the Nationalists, led by Gen. Louis Botha, the Premier, have triumphed, although Botha himself is defeated. Returns up to midnight give the Nationalists 33 seats, the Unionists 26, the Independents 6 and the Laborites 1. Gen. Botha was defeated by Sir Percy Fitzpatrick. Hon. H. C. Hull, the Finance Minister, was beaten by Sir G. Farrar. Cape Town went solidly Unionist. Dr. Jameson, the Unionist leader, defeated his Nationalist opponent by 1,414 to 62.

Addressing a crowd at Pretoria after learning of his defeat, Gen. Botha said: "I shall do my utmost to stamp out racialism."

The final result will probably be as follows: Nationalists, 64; Unionists, 40; Natal Independents, 12; Labor, 4; Independent 1.

Throughout the entire campaign the Premier has set his face against all attempts to stir up race trouble. He severely condemned a reference made by the Opposition leader in a speech at Durban to the Jameson raid, and expressed the hope that neither side would attempt to make capital out of the unfortunate differences that arose before the war. The issue of the election, he said, was not between race and race, but whether the electors were prepared to hand over the management of affairs to the heads of the mining houses, who were the Unionist leaders.

Elections were also held Wednesday for the Cape and Transvaal Provincial Councils, but returns are not sufficiently complete to give any indication of the results.

The constitution of the Union of South Africa, which went into force on May 31 last, provides for a House of Assembly and a Senate. To the Assembly the Cape of Good Hope sends 51 members, the Transvaal 36 and Natal and Orange River Colony 17 each. The Senate consists of eight members elected by the Legislature of each province and eight nominated by the governor. Only persons of European descent may sit in either House.

It was intended when the act of Union was passed that the first Union Parliament should be opened by King George. The death of King Edward made the carrying out of this plan impossible and the duty has been delegated to the Duke of Connaught.

Gen. Botha, it will be remembered, became commander-in-chief of the Boer forces after the death of Gen. Joubert in the South African war, and fought valiantly against the British to the close of the war. Dr. Jameson, leader of the Unionists, is best remembered as leader of the famous "Jameson raid" which ended miserably for the raiders and almost brought Britain to war at the time with the Transvaal and with Germany, too. He fought in the South African war, with the British forces, of course.

Want Them Reinstated.

Windsor, Sept. 16.—Friends of Detectives Campeau and Mahoney, who have been suspended from the provincial police force for refusing to wear the uniforms adopted this year, are circulating petitions in Windsor asking Hon. J. O. Reaume, representative for the riding to busy himself in their behalf and have them reinstated. A large number of signatures have already been secured.

The Vaccination Question.

Brantford, Sept. 16.—Brantford public school trustees, who have been harassed by many ratepayers on account of the enforcement of the vaccination bylaw, have decided to submit the matter to the Department of Education. In the meantime vaccination has been discontinued.

Kingston Broke Her Shaft.

Kingston, Sept. 16.—The steamer Kingston of the R. & O. line, broke her main shaft Wednesday evening on her way to Charlotte, and had to be towed back to the city by the tug Majestic. The passengers and baggage were transferred to the steamer Toronto, bound down.

Will Abolish Death Penalty.

Madrid, Sept. 16.—In reopening the Cortex yesterday Buiz Valarino, the Minister of Justice, announced the early abolition of the death penalty, and said that numerous modifications would be adopted for the purpose of simplifying the civil and military codes.

Fired at a Policeman.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 16.—As Policeman Walter Coughlan was patrolling Wednesday night four shots were fired from an alley. One hit him on the leg, another went through his coat at the shoulder.

Jumped Overboard.

Quebec, Sept. 16.—Discouraged because he had been deported by the local immigration officials, Jas. Rae an Englishman, jumped from the Empress of Ireland, which was taking him back to England, and was drowned in the gulf off Fame Point.

CURRENT EVENTS.

We cannot too strongly urge our citizens to refrain from drinking unboiled or unfiltered water as there seems to be an epidemic of typhoid fever all over the Province.

Mayor Marsh moved last night, at the committee meeting, for the immediate appointment of an Assessor. In doing so he will meet with the approval of almost every citizen. We need an Assessor, a man with legal knowledge—one who will fill the position in an acceptable manner to all.

The Mayor also brought up the matter of permanent pavement of Front street. Just imagine Belleville's main street being properly and permanently paved—The dream of our Front street merchants soon to be realized.

Did you see that string of big bass brought up Front street last night by Messrs. McKeown and Kerr? Some of them going between three and four pounds. Quinte Bay is getting better every year—and if there is a fish within landing distance the two Jacks will surely get it.

Belleville always was a good hockey town, but with a professional team and Jack Marks at its head next winter, we may live in anticipation of seeing some fine games being played here.

So, at last, an auto accident occurred on one of our residential streets caused through speeding. This kind of gay sport should be stopped wherever possible. Not much sympathy will be extended to anyone meeting with an accident.

Montreal had a taxicab wedding day before yesterday. In the nuptial procession, which proceeded from St. Peters Church, there were twenty-two taxis and autos bedecked with ribbons and flowers.

Just as many are advocating plans for the prolongation of human life, vestrymen of a Brooklyn chruch want to discharge their pastor on the ground that he is too old. What a kick those good men could have registered had they lived when Methuselah was rolling up his centuries!—New York Telegram.

Brockville has received bills for almost $1,200 for the services of the militia and damage done to property during the disturbances that grew out of the recent railway strike. It is a pity the cost in such cases cannot be levied on the section of the community which shows its sympathy with disorder by encouraging those who indulge their liking for violent protests. The sympathizer in such cases is silent, however, when the burden created by his conduct is to be borne. He is something of a coward as well as a ruffian.—Montreal Gazette.

"A resident on Queen street last year fixed his house up, brick veneered it, did a little painting and made it look nice and tidy. The Assessor popped along this summer and told him it made a great improvement. In fact, so great was it that he raised the assessment $600. That same citizen was going to put in modern improvements. Now he says he can't afford to do it."

Then it comments: "Can you blame him? Put a little more tax on the land and less on the improvements and then see how much more beautiful the town will become. As it now is a man hates to paint his house for fear his taxes will be boosted. It's not the Assessor's fault. Get posted on this question, and assist the Tax Reform Association in their endeavor to have a better mode of assessment adopted."

Death of Tom Bolger.

FOUND IN EARLY MORNING LYING DEAD IN HOTEL YARD.

The following account of the death of Mr. Tom Bolger, of Carleton Place, was at one time a resident of this city, will be of interest to many of our readers.

The town received a great shock on Sunday morning when it heard the report of the death of Thomas Bolger, the 'bus driver of the Queen's Hotel, than whom no one was better known. Some months ago he suffered a stroke. He recovered quickly and was at his work with his old-time regularity and cheeriness. On Saturday he attended the local from Ottawa at ten to six, and took his usual sleep to awake for the 2 a.m. from the West. Mr. Burchill as a rule called him for this duty, but on this occasion Tom awoke himself and came down stairs after midnight. He chatted with Mr. Burchill till Mr. S. McGonigle came in to ask for some medicine for a sick horse. All three went to the stables and found what Sam wanted. Mr. Burchill and Mr. Bolger resumed their chat till the former said he would retire. That was the last seen of Mr. Bolger. It is known, however, that about 1.30 he went to the stables, harnesses the team fully and had just lead one of them to the door when he fell backward, his feet towards the stable. The very earth his heels pushed ahead as he fell was undisturbed, showing that death was instantaneous. The horse went back into the stall with its mate, and the body lay there till five o'clock when found by Mr. Allen McDonald, who comes on duty at that hour. He shivered as he saw and recognized the prostrate form. There were silence and sadness about the hotel all day Sunday. The Hotel practically suspended business, and the 'bus remained idle till Monday afternoon. Owing to the nature of the case the funeral was held on Monday morning to St. Mary's Church and cemetery, many attending to show their respect. It was a second apoplectic attack. Mr. Bolger celebrated the 21st anniversary of his reign as Queen's porter only a few weeks ago. For about the same period he acted in the same capacity at the Dafoe House, Belleville. As such he had few equals. With a sonorous, ringing voice, a genial manner a disposition to unravel mixed travellers, answer all questions promptly and deny himself that others might have smoother pathways, he was par excellence, a prince of porters. He was devoted to the highest point to his employers, and nothing was so plainly delightful to his as to fill the 'bus and flash up to the hotel with his load. Night or day he was the same, and the landlord felt as safe in leaving the fortunes of the night to Tom as he would to himself. Mr. Bolger's first wife died at the Queen's; his second survives, the daughter of Mr. Wm. Bennett, the gardener, of Park Avenue. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Adam Salter, Robert Little, Clyde McIlquham, Wm. Doyle, Michael Morris and John Fraser. Faithful, honest, courteous, indefatigable — these virtues might well compose his epitaph. Mr. Bolger had just struck sixty.—Central Canadian.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

DUCK SHOOTING.

Open season for ducks commenced yesterday, but in this section only a few of these swift winged fowl fell a prey to the many hunters who visited the various haunts of the bay. The reason given for the scarcity is the fact that the date of shooting same was changed from Sept 1st to the 15th, whilst snipe and other water fowl could be killed on the 1st By shooting the latter the ducks have been frightened away.

RUNNING.

Amherst, N.S., Sept. 15.—Fred S. Cameron, the winner of the Baston Marathon, and the champion long and middle distance runner of Canada and the United States, has decided to become a professional. His first race will be run in Amherst on Sept. 24, and his opponent will be the formidable Abbie Woods, of Montreal, who defeated Longboat on Labor Day on the baseball grounds in Montreal, and has also defeated the pick of the professional runners in the United States and Canada.

JOHNSON BOXED AT ROYAL.

Put on the Gloves Last Night For First Time Here.

Jack Johnson, the conqueror of Tommy Burns and Jim Jeffries, as well as a host of other knights of the squared circle, donned the gloves for the first time this week at the Theatre Royal last night, and gave a three-round boxing exhibition with Walter Monahan, his partner. Johnson himself said it was an entertainment, explaining the law did not allow him to use the expression "sparring," and he had great respect for the law. Captain Larocque, of the Chenneville street station, was on hand to see the fighters did not exceed the limit or try for a knockout.

Law of Gravity Almost Overcome

PECULIAR AEROPLANE INVENTED BY ITALIAN — ABLE TO FLOAT IN MID-AIR.

Rome, Sept. 16.—Fernando Bernasconi, a native of Ascoli Piceno, has invented a peculiar aeroplane, or glider, which is able to float in mid-air and which assumes a horizontal position automatically. The inventor has built models six feet wide, which when dropped from a height, instead of falling heavily to the ground, almost overcome the law of gravity and travel a great distance in the air before descending slowly to the ground.

According to recent experiments, a glider dropped from a height of 1,000 yards, floating twelve miles before touching the ground. This scheme, if applied to aeroplanes, the inventor claims, will render falls impossible and will increase the speed of the aeropane, as the motor will not be required to overcome the resistance of the air.

More Inspectors.

Forty fishery inspectors for Ontario will shortly be appointed by the Federal Government in accordance with the recently announced policy of reverting to Dominion inspection. At the Department of Marine and Fisheries it is stated that the provincial supervision, while good so far as it goes, has not been sufficient, and the fisheries have been declining. Nearly every county will now have a Federal officer who will not be paid only a normal salary, but sufficient to enable him to devote his time to the work.

Electric lamps are inserted in the floors of pasenger elevators so a person entering a car at night will know just where he is to step. The light is switched on or off automatically as a car stops at or leaves a floor.

Thinks No Case Made Against Crippen Yet.

DR. NEWTON SAYS THERE WILL BE NO DEFENCE UNLESS STATE'S EVIDENCE IS MUCH STRONGER.

London, Sept. 15.—"So far the prosecution has failed utterly to make out a case against Dr. Crippen. Right now I can't see on what the prosecution is depending even to have Crippen bound over to go before the Grand Jury."

This statement was made yesterday by Mr. Arthur Newton, solicitor for Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve. Mr. Newton said he had not settled upon his defence for the reason that the prosecution had as yet brought out nothing that he would have to defend.

"Until the prosecution completes its case, I can't say what the defence will be There won't be any unless the State forges a much stronger chain of evidence than is now apparent," he said.

Crippen shares Mr. Newton's hopefulness. He followed Professor Pepper's gruesome and revolting but essential evidence yesterday closely. Nobody would have thought by his demeanor in court that the gravest of all criminal charges was hanging over his head. He soon recovered his composure after his early excitement over Professor Pepper's testimony to the effect that the person who cut up the remains found in the cellar must have possessed considerable anatomical knowledge.

From that time on he was apparently the most unconcerned of any person in court. During the Magistrate's absence from court he joked with the warders and made humorous remarks to Miss Leneve with the object of cheering her up. She rewarded these efforts with a wan smile.

Dr. Marshall agreed with Professor Pepper in his description of the remains. He also said he could not declare on anatomical grounds whether the body was that of a man or a woman.

The first cold storage warehouse in the modern acceptance of the term was opened in Chicago in 1889.

Dogs Fight With A Lion.

HOW A STRAY FOX TERRIER WON AN AFRICAN LION'S SKIN

Simba, the pluckiest fox terrier in the world and the only dog of its breed which has ever tackled a full grown lion single handed, will be returning to London, her birthplace, during the next few days from British East Africa.

The story of how Simba fought the lion was told recently to a representative of this journal by Cherry Kearton, the dog's master, who has just returned from the Kenia district of British East Africa with a number of cinematograph pictures of wild animals.

Simba is an ordinary fox terrier, of no special value from a breeder's point of view. Simba's fight with the lion took place when Mr. Kearton was trying to obtain pictures of the killing of a lion by native spearsmen. Two lions had been located in some scrubs, and twenty Masai warriors, with spears, were ready to attack. The lioness, however, escaped, and the male lion, after appearing for a moment, bolted into a dried river bed and refused to budge.

"Simba," said Mr. Kearton, "darted into the donga, and within a few seconds we heard a tremendous roar which seemed to shake the ground, and the bushes within twelve yards of us were violently agitated. The lion roared again and again, and in the brief intervals we heard the weak but very furious yapping of the dog. The Masai stood, every nerve tingling, with spears poised.

"Suddenly the lion dashed through a little clearing, and we were amazed to see Simba hanging on with her teeth embedded in its tail. Three spears were hurled at the escaping beast, with such accuracy that they all transfixed the heart, and the lion fell dead. You must know that the skin of the lion belongs, according to local custom, not to the warrior whose spear inflicts the fatal wound, but to the man who first rushes in and cuts off the black tip from the tail.

"Two of the three spearsmen dashed into the donga, but they found Simba with the black tip still between her teeth, resolutely determined to oppose any hostile claim. The spearsmen, who were lost in admiration, agreed that the skin belonged by right of seizure to Simba, and they handed it over later to my wife as trustee for the dog."—London Daily Mail.

I. B. and O. Completed To Bancroft.

Bancroft is now the terminus of the Irondale, Bancroft and Ottawa Railway. The first train over the new line rolled into the "Union Station" on Monday and Superintendent Derbyshire and his crew were given a hearty reception by the citizens, who turned out en masse to do honor to the occasion. A regular service has been inaugurated. The train leaves here every morning on the arrival of the C. O. train from the south, and is due here at 7 p.m. This gives us a splendid railway connection, and trip to or from Toronto can be made in one day.

Men are at work building a large roundhouse, and a half dozen switches will be put in between the main line and the river.

The completion of the line means that Baptiste will be practically wiped off the railway map and the train crews will make their homes here.—Bancroft Times.

Youths Walk 52 Miles in 11 Hours.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Without stopping to consider the feelings of the Long Island Railroad Company, which has just started its fast service to Herald Square, Donald Alvord and Kenneth Bayliss, two energetic young men of Belle Terre, L.I., took each other by the hand and strolled as far as this city, a distance of fifty-two miles. They covered the distance in eleven hours, nearly five miles an hour.

Alvord is eighteen years old and Bayliss is one year his junior. They decided to take the walk on Monday, and about four o'clock in the morning they started on the dusty journey. Their parents were worried about their disappearance until the boys telephoned from the Hotel Belmont.

"We both finished strong," said Albord, "and enjoyed every step of the walk. It was a fine day, not too warm, and we were in good condition. We walked eleven hours, and rested three. We drank several glasses of milk on the way. When we arrived here we drank several orangeades. We weren't very hungry. We will go back by train to-morrow.'

"What are you going to do tonight?"

The Growth of The Canadian People.

A statistical bulletin recently issued at Ottawa, says the Manitoba Free Press, gives, in connection with the official estimate of the population of the Dominion on March 31 last, based upon the vital statistics and all other authoritative figures obtainable, a table showing the population of the Dominion year by year since 1868, together with other statistics which measure the country's growth and development. These annual estimates of population have been made from the first with all possible care. The figures of each of the decennial censuses and of the special census of the West in 1906 hold an important place, needless to say, in the making of the annual estimates.

It is interesting to note that the population in 1868, when the area of the Dominion was 662,148 square miles, was 3,371,594. In 1869 it had risen to 3,412,617. In 1871 we find that as the result of the addition of Western Canada, the area of the Dominion had increased to 3,729,665 square miles, which is its area now. The population in 1871 was 3,518,411. The four million mark was passed in 1877, the population on July 1 in that year being given as 4,013,271. Until last year the estimates were all Dominion Day estimates. Last year and this year they have been March 31 estimates, as presumably they are to be hereafter.

Not until 1895 was the five million mark passed, the figure for that year being 5,038,839. It took eighteen years for the population of the Dominion to increase from four to five millions—those were years during which the exodus to the United States was a heavy drain upon Canada's vitality. Ten years later, in 1905, the six million mark was passed, the figures for that year being 6,086,530. In three years more, namely, on July 1, 1908, we find the figure risen to 6,940,501; and 1909 the seven million mark was passed, being 7,184,000. The estimate for March 31 of this year is 7,489,781. It will be interesting to note how these figures will measure up alongside the census total next year, when we shall know by actual count how many of us there are in the country.

DEATHS

Died at Syracuse, N. Y., on Thursday, Sept. 15th, 1910, Mrs. D. C Markey, eldest daughter of the late Thomas McGarry of this city.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, Parker st., West Belleville, on Saturday morning at 8.30 o'clock to St. Michael's church Interment in St. James' Cemetery.

Stranger's Actions Were Suspicious.

Yesterday afternoon a man called at a residence on Rear street and stated that he had been sent up to the house from a hardware establishment on Front street to sharpen a lawn mower. Enquiries elicited the fact that such was not the case, and the party left rather suddenly. The object of his visit is not known, but his actions were certainly somewhat peculiar. The party was evidently a stranger.

Coronation Flags.

AT LEAST $2,500,000 WORTH TO BE FLOWN IN LONDON.

London, Sept. 16.—The makers of flags, buntings and street decorations are working overtime in view of the coronation, though it will not take place until next June.

"It is quite a conservative estimate to say that at least $2,500,000 worth of flags and other emblems will be shown in the London streets the day King George is crowned," said the London manager of a large firm of flag makers, who supply the wholesale houses. "And of that value," he said, "at least $1,000,000 will represent brand new flags.

"Our mills in Manchester are already working overtime, for the wholesale firms are placing their orders now, so that they may not be left and in order that they may obtain the goods at normal prices. Already we have in store immense quantities of flags which have been bought and paid for. There is every indication that the most popular flag will be the naval ensign. King George is known as the 'King Admiral.'

"Union Jacks are more than holding their own, but a vast quantity of colonial flags has been ordered. Canadian, Australian, New Zealand, Cape Colony, Transvaal and Natal flags are being heavily ordered. It is necessary for the wholesale houses to buy their bags early, for the number of trained flag-making hands in the country is limited. They are nothing like a thousand in number."

Cost Million Dollars.

FOUR BUILDINGS TO BE ERECTED IN TORONTO.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 16.—Contracts have just been awarded for more than one million dollars' worth of buildings, although only four structures are involved. One of these buildings is Sir Henry Pellat's new house, which, together with later contracts for internal decorations, will cost $600,000; the new centre section of the additions to the Western Hospital, to cost $75,000; the north wing extension, to be erected later, will cost another $100,000; the Hobberlin building on Yonge and Richmond streets, $150,000, and the new buildings for the Toronto Electric Light Company on the harbor front $100,000.

The permits for these buildings, though not all yet issued, will be granted almost immediately, it is understood.

New Alloy Found.

MUCH LIGHTER THAN BRASS AND AS STRONG AS STEEL.

A new and valuable alloy called Muralumin has been discovered by Vickers, Sons and Maxim. It will be made at Birmingham, and will be placed on the market in October. It is slightly heavier than aluminum and as strong as steel.

Mr. H. B. Weeks, the chief chemist of Vickers' works at Barrow, stated that in the course of investigations they had found an alloy which they believed to be superior to anything of its kind hitherto manufactured, that Vickers' company had decided to manufacture it on a large scale, and that the new industry would be put down at Birmingham.

The new metal could be rolled, drawn, stamped, extended or forged at suitable temperatures. It was less corrodable than other high aluminum alloys under all the usual corrosive tests, and possessed such valuable properties that Vickers, Sons and Maxim think there is bound to be a large demand for it. It was only one-third the weight of brass.

Bishop of London Stirs Montreal.

AUDIENCE OF THREE THOUSAND PERSONS CHEERED WILDLY — REMARKABLE SCENES IN THE ARENA WHEN HIS LORDSHIP MAKES REPLY TO SOME OF THE STATEMENTS MADE DURING THE EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—A remarkable Protestant answer to the recent Eucharistic Congress was furnished last evening at the Arena, when Bishop Ingram of London addressed the opening meeting of the convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and made a confession of his Protestant faith which aroused an immense audience to such a pitch that for several minutes they cheered until the rafters rang.

"Why am I not a dissenter?" cried Bishop Ingram. "Because there is nothing from which I dissent. Why am I not a Roman Catholic? Because, thank God, I am an English Catholic."

Audience Cheered Wildly.

This was the climax of a remarkable address, and sharp as the sentences were flung to the air an audience of fully three thousand people jumped to their feet and cheered wildly for several minutes.

This clear confession of faith given by the Bishop of London had tremendous effect, and it seemed as though the pent-up Protestant feeling, which had been moved to an unwonted extent by recent events, had suddenly found vent, and men and women by thousands rose and cheered themselves hoarse in what was perhaps the most remarkable demonstration of the Protestant faith ever witnessed in Montreal.

It was only after Bishop Ingram had repeatedly waved his hands for silence that he was able to proceed with his address, in which he dealt with the work and objects of the St. Andrew Brotherhood.

Many Clergy Present.

Bishop Ingram was escorted to the platform by Bishop Farthing of Montreal, Bishop Dumoulin of Niagara, a number of clergy, and the mass meeting proved a most successful event the interest in the proceedings being evidently sharpened by the recent ebullition of Roman Catholic activity caused by the Eucharistic convention While, there was an entire absence of antagonism to the Roman Catholic or any other Christian faith, the meeting was a splendid exhibition of the reliance of the English Church on their own Protestant religion.

Charged With Cruel and Inhuman Treatment of Boys Committed to His Care.

BOY TELLS OF BEATINGS AND OTHER CRUELTY.

Says He Was Put in Box Only 14 by 15 Inches Square in Which He Could Not Move.

Acceding to the prisoner's demand for a jury trial, Judge D. W. Quinn, of Valhalla, N.Y., has adjourned the case of Charles P. Fisher, the superintendent of the Brace Farm School, at that place, charged with cruel treatment of some of the boys, until Friday. Fisher was arraigned before Judge Quinn last night.

Immediately upon his arraignment Fisher moved that his case be adjourned, saying that he wished to be tried by jury instead of by a Justice of the Peace. The courtroom was crowded at the time with officials and witnesses. The case will be called Friday evening at seven o'clock.

The boys who will be called as witnesses against Mr. Fisher were ordered into the custody of Inspector R. H. Burke, of the Aqueduct police. What Inspector Burke calls "the most infamous device for torture ever seen in the county of Westchester" is stored in the Aqueduct police station. It will be offered as evidence against the superintendent. It consists of a box made of two inch plank nine feet high and about a foot wide. It is charged in affidavits that the holes in the box had been bored and cut by boys gasping for air. A single partition made the box practically two upright boxes, or closets, for accommodating two boys at a time. Its double doors are equipped with an iron bar and padlock.

These separate "coffins," as they were called, measured 14 by 15 inches square on the inside, and were so small that an ordinary man could not squeeze into them. A person in the box could not kneel or sit or rest. It is charged that the box was kept in a cellar, filled with sulphurous fumes from a fumigating apparatus. In an affidavit sworn to by Thomas Barnshaw, he says:—

"I went voluntarily to the Brace school to learn how to work on a farm. They put me to scrubbing the second day until my knees blistered. When I objected, the superintendent struck me, knocked me down, kicked me, and, when I tried to get away, he threw me into a room where the box was kept. I screamed in pain as he twisted my arm, and when I was too weak to stop him he put me into the box, locked it, and kept me there from seven o'clock in the morning until noon. After beating me again he made me go in the box a second time, keeping me in until half-past five o'clock that afternoon."

Almost five miles of the Pacific entrance to the Panama canal has been practically completed.

A Poor Weak Woman

As she is termed, will endure bravely and patiently agonies which a strong man would give way under. The fact is women are more patient than they ought to be under such troubles.

Every woman ought to know that she may obtain the most experienced medical advice free of charge and in absolute confidence and privacy by writing to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y. Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for many years and has had a wider practical experience in the treatment of women's diseases than any other physician in this country. His medicines are world-famous for their astonishing efficacy.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG,
SICK WOMEN WELL.

The many and varied symptoms of woman's peculiar ailments are fully set forth in Plain English in the People's Medical Adviser (1008 pages), a newly revised and up-to-date Edition of which, cloth-bound, will be mailed free on receipt of 50 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only. Address as above.

The ...Veiled Lady...

Max Stahrenstein, with outstretched arms, rushed towards her. "A Veiled Venus!" he cried in ecstasy.

"Hold! Count!" cried the desperate woman. "I know the price of a life. Liberty, first! Shame afterwards!"

He smield, bowed and sharply called Victorine. The maid enveloped the half-fainting woman in the dusky domino! Don Juan could wait!

"Madame can trust me in all!" said Victorine, as the Count offered his arm. While descending the stairs, Irene, the Waif, heard Victorine's scornful voice ringing out gaily,—"Like a man's laughter heard in Hell, far down,—Faustine!"

Passing the portal, in a confusion of carriages, Josef quickly closed the door, as Max Stahrenstein gave the stern order: "Allez vite!" Irene, her head reposing on the soft cushions, gazed at the gleaming eyes of her silently courteous companion. His quick, warm breath, betokened an anxiety not to be dissembled.

In a half hour Stahrenstein, seated beside her in the curtained loge, said, gazing on the motley thousands already on the floor: "You are now safe! Pray take this; it will do you good!" He held to her lips a beaker of the priceless Tokay of his native land. It was liquid fire! Her veins throbbed with molten lava!

Irene, in half an hour, was the maddest reveller on the floor. The dreamy passionate music,—the subtle excitement of surrounding thousands,—the wild passion of the dance,—and the sense of utter abandonment of a shadowed past, gave her a devilish fascination of bearing. With loud murmurs of admiration, the astonished revellers crowded in the path of the two, who were never separated. The Veiled Venus was the Queen of the Lost Souls.

Stahrenstein was in an unearthly exaltation of pride and passion! He retained self-control enough to say coldly to De Brissac, who merrily saluted, with mock ceremony, the handsomest, most daringly voluptuous woman at the "Bal des Ames Damnees"; "Have a care, Sir!—This lady is beyond annoyance; and any insult will be paid for with a life!"

De Brissac bowed, and gravely moved away. "A Veiled Venus! 'That matchless breast reveals her in her prime,—of love, and soft desire, the happy time.' By the Gods! She is a glimpse of Grecian loveliness! Ah! Stahrenstein, you will miss your baccarat to-night!"

It was indeed time to go. Agents de Police were everywhere, and long before the mad gamesters ceased to clutch the golden spoils, tossed from one to the other by fickle Fortune at the Cercle des Etrangers, Max Stahrenstein and Irene the Waif were speeding, on the wings of the wind, towards the Swiss frontier. Daybreak, sunshine, golden sunset in mountain ranges, succeeded, and when the bright light danced on Lake Leman, Max Stahrenstein whispered: "You are safe!" The lovely woman at his side, on whose fair cheeks a crimson spot burned, bowed her head in silence!—She could now sink no lower—The die was cast!

After beautiful Constance had faded away, and the swift steamer sped into the lower lake harbor, Irene, leaning on the Count's arm, stepped off at Bregenz. Casting one last look at the glorious Lake of Constance, with its pure snow-clad peaks uplifting their unsullied heads to high heaven, the beautiful fugitive cast her whole life behind her, as, in the carriage Max Stahrenstein cried: "This is Austria, you are saved,—and you are mine forever!"

As midnight rang out, while the Bal de l'Opera was adoring the new-found "Venus en masque," Horace Jenks listened to Jean's recital in a private room of the club. The veins were knotted on the gambler's forehead.

Gone! Where! How! He was astounded. At one o'clock "Alfred Brayton" was to join him for the examination of the results of any sly inspection of Irene Hope's luggage. Jean had told his tale. The bird had flown. He said: "I have, however, accomplished the wishes of Monsieur, for a party has discreetly examined the luggage of 'Mees' Isabel'!" Cautious Jean would screen Victorine, even in betraying her mistress. "Where has she gone? When? How? The house was watched!" Jenks was hoarse with rage. "I will discharge these fools at once! Where are the suspicious things?" Jenks eagerly asked.

"Monsieur has forgotten something! I will bring the bundle in an hour! Please do not forget my five thousand francs! I was not charged to watch her! She would not have given me the slip!"

"Tell me all you know of her leaving!" Jenks demanded.

"I am told," said the cautious spy, "she has gone away for a few days in the country. She has but little luggage! No one called on her! She did not go out! She received no letters or telegrams!"

"Did she take her maid?" Jenks asked, keeping up the deception.

"No! the maid is left in charge of the rooms!"

Jean did not himself know that Victorine ranged herself on the side of the millionaire lover. She cheerfully made the search, as requested. "Half the money, Jean!" she greedily demanded; "I take all the risk!"

"Come here in an hour. Your money waits for you to deliver the things." The man bowed and left. "If she took all her luggage, she has given us the slip. But I will find her!"

Beverly Seaton was amazed when Jenks told him. "She is gone." He threw his hat and coat on a chair, and bowed his head in his hands. "We will never see her again!" said Seaton dejectedly.

"Softly!" said Jenks, who had hardly welcomed his visitor. "Wait till we examine the things. I have had every suspicious article removed from her luggage. This temporary trip gave an excuse. This is its price!" He showed a package of five blue one-thousand-franc notes!—"I will have every letter, every personal article of note in her belongings. Go down to the Salle de jeu, until I send Baptiste to you! The man won't talk if you are here.—He fears you!"

Beverly Seaton sprang to his feet, as Baptiste edged his way towards him a few minutes later. The play was at its height. Stahrenstein was conspicuously absent. With laugh and joke, Pelham and De Brissac rallied the convives on the absence of both the Austrian patrician and his sturdy plebian opponent.

"Ah! Stahrenstein! Don't look for him for a week!" laughed De Brissac, as he took a seat at the table. "I am just from the Bal de l'Opera!—There is but one divinity in Paris: the 'Veiled Venus,' and Stahrenstein will have a dozen duels on his hands. He was en maitre!"

"Tell us all!" cried the merry throng. "We will all call on him, after De Brissac has finished his recital!"—Seaton quietly asked the volatile Gaul, "Where does the Count live?" The answer stunned him. "Oh! Don't tell these gay fellows; he has his private apartments at 217 Avenue de Jena!"

Without a word, Seaton pushed his way through the throng. "Comme ces betes d'Americains sont rudes," remarked De Brissac, rolling a cigarette. Beverly Seaton sprang up the stairs; his heart was beating wildly. On the table before Jenks was a small bundle.

"I waited for you," he said, gravely. There were beads of clammy moisture on his brow.

"Open it!" said Seaton, huskily. Jenks cut the cords with his penknife. His eyes flamed. There was in the little packet a wicked looking dagger,—an odd, black kid glove,—and a bundle of letters.

"Wait a moment, Brayton! Touch nothing!" Jenks bounded away to his private rooms. He returned in a few moments and laying before Seaton,—whose brain was reeling,—another black glove, said, "Match these gloves!" Taking the knife in his hand he said solemnly: "The woman who wore those gloves drove this knife into Egbert Neill's heart."

"And she is?" Seaton said.

"This 'Mees Isabel,' alias 'Irene Hope!' the woman who has given us the slip. Now for the letters!"

Seaton looked at Jenks, who eagerly unfolded the few papers. He threw them down at last. "Can you make anything out of these? Here's an old letter of Neill's to some festive Southern girl in war time. It's only addressed 'Dear Beatrice.' I suppose some sprig of rebeldom."

Seaton's eyes were blazing. "I would not speak lightly even of a rebel girl whom you cannot know!"

"You are right, Brayton!" said Jenks. "Moreover, I fear this fun cost him his life. See there! He has signed this letter to her, 'Henry Ashford.' He was mustered and served under his real name."

"Then he was a blackguard and a coward!" Seaton said, his pulses thrilling.

"Blackguard, Yes! Coward, No! But any man is a cur to deceive a loving woman," rejoined Jenks. "I keep no old letters. I fear many of us would not want to face the music!—I confess I am a little disappointed in Neill!"

"Let me take that letter and study it!" said Seaton, carelessly.

"All right!" rejoined Jenks. "Now the others. By God, she did kill Neill! Here's last letter from Agnes Herndon to him; and it's spotted with blood. Look at it! I'll tell you what I'll do, Brayton," said Jenks. "I don't wish to have any funny accidents, like brother Gordon:—you keep the southern letter, I'll keep this other one, till our quest is done."

Seaton's heart leaped up in his throat. "As you please!" he said quietly. "What's your theory?"

"My theory is, I am going to find Irene Hope, alias 'Mees Isabel,' and have her extradited for the murder of Egbert Neill! It will take some time but I will go to America and get the papers and return," said Jenks, resolutely.

"She may be on the watch," said Seaton, doubtfully.

"I'll trace her down, and with the extradition, I can get her at once My agent will work while I am aw[illegible]! I'll take out the papers of extradition under an alias."

"That's a good scheme," said the supposed Brayton. As he walked home Beverly Seaton gazed on the sparkling stars, and swore, by his mother's grave "If ever I stand face to face with that woman—if she is my guilty sister—one of us shall die."

Two weeks passed away,—a month,—and while Jenks was far away on the billows, every hour bringing him nearer to America, Seaton impatiently chafed alone in Paris!—Baptiste mourned! Jean was disconsolate, for his vanished wife!—Gordon's letters lay untouched at the Bank,—and the Count Stahrenstein was "shooting in Illyria," so said the smiling Josef,—Maitre Duprez mourned his lovely pupil, the "Lost Meteor of the Musical Future."

CHAPTER VIII.

Seaton wandered aimlessly around Paris until he was sure that Horace Jenks was tossing on the high seas. Keenly conscious that the astute Jenks would be informed by Baptiste of his own movements, he daily frequented the Cercle des Etrangers. The spring leaves were budding now in the Bois. "There comes back no spring to my heart!" bitterly thought he, for no sign came to him.

Alone at night, he hovered around the Avenue de Jena. Finally, he made a furtive acquaintance with the jovial concierge, a veteran ex-Zouave. It was easy at the nearest wine shop, Au Lion d'Or, to locate the old soldier, whose bustling wife was the real man of the family.

"Ah! yes! Le Comte de Stahrenstein! He keeps his apartment by the year, un pied a terre, only! He is Windsor's Case on Tapis.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—Active steps are being taken by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission to give effect to the application of Windsor for 15,000 horse-power.

Hon. Adam Beck, chairman, yesterday had notices sent to the different municipalities (1) who have signed contracts for power with the commission, and (2) who have passed resolutions and bylaws but have not signed contracts, to send representatives to a meeting at London on Sept. 22, to discuss the terms and conditions under which power shall be supplied to Windsor.

This proceeding is necessary under the hydro-electric legislation, that all municipalities interested shall be consulted when an outside corporation, railway or distributing company makes application for power.

The municipalities who have entered into contracts for power are: Toronto, Brampton, Weston, Hamilton, Guelph, Berlin, Galt, Hespeler, Waterloo, New Hamburg, London, Norwich, St. Mary's, Stratford, Woodstock, Ingersoll, Tillsonburg, St. Thomas.

Father Vaughan Not Misreported.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—The newspapers of this city are not very well pleased at the charge made against them by Father Vaughan to the effect that he was grossly misreported while delivering his addresses in this city against the Protestant sects.

As a matter of fact, the famous Jesuit priest appears to have softened, and for cause, as it is a well known fact that the highest episcopal authority of a certain archdiocese called the sensational preacher to time, and plainly intimated that no more attacks were to be made on the same lines as the former addresses.

As a matter of fact, the newspapers in their generosity, left out several of the most objectionable passages. The three statements which left so much soreness amongst the non-Catholics were: "Soulless religion," "galvanized corpse," and "if the Protestants do not like it, they can lump it," the latter being suppressed by The Gazette, although the statement, which was perfectly true, was sent all over the country.

Legate Leaves Montreal.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—The cardinal legate said adieu to Montreal yesterday morning, when his eminence, accompanied by Mgr. Bruchesi and Mgr. Tamperi, went up to Valleyfield, where four thousand people welcomed him, with Mgr. Emard at their head. All the chief church institutions were visited in detail, and after dining with his lordship the cardinal left for Ottawa. At half-past six his eminence said mass at the cathedral, said adieu to all the priests at the palace and drove to the C.P.R. depot, where a great many people had gathered to wish him bon voyage.

Legate Cheered at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—Cardinal Vannutelli, papal legate, who arrived in Ottawa by special train at 7 o'clock last evening, was accorded an ovation by thousands of citizens, who had gathered at the Central Station to get a glimpse of the celebrated churchman.

A private dinner was given by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his honor last evening.

An Enterprising Philatelist.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 16.—Swooping down suddenly on a truck which was carrying $2,500 worth of postage stamps from one section of the post-office to another yesterday morning, a well dressed elderly man, grabbed a package containing 5,000 two-cent stamps and made a dash for the street. He was arrested.

Fell Sixty Feet.

Port Colborne, Sept. 16.—An Englishman named Billy Young, aged 19 years, working out at the new mill, fell a distance of sixty feet, and is in a serious condition. In his fall he struck an Italian laborer, cutting a deep gash in the latter's head.

Ready For Perilous Trip.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 16.—Capt. Klaus Larsen, who will on Saturday brave the Whirlpool rapids in his motor boat Ferro, said yesterday that he was confident of coming out alive. He brought his craft down from Buffalo yesterday.

Killed by Nine-Foot Fall.

Aylmer, Sept. 16.—James Bee fell nine feet from some concrete work he was doing, and was fatally injured.

Islamism In Africa.

Mahometanism appears to be spreading to a remarkable degree in Nyasaland. Sir Alfred Sharpe, the Governor of the protectorate, states that twenty years ago, when he first knew the country, Mahometanism was almost nonexistent except at one or two spots where it had been brought in by the Arabs. "Since then," he says, "it has spread greatly, particularly during the last eight or ten years. The Yaos are the tribe who have taken to Moslem teaching mostly, and in almost every Yao village are a mosque and a Moslem teacher. On the other hand, among the tribes to the west of Lake Nyasa, there is hardly any Mahometanism. Here the Scotch missionaries have a strong hold on the people, who have taken up Christianity with great enthusiasm."

Death In a London Hotel.

Sometimes it happens that some one staying in a fashionable London hotel dies. Now, in hotels the management is not fond of deaths, so it comes to pass that the room in which the dead thing lies is locked, and nobody in the hotel save the staff, who know everything, is aware that the sable wings of death, passing, have shed a plume. When relatives arrive they are hurried upstairs lest their red eyes trouble the living guests. Late, very late, at night, when the most belated guest slumbers peacefully, the corpse is taken secretly out of the hotel by stealthy-footed men who have crept up the stairs. In the morning the empty room, cleanly swept and garnished is, with luck, let to some one else.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Glimpse of Tennyson.

Apprehension of being mobbed by the "profane vulgar" amounted almost to monomania with the poet Tennyson. Many stories are told in illustration of this weakness of his. One of the best of them will bear repetition. Lord Tennyson was taking a country walk with a friend when a fellow-creature was espied in the distance. "We must turn back," said the poet. "That fellow means to waylay us." His companion persuaded him, however, to continue on their path. They caught up the enemy and passed him. He took no notice of them whatever. "What an extraordinary thing!" cried the irate poet. "The fellow seems to have no idea who I am!"

An Unburied Admiral.

The bones of John Paul Jones remain uninterred. They repose in a coffin supported on a couple of wooden saw horses under the stairway of the large building used as a dormitory and mess hall by the midshipmen at the Naval academy at Annapolis. The location is entirely inappropriate in all respects. It is in the midst of the activities and revelries of the young men who are being fitted for the duties of the commissioned personnel of the navy. It is a makeshift which does not add to the solemnity of the situation. It would be better to place the coffin in a less public place, perhaps in some corner of the chapel at the Naval academy or in a temporary structure in the academy cemetery. It was intended that the body should rest in a specially designed and constructed crypt, but congress has not provided the means for this last resting place.—Washington Herald.

"Matty" the Great.

In Mathewson the New York team has a great winning pitcher. In my estimation he is about the greatest man who ever tossed a baseball, and the rest of the pitching staff is strong and dangerous. In spite of this fact the Cubs as a team would rather go up against Matty than any of the big pitchers today. In saying this I do not mean to exempt a number of weaker pitchers we are always confident of beating, but of the recognized big league pitchers today Matty is our choice. My reason for making this rather astonishing statement is that Matty is a careful, steady, "straight" pitcher. He always pitches for the plate and does not try to intimidate a batter by such tricks as throwing for his head or trying to graze his shins. We know that Matty has wonderful control over the ball.—John Evers (Second Baseman Chicago Nationals) in Metropolitan Magazine.

Hastened His Death.

The little village of Grabels, near Montpellier, France, has 500 inhabitants and an extraordinary record. Among the 500 are two centenarians—there were three until Dr. David died at the age of 103 recently—and twelve persons in the town are more than eighty years old. The death of Dr. David came as a shock to the villagers. One of the other centenarians, a woman of 104, explained how he died. "He insisted on walking through the pouring rain to the next village instead of riding on his bicycle, as he usually did when he visited patients at night," she said.

JURY CENSURE GRAND TRUNK.

Dead Watchman at Toronto Had Been on Duty For Twenty-One Hours.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—Indignation that a man should be expected and required by the Grand Trunk to work twenty-one hours at a stretch was shown by the coroner's jury enquiring last night into the death of Watchman Edward Thomas Crane, killed at the Dunn avenue crossing on Sept. 12.

At the conclusion of the evidence, the foreman announced that it would not be necessary to retire to return a verdict, but he would like to know if it was a rule of the company that compelled deceased to work for nearly 21 hours straight, or was it an agreement between the two watchmen when changing shifts.

"I want to know this, because we all feel pretty strongly on that point, particularly when the Grand Trunk makes it a boast of not permitting their drivers to work more than so many hours," he said.

Coroner Lynd informed that the company fixed the schedule for watchmen, and agreed that it was a hardship to the men. A rider could be attached to the verdict censuring the company on this point.

"Well, Mr. Coroner, I would like to see the wording of that rider made pretty stiff," said the foreman.

The result of the deliberations was a finding "that deceased came to his death by being struck by an engine on the G.T.R., that it was an accident, but we consider the company censurable for requiring or allowing watchmen to be on duty for 21 hours."

May Lead to Crisis.

Helsingfors, Sept. 16.—The Finnish Diet reassembled yesterday, and re-elected President Svinhufvid. The latter, who is a judge, is persona non grata to the Russian Government.

When the Diet last adjourned its members were in an ugly mood. They had received and promptly returned without action thereupon, to the Emperor, the imperial measure providing for joint legislation by the Douma and Diet, but which in effect extended the authority of the former over the Finnish body and paved the way for the elimination of the grand duchy as a law-making Government. Subsequently the bill was adopted by the Douma and the Council of the Empire.

The present deliberations of the Diet ultimately may lead to a crisis resulting in its summary dissolution.

Dominion Drydock Co. Organized.

Montreal, Sept. 16—The organization meeting of the Dominion Drydock Co. was held yesterday at the Windsor. Those present were Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, Sir Robert Perks, W. M. Dobell of Quebec, Mr. Davey of Quebec, Sir Montague Allan, Andrew Allan, Capt. Doc Newton of Montreal, representing Mr. Foster of St. John, N.B., and Arthur Grenfell of London, and Mr. W. M. MacPherson of Quebec, representing Harland, Wolff & Co.

The following directors were appointed: Andrew Allan, Sir Montague Allan, G. M. Bosworth, vice-president of the C.P.R., and Capt. Newton. Andrew Allan was elected president.

Plenty of Labor.

Winnipeg, Sept. 16.—William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern Railway, in an interview here, said his company had a plentiful supply of labor for the new lines under construction in British Columbia, and had no idea of attempting to secure Oriental labor. He considered Nelson preferable to Churchill as the terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway. He hoped the Government would listen to his representations on the subject of operating that line, and give the Canadian Northern that opportunity. It would have built on from Pas Mission if the Government had not announced its intention of constructing the line.

Maritime Representation.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 16.—Premier Hassard, Hon. H. J. Palmer and A. W. Warburton, M.P., of P.E.I., and Acting Premier McLean of Nova Scotia are the guests of Premier Hazen, and will discuss federal representation. It is feared that as a result of the redistribution of seats following the taking of the census next year, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick may each lose two seats and P.E.I. one seat. Mr. McLean said the question of representation of the Maritime Provinces in the Federal House was getting to be a very serious one, and he felt the action now being taken was very necessary.

Discussed Lemieux Act.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—The Lemieux Trades Dispute Act was the chief subject of discussion at yesterday morning's session of the Canadian Federation of Labor, it being both commended and criticized.

Some of the delegates wanted the scope of the act extended so as to cover all classes of labor. Some delegates on the other hand, thought the act needed amendment in other ways, as it was, at present, cumbersome, and of very little benefit to the workingmen.

Missing Woman Found.

Almonte, Sept. 16.—Mrs. James McDougall, the missing Almonte woman, for whom searching parties have been scouring the roads in the vicinity since morning, was brought in by a farmer named Mitchell, who found her six miles beyond Kingston, and kept her over Wednesday night. Her mind is believed to be affected. She had left an almost unintelligible note saying she would never return.

Clipped Three Minutes Off Record.

New York, Sept. 16.—The giant Cunarder Mauretania hung up a new transatlantic record yesterday over the short course from Daunt's Rock to Ambrose Channel lightship, covering the distance in four days, 10 hours and 18 minutes, clipping three minutes from the previous transatlantic record held by her.

Established Penny Bank.

London, Sept. 16.—Sir George Christopher Trout Bartley, K.C.B., is dead. He was born in 1842. He represented North Islington in the House of Commons from 1885 to 1906. In 1875 he established the National Penny Bank to promote thrift.

LINLEY SAMBOURNE.

The Cartoonist, Was Last Link With Victorian Punch.

"By death or retirement Punch has lost one by one the heroes of pen and pencil that made him a power in the land," writes The Daily News. "Three or four of the great Punch artists have left places never to be filled; and now Linley Sambourne, who sat with them so many years at the famous table, is gone. He was the last of his generation, and with the disappearance of his work the last link with Victorian Punch is broken. One takes down one of the thumbed volumes and turns the leaves. What a great thing it was! How rich! How supremely representative of the spirit of its time!"

Here is the story of how he came to join Punch, as told by Mr. B. Morris: "He was apprenticed to the firm of John Penn and Son, of Greenwich, the eminent marine engineers. One day, forgetting his work, he was engaged in drawing a caricature of Mr. Penn, who, to Mr. Sambourne's astonishment, happened to look in and saw what he was about. Instead of being angry and giving Mr. Sambourne "the sack,' to use his own words, Mr. Penn said, 'Sambourne, you ought to be on Punch.' When Sambourne 'got his wind,' as he said, he replied, 'Yes, sir, but how am I to get there?' Mr. Penn said, 'I will give you a letter of introduction to my old friend Mark Lemon, the editor.'

"He did so, and with this letter, to settle the matter, he sent the caricature of himself. As all the world knows, Sambourne was engaged by Mark Lemon, and he had a hearty laugh over the idea of his caricaturing his master, and then bringing the sketch with a letter of introduction from the victim. Mr. Sambourne never forgot Mr. Penn's kindness and generosity."

Mr. Sambourne once said to The Westminster Gazette:—

"It does irritate me when people say 'I dare say you knock off your sketches very quickly.' I do nothing of the kind. Often I spend hours investigating a point before I begin to draw, in order that some incidental fact may be accurate."

For some time Mr. Sambourne went twice a week to the Zoo to make studies of the animals, and that is why his drawings of lions and elephants are the delight of students of animal life. He made a picture of a lion yawning once, and people said, "How very good! true to nature!" They were right—it had meant hours of close study, however, and waiting for the exact moment when the lion at the Zoo "obliged" by yawning.

"How very few artists," said Mr. Sambourne, on one occasions, "could draw at once, without seeing it, a policeman's helmet." "Impressionism is often the cover for idleness," he added, "and I find few young artists who will take trouble over details."

"Wherever he has to picture the handling of a gun, the hauling of a sail, the casting of a line, or any other of the thousand and one quick instinctive actions which mark the skill of the sportsman, Sambourne shows," says The Manchester Guardian, "not merely accuracy but that quintessence of accuracy which makes all the difference to our delight in the thing portrayed, and which indicated in his case that expert knowledge which can only be acquired at first hand."

Sunday School Teacher (finishing the narration)—And that is the story of Jonah and the whale. Johnny—Isn't it strange they knew what a Jonah was that long ago?

A False Marquis Caught in Berlin.

DUPED GERMAN MILLIONAIRE'S DAUGHTER INTO MARRIAGE — WAS CARD SHARPER'S DECOY.

Berlin, September 16 —The "Marquis de La Ramee," who duped into marriage Alice Hecht, the daughter of a Berlin millionaire, is under arrest here, charged with obtaining money under false pretences, and with using a fictitious name.

When arrested the "Marquis" was living at a hotel with his wife and a number of servants. He attracted much attention from the other guests by frequenting the corridors and lounge in an ornate dressing-gown.

The police have discovered that his real name is Bela Klimm, and that he is the son of a former lecturer at the Technical College at Budapest.

His father left him $20,000 when he was eighteen years old. He became involved with a notorious card sharper named Hauer, who used him as a decoy to attract wealthy victims in Continental cities.

Cocaine Becoming Scourge

PHILADELPHIA PROFESSOR WOULD REMOVE IT FROM PHARMACOPAEIA.

Halifax, N. S., September 16.—The delegates attending the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association expressed themselves in favor of a uniform educational qualification throughout the Dominion, and also declared themselves in favor of the establishment of two more colleges of pharmacy, one in the extreme east and one in the west.

At present there are four such institutions, two in Montreal, one in Toronto, and one in Winnipeg. As an alternative, a correspondence course was suggested by one member.

Professor Remington, of Philadelphia, addressing the delegates last night on the subject of the cocaine evil, declared that this habit was worse than the morphine habit. He stated that he would gladly see cocaine abolished from the pharmacopaeia in order to do away with the evil, which was becoming a scourge

Opening New Tunnel,

PASSENGER TRAINS WILL RUN THROUGH NEXT WEEK.

Windsor, Sept. 16.— Early on Sunday morning a regular freight service will be inaugurated through the new Michigan Central tunnel, and, before the end of next week it is expected passenger trains will be using the big twin tubes. The placing of the tunnel is commission has necessitated many changes in existing Customs arrangements on both sides of the river, but these have been successfully made and the new system of inspection will cause little inconvenience to the travelling public.

Further tests are being made by having electric Mogul engines haul trains of coal through the tunnel, the loads being gradually increased until a full train has gone through at the regular rate of speed.

ROD AND GUN.

With the opening of the bird shooting season the September number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock Ont., gives a number of delightful stories dealing with days amongst the ducks, geese, woodcock and prairie chickens — experiences which will cause many a thrill to sportsmen reading them. Numbers will be able to duplicate, in remembrance, many of these published experiences, and in this way live over again red letter times in their histories. Variety marks this production, every lover of the outdoors, whatever his particluar taste receiving attention. The story of two young moose, one of a pet raccoon, the efforts of an amateur to trap a bear, particulars of the American bison, the Alpine's Club's last camp and some dog lore show the manner in which the magazine covers the wide variety of Canadian outdoor life The verses in this number are excellent, and the Bohemian ring of "Fishin's good" will find an echo with many even of the most staid. "My Little Fisherman," with his wonderful story of the monster that got away appeals to the sympathies of all, while the "Evening Chorus" is equally good. The issue should be found with every shooting party this season.

HOW TO PREVENT TYPHOID.

A SOUTHERN DOCTOR OFFERS SOME ADVICE TO MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENTS.

Dr. R. L. Lumsden, of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service at the recent convention of the Carolina Municipal Association held in Winston Salem, N. C., discussed what the municipal government can do in the direction of preventing typhoid fever. Here is his advice to mayors and aldermen.:

"Become informed as to the nature of the infection, its method of spread and the methods to prevent it.

"Make disease prevention a conspicuous policy of the administration.

"Make efficiency the primary basis of appointments to positions in the health office.

"Provide adequate salaries for health officers.

"Appropriate funds for sanitary improvement as liberally as the taxation rate will allow.

"Provide for the collection of mortality and morbidity statistics, so that the results of sanitary work may be known.

"Provide for the proper care of the sick.

"Teach by precept and by example the precautionary measures."

Commenting upon Dr. Lumsden's views the Medical Record says:

"No argument is required to drive home the fact that the prevention of typhoid fever in cities rests mainly with the municipality. If a mayor and city council are indisposed to insist that the sanitary arrangements are properly supervised, then diseases, and typhoid fever in particular are certain to occur and to spread.

"There was a time when politics held so large a sway in the government of American cities that sanitation was neglected and the health of the community was at the mercy of men ignorant of and indifferent to the laws of hygiene. A remarkable change in this respect is now taking place. The question of public health is beginning to loom large in municipal, state and national politics, and those in office are afraid to offend too obviously the growing health sentiment of the people.

"So far as typhoid fever is concerned much headway has been made in preventive measures in the Northern States. The population generally has decided to have an unpolluted water supply and a fairly pure milk supply and although neither of these supplies is wholly unsatisfactory, yet great progress has been made and is being made in this direction. Lumsden shows how municipalities can assist further in safeguarding the public health by paying particular attention not only to the water and milk supplies, but to sanitation in general.

"It must be borne in mind that there are other means of conveying typhoid fever than milk and water and that the fly, the typhoid fly, is more dangerous than the most heavily sewage-ladne stream."

ABOUT FLYING FLAGS.

GOOD BREEDING AND COURTESY THE GUIDE TO ETIQUETTE.

(New York Telegram.)

There is a formidable and perhaps insuperable objection to the raising of any foreign flag on a public building here in such a manner or position as would suggest the sovereignity of a foreign country. The display of that flag in appropriate subordination to our own—such subordination only as that which the host who sits at the head of his own table exacts of his guests who sit at his right and at his left hand—is not only permissable, but often is necessary to courtesy, and the same is to be said of the decoration of convention halls and banquet halls and all other places where there are international assemblages.

There are no doubt occasions when the public display of foreign flags might be indiscreet or improper, but such breaches of propriety are few In the great majority of instances in which violent demonstrations have been made against foreign flags in this country their display has been entirely proper, and the hostile manifestations have been made chiefly by those who, if they were travelling or sojourning in foreign parts, would probably consider it a desirable and indeed necessary exhibition of what they conceive to be patriotism to flaunt their own flag in the faces of their hosts on all possible occasions fitting or unfitting, and to denounce remonstrates as an insult to the Stars and Stripes and to the American nation. There is no respect in which scrupulously equitable reciprocity is more desirable than in the treatment of foreign flags, and there is nothing more essential to good feeling than good breeding.

Here's Certainty.

WE WILL CURE YOU OF KIDNEY DISEASE OR FURNISH YOU MEDICINE FREE.

We know we can furnish medicine that will almost always effect easy and positive relief for kidney ailments. We are so certain of this that we sell every bottle with our printed guarantee that the medicine shall cost the purchasers nothing should it fail to do as we claim.

We have been recommending and selling this medicine to a considerable extent, and are receiving the best kinds of evidence that it is doing exactly as we said it would. That's why we can safely and truthfully ask all our neighbors to try it at our risk.

Our treatment consists of Rexall Kidney Remedy, which is one of the finest pharmaceutical preparations, we know of for overcoming kidney bladder and urinary derangements, and associate ailments.

We want everyone who suffers from any kidney or urinary disease to come to our store and get a bottle of Rexall Kidney Remedy. They can try as many as three large bottles with the distinct understanding that we will return every penny paid us for the medicine at the mere hint of dissatisfaction. Certainly we know of no stronger reason as to why you should at least give Rexall Kidney Remedy a trial. We would not dare make this offer were we not positive that the result will be as we proclaim. Rexall Kidney Remedy comes in two sizes, 50c and $1.00 epr bottle. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store, J. S. McKeown.

Continued.

To explain the periodicity of the headaches we have to remember that the cause of the headache may be multiple. There may be two, or even three, factors present. A patient who suffers from a periodical headache may have eye-strain, a gouty or other diathetic tendency, and at times, added to these, some special nerve depressant, such as worry or trouble.

Now, each of these factors, or possibly two, may cause a headache; all three must be present, and only at such times as all three causes are present is the headache there. If the eye-strain be removed by correcting the error, the other causes, save under exceptional conditions, will never succeed in producing the pain.

It is important to remember that with this headache there is often asso-

Sensation in Town.

The sensation of the season is here with us.

Persons at the station last night, when the train from the east pulled in, were treated to a rare spectacle.

Sounds of a rather peculiar nature, emanating from the baggage car, proved, on close inspection, to come from the deep throats of a tank of alligators. These animals, which are to be shown by Mr. Bert Swan to-night and Saturday at the Griffin Opera House, demand the same care and treatment as does a young child. Carefully prepared water and the softest of sands have had to be secured by the local manager so as to make their environment as homelike as possible.

Mr. Swan's act consists of hypnotising these reptiles, wrestling with them on the stage and in a tank of water.

When it is understood that the water is the natural element in which these creatures bask, it can easily be seen that Mr. Swan is nightly taking his life in his own hands.

The other act presents that petite dancer, Miss Flo Williams, of the Williams and Williams Co. They have an act of merit, including singing and dancing.

R.E. Hepburn, of Picton, Charged With Reckless Driving of His Automobile

Port Hope, Sept. 15.— B. R. Hepburn, of Picton, was in the police Court yesterday for the reckless driving of his automobile. The complainant was Dr. McKinley, and he stated that while driving on the Toronto road Mr. Hepburn cut across in front and the top of the automobile struck the horse in the head. Mr. H. H. Burnham who was driving with the doctor at the time, corroborated this evidence.

Mr. Hepburn said he remembered passing Dr. McKinley, but was not aware that his car struck the horse. He was allowed to go on suspended sentence. Mr. Walmsley, of Picton, appeared for the defendant.—Port Hope Guide.

Accident to Well-Known Cheese Buyer

Mr. James S. Cook of this city, the well known cheese buyer and inspector, yesterday morning met with an accident which fortunately did not result in any serious injury to him. He was driving near Stirling on the Ridge road and had occasion to cross a bridge over a creek in close proximity to the Evergreen Cheese factory. The bridge in question was being repaired but there was no bars up or anything to denote that the bridge was closed for repairs. Mr. Cook drove upon the bridge with the result that the horse and rig went partially through an opening. The animal skinned its knees, and the fills and cross bar of the buggy were broken. Mr. Cook was rather badly shaken up. The horse was taken to Stirling, where a veterinary attended to its injuries. Later Mr. Cook drove to the city in another conveyance. Mr. Rogers settled with Mr. Cook for the damage done.

Other Residences Visited by Burglars.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Frederick's house, situated on the Marshall Road, was entered during the absence of the inmates and some articles, not of great value were taken. This building is in close proximity to Messrs. C. Vanderwaters and Geo. B. Sills, which were also ransacked.

Frankford Fair.

The Frankford fair, which opened yesterday and continued to-day, was in every respect a most successful affair. The exhibits in all classes were far in excess of former years. The display of horses and cattle was exceptionally fine. A large attendance of spectators was present and all expressed their admiration for the show.

During yesterday afternoon there were two speeding events, namely, a named race and a colt race. Both were well contested and the results were as follows:

NAMED RACE.

Black Prince, 1st.
Helmore, 2nd.
Black Latta, 3rd.

COLT RACE.

W. Latta's colt, 1st.
B. Powell's colt, 2nd.
C. Armstrong's colt 3rd.

Mr. A. Weese, of this city, was starter and the judges were Messrs. Hy. Foster and F. Fanning.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Ole Olson, a comedy drama, was last evening presented at the Griffin opera house to a good audience. The play abounds with ludicrous scenes and comic incidents, which were fairly well depicted by the company presenting the same. Ben Holmes as Ole Olson gave a good imitation of the character.

Big Coal Find On G. T. P. Line.

Winnipeg, Sept. 14.—J. McEvoy of Toronto and R. G. Drinnan of Vancouver, two of the most widely known and experienced engineers in the west, passed through here to-day on their way from the new country being opened in Western Alberta, by the Grand Trunk Pacific to Toronto. They were out in Alberta looking for coal properties, and Senator Cox, Senator Cox, Senator Jaffray, Sir Henry Pellatt and G. G. S. Lindsay are some of the capitalists behind them.

They report that many thousands of acres of coal are waiting to be mined along the G. T. P. main line west of Edmonton and north of the recently discovered Brazeau collieries.

It is claimed that the coal is of the same quality as that in the Crow's Nest and that from advices they have received development work on the deposit will be started in the immediate future; and they predict that the new coal fields will prove a surprise to all.

Automobile Accident Last Night.

Last night about seven o'clock, three men in an auto going at a very rapid speed attempted to turn the corner of Charles and Alexander street, when the man sitting next to the driver of the car was thrown violently to the ground. Upon examination he was found to be unconscious. His friends took him into the car, presumably to a physician.

P. E. I. Death Rate.

LOW FIGURES ATTRIBUTED TO PROHIBITION OF LIQUOR

The death rate in Prince Edward Island is very low compared with other parts of the continent, and this is attributed to the prohibition of the liquor traffic, by L. U. Fowler, late high secretary of the I. O. F. for that province.

Don't Like Automobiles.

"It may seem a little antiquated to many westerners," said Mr. Fowler, "but we have put the ban on the automobile. We don't want them at any price. Our roads are narrow and it was considered dangerous for the great bulk of the people that these machines should be allowed to operate. We had seven on the Island, but they had to get off, and we are free from the menace which many other countries are now subject to."

The principle of the spring tape measure has been utilized by a Massachusetts inventor of a coiled wire attachment for electric lights to permit them to be carried about a room.

TREASON AGAINST GOD

So Father Vaughan Designates Race Suicide.

Famous Jesuit In Toronto Says Great Danger to the Empire Is the Lack of Religion—Religion In England Is Falling With the Birth Rate—Moral Lawgiver System Is Being Tried In France and Is a Failure.

Toronto, Sept. 12.—Father Bernard Vaughan, S.J., London, England, addressed an audience of about 250 at the Empire Club last night with several ladies seated in the gallery. He kept his hearers interested and elicited a generous amount of applause by his dexterous twanging of thrilling chords. He had some good stories of Yorkshire dialect, and a fine Irish bull all his own, when he alluded to the Empire's children begotten by their mother.

It had been the ambition of his life to come and see the Dominion which had so shown its patriotism and loyalty and love for the mother that bore them.

"I have many more — Robert Laird Borden, and last, but not least, Sir James Whitney," he proceeded as the applause graduated itself from Laurier to Shaughnessy.

"Statesmen, men of honor, men of prudence, with nothing merely local, merely provincial in them, but with aspirations extending all around their world-wide Empire," was his characterization of these gentlemen.

FATHER BERNARD VAUGHAN.

"You know there are dangers, and unless our sympathy goes forth expressing itself in service, service will never attain its highest in sacrifice," he advised.

"Any blooming idiot can be vicious, but it takes a hero to be good," was an explosive period that brought down the house. Then he quoted Josh Billings. "I guess once you get on this inclined plane everything is greased for the ascension."

"Beware of race suicide," was the next point. "Men might say what they would, and they said things they would have been astounded to hear a generation ago. They were told there was no such thing as sin. Men were told there was no more blame attaching to them for not reaching a high moral standard than for not reaching a high physical standard."

When men and women pledged their troth at the altar they must live up to their sacred and sublime, nay—sacramental duties. They shook their fist in the face of the divine decree to multiply and replenish the earth. That was racial suicide, and that was "constructive treason against the majesty of God."

A great danger to the Empire was lack of religion. What a difference the old country presented to-day as compared with a generation ago! He would not say there was not a grand body of religious men, but the test was whether religion entered into life. If their characters were to be fair, sweet, strong and sublime, they must be policed, trained, influenced and finished by religion.

He dare not tell them how few went to church in England. When they remembered that the birthrate had fallen from 38 to 24 they could understand that religion was failing. The religion that did not regard the sacrifice of Christ on the cross was not of much use. Only through that could men learn to fight their passions. Unless they had the strong arm of the Son of God to lean upon and his sweet heart to draw from, he did not know what they were to do in a moment of trial and temptation.

"I do not want to advocate one religion more than another, but I want you to live up to what you believe to be true. Take care when men tell you to live up to the moral law without telling you about a moral Lawgiver.' They are trying to do that in France to-day and the result is hell."

"Not only the oldest, but the greatest association on earth you will acknowledge, whether you like it or not, is the Catholic Church. She can't die. She won't die. She is youthful and vigorous. Let her do her work with her own. Patriotism is the finest bloom that rises from the tap root of religion," was the essence of a strong appeal.

"I think that Protestants are infinitely superior to the religion which they profess. I admire them, their zeal, their energy, enterprise, their philanthropy, their extraordinary generosity, but I can't admire their religion. Why you ask, the reason is that while I think Protestants themselves fine, I think their religion very thin poor nourishment for the support of the soul."

No Race Suicide Here.

Ridgetown, Sept. 16.—Mrs. James White, wife of a local butcher, presented her husband with triplets Wednesday, two boys and a girl, all full-sized and healthy babies.

Tinware should be rubbed with flannel well soaped to remove all stains, brightened with a fine flannel dipped in whitening and finished with the ever-useful chamois leather.

TUNIC GOWNS TO GO.

Fashion Will Have None of Them In the Fall.

STUNNING TUNIC GOWN.

Tunic gowns are not becoming to the average woman, so it will not be overwhelming news to state that Dame Fashion has decreed that in the fall these models will not be worn.

There is one exception in tunic effects that should be allowed to remain—the frock of silk or some sheer material veiled with tunic draperies of chiffon or material of a diaphanous texture. The costume illustrated is one of the best types of the tunic gown which is popular this summer.

The Odd Jobs Woman.

If you have no particular bent, but many outlets, do not feel you must train yourself into a specialty for which you have no particular fitness, which, being more plainly translated, means there is room in the world for the odd jobs women.

Don't you believe it?

Hear how one girl who was suddenly thrown upon her own resources made for herself a comfortable living.

When forced to take account of stock she found she had no particular talent, but many knacks. She could not write stories, be a concert singer or player, paint miniatures or teach kindergarten, but she could write a clever note, bake delicious cake, pack a trunk that was a joy to behold when opened at a journey's end, play inspiring dance music, sing ballads blessingly and read aloud delightfully. In addition she could do fine mending, clean gloves and laces and had an artistic knack of setting a table or decorating a room.

It would take years to specialize on any of the branches, with no certainty of final success. While debating the girl heard a business friend lament that there was no one to help her out on the numerous odd jobs that overfilled the busy worker's scant time.

"I'll be an odd jobs woman," said the girl.

She would go into a woman's kitchen and bake a cake, would set her table and decorate her drawing room for company, would stay in the pantry and attend to careful service and would later go into the drawing room to play for dancing or sing a few songs.

The friend who hated to pack a trunk knew where she could find a good packer in an emergency. The packer would also come early and get clothes in good condition, run ribbons, mend, darn or clean gloves and laces.

The society woman who could not afford a secretary and was swamped by her correspondence could have clever, well written notes sent out from mere jottings of information. She could also trust her for calling lists to be carefully revised and invitations written, directed and sent.

Where eyes were bad or one was convalescing from a long illness there would go the girl with clever literature adapted to the taste of the hearer. Better yet, these stories were read in a pleasing voice, with perfect enunciation.

Summer Reading.

Summer gives more time for reading, even to the busy woman, than does any other season. This may be because it is too warm for social duties and exercise, but the pleasant fact remains to the book lover.

Systematic reading is always of more advantage than desultory, therefore for part of the time you allow yourself each day to read along given lines.

If you expect to take your vacation later get all the books bearing on the history, flora and fiction of that part of the country. There are comparatively few parts even of unhistoric America that have not been written up, while for a trip abroad the difficulty is to choose.

A summer reading club for workers is delightful.

Because a new railroad bridge in Switzerland is on an important line, strategically, it has been provided with a chamber which can be filled with dynamite to wreck the structure in event of war.

A Lazy Liver

Upsets the Whole System.
Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills
Put Things Right Again.

A bitter taste in the mouth—coated tongue—dizziness on rising suddenly—bowels alternately loose and constipated—these mean that the liver is out of order.

Instead of flowing into the bowels, to regulate them and aid digestion, the bile has been going all through the system, upsetting digestion, leaving the bowels constipated, and making the sufferer perfectly miserable. This is biliousness.

The quick, safe and certain cure is Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. They clear out the clogged-up system, stir up the lazy liver, cleanse the stomach and bowels and purify the blood. The bile returns to its normal course, the food is again digested properly and all the disagreeable symptoms vanish.

Doctors prescribe Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills and they are known throughout the world as a proven cure for all digestive troubles. They are equally effective in strengthening weak kidneys and curing rheumatism.

Woman's World

Mrs. John Bruce Dodd Founder of Fathers' Day.

MRS. JOHN BRUCE DODD.

No longer will "mother's day" have to do double duty in honor of mothers and fathers in Spokane, for Mrs. John Bruce Dodd of Washington state set apart a certain Sunday (last June 19) to celebrate father's day. On this Sunday a rose was worn by all persons in sympathy with the movement, and in the churches there were appropriate sermons, such as "The Influence of Father," in which one pastor explained that the influence of the father should be as great as the mother.

Fathers' day is likely to be observed in all the states of the Union next year, and as the matter now stands the third Sunday in June has been selected as the day of commemoration.

The "Chantecler" Bow.

"Yesterday I had occasion to visit one of the department stores and saw displayed for sale 'something new' in 'ladies' neckwear'—the 'Chantecler' bow, the name evidently suggested by Rostand's animal play. A technical description of this silken, fluted creation is quite beyond my knowledge of such matters, but what I did understand was the little brown bird's head which stood out from the center of the bow. I could hardly believe my eyes, and I looked again to make sure that it was nothing less than the head of that world famous songster the European skylark.

> "Hail to thee, blythe spirit
> (Bird thou never wert)
> That from heaven or near it
> Pourest thy full heart.

"Shelley's lines ran mockingly through my head as I looked at that pathetic tiny bunch of brown feathers, with its staring glass eyes and shriveled bill, all that was left of the most joy giving bird that ever sprinkled the air with its song.

"And the price of it, bow and all, was 50 cents in another store it was 40—and for a tithe, then, of this paltry sum there had been destroyed such beauty, such poetry, such joy, as could not be replaced by a syndicate of billionaires. No bird in the world perhaps has inspired so many poets. The 'Ettrick Shepherd' sang:

> "Bird of the wilderness,
> Blythesome and cumberless,
> Sweet be thy matin o'er moorland and lea.

"And here we find the mummied head of the modest little bird for sale on a piece of cheap ribbon in the crush and babel of department stores. Could degradation be carried further? And there were scores of such bows, each bearing the head of a skylark.

"Appeals to sentiment are good when there is any sentiment to appeal to, but think of trying to appeal to the sentiment of a woman who will wear a 'Chantecler' bow! She wouldn't understand your language. If we are to preserve our birds we must have more good, farreaching laws and see that they are enforced. The Audubon societies know what laws are needed and know how to draw them up and present them. Those societies are working for us. Let us stand behind them and back them up."

Venice Fashions.

The ladies of Venice have formed a league to discourage Paris fashions and bring back the mediaeval Italian styles. They hold that the vision of a Venetian woman attired in the latest Paris creation and seated in a gondola in one of the picturesque canals of the city is a sight so ridiculous as to become pathetic. Headed by Signora Rosa Genoni, the novelist, these daughters of Venice have started a crusade that promises to bring renaissance styles back to Italy. Fortunately for Paris, American women do not care for our aboriginal costumes.

How to Water Plants When Away.

House plants can be kept well watered during a week's absence of the housekeeper, according to an ingenious Scotch device. Set a bowl of water well above the level of the plant to be watered by means of a box or a pile of books. Twist several strands of common darning wool together or braid them to form a long wick and soak them in water. If one end of the wick reaches to the bottom of the bowl and the other hangs over the plants a steady drip will continue until the bowl is emptied.

To remove hot-water marks on japanned trays, use sweet oil. Rub it in well till all marks disappear, then polish the tray with dry flour and soft cloths.

A curious friendship between a lion and a dog has attracted wide attention in England, where they are being exhibited. The dog is a fine specimen of his kind and performs many clever tricks. He seems much attached to his fierce companion, and they frequently have a game of romps. This is all the more remarkable, as dog and lion rarely make friends.

The most wonderful fact concerning this strange pair is that Leo, as the lion is named, has a decidedly vicious temper when with other animals and has killed several that were caged with him before the advent of his present canine companion. The two live together in amity, sharing the food thrown to them and sleeping side by side in a corner of their cage.

The Diving Bell.

How many of you children know who first invented the diving bell? It was not a man or a woman, but a little spider that built its home under the water long before man thought of the diving bell, says the Chicago News. The spider's house, made of the finest spun silk, is, strange to say, though under water, filled with air. To keep his house from ascending to the surface the spider fastens it with silken cords to the grass in the pond or brook or wherever the house may be. If he did not it would rise like a balloon, float from its moorings and leave the spider family homeless.

These spiders, called naiads by naturalists, show a large degree of intelligence and are clever hydraulic engineers. They swim easily, and under water they look like round, moving pearls, a layer of air concealed under the skin giving them this strange appearance. They rise to the top of the water to inhale a bubble of air, swim with it to the bottom and when building their bell houses completely fill them with air by this process.

Cookery Points

Panouchi, as Pratt students make it, calls for three tablespoonfuls of butter, a tiny pinch of soda and a cupful of milk, all heated together. Then three cupfuls of coffee and sugar are stirred in and a pinch of salt. The sirup is cooked to the soft ball stage, taken from the fire and cooled and then three-fourths of a cupful of nut meats chopped fine and a teaspoonful of vanilla are mixed with it and it is stirred until creamy. After pouring into a shallow tin the candy should be marked off in squares.

For chocolate chips as the same cooking teacher makes them the recipe wants half a cupful of butter, two eggs, two squares of chocolate, a teaspoonful of vanilla, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, a cupful of sugar and a cupful of flour. Bake in thin sheets for ten or twelve minutes. If the paste is too stiff to handle, more liquid or less flour should be used. In making any such batter judgment has to be used.

For "brownies" a recipe copied from a Pratt student's notebook is as follows: A third of a cupful of butter, a fourth of a cupful of molasses, a cupful of flour, a cupful of chopped walnuts, a third of a cupful of sugar, an egg and a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Bake in a thin sheet on buttered tins.

To make peanut cookies as the same teacher dictates, use half a cupful of butter, a cupful of sugar, two eggs, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a teaspoonful of lemon juice, half a teaspoonful of salt, two cupfuls of flour, half a cupful of milk and a cupful of chopped peanuts. Drop from a spoon on buttered tins and bake.

Currant Shortcake.

Make a biscuit dough as follows: Sift together twice two cupfuls of flour, one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, half a teaspoonful of salt and thoroughly mix with flour. Then rub in one rounded teaspoonful of butter or cottolene or lard and add enough milk to make a soft dough. Use a fork to stir in the milk. Mix it lightly and quickly together, making the paste a little too soft to roll. Turn it into a well greased pie tin, smooth the top with a wet knife and put it at once into a hot oven to bake for thirty minutes. When it is taken from the oven trim the edges and split the biscuit in two, using two forks so as to tear, not cut, apart. Spread each half with butter while it is still hot. Stem a box of currants. Reserve a few of the finest ones to decorate the top of the shortcake. Put the rest of the currants into a bowl, wash them, add enough sugar to sweeten to taste and let them stand an hour or more before using them. Spread the washed currants over one-half of the buttered biscuit and lay the other half on it. Sweeten with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar or cover the top with meringue made of the whipped whites of two eggs sweetened and decorate this with the currants as fancy prompts.

Picnic or Luncheon Sandwiches.

Egg Sandwiches.—Boil five eggs for fifteen minutes; when cold remove the shells and pound the yolks and whites together in a mortar or basin with one heaping tablespoonful of melted butter. When smooth add salt, pepper, grate of nutmeg and dust of red pepper to taste. Spread this mixture on thin cut bread and butter, press well, trim them, cut them into neat fingers and wrap in wax paper. Slices of hard cooked eggs seasoned with a little salt and pepper introduced between slices of bread and butter also make nice egg sandwiches.

Coffee Custard.

Put one-half cup ground coffee in a little muslin bag and drop into four cups of cold milk. Let stand twenty minutes, then put into the double boiler until it reaches the scalding point. Cook five minutes and then remove the bag and pour the hot milk over four beaten eggs and four heaping tablespoonfuls of sugar. Pour into a custard bowl and set in the pan of hot water in the oven, or, if preferred, turn back into the double boiler. Cook until thickened, strain and set aside to cool.

Q.O.R. BOYS IN LONDON

Metropolis Gives Canadians a Splendid Reception.

Thousands of Londoners Watch the March of Visitors Through Streets to Guild Hall—Hon. Mr. Haldane and Lord Roberts Inspect Regiment and Express Their Pleasure at Loyalty of Canada.

London, Sept. 17.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Minister of War Haldane and Lord Roberts inspected the Queen's Own yesterday morning.

Lord Roberts, who arrived first, addressed the men, observing that as an honorary colonel of the regiment, he wished to bid them welcome in person. A great step was made towards the unification of the British army when the Canadian regiment and contingents from Australia, New Zealand, and Tasmania so loyally and so promptly came forward to take their part in the South African war. To-day another very important step was made in the visit of the Queen's Own, in order to take part in the manoeuvres, he said.

"I wish I could make you understand how thoroughly I appreciate the loyalty and soldierly spirit which induced you to take this long voyage and undergo the certain amount of work and discomfort for the sake of the Mother Country, and to say how thoroughly I believe that your action will do much to strengthen the bond that unites her and her children on the other side of the Atlantic," said "Bobs."

Mr. Haldane, addressing the men said: "This is an occasion, this visit of your regiment to these shores, which has deeply stirred the imagination, not only of the people at home in these islands, but of the Empire."

The march cityward then commenced, and along the entire route of five miles, people were massed on every point of view, and the Q.O.R. met with a magnificent reception. Arriving at Guild Hall, the men stacked their arms in the hallways, and the officers were welcomed by the Lord Mayor in his library.

The Times says it is because all Englishmen regard the Q.O.R. as a component and valuable part of the "Imperial army" that they are so warmly welcomed. The zeal which they have shown during the manoeuvres, their discipline and their fine soldierly qualities have made a deep impression.

The Daily Graphic says Col. Pellatt said that the employers of all the men of the Q.O.R. are paying their wages during the trip, and that clearly there are some things they do better in colonies.

The Standard says the reception represents a very genuine feeling, wherein the whole nation unites.

The fact that Winnipeg is now the greatest wheat centre of the world is announced in triumph, and is received here with the greatest gratification.

"The Bowery" It Must Always Be.

New York, Sept. 17.—"They will only change the name of the Bowery over my dead body," angrily shouted "Big Tim" Sullivan yesterday, to a delegation of gentlemen workers who called to enlist his aid in having the historic old thoroughfare named Third avenue.

"It would be an outrage to have the Bowery known as anything but the Bowery," he continued. "The trouble has been the Bowery people have been misunderstood. The Bowery has been pictured as a place where people have been waylaid and robbed. This is false. The Bowery, either by day or by night, is safer than Fifth avenue."

Successor to Sbaretti.

Montreal, Sept. 17.—Credence is lent in semi-official circles to the report that Mgr. Sbaretti, now absent in Rome, will not return to Canada to resume the duties of papal ablegate.

For some time past Rev. Father Lepetier, superior-general of the Sulpicians, has been in Canada making an extensive tour throughout the Dominion.

In certain quarters this prolonged stay is regarded as an indication of the possibility of his appointment to the legation at Ottawa.

Painting the Senate.

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—Workmen are busy repainting and redecorating the Senate chamber in view of the coming to Canada next year of the Duke of Connaught.

The old coat of paint was another of the links with the past that has gone. The last order for paint was given twenty-five years ago by Sir John A. Macdonald.

The new coat will be ready for the opening of Parliament, on or about Nov. 10.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED

Labor Congress Censures Order-In-Council Legislation.

Labor Peace Conference, Pensions for the Blind, Care In Building Scaffolding, Calling Out of Troops During Strikes, Immigration, and Eight Hour Day, Are Subjects of Expressions of Opinion at Port Arthur.

Port Arthur, Sept. 17.—Nearly a score of resolutions were rushed through at yesterday morning's session of the Trades and Labor Congress. Among the more important were:

To make arrangements for international peace conference of labor organizations.

To get Government pensions for the blind.

To get legislation requiring greater care in the erection of scaffolds and temporary floors upon which artisans are required to work. (Introduced by Delegate Nicholls, amalgamated carpenters, Toronto.)

Against the practice of using troops in labor disputes.

To require heating street car vestibules as well as its interiors for the protection of conductors and motormen in winter.

When the settlement of the long-standing strike of the Bucks Stove & Range at St. Louis, Mo., was announced, Delegate J. H. Barnett of Toronto announced that the iron moulders were still on strike at the Bucks Stove Works at Brantford, and that these two firms had no connection with each other.

The report of the special committee on immigration precipitated a discussion of several hours. It entailed the sending of a representative to Britain and the opening of an office there permanently by the Trades and Labor Congress. Most of the delegates were opposed to this, and preferred to spend the money in having the immigration laws enforced in Canada, and this was carried.

In the discussion of this report all legislation by order-in-council was denounced as vicious and inimical to the best interests of the people.

Delegate A. Verville, M.P., was opposed to the Government having power by order-in-council to stay any existing law to the detriment of the wage-earners of this country.

"Just imagine. Here we have a law making it punishable by a fine of $1,000, and then the simple order-in-council sets it aside," said the Labor member.

The importations of men for the Guelph Carpet Works, Montreal building trade, Penman knitting mills, and the Coppley, Noyes and Randall Clothing firm of Hamilton were mentioned in the discussion.

The policy enunciated by Ed. Stephenson of Toronto for the congress, or organized labor in Canada, sending a Canadian to the British House of Commons, has not been mentioned in any way during the convention.

A resolution bearing on the eight-hour day was introduced by President Wm. Glockling of Toronto advocating an eight-hour day campaign.

The congress placed itself on record as favoring the chartering of all trades and labor councils in Canada by the trades congress, in preference to by the American Federation of Labor.

Natural Gas Ring.

Berlin, Ont., Sept. 17.—A meeting of western Ontario municipalities will be held here Sept. 27, to consider organizating a union for the development of the use of natural gas from the extensive fields in southwestern Ontario.

Already London, Guelph, Stratford, Hespeler and Preston have signified a willingness to sit in. It is claimed that natural gas can be piped long distances. For instance, Pittsburg, Pa., utilizes natural gas from West Virginia, 157 miles away.

Assyrians May Leave Fold.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 17.—The Assyrian colony in St. John, consisting of fifty-two families of the Maronite Catholic faith, decided yesterday to take their children from the Catholic schools and send them to public schools.

They say they have repeatedly asked Bishop Casey to permit them to build a church of their own with a priest speaking their own language and that he has refused to do that or permit any Assyrian priest to say mass in the cathedral.

Woman, at 74, Jailed.

St. Catharines, Sept. 7.—Phoebe Ann Martindale, aged 74 years, who has been a character in Caister Township for over half a century, is now prisoner, in the county jail, in this city. On Aug. 4 last she was accused and convicted of selling liquor without a license. She was fined $100 or three months in jail, and hasn't paid up.

A New News Service.

Montreal, Sept. 17.—A. J. Fraser of Sydney, Australia, arrived in the city yesterday on his way to Ottawa to interview Sir Wilfrid Laurier regarding a proposal which is on foot for a news service between Great Britain and Australia through Canada.

Montreal's Birth Rate.

Montreal, Sept. 17.—The number of births for the past year show a decrease of 1.28 per 1,000 as compared with 1908.

Dr. L. Laberge, medical health officer, declares in his report that the births numbered 14,678.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The Mayor moved at the committee meeting Thursday night "that Ald. Lott, Ald. Robinson and himself be a committee to visit western cities to inspect permanent road improvements." Does not our capable Engineer count for anything; should he not go on this inspection tour? And would not a committee made up of the Mayor, Ald. Lott and Engineer Lindsay be quite sufficient, if a committee is necessary at all?

Current talk says that a few Aldermen are desirous of making the proposed new appointment cover the Assessor and Street Surveyor under one head. A Street Surveyor or Engineer has his individual work and Belleville now has a capable Engineer, who, when large sums of city moneys are being expended, is the right man in the right place, and, to say the least, he is honest; graft has no place in his composition.

In making the appointment of an Assessor, select a good man, but do not allow our municipal body to be called "a joke"—as some have already dubbed it. There are good men among our Councilmen. Do not attempt to make one man do two men's work—it is false economy.

Many people do not know much about the Children's Protection Act of Ontario, and as a result children are allowed to grow up in vice and ignorance, who might with timely intervention, have been saved to a happy and useful career.

Under this Act there is a Children's Aid Society organized in each city, and committees or correspondents in many towns and villages. Its aim is to cover the entire Province with a network of societies that will effectively safeguard the interests of every child.

The sympathetic interest of teachers, clergy, officials, etc., is sought, and information will be furnished on application. Homeless, neglected or delinquent children should be promptly reported so that the necessary improvement can be brought about.

All should feel it a privilege to help the children, and by united effort a splendid work can be accomplished.

The Society stands for social uplift, sanitary houses for the poor, playgrounds, regular school attendance, homes for the homeless, restoration and encouragement for the offender, friendly co-operation between rich and poor, the abolition of poverty and human wretchedness.

The Presbytery of Montreal commends the Roman Catholic Church for what it is doing for moral reform. Some very touchy people, who do not see that any good can come out of a church that is not their own, will please make a note of this.—Kingston Whig.

The Portuguese authorities have closed a Jesuits' house and expelled the Spanish inmates from the country. Portugal was rather behind Spain in showing that it had recently developed an anti-clerical party. It seems to be more ready to put its ideas into execution, perhaps, because its case politically is seemingly worse than that of its neighbor country. It does not appear that desire for true liberty is always the moving force with those who bang the clerics about.—Montreal Gazette.

Accused of Big Theft. Man Fights Deputies.

ALLEGE THAT FORMER EMPLOYE IN CHICAGO SUB-TREASURY GOT AWAY WITH $173,000.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 16.—Trapped by a ruse on the part of the Government authorities, George W. Fitzgerald, formerly assorting teller in the Chicago Sub-Treasury, has been arrested on a charge of having stolen $173,000 on February 19, 1907. Fitzgerald had been secretly indicted last December.

Fitzgerald cursed his captors and fought like a madman when placed in a cell in the United States Marshal's office. "I'll kill any man who lays a hand on me," he shouted.

He dealt one deputy a terrific blow, felling him to the floor. The deputies finally conquered him, beating him to the floor of the iron cage, where he was shackled and handcuffed. His clothing was then searched.

This is the second time Fitzgerald has been arrested on the same charge. His capture now follows three years of secret espionage by the "underground police" of the United States Government.

He has been held in the sum of $50,000 by Judge Landis. Papers and receipts found in his possession are held as evidence and are said to be of great value in that way.

PAPERS TAKEN AWAY.

"Mr. Eberstein, a special agent, and his men have been investigating this theft since the $173,000 robbery was reported," said the District Attorney, Mr. Sims, following the arrest. "They seldom make an arrest unless they have the evidence which will connect the prisoner with the crime. That is all I can say as to our case."

Both Mr. Sims and Mr. Eberstein refused to say what papers were found on Mr. Fitzgerald's person. Several documents also were obtained from the desk of the one time assorting teller. His $9,000 residence, at No. 1057 Chase avenue, which he bought a few months after the Sub-Treasury robbery, was also searched from cellar to garret.

The indictment against Mr. Fitzgerald charges that he embezzled and stole one hundred dollar bills to the amount of $173,000 on February 19, 1907. This is the day previous to the date on which Mr. Fitzgerald, without warning, reported that he was short that amount to the Sub-Treasurer, William Boldenweck.

The trap which led to his arrest was sprung three weeks ago. At that time the statute of limitations had run on the crime. In accordance with the plan, the District Attorney, Mr. Sims, gave out an interview in which he said the statute had been permitted to run and that no indictments could now be brought. In reality witnesses had been smuggled before the "Beef Trust" Grand Jury of December, 1909, and the indictment was then voted.

BEGAN TO SHOW MONEY.

The Government officials assert that Mr. Fitzgerald, immediately after the date of the expiration of the statute of limitations, began openly to display large quantities of money. At the time of Mr. Fitzgerald's employment in the Sub-Treasury as assorting teller he drew a salary of $1,800 a year.

Since then these business deals in which he has been interested and expenditures have come to light:—

Several months after the money was missed he purchased a residence for $9,000 in Rogers Park.

Immediately upon release from apparent Government surveillance he began to speculate in eggs. His dealings amounted at once time to upward of $50,000. At that time he is said to have offered Colonel Harry Gano, formerly manager of A. Booth & Co., $500 for each $1,000 bill he would dispose of.

Offered to put up $50,000 cash with which to enter a lake transportation company with Colonel Gano.

Negotiated for the purchase of three lake steamboats and offered to pay cash for them.

He has met many former Belleville and Hastings residents who are doing well in the West. Mr. Davison, accompanied by Mrs. Davison and Miss Myrtle will return to the city about the latter part of October.

Consecrated to Missionary Work.

At the Presbyterian Church at Shannonville last evening an impressive servile was held before an audience which filled the sacred edifice to the doors. It was the ordaining of Miss Mabel Clazie, daughter of Mr. Wm. Clazie, as a missionary to the foreign mission field at Formosa.

Rev. Dr. McKay, of Toronto, Secretary of the Foreign Mission Society of the Presbyterian Church, presided and gave a most interesting address in relation to mission work.

Revs. A. S. Kerr, pastor of St. Andrew's Church in this city, A. E. Cameron, of Shannonville, and Galloway, of Foxboro, who were present, also gave addresses.

After the addresses Mrs. (Rev.) Bennie, on behalf of the Women's Missionary Society of the Kingston Presbytery, presented Miss Clazie with a handsome Bible; the Young People's Guild of St. Andrew's Church, Belleville, presented her with a beautiful travelling bag, and the Ladies' Auxiliary of the W. M. S. of St. Andrew's Church here gave her a fountain pen. Miss Clazie to these presentations made a suitable reply, and spoke of her desire to engage in missionary work. The young lady will leave in a few days to engage in her work in that far-off country.

Old Boys of Albert Welcome New Boys.

The Old Boys of Albert College held a reception for the new students last evening in the spacious commercial Hall, which was festooned with bunting and A. C. pennants for the occasion. The Hall was comfortably filled with seniors and Freshmen. The chair was occupied by Professor Dox see, who is acting Principal in the absence of Dr. Dyer. Short addresses were given by Mr. Fisher, President of the Y. M. C. A., and by Vice Presidents who have charge of the Missionary, Evangelistic, Literary and Athletic Societies, each of whom set forth the claims of his particular department, and welcomed the new students into the privileges and comradeship of the Society. The male members of the faculty also joined in extending the right hand of good fellowship Prof. King expressing his regrets on parting with such a manly lot of fellows, while Prof. Staples declared that he had already been received as one of the boys. Mr. Daniels replied on behalf of the new students, thanking the fellows for the cordiality of their reception, and expressing surprise at the absence of patronizing airs and class distinctions among the seniors The speeches were interspersed with literary and musical selections. The refreshments then served were disposed of with a zest possessed in a remarkable degree by all new students The evening closed with the usual air cleaving, chest-expanding selections.

Simultaneously, the old girls received the Freshettes in the reception parlors and a jolly evening was spent the chief interest centering in a millinery contest. Miss Laidley won the prize as the architect and builder of the most fearfully and wonderfully made artistic headdress.

Strangers Charged With Serious Offence

Two women who are natives of a foreign country were last night brought to the city and lodged in the County jail. They are from Trenton and the charge preferred against them is the unlawful disposition of the body of a dead child. As the case has not been investigated the circumstances could not be ascertained. The accused are on remand until Friday next, when a preliminary trial will take place at Trenton.

BUYING AN AUTOMOBILE TIRE

You don't buy an Automobile Tire out and out, you buy it upon the understanding that under certain normal conditions of usage it will give you so many thousand miles of service—therefore the actual cost of a tire is not its initial purchase price, but the purchase price plus the cost of tire repairs, during the time you are running your car. Dunlop Automobile Tires give a low average cost per mile, because, besides the quality of the tire, there is a further guarantee of service in the ready willingness of the Dunlop Company to thoroughly satisfy every user of Dunlop Tires.

On the Coleman Flats diamond yesterday afternoon a baseball match took place between teams representing St. Michael's Academy and Queen Victoria School. It was one of a series for the annual possession of a valuable trophy presented by Dr. Yeomans for competition between the various schools of the city. The game yesterday was rather uninteresting, owing to the fact that it was too much one-sided. The St. Michael's boys were too swift for their opponents, and won by a score of 21 to 7. In one innings the winners secured 12 runs. Mr. Robt Burke was umpire and did his duty well. The line-up of the teams were as follows:

KETCHELL TO TRAIN TO FIGHT JOHNSON

Quits Welter Class and Will Take on Weight — His Winnings for Charity.

Springfield, Mo., Thursday.—Stanley Ketchel, middleweight champion of the world, said here to-day that he would prepare to fight "Jack" Johnson for the heavyweight championship.

"I am through with fighting in the middleweight class," said Ketchel "but I am working for Johnson. I don't want money if I lose, but will give it to charity. I am in the game no longer for the money. I am going on a ranch to gain weight to meet Johnson."

Ketchel said he would buy a ranch in Missouri.

St. Vitus Dance.

St. Vitus dance is the commonest form of nervous troubles which afflicts children, because of the great demands made on the body by growth and development, and there is the added strain caused by study. It is when these demands become so great that they impoverish the blood, and the nerves fail to receive their full supply of nourishment, that the nervous debility which leads to St. Vitus dance.

The remarkable success of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in curing St. Vitus dance should lead parents to give their children this great blood-building machine at the first signs of the approach of the disease. Palor, listlessness, inattention, restlessness and irritability are all symptoms which early show that the blood and nerves are failing to meet the demands made upon them. Mrs. A. Winters, Virden, Man., says: "When my little girl was six years old she was attacked with scarlatina, which was followed by St. Vitus dance. Her limbs would jerk and twitch. Her speech became affected, and at last she became so bad that she could scarcely walk, and we hardly dared trust her alone. She was under the care of a doctor, but in spite of this was steadily growing worse, and we feared that we would lose her. As Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had cured her oldest sister of anaemia I decided to try them again. After the use of a few boxes, to our great joy, we found they were helping her and in the course of a few weeks more her power of speech fully returned, and she could walk and go about as well as any child, and she has been well and healthy since. When illness come to any one of our family now, we never call in a doctor, but simply use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they never disappoint us."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Daily Intelligencer.

The Real Protectionist.

The Ridgetown Dominion, a newspaper edited by a Conservative member of the Ontario Legislature, recently dwelt trechantly with the low tariff pretences of the Liberals. "What is the use," it asks "of the Eastern Liberal newspapers writing nice little paragraphs about lower tariff and free trade and recalling the time when nearly all Liberals were in agreement in considering a moderate tariff best for Canada. That good old time ceased to exist from the hour the party took office in 1896."

The Dominion goes on to recall how in 1896, through the late George H Bertram of Toronto, an assurance was quietly given to the manufacturers that no matter what the Liberal leaders and the Liberal newspapers might promise, no harm would be done them if the Liberals won. The Dominion continues: "Sir Wilfrid surrendered to the protectionists in 1896, and the the proof of it is found in many thing that occurred then and since Hon. David Mills, an honest low tariff man, was excluded from the Cabinet until after the "revision" of 1897 and the bargain made with the manufacturers carried out, and it was safe to admit him and stop the clamour of the old Liberals at his exclusion. Sir Richard Cartwright was not taken in until after he consented to be muzzled. Tariff tinkering since has been in the interest of the manufacturers and the bounties have been continued And it further goes on. "The manufacturers or at least the great majority of them, Grit and Tory, favor the present men in power for many reasons. They get what they want in the way of duties draw-backs, bonuses and bounties, and of course the greater the expenditure on all kinds of public works the better for them and the better for the army of favorites and contractors and the still greater army of camp followers behind them."

The Dominion goes on to urge a real policy of lower duties and of disregard of "the interests."

JUST AS LONG AS YOU HAVE DANDRUFF YOUR HEAD WILL ITCH

It's the little microbes that are gnawing down into the hair roots. It may take a long time for these persistent pests to get down to the vital part, but when they do they will destroy the life of the hair in a very short time.

"I write in short that my head was almost running me crazy, and I saw your ad in the Times Union. I bought a bottle of Parisian Sage at once and tried it, and in a week I could see that my head was almost well, and my hair was growing wonderfully, and I continued using Parisian Sage, and now my hair is beautiful and everybody admires it. My scalp is always clean." Mrs. S. Dingle, Jacksonville Fla., Oct. 15, 1909.

STOLE 20,000 LIRE FROM MOTHER AND HAD HILARIOUS TIME WITH RAGPICKERS.

Florence, September 15.—Society is buzzing over the extraordinary adventures of the 15-year-old son of Lady Brabazon, who occupies a sumptuous residence here, where she has a foremost position in society. The son coolly appropriated twenty thousand lire from his mother and made off, escorted by three rag-pickers. The four arrived at Leghorn, where they put-up at the best hotel. During four days they led a hilarious life. The quartette meanwhile increased their party to the extent of four females. The police became suspicious of them and watched the hotel where they were staying. Lady Brabazon eventually learned the whereabouts of her son. His companions, male and female, were arrested and placed in jail, having spent some ten thousand lire, while the scion of a noble house was hauled back to Florence. The ragpickers and the women were imprisoned on the charge of immorality and leading an English youth into temptation.

Wanted the Name of Being Millionaire.

Adolph Rothbarth, Hop Importer, Held in Default of Bail for Misrepresenting Assets.

SO EASY TO GET LOANS "HABIT GREW ON HIM."

Proved "Lamb" in Wall Street, He Says, and Wase Quickly Shorn.

SAYS HE HAS "SIMPLE TASTES."

Obtained $130,000 From One Bank When Assets Only Reached to $20,000.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—"I wanted to be a millionaire. I found I could get large sums of money from the banks easily and I got them. Then I speculated in Wall Street in the hope of realizing my dream of wealth. I was a lamb and was shorn. I am now at the end of my rope. I am willing to expiate my crime. I hope they will send me away quickly, so that it may soon be over."

Dejected and morose, Adolph Rothbarth, the hop importer, of No. 26 Whitehall street, under arrest on the specific charge of getting $10,000 from the Mercantile National Bank by grossly misrepresenting his assets, bewailed his fate in his cell in the Tombs to-day.

"I did not want to be a millionaire for the sake of living in luxury," he added. "I have simple tastes. I merely wanted to have the money and the reputation of being a millionaire. I thought I was experienced enough to speculate wisely. The panic was practically my undoing."

HELD IN $20,000.

Rothbarth is held in the Tombs in default of $20,000 bail. According to the police, lawyers and Rothbarth himself, several hundred thousand dollars figure in his transactions with banks. At one time he obtained a loan of $130,000 from one bank when his assets were less than $20,000. When the note matured he paid the money in order to avoid suspicion and to keep his credit good.

Rothbarth's operations were discovered through his own carelessness when he tried to establish a new line of credit at the institution from which he borrowed the $130,000.

After making a statement as to his assets and liabilities to one bank in applying for a loan he failed to make a copy of it. This document was submitted to the Liberty National Bank, and by this institution was compared with another statement made to the Mercantile National Bank, with which he had been doing business.

There was a wide variance in the items and the amounts in the two statements because of the inability of Rothbarth to remember what he had put in the first statement, and when the credit men of the two banks compared notes suspicion fell upon the importer and he was confronted with the facts. After vainly attempting to explain the discrepancies on the plea of bad bookkeeping, and after an examination of his books had disclosed the actual condition of affairs, he admitted the deception practiced, according to the District Attorney, and said he was willing to take the consequences.

BANKS NOT WORRYING.

According to Mr. Frederick B. Schenck, of the Liberty National Bank, Rothbarth owes that institution about $75,000, and, according to Mr Willis G. Nash, president of the Mercantile National Bank, Rothbarth owes to that institution "an uncovered balance of about $34,000." The National Park Bank had done business with Rothbarth, but has closed out the account and Rothbarth did not owe a cent there.

Neither of the banks affected by the dealings of Rothbarth is in fear of not being able to get the money he owes it. Rothbarth was the American representative of his three brothers, Justus, Leopold and Martin, who do business as Rothbarth & Co. in London, Frankfort and other European cities. The firm has been established more than thirty-five years in Europe. It is rated at more than a million dollars, and from this firm the banks are confident of getting every dollar due.

A Record to be Attempted In Belleville To-night

In an interview with Mr. Bert Swan at the Griffin's opera house, the Intelligencer man learned some astounding facts regarding this man's astonishing feats in and under the water.

It seems that four years ago, that the now manager of Griffin's, Mr. Hurley, was managing the Hopkins Theatre in Memphis, Tenn., and at this theatre Mr. Swan broke the world's record for remaining under water.

Mr. Swan, who is duly appreciative of the courteous treatment extended to him, and of the great expense incurred by the manager, states that to night at the second performance he will endeavor to duplicate his performance and remain under water for three minutes.

To insure the patrons of the theatre against any possible trickery, a committee from the audience will be invited to step on the stage and witness at close range this marvellous feat.

The Milliner.

(D. B. Van Buren, in Chicago Record-Herald.)

How doth the little milliner
  Concort each costly hat
And gather sheckles all the day,
  Until your purse is flat.

How nobly she charges you,
  For ribbons by the mile,
To decorate confections,
  In the best Parisian style.

Who ever knew her miss a chance
  A gorgeous plume to fit
In just the proper spot to shove
  The total up a bit?

And then with that sublime aplomb
  She pens her little bill,
That starts you on the pathway to
  The poorhouse on the hill.

No doubt but old King Solomon
  Thought of her when he spoke
About the marked rapidity
  With which the fool goes broke.

So aptly doth the milliner
  The Scriptures justify,
By parting in her wondrous way
  The dollars from the guy.

A Tonic-Stimulant

The active business man, the brain worker, and all this class of people could not stand the constant strain on their brain and nerves were it not for the timely use of a pure, gentle invigorating tonic.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

It has been extolled throughout the world for what is has done for suffering humanity. Its success in curing disease has caused many unreliable dealers to put up substitutes and imitations with which to fool the people claiming that their substitutes are "just as good as Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey," but they are thinking of their profits only. Insist on the genuine. Sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY. All liquor merchants, or direct, $1.25 a large bottle. Medical booklet and doctor's davice free.

PANDORA RANGE

for Coal or Wood

HAVE you seen the Perfect Spring Door on the warming closet? It is the newest Pandora feature.

The ordinary door, when opened, is inside the warming closet and takes up valuable space.

But the Perfect Spring Door, when opened, is entirely outside of the warming closet. By being outside it adds two inches to the height of the space inside the closet. That extra space provides room for fourteen more dinner or dessert plates. The door cannot drop down and smash the dishes because the spring holds the door up out of the way until you desire to close it.

The Perfect Spring Door is a convenience worth having. There are more than a score of other conveniences on the Pandora. Our Pandora booklet tells about them. Send for a copy.

The ...Veiled Lady...

now a la chasse! Mees sabel, cette belle et bonne.—gone! She has just sent me fifty francs by Monsieur Duprez! Ange de ciel!" apostrophized the saddened veteran, emptying his glass.

"And the maid of 'Mees Isabel?'"

"Gone to join her a la campagne!" No amount of Beaune or Nuits could further unlock the soldier's tongue.

In desperation, the heart-weary brother finally sought Duprez. "Mees Isabel! la jolie Americaine! Ah! oui! en voyage! She is delicate!" said the maestro, gazing at Seaton, with his little cunning round eyes. "Perhaps she will return in the fall and winter! Who knows? A marvel of talent and beauty! Voila tout!" And Beverly Seaton was fain to be contented with this.

Letters from Maxwell told him of his exciting cavalry scouts on the Platte, among the Cheyenne "Dog soldiers," and all his adventures while dodging the implacable Sioux. "You would not know Jack Gordon, though,—Beverly; he is a changed man, a misanthrope, but the best First Lieutenant of Cavalry in the service."

Finally, two months later, came a brief letter from Jack Gordon himself. It breathed the old friendship, with a tinge of new sadness. "Write me some time, Beverly," he said. "I am, (like all my comrades,) fighting a savage foe; invisible when we pursue him, almost invincible when we meet him! My heart is heavy, and I don't care when I am knocked over. But you must not forget me. If we ever meet at Belvoir, it will be the same old Cor Unum, Viæ Diversæ! The latch string hangs out for you."

Seaton's eyes were moist when he laid down this short letter. "Life between close friends seems to be only an exchange of heart breaks!" said the embittered Virginian. "Thank God! Maxwell's horizon is clear." For even in his own sorrow Beverly Seaton thought kindly of his two friends. Yet over his care-worn mind came back memories of a gracious and loving mother, his venerable father, and once more the breezes of the blue Shenandoah Mountains played upon his brow! —Cooped up in Paris, face to face with a gnawing grief,—following his self-devoted quest to find the Lost Heiress of Seaton Hall, it seemed to him that he could drop his tired head upon the early roses blooming in his far-away home on his mother's grave, and die with no regret for a wasted life.

Yet onward, ever onward, like the Wandering Jew, he was forced by Fate! "Must I guard, guide, protect, or punish? should I ever meet the lost one?" he wondered; his heart had no answer ready. Seaton was kept "on guard" by the watchful kindness of Baptiste. Beverly,—now a bitter skeptic of all men's friendship,—closely eyed the disconsolate habitues of the Cercle. Sadly did they mourn the once nightly duels of "ce brave Jenks" and the Austrian magnate, for Max Stahrenstein came not again. Baron de Brissac waited vainly, and finally took to absinthe and the figurantes. Col. Henry Pelham fled away on his travels, and Fenton Dennis threatened to leave Paris and go yachting on a mysterious trip, a la Marco Polo!—This was strenuously vetoed by acclamation!

"Baptiste! have you any news of Mr. Jenks?" said Seaton, sharply, one evening as the head steward carefully inspected the Virginian's dinner.

"He will be here in three weeks!" said the servant, taken off his guard.

"Then he writes you?" Seaton said quietly.

"Oh, yes! Mr. Brayton, I take care of all his things," replied Baptiste, with a sullen brow. He was caught napping, for once!

On the terrace at Schloss Stahrenstein, (while Beverly Seaton was idly chafing in Paris,) the moonlight streamed down on tower and gateway, silvering the old castle with its magic rays. Out of the linden grove, the birchen woods, and the dark, rustling pine forest, the tender wail of the nightingale was borne by the night breeze, sweeping down from the Noric Alps. The breath of spring was now touching the meadows and hills. Sparkling blossoms spangled the warmest southern slopes.

"Dame! C'est un chateau magnifique!" said the Tartar Prince Demidoff, (twirling his moustache,) as he chatted with Adolf Stahrenstein, Major of the White Hussars, the gallant and reckless younger brother of the Head of the House. For on a reserved terrace, (a hundred yards away), the great noble was walking with a woman, whose graceful personality was not wholly obliterated by distance.

"Ah!" said Demidoff, "I see why Stahrenstein only pledges us the Guest Cup at dinner. Is this a new fancy?"

Adolf lowered his voice. "Paul! She is the handsomest woman in the world!"

"God alone knows!" said Adolf, "but she makes me quiver when I pass her. Elle est la Reine des Reines! He arrived with her a month ago; that is all I know. You know how coldly unapproachable Max is. I have never referred to this veiled beauty."

"Tres bien!" said Demidoff, dryly; "I envy you your brotherly feeling—and,—and,—your self-control! By the way, how old is Max?" The Tartar Prince was flecking off the heads of the pretty budding plants, with the sword cane he always carried.

"Let us go in and have a hand at picquet!" said Adolf, gazing on the outspread glories of Schloss Stahrenstein. "How old is your brother Max?" The query rang in the Hussar's ears again. The princely home; the Stahrenstein millions; and,—that queenly woman!—"This were Paradise then!" thought wild Adolf, as he cut a fresh pack of cards and laughed back at teasing Demidoff. "Allons!" he cried gaily.

Among the lindens, the Prince of Furstenfeld was softly pleading! On his arm, a nervous woman leaned, quivering in the excitement of desperation.

"I offer you my heart, my love, my home, my last drop of blood, Isabel! but I cannot offer you my name! Have I not proved my devotion?" The diamond flash from her eyes in the moonlight, made the proud Austrian tremble. He was too imperative.

"Yes! Count Stahrenstein! but I do not think it generous of you to remind me of it now! Am I not in your power? The caged bird may forget to sing!" He winced.

"You are right. I crave your pardon!"

She wheeled in the silver moonlight and grasped him by the wrists. "I, too, have a name! I have a sad life to leave behind me. Will you do as I bid? Will you close the door on my stormy past? Will you?" Her nervous fingers almost met in his arm.

"I will, if it takes my life!" He was drunk with the magic witchery of her beauty.

"Listen," she slowly said. "I must die. I must never be heard from again! Show me a road to rolling the stone on my past,—and—"

"What?" he eagerly exclaimed.

"I am then yours forever, till death parts us!"

"Explain!" said the princely Master of Stahrenstein.

"I must have a certificate of the death and burial of a woman whom you do not know! When that is done,—one month later, you can claim me—everything!"——

"My God! What do you mean?" cried Max. And all the haughty Count saw, was the glimmer of a ghostly figure among the trees, as Irene Gordon sought her eyrie.

The Prince of Stahrenstein pledged Demidoff, with glowing exultation, under his ancestral shield in the great wassail hall of the Schloss! As he sought his pillow, he murmured: "I must seal the tomb of the Past, before the Veiled Venus is mine!"

"Letters, one registered, Mr. Gordon," said the orderly, as he tapped judiciously at the quarters of the ranking First Lieutenant of the Seventh Cavalry at Fort Hays, two days before the regiment would again take up its unwearied "march to the field;" for the wild summer roses were now peeping forth.

"Thanks! O'Brien!" said Gordon; and when the door was closed, he pounced on them with the eagerness of a wolf. One was a heavy, legal document, covered with quaint scrawls and weighted down with Italian stamps. The other was a brief letter bearing the stamp of "Drexel, Harjes & Co., Bankers, Paris." Jack Gordon locked his door and tore open the heavy document, which first caught his eye. As he burst the strong linen, something fell on the floor at his feet. He picked it up. It was the sapphire and diamond ring he had given his wife. The wife of a week.

Touching the spring, he revolved the picture. Gazing at himself in the glass, he muttered, "Twenty years older now!" as he mechanically closed the fatal jewel. With a beating heart he deciphered the schoolboy English of the Italian Syndic. He read hastily, and threw down one official document after another. His burning eyes were glued upon the papers:—

"Isabel Percy, a beautiful American, dead, in a little village of Venetia!" Flames darted across his vision. The Syndic, Priest, and all minor officials concurred in the proces-verbal. The address of Lieut. John Gordon, Seventh Cavalry, U.S.A., was the only token of her identity. The body was buried with the due ries of the church: and as Jack Gordon reeled under the blow, he knew not that Max Stahrenstein, (an Austrian conqueror,) was yet the titulary Lord of Campoformio.)

Tearing open the bankers' letter, the maddened man read that no one had ever applied for any letters for Miss Isabel Percy, and that no drafts or money had been used on her account. It was signed: "Drexel, Harjes & Co., Paris." It asked for instructions in the future.

Grasping the mass of papers, Gordon sprang up to lock them in his trunk. One fell out of the Italian enclosures,—it was the unused letter of credit of his lost wife. "Dead," he hoarsely murmured, "dead!" He locked the campaign valise, and dropped his head upon his hands. He gazed vacantly around. Suddenly the Cavalry bugle rang out clear and shrill. "Yes! Yes! I must be there!" he muttered, as he seized his accoutrements.

"Five minutes to parade! Mass' Jack!" cried Jackson from the "lean-to" in rear. "You'se hoss is here, Sah!" Gordon mechanically donned his trappings and galloped to his place in front of K troop of the "Four Dead Captains."

When "Garry Owen" was sounded off, Gordon rode to the front, and before his quarters gave us his steed. Jackson, coming in with an extra bonne bouche, found him lying senseless on the floor. Surgeon Selfridge, (as officers of the Seventh crowded around), said:

"Well, Gentlemen! It is brain fever, if nothing worse! I have been fearing this! This man has been going slowly mad!"

Three weeks later, steadfast Molly O'Brien, the good wife of Sergeant Gavan O'Brien, held the young man's burning hands, as his eyes roved over her face, and he raved in fever:

"They have killed her! My darling! Dead! Dead! Far from me! Far away!"

"God's mercy be on us!" cried the pious Irishwoman. "It's a quare world we live in! An' Gavan that followed yer father on his charge at Buena Vista! Dead is it! More's the pity!" Stout Molly O'Brien had recourse to her blue gingham apron, which might have been proudly borne as a guidon of the fighting "Seventh."

DEFEAT A SORE BLOW.

Botha Badly Shaken When He Hears of Result.

Johannesburg, South Africa, Sept. 17.—The position of the parties, as a result of the first election for the Parliament of United South Africa, is now:

Nationalists,	52.
Unionists,	36.
Labor,	4.
Independents,	10.

A report that Rt. Hon. Louis Botha will resign the Premiership is unconfirmed. For several minutes after the confirmation of his defeat at the poll, Botha, who is not strong, was speechless and livid.

Minister of Commerce Moor is defeated, making three Ministers down. Nationalists are in consternation at the results of the elections.

The fear that extremists will rule is probably dealt a death blow.

The Unionist majorities are large, and 16 or 17 seats in the Orange Free State have gone solidly Unionist. The state will probably refuse to support the Government except on its own terms. Each man is pledged to extend Hertzogism.

Alex. McBain and John W. Bruce of the local plumbers and steamfitters union left yesterday for St. Paul, Minn., to attend the information convention of their union. Two important subjects will be discussed: the establishment of a defence fund and increased death benefits.

Flax Scarce.

Montreal, Que., Sept. 17.—"Never in the history of the trade have the wholesale paint manufacturers been called upon to face such a serious problem as now confronts them in the shortage of their principal raw stuff, turpentine," was the statement made yesterday in an interview with C. C. Ballentyne, managing director of the Canadian division of the Sherwin-Williams' Paint & Varnish Co. The chief cause of the scarcity and corresponding high prices of paint was, Mr. Ballantyne explained, not so much due to the failure of the flax seed harvest as it was to the total inadequacy of the crop to meet the enormously increased demand for the commodity under discussion.

At Fort William the price of flax yesterday was $2.53 a bushel, exactly $1 a bushel more than it was a year ago. Paints have increased in price about 25 per cent. this year.

Aged Man Kills Himself.

Beamsville, Ont., Sept. 17.—Having suffered from bodily ailments for many years, Robert Russ, 76 years of age, put a 32-calibre revolver to his head and blew out his brains. When found he still clutched the revolver in his hand.

Mr. Russ belonged to an old and well-known family in the Niagara Peninsula and has three brothers living. The dead man had made a mint of money in his day and died wealthy. Various operations he had undergone slightly unhinged his mind. He had been four years in Dayton, O., until recently,

French Want Their Language.

Windsor, Sept. 17.—French-Canadians of Essex County are greatly agitated over an order recently made known from Bishop Fallon whereby he will try to stop the French language being taught in the Catholic schools in this city.

A meeting of all the French societies in Essex County will be held at Tecumseh, and a formal protest against the bishop's action will be made.

Laurier Goes Home.

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier went down to Quebec yesterday morning on business and will to-day go on to Athabascaville to spend a few days at his old home with Lady Laurier. He will return to Ottawa on Wednesday next.

By that time Hon. W. S. Fielding will be back.

Two Section Men Killed.

Lyn, Ont., Sept. 17.—George East, aged 50, and David Graham, aged 28, employed as trackmen on the Lyn section of the Grand Trunk Railway, were struck while working on the track near Lyn station about seven o'clock yesterday morning by a freight train and instantly killed. There was a heavy fog.

Duck Hunting Accident.

Smith's Falls, Sept. 17.—Allan McCollum, youngest son of Dr. McCollum of this place, was the victim of a gunning accident yesterday. With a companion named McKoone, he started out in a boat in quest of duck. Pulling the gun by the muzzle, it discharged, shattering the left wrist.

McLachlan House Scorched.

Uxbridge, Sept. 17.—The frame house in which Mrs. Archie McLachlan and her two children were done to death by husband and father, was discovered on fire again last night and considerable damage done. The house had been repaired and was ready for occupation.

An Object of Pity

That part of our nature which we call the emotional is much more highly developed in women than in men. They are more sensitive, more tender, more sympathetic, more pronounced in their likes and dislikes, more susceptible to the extremes of pleasure and pain; and these refined mental qualities, no less than beauty of form and feature, make up the atmosphere of attractiveness and charm which always surrounds true womanliness.

The continued existence of these winning, engaging womanly characteristics depends to a very large extent on the regularity of the womanly functions and the condition of the womanly organs; and when these functions and organs become disordered or diseased the same mental qualities which are the glory of a well woman become the source of suffering and torture almost indescribable. Her cheery hopefulness is changed to a feeling of despondency, almost of despair, and she is haunted with forebodings of worse evils to come. Instead of being entertaining and companionable, she becomes moody and irritable, being unable to keep her mind from dwelling on her troubles. She becomes morbidly sensitive, imagining that she is being slighted or forsaken by her relatives and friends and she has a most humiliating sense of her miserable condition and of her loss of her womanly attributes. If she is religiously inclined she is very liable to be oppressed with doubts and fears in regard to her spiritual condition, or to think that she is eternally lost. In addition to this, she has also to endure the most distressing aches and pains.

What makes the case still more pitiable, especially with married women, is the fact that few men understand or appreciate the extent of their suffering, or the seriousness of the troubles causing it. Many doctors even speak of these disorders as subjects for ridicule, and the poor sufferer often gets a reputation for being a crank or a scold when she more nearly approaches being a martyr.

As these disorders are due to a disordered condition of the womanly organs, it is evident that to effect a cure these organs must be restored to normal condition; or, in other words, the circulation, which has become congested and stagnant in these parts, must be improved so that the waste matter will be expelled, and the nourishment so badly needed be brought to these suffering organs. It is the waste matter, or broken down tissue, which is held in the stagnant blood vessels in these parts, that causes most of the suffering by oppressing the nerves located in these parts.

The remedy known as ORANGE LILY will positively relieve this congestion and restore normal circulation in the disordered organs. It is an applied or local treatment, and acts wholly on these parts. It is absorbed into the blood vessels in these organs, and as it has powerful antiseptic properties, it immediately acts on the waste matter held there, and causes it to be discharged. As this dead matter is discharged the nerves are relieved, the pains and mental troubles become less, and the nerves and blood vessels become stronger. ORANGE LILY thus proves its merit by actual, visible results. It acts as certainly and as positively on all female troubles as anti-toxin does on diphtheria.

Winnipeg, April 25th, 1909.

Dear Mrs. Currah,—I am very grateful to ORANGE LILY for the change it has made in my life. When I commenced its use eight months ago I felt I would be surely insane before the year was ended. The pain I suffered often made me wish for death, and besides I would have such fits of depression and nervous twitching that I would have to scream. I had doctored with three different doctors for over two years, and had also used both the Pierce and Pinkham medicines, but none of them seemed to reach my case. I felt some improvement after the first month's use of ORANGE LILY and have kept gaining ever since. I do not feel that I am entirely cured yet, but I am so much better than I was that I am sure I will soon be entirely well. I sleep well, and feel cheerful and happy, except that I am occasionally somewhat depressed, but these spells are getting fewer and milder. I have also noticeably improved in appearance. Enclosed find $2 for which please send me two boxes of ORANGE LILY and one of Cerate Massage. I might add that the matter which used to be freely discharged, and which looked like a chicken's gizzard, is becoming very scant, and I imagine that the circulation is pretty well restored. Am I not right in this? Your sincere friend, MRS. L. E. A.

Free to all Sufferers

In order to enable every woman suffering from any form of female disorders to test the merits of ORANGE LILY, I will send to everyone who will send me her address, or the address of any suffering friend enough of the remedy for ten days' treatment, absolutely free. As this is worth 25c, it is only because I know that it must give relief that I make this free trial offer. Further, if any woman wishes expert medical advice, and will write me a full description of her case, I will submit same to the staff of the Coonley Medical Institute, Detroit, Mich., and they will write her direct without expense to her. Dynamite Outrage.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—A dynamite explosion wrecked the main entrance and blew out every pane of glass in the general office building of the Winslow Bros.' Co., iron manufacturers, at West Harrison street, and South Forty Sixth avenue, Thursday night. Nobody was injured.

The concussion was felt for a mile distant.

The police regard it significant that the bomb was placed directly under the centre of the pattern shop, and that 25 union pattern makers severed their connection with the firm about three weeks ago.

To Tell the Ghost.

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 17.—Despatches received yesterday from Tokio tell of a unique telegram sent by the Governor-General of Korea, instructing young Prince Ito to inform his late father's spirit that annexation had been completed.

A special envoy will be sent to the grave, according to custom, to read the proclamation to the ghost of the departed.

"Get Your Man And All is Got."

—Carlyle.

Comments on the S. S. Lesson, by Evangeline. Sept. 18. Matt. 22:15-16.

Think of the grit He showed in stepping out of a carpenter shop without reputaion, influence or wealth and publicly declaring that He was the King who would henceforth rule from heaven. People were amazed at such boldness and called Him the prince of devils, but He was not in the least disconcerted by it.

He had a passion for reality and denounced their hyprocrisy to their face. He never went behind their back to do it. He knew they were an organized confederacy to capture Him, but He feared nothing. It did not seem to have cost Him a quiver to chase the whole gang of hucksters helter skelter out of the temple. Without a tremor He carried the war into the very centre of the enemy's ranks when He uttered His judgments of destruction of themselves, their temple and their city.

He simply broke loose from a dead, unreal, formal ritualism, and substituted a free, unconventional, real, living evangelism.

From the moment they had challenged Him as to His authority for turning things upside down in the temple the only part they had taken was to find a verdict against themselves.

He had denounced them in the parable of the vineyard for failing to meet their responsibilities and told them that the kingdom would be taken from them. He denounced them again for refusing to accept the Gospel invitation and said that none of them would taste of His marriage feast and they had nothing to say for themselves. They were dumbfounded. At length they sought by cross questioning to ensnare Him.

Observe the unmanliness of the organized gang in verse 16. "Master we know Thou are true and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest Thou for any man. Tell us is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar?"

Listen to the hypocrites as they seek by flattery to draw Him out. His answer leaves them with absolutely nothing to take hold of and the gang once more is silenced.

Then came the Sadduces (the rationalists who did not believe in the resurrection) with an absurd question which they wished to present in as absurd a light as possible.—There were with us seven brothers, who were married in turn to a certain woman who died. In the resurrection whose wife will she be?

He showed that they were a pretty lot of theologians who didn't know their own Scriptures.

Job knew there was a resurrection, so did Ezekiel, so did Daniel. He pointed out that their case had no bearing whatever on the doctrine of the resurrection because there is no marriage in heaven. The joys of the life beyond the grave are pure and spiritual and arise from the marriage of all to the bridegroom and not to one another.

The rationalistic gang, having failed the ritualists, or the Pharisees, once more confer together and decide to secure the services of a clever lawyer to drive Him, if possible, into a corner. Their plan was carefully thought out. It was to ask Him a question which would compel Him to admit that some of the commandments were of greater importance than others and then charge Him with lowering moral standards.

Again He used the sword which is the Word of God in a way to gain victory over His enemies.

Yes, they tried to get Him entangled in politics in denouncing the system of taxation. They tried to get Him entangled in theology and in law, but they had yet to learn that before them stood A MAN "four square to every wind that blew." A man who had come into the world with a purpose and who couldn't be sidetracked. He had come to solve the problem of the world's greatest need. The Romans in His day sought its solution in force, just as Russia is doing to-day. What humanity needs, they said, is a government strong enough to compel men to obey the law and all will be well. The church afterwards sought the solution in religion, and imposed a ceremonialism which, defeating its purpose, produced infidels. The State sought it is in education and better environment, but Jesus Christ though recognizing the importance of government, of law, of education, of environment saw that the solution of the problem of humanity was new men—twice born men. To Him sin was the root and branch of human misery. Get humanity saved from sin and the problem of the world's greatest need is solved. From start to finish, He kept to His point in revealing God to man and in bringing man back to God.

Robert Speer says: "Life is like a stream in which all things that are dead drift down and only those things work up that possess the power of decisive resistance. Men are caught in the current of weakness of will, the current of sin, the current of cowardice, the current of selfishness and lacking the faculty of quick, sharp, decisiveness, are swung away from the moorings and drift before the will is awake and the resistant forces can be summoned into activity." But the Son of Man never.

"Ecce Homo."

WHAT A GLORIOUS TONE!

When famous pianists and great singers come to Canada, their first consideration is the choice of a piano.

When they hear the New Scale Williams, their natural exclamation is "What a glorious tone!"

As a consequence, the leading artists of the old and new world use the New Scale Williams on their Canadian tours.

The favorite of musicians is likewise the favorite in the homes. In every part of the Dominion, the New Scale Williams Piano is held in highest esteem.

If there is a new piano to be bought this season, see the New Scale Williams at Warerooms of J. T. Warren.

A Pawnbroker's Auction.

A deaf man coming into the auction room while a sale is in progress might believe that the auctioneer is an automaton, for he stares straight before him with seemingly unseeing eyes, his lips moving ceaselessly and rapidly and with machine-like motion, which continues for many minutes at a time apparently without a pause for breath, while his cheeks are fluttering like the flanks of a spent horse. The auctioneer's profit is in a commission, and, as his commission is the greater according as his sales are more, it is to his interest to keep things moving at top speed, for the property he is selling is of too little value to make delay worth while on the chance of running up the price of any single article.

"Number 396—gold-filled case, Swiss movement" (the use of the nominative "watch" is superfluous), cries the attendant at the show case, passing the article toward the auctioneer "Five dollars, four dollars, three dollars, two dollars, one dollar," is the form of that functionary's chant, beginning at a top price and running it down until it is accepted by a bidder, when it may be run up aga However, the auctioneer of unredeemed pledges is not so prodigal of time and vocal effort as to use the entire word "dollar," or to make two syllables of his numerals. Philology and articulation are sacrificed to celerity Six to eight are the only two numbers he pronounces in full. He says ni for nine, sev for seven, fi for five fo for four, tit for three, tee for two, and dee for dollar; and employs the old New York shillings—twelve and a half cents—in the verbal subdivision of the dollar, not only to reduce syllable confusion, but to prevent the raising of bids less than twenty-five cents at a time. Thus a dollar and a quarter becomes dol-tee; a dollar and a half, dol-fo; and a dollar and seventy-five cents, dol-six. Likewise bids must advance at least twenty-five cents at a time, since an advance of twelve and a half cents is out of the question, and such advances as five, ten or twenty cents are impossible. Articles of every trifling value are occasionally bidden up in cents, to be sure, but the necessity does not often occur. — Frank Marshall White in Harper's Weekly.

Kindness Pays.

A beautiful German story relates how one day a little girl, named Jeannette, witnessed a great army review. Thousands upon thousands of spectators crowded around the stand, before which the emperor was to watch the passing regiments. While Jeannette was seated in the stand, she saw an old, feeble woman trying hard to get where she could see. The little German girl said to herself, "It is not right for me to sit here, when I am strong and well and can stand while that poor, feeble old woman can see nothing. I ought to honor old age as I want some one to honor me when I am old." Then she gave up her seat to the old woman, and went and stood in the crowd. But while Jeannette was standing upon her tiptoes, trying in vain to see, a courtier of the emperor, covered with gold lace, elbowed his way to her side, as he said "Little girl, her majesty would be pleased to see you in the royal box." When the abashed child stood before the empress, she graciously said, "Come here, my daughter, and sit with me. I saw you give up your seat to that old woman, and now you must remain by my side." So God honors those who honor his servants, and no act of kindness will go unrewarded.

Awful Waste of Beer.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 16—A vat of a brewery here collapsed yesterday while workmen were repairing its foundation. The vat contained 18,000 gallons of beer, which poured through the streets. The workmen were caught in the rush and were rescued with difficulty from drowning. The beer found an outlet in the sewer, which showed a head of over three feet when it discharged the "suds" into the Maumee River.

"I HONESTLY BELIEVE 'FRUIT-A-TIVES'

The Greatest Cure For Rheumatism In The World"

KNOWLTON, QUE., Oct. 12th. 1909.

"For many years, I suffered from severe Rheumatism, and the attacks were very distressing and prevented me from doing my ordinary work. I tried many remedies and physicians' treatments, but nothing seemed to do me much good, and I was becoming very anxious for fear I would become a permanent cripple from the disease.

I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and this medicine has entirely cured me and I honestly believe it is the greatest Rheumatism cure in the world."

E. R. MILLS.

Such a statement could not be bought from a man like Mr. Mills. He thinks too much of his good name, to sell it or sign it to an untruth. Mr. Mills tried "Fruit-a-tives" after all other treatment failed—and "Fruit-a-tives" cured him of Rheumatism. In the goodness of his heart, he wrote the above letter in order that sufferers in all parts of Canada would know that there is one remedy that actually does cure Rheumatism. This testimonial was entirely unsolicited on our part. We did not know that Mr Mills was taking "Fruit-a-tives" until we received the above letter.

It is a case like Mr. Mills' that proves the marvellous powers of "Fruit-a-tives" in arresting and curing disease. It may be stated, without fear of contradiction, that "Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure Rheumatism when properly used.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices and is the greatest Rheumatism cure known to modern science.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. Sold by all dealers or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Crippen's Victim Was Poisoned.

THE PRISONER PALED AS THE DAMAGING TESTIMONY WAS GIVEN—ANOTHER PATHOLOGIST ADMITS THAT THERE IS NO WAY OF DEFINITELY IDENTIFYING FLESH AS THAT OF MAN OR WOMAN.

London, Sept. 16.—Dr. H. H. Crippen entered the court room to-day for the resumption of his trial on the charge of murdering his wife, Belle Elmore, the actress, buoyed up by the belief that to-day's proceedings might see the Government's case entirely shattered.

He nodded cheerfully to several acquaintances as he came up the aisle of the court room and smiled encouragingly at Ethel Clare Leneve, the beautiful typist, jointly accused with him in the murder charge. It was evident from the physician's demeanor that he was greatly cheered by the points in his favor brought out at the last session of the trial when the Government's expert witnesses testified that it was impossible to tell the sex of the remains found in the cellar of Crippen's residence or the manner in which death had been inflicted.

Crippen Was Alert.

Crippen entered into an animated whispered conversation with his counsel, Arthur Newton, as soon as they took their seats. Dr. H. Spilsburg, an eminent English pathologist, was the first witness called to-day. He testified that he had made a microscopic examination of the remains found in the cellar of the Crippen home.

He was asked if he found a scar tallying with one upon the body of Mrs. Cora Crippen, which had been caused by an operation for appendicitis.

Dr. Spilsburg admitted that he had found a mark upon a portion of flesh which greatly resembled the scar left by a surgeon's knife, but he could not tell what portion of the body the flesh had come from.

Crippen evidently looked upon this as another point in his favor, for he glanced exultantly in the direction of the Crown's prosecutor.

Women Out in Force.

Despite the fact that indications pointed to the introduction of testimony of the same gruesome kind which featured the last session of the trial, there was a great crush about Bow street before court opened. Even before Sir Albert de Rutzen, the Chief Magistrate, arrived women were pushing and crowding about the threshold of the court room. The usual crowd was present, some of it attired in the finery of Paris creations, others dressed in shabby garments. The brilliance of many of the women's costumes added a striking dash of color to the otherwise sombre little court room.

Fair Typist Was Pale.

Miss Leneve seemed but little interested in the scene about her. She was pale and tense, straining every nerve to follow the testimony, and occasionally looking toward Crippen as if appealing for support when a point was scored by the Government.

A matron attended her. She bowed her head against the scrutiny of the women spectators, many of whom stared at her unceasingly during the whole of the session.

The exultation of Crippen and his counsel could scarcely be restrained when Spilsbury reluctantly admitted that there was no way of telling whether the human flesh found was that of a woman or a man.

Link to Free Crippen.

Mr. Newton declared that this was another strong link in the chain which must eventually free both Crippen and Miss Leneve.

Dr. Wilcox, who had made analytic tests, testified that he had found traces of arsenic. He declared that in his opinion the mark found on the piece of flesh, mentioned in the testimony of the preceding witness was from an old scar.

The witness said he had analyzed specimens of the soil taken from the cellar of Crippen's Hilldrop Crescent home and also the carbolic powder and the sanitary fluid which had been scattered over the remains.

He said that while he had made tests to discover the presence of prussic acid, mineral poisons, and arsenic, he found traces of arsenic, getting only negative results in the other cases.

Jacket Buried With Body.

Dr. Wilcox testified that he had found the jacket of a pair of pajamas buried with the body.

Subsequently, he testified, detectives found the trousers matching the jacket in a trunk in Crippen's sleeping apartments. There were introduced in court as evidence and marked as an exhibit.

A telling point against the defence came at this juncture, when Dr. Wilcox made the flat declaration that the person whose remains were dug up in the cellar died of hyoscin poisoning.

"More than half a grain of hyoscin was found in the remains," said Dr. Wilcox, "considerably more than is necessary to cause death."

Crippen paled as this damaging testimony was given and a deathlike stillness prevailed in the court room. Miss Leneve gave one glance at Crippen and bowed her head on her arms.

Case Adjourned Again.

The Crippen case has been adjourned until next Wednesday.

PRIMATE OF ENGLAND.

Dr. Lang Is the Youngest Archbishop Since the Middle Ages.

Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of York and Primate of England, is not only the youngest archbishop in Great Britain, but the youngest who has been raised to that dignity in that country since the Middle Ages. He is the son of Principal Lang, of Aberdeen University, who has acted with distinction as moderator of the Church of Scotland and as president of the Council of Presbyterian Churches. The son left Scotland, however, to enter Balliol College at Oxford, where he soon became noted as an athlete, being specially devoted to football. In his studies his interest in sociology and economics naturally led him into the debating field, and he won the honor of being elected president of the renowned Oxford Union, that training ground of so many great Parliamentary leaders. This position may well have been the turning point in his career, for later he was appointed secretary of a committee to investigate social conditions in London's East End.

What he learned by actual observation, combined with his academic interest in social questions, caused him to resolve upon a political career as the most effective way of bringing about the changes he thought were necessary. Soon after leaving Oxford he found that his income could not stand the strain of politics, so he turned to the law and entered the Inner Temple, London, although during the years of his reading there he found time to work for improvement in slum life. His friends naturally enough predicted a brilliant and useful career for him as a barrister, but after he had passed all his examinations he withdrew his name from the list of those to be called to the Bar. He had arrived at a final decision as to his life work and had chosen the ministry.

He soon received an opportunity to put into practice his plans for the betterment of the poor, for he was given charge of the large church at Portsea, near Portsmouth, where he found plenty of work for a dozen curates as well as himself in social service. Merited recognition of his labors came eight years ago, when he was appointed Bishop of Stepney, a district in London including many of the poorest quarters, where as a young student he had first become interested in the social problem.

From this squalid and rocky vineyard he was promoted to the archbishopric of York, where he draws a salary of $50,000 a year.

Irving's Magnanimity.

The changes of fortune place people sometimes in peculiar and embarrassing positions. A good story is told of the late Sir Henry Irving, the famous actor. When a young man, earning his laurels and comparatively unknown, Shakespeare's play, "Much Ado About Nothing," was about to be presented to the public by a certain manager of prominence. Irving had a part assigned to him, which he diligently studied. Letter-perfect in his lines, he felt assured of ultimate success, but, unfortunately, the manager disliked his acting of it, and took occasion to censure him before the company much to his mortification. Furthermore, the manager took his part away, and gave him another, less prominent, but more difficult.

Years went by, and Irving steadily climbed to a fame which brought him knighthood while the critical manager gradually lost ground. One day, shortly after Irving announced his intention of producing "Much Ado About Nothing," the old manager presented himself and asked that a part be assigned to him. Irving granted the request, and gave him the very part he had forced him to play years before. During rehearsal Irving narrowly watched the manager's acting, and at the conclusion went up to him and shook his hand, after gravely complimenting him upon his rendering of the part. Then he promoted him to the part from which he had been reduced. "I never knew what 'coals of fire' meant till then," was the remark which the old actor and manager was overheard to make when Irving retired.

Smallest Typewriter.

A London novelty is a midget typewriter that has been put on the market recently. It is made to look like a watch and is not much bulkier. There is a revolving disk mounted inside of it, and this disk is provided around its edge with rubber type. An indicator on the outside shows what letter is in position to print. The printing itself is done by placing the apparatus on the sheet of paper, turning the disk until the desired letter is in place, and then pushing down on the little stem or knob in the ring.

It is hardly to be expected that this machine will do the work of the best $100 typewriters, but with practice it can be operated with considerable speed and the writing looks very creditable. Many kinds of miniature typewriters have been got up, but this is the "last word" in that line.

English Brass.

The composition of English brass is about seventy parts copper and thirty of zinc. "Prince Rupert's metal" contains 75 to 80 per cent of copper and, on account of its golden color, is employed to some extent in jewelry. The kind of brass called tombac contains still more copper, nearly eighty-five parts in a hundred. It is the alloy used for the manufacture of what is called Dutch metal, an imitation of gold leaf. It can be rolled into sheets, and these can be beaten out till they are only fifty-three thousands of an inch in thickness.—Chambers' Journal

King Caesar.

An outdoor game for boys. Two bases are marked out, one at each of the extreme ends of the playground. The players divide and one party takes possession of each space. One player is "out" and stands in the middle. He is called "King Caesar." The others run to and fro, from boundary to boundary, and it is the business of the king to try and catch them as they pass.

When he catches one he taps him on the head, saying, "I crown thee king." The player thus caught then joins in the capture of the others and the making of more kings till all are caught. When all have been crowned the game may begin over again.

Riddles Answered.

Continued.

ciated nausea, and even vomiting The so-called bilious headache of the old school is generally an ocular headache.

The intimate relation of the nerve supply of the ocular muscles with the fifth, and the association of the latter with the sympathetic and pneumograstic, explain the method of origin of the symptoms.

The ciliary muscle and the external eye muscles, when strained, demand an increased supply of blood which in time leads to congestion This in turn will not be limited to the strained part, but will spread to other parts of the eye, causing the watery red eye already alluded to The pain of "fatigue" is probably due to this congestion, and accounts for the tender eyeballs so common in megrim.

Young Lawyer Is Deep In Big Cases.

J. L. TAUGHER COMES FROM THE NORTH AND MAKES GOOD.

The San Francisco Post says: "J. L. Taugher, whose offices are in the Mills Building, is one of the hard workers of the younger bar. Born in Belleville, Ontario, Canada, he is now an American through and through. Soon after his graduation with honors as a barrister from Osgoode Hall, Toronto, which is the "Lincoln's Inn" of Canada, he heard the call of the West and went to Portland, Ore.

"It was while practicing law in that city that shortly after the fire he realized the opportunities and wonderful future of the metropolis of the coast and decided to cast his lot among us. As in religion the convert is always the most zealous, so the citizen by voluntary adoption is always among the most loyal.

"His theory of the law is that a high ideal, close application and faithful work inevitably bring success.

"At the present time he is connected with some of the most complicated cases in the San Francisco courts. One of these is the now famous Yoell case, in which he is attorney for Mrs. Yoell, the widow of J. Alexander Yoell, who was in his lifetime one of the most prominent lawyers in this part of the State. With his large fortune Yoell willed to his heirs lawsuits almost without end, and although he has now been dead over six years, his will has not yet been probated. The decision in this case will undoubtedly settle the law in California on several controverted points, and the case will take its place among the celebrated cases of California, where litigation over rich mens' estates has always been prolific.

"Frank and courteous, and with the ability to get to the bottom of things, Mr. Taugher is established in the front rank of the younger members of the bar of San Francisco."

Mr. Taugher is a son of Mr. John Taugher, of this city, and studied law in the office of Burdette and Lyons.

Welcomed Their New Physical Director.

With the object of introducing and becoming acquainted with Mr G. J. Sovereign, the newly appointed physical director of the Y.M.C.A., about 40 of the young men who are members of the Association last evening assembled at Mr. J. Wallace's restaurant, where a most pleasant two hours was spent. Mr. E. F. Dickens, chairman of the physical department of the Association work, occupied the chair in a most acceptable manner. After due justice had been done to the toothsome repast provided, a short toast list was carried out.

"The King"—To this toast the Rev. A. M. Hubly, Rector of the Emmanuel Reformed Episcopal Church, replied in a most appropriate manner, referring eloquently to King George, whom all British subjects loved. All should seek to be not only loyal to our beloved earthly king, but also true and loyal to King Jesus. In referring to the new physical director, the reverend gentleman spoke kindly of him and heartily welcomed him to the city. He (the speaker) had no doubt but that Mr. Sovereign's association with the members of the Y.M.C.A. would be beneficial to them. He wished the Association every success.

Mr. D. Bleecker rendered a solo in a most acceptable manner.

"Our New Physical Director."—After Mr. A. Steele had spoken briefly on the past work of the physical department of the Y.M.C.A., Mr. Sovereign was called upon and was heartily received by applause and singing "He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Mr. Sovereign, after thanking those present for the heartiness of the reception accorded him, spoke at some length on the necessity of physical training in connection with Y.M.C.A. work in addition to spiritual training. Physical training assists materially in making an all round manhood. His work in the Association would be more of the corrective nature rather than spectacular. Physical training, he asserted, was necessary not only for boys and young men, but even for men. He then briefly outlined what the nature of the work would be in the Association in the department over which he had been called here to preside. His motto would be for ideal Association work, and he hoped for the hearty co-operation of all members.

"The Boys' Camp."—Mr. R. McCreary responded to this toast in an appropriate manner, detailing what the boys did while in camp and how they enjoyed themselves.

"The Boys' Work for 1911."—Mr. J. A. Marsh replied, briefly outlining a programme that was intended to be carried out during the ensuing year. It was desirous that there should be a vigorous boys' department when the new Y.M.C.A. building was opened, and he asked for the assistance of the present members to help along this work.

"Our Membership."—Mr. A. Betts spoke upon this subject in an encouraging manner. The membership was increasing and would no doubt continue to increase.

Mr. J. L. Hess, the popular and genial Secretary, was called upon and spoke briefly, referring to the proposed new building and the work generally of the Association. He had no doubt but that Mr. Sovereign would be the right man in the right place and would prove to be as capable in his department as was his predecessor, Mr. Wilkes, who is leaving for the West.

A Successful Belleville Old Boy.

An old Belleville boy who is doing well is Rev. J. Wesley McCallum, a former student of Albert College, and now pastor of a vigorous church in Manchester, Mass. Since taking up his residence in the country of Uncle Sam, Mr. MacCallum has undertaken evangelistic work, and also lecture work in addition to the labors of his regular pastorate. For some years he has been travelling as a professional lecturer through all parts of the United States. Mr. MacCallum is now in Canada on a short vacation, and is stopping with his brother at Tweed He was in the city for a brief visit this week renewing old acquaintances and while here Mr. Hess of the Y. M. C. A. discovered him and has persuaded him to address the Y. M. C. A.'s men meeting Sunday afternoon. Mr. MacCallum's old friends here, and his former teachers at Albert College are delighted to learn of his success.

City Officials Will Look for Information

At the meeting of the Public Works Committee of the City Council held on Thursday evening the following resolution prevailed:

Moved by the Mayor that a committee composed of the Mayor, Chairman of Public Works, Ald. Lott and Ald Robinson visit some of the western cities with a view to getting information regarding permanent pavements and report to the Council.—Carried.

Laid to Rest.

Last evening there arrived in this city the remains of the late Mrs. D. C. Markey, aged 74 years, and her son, Edward Markey, aged 29 years. Both died in Syracuse, N. Y., the former on the 14th inst. and the latter on August 19th. The deceased were formerly residents of this city and relatives reside here. This morning after services at St. Michael's church the bodies were laid at rest in St. James' Cemetery.

Supplementary Exams.

Supplementary pass matriculation examinations which have been going on here this week were completed yesterday afternoon. This is the first time that such an examination has taken place here, having previously been conducted in conne [illegible] Universities. Mr. H. J. Clarke, B. A. Inspector, was the presiding examiner and five students wrote.

Whence They Got Their Names

Calico takes its name from Calicut, India; muslin is derived from Mosal a city in Asia; damask from the ancient city of Damascus; cambric got its name from Cambrai, a city of France; gauze from Gaja, a city in Palestine; taffeta is said to be named after a street in Bagdad, where the material was at one time sold; alpaca is the name of the Peruvian animal from whose wool it was made; cashmere was originally made in Thibet in the valley of Cashmere.

The Lady Gay high Shoe for Women, made of Patent leather and Vici Kid, is strictly up-to-date. On sale at Gorman's.

Re City Taxes.

We publish, in part, a statement furnished by Ald. Robinson re the new system of tax collection, which, no doubt, will be interesting reading to those of our citizens interested in municipal affairs:

"Amount of taxes collected on 1910 Tax Roll ending Sept. 1, 1910	$80,489 27
Amount of taxes collected Sept. 1, 1909	80,427 95
Increase of amount collected 1910 over 1909	$ 61 32
Discounts allowed in 1909 on collecting $80,427.95	$ 1,222 41
Amount of interest collected during August on 1910 taxes remaining unpaid after Aug. 1	28 38
Amount of bank interest accrued on 1910 taxes deposited in bank up to Sept. 1	65 00
	$ 1,315 79
Less bank interest incurred on account of change in method of collection in 1910	340 76
Net amount saved to city	$ 975 03

"From the above statement it will be seen that instead of there being a large shrinkage in the amount collected for 1910, as compared with 1909, (as many predicted there would be) there is actually an increase of $61.32, and the amount saved to the corporation by discontinuing the discounts is the snug sum of $975, or nearly one thousand dollars. So, if this method of collecting our taxes is continued, the amount saved each year would go a long way towards paying the yearly interest on the recent $30,000 grant made by the Council to the School Board for the purpose of erecting a fine public school building.

"Now, Mr. Editor, I think that instead of this year's Council deserving to be censured for bringing about this change, all fair minded citizens will feel that that honorable body is worthy of the highest commendation in this particular, at least."

Y.M. C. A. Notes

There will be a meeting for men only in the Palace Theatre to-morrow at 4 p.m., when the speaker will be Rev. Dr. J. W. MacCallum, of Manchester. His subject will be "My Friend the Prodigal." Dr. MacCallum is one of the widely-known men and should be heard. Mr. Wilkes will sing for the last occasion prior to leaving for the West. He will sing on this occasion "The Dream of Paradise."

Mr. Evans of London will speak at the Song Service to-morrow evening at 8.30 o'clock.

A PLANT TO SHUN.

Poison Ivy Should Be Known by All Children.

An excellent service would be done for mankind if the deadly poison ivy could be expunged from our flora, and, according to the opinion of a nature lover, who declares that he is poisoned every time his manual of botany opens at Rhus toxicondendron, the extermination of this poison plant would not be difficult.

The thing that does the work of poisoning is a volatile oil secreted by the leaf. It is insoluble in water, but completely soluble in alcohol and ether. This latter fact offers a possible means of escape to those who are willing to guard against innoculation by taking the necessary means of prevention. Upon returning home from the woods the hands and face should be immediately bathed in a mixture of three parts alcohol to one part ether, and the exposed parts of the body should then be washed with some good strong soap. With ordinary exposure to poison ivy washing with soap and water and rubbing with alcohol and ether will effectually ward off an attack of poisoning, but the safe way is to give the stuff a wide berth at all times.

Every child who goes to the country should be instructed how to tell poison ivy vine and be impressed with the wisdom of keeping away from it. The so called American ivy, or Virginia creeper, is a perfectly harmless plant which is often mistaken for the poison vine. A glance at the accompanying illustration will show the difference between the harmless vine and the vicious one. They are both found in similar situations. The surest way to kill the poison quickly and to prevent its spreading is to bind the affected parts with linen or cotton rags saturated with peroxide of hydrogen.

It hurts like all outdoors for awhile, but within half an hour the bandages may be removed, and the poison will be effectually killed. When the land owners unite to eradicate the miserable poison ivy from the countryside it will be a happy day for those who love the woods and the fields, but dread to go out for fear of being poisoned.

Ornaments.

Persons who wear imitation jewelry, such as bar pins, horseshoes, circles and what not of brilliants or the pretty little sterling silver pins, buttons and buckles should know that nothing is better for cleaning than whiting. Five cents' worth will last for years and used with a ten cent toothbrush will do wonders.

Even the plaited things, or rather the French jewelry which is worn so much and which is supposed to be plaited, but which often turns dark while you look at it, will brighten up and look like new after a good rubbing with whiting.

It is advisable, however, not to wear any piece of jewelry that is made up of brass, for nine-tenths of the so called gold things, either in rose, green or bright finish, are made up of a goodly percentage of this metal, as it will turn green in warm weather, especially if it comes in contact with the skin, so it is better to keep such things for cool days and the winter time.

The little brilliant ornaments, especially if set in silver, also the pieces of sterling silver, look like new and when clean add much to a person's appearance.

Indeed, considering the small cost and the little time it requires, there is no reason in the world why a girl should go around with dirty jewelry.

Acceptable Party Prizes.

Prizes that will surely please are shallow boxes covered with brocades, fancy ribbons or art linens embroidered in ribbon work.

These are provided with various partitions to hold needles, pins, hairpins and safety pins. Sometimes the boxes contain safety pins only. Get gilt ones in all sizes, from the tiny shield pins to the largest made.

Such a box makes an appropriate gift for the European traveler who will travel leisurely enough to take a trunk. It is a more convenient way to use these articles in a hotel than from the more usual rolled cases with pins, needles and so on stuck in them.

Mrs. Nuwed.

"This cookbook will do very nicely," said Mrs. Nuwed to the book department clerk, "and now I want a good standard work on taxidermy." "We don't keep any in stock," said the clerk. "How annoying!" sighed the young housewife, "and I not knowing a blessed thing about stuffing a fowl!"

The Holland government is considering the passage of a new patent law, inventors having been without protection in that country since the repeal of an old law in 1869.

A Brave Mayor.

Montreal, Sept. 17.—In spite of the fact that Mr. Bourassa's paper wanted Mayor Guerin excommunicated because he attended the laying of the corner-stone of a Presbyterian church his worship attended yesterday the annual convention of the Anglican Brotherhood of St. Andrew, and delivered an address of welcome.

Bomb for Kaiser.

Berlin, Sept. 17.—A special despatch to The Morgenpost from Fuenfkichen, Hungary, says that a formidable bomb was discovered Thursday lying on the railroad track in front of Emperor William's train in which he was proceeding to a hunting lodge at Mohales, 25 miles southwest of Fuenfkichen.

Killed by Street Car.

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—Edith, the four year-old daughter of Robert W. Moxley, Eriel street, was run over by a street car yesterday and her right leg severed. She was endeavoring to get out of the way of a cab. She died later.

Meanest Traders In the World.

There is a colony of merchants in Kingston, the capital of Jamaica, who can give cards and spades even to the bland Chinaman "for ways that are dark and tricks that are vain." They take one match out of every box they sell until they have enough matches to fill another box and so make an extra cent. They shave tiny flakes off cakes of soap and boil them down to make other cakes. They put a thin layer of molasses on the bottom of the scoop with which they serve rice so that a few grains will stick to the bottom. These are only a few of their thousand tricks to turn a dishonest penny. Without doubt they are the meanest traders in the world.

Plucky Bank Manager.

An exciting attempt at bank robbery is reported from Box Hill, near Melbourne, Australia, where an armed bandit broke into the Australian Bank, the manager of which, who lives on the premises, is Mr. Robert Sutton. After midnight he was awakened from his sleep and confronted by a masked robber holding a revolver close to his face. Mrs. Sutton adroitly disconcerted the robber by ringing an electric bell, and Mr. Sutton procuring his revolver from under the pillow of the bed, fired at the thief, who fled. In retreating the marauder fired through the door, but no damage was done. Trails of blood showed that Mr. Sutton's shot had taken effect.

Origin of Etiquette.

The French word "etiquette" really means a "label" or "ticket." How, then, comes it to denote "conventional forms of ceremony?"

It is said that a certain Scottish gardener in charge of Louis XIV.'s garden at Versailles was very much put out because the courtiers walked over his beds. To keep off these trespassers he placed labels or tickets—"etiquettes"—at various spots, with instructions as to the proper path. At first the haughty courtiers did not deign to notice these placards, but a hint from high quarters that their walks in future must be within the "etiquettes" compelled their obedience.

Thus, according to the story, originated our present use of the word "etiquette."

NOT CRIPPEN AT ALL.

Defence May Place Whole Crime In Another Quarter.

London, Sept. 17.—Two more of the Government's witnesses in the Dr. H. H. Crippen murder hearing admitted on the stand yesterday that they were unable to determine definitely the sex of the body supposed to be that of Belle Elmore Crippen.

Dr. W. H. Wilcox, the Home Office analyst, testified that the character and position of the organs submitted to him proved that they were from a human body, and that "probably the body was that of a female."

B. H. Spilsbury, one of the leading pathologists of London, would not go even this far, frankly admitting that he was unable to determine the sex from a microscopical study of the remains.

"The person believed to have been Mrs. Belle Elmore Crippen met death through the administering of a dose of hyoscin," said Dr. Wilcox in his evidence. "This dose, while somewhat more than the amount required to produce death, was near enough to the exact amount required for fatal results to indicate expert judgment in preparing the dose. I am satisfied that death followed within an hour of the administering of the poison."

Inspector Dew, on cross-examination, admitted that up to the finding of the body, he had no suspicion that a crime had been committed.

According to one report, Crippen's defence will include a contention that before Crippen occupied the house in which the body was found, the tenant was a murderous lunatic, who is now confined in an asylum. The body, he will say, was that of a victim of this insane man, and was buried in the cellar before Crippen moved into the house.

Big Building Collapses.

Winnipeg, Sept. 17.—An accident which almost resulted in the loss of many lives, occurred here yesterday morning when the building owned and occupied by the Manitoba Clothing Co. collapsed a few minutes after the alarm had been given, and every body got out safe.

A large hotel is being built next to the building, and the Manitoba Clothing Co. blame the contractor for undermining them. There were between 40 and 50 employes of the company at work when Max Goldstein, the proprietor, noticed some plaster falling. He got everybody out just in time.

The loss may reach $75,000, including lost time, building and stock.

Escaped From Jail.

Toronto, Sept. 17.—John Thompson, alias Burnep, escaped from Toronto jail on Thursday afternoon by scaling a wall of the yard. He was supplied with clothes on the outside, or stole them, and made a clean getaway. He was serving 60 days for theft, having been convicted a week ago.

He was arrested Thursday night in a G.T.R. box car and sentenced to 10 days in the Police Court yesterday, where he was not recognized. He did did not have the same luck at the jail, and will be compelled to finish the original term before he starts in on the second one.

When arrested the second time he gave the name of William Boyd.

Halifax Firemen Injured.

Halifax, N.S., Sept. 17.—Two firemen were seriously injured last night in a fire that gutted three buildings on the Market Wharf and came dangerously near sweeping away the southern end of the waterfront.

The men were fighting the flames on a ladder when the burning roof fell on them, burying both in the debris. They were rescued with difficulty and taken to the hospital.

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash—and was entirely cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

A PRESIDENTIAL BOOM

President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton Looms Up For Job

He Has Been Nominated For Governorship of New Jersey For the Coming Year By the Democratic Party and Probability Is That He Is Being Developed as a Candidate For the Position of President.

Princeton, N.J., Sept. 17.—Dr. Woodrow Wilson, who was yesterday nominated for governor of New Jersey by the Democratic state convention, said yesterday afternoon that he would offer his resignation as president of Princeton University to the board of trustees at its next meeting on Oct. 20.

Wilson for governor of New Jersey in 1911 and for President of the United States in 1912. This is said to be the program of New Jersey Democrats and others.

Woodrow Wilson has never been known as a politician, although he has been an educator of prominence, a writer on political and historical subjects, and in his 55th year. For a year he practiced law in Atlanta, Ga. It has been his ambition to become an authority on government, and he has read and written extensively on politics, the science of government and history.

DR. WOODROW WILSON.

Outlining his views on political questions of the United States and of the commonwealth over which he hopes to preside after next election he said yesterday:

"What I wish most for the State of New Jersey is a system whereby the haphazard business of the state may be ended and a more thorough and conscientious system devised. I want the state's business done with the thoroughness and honesty that should pervade in a business house. I intend to bring that about if I am elected.

Secondly, I would like to see the taxation of the state equalized. I do not believe that the taxes of the state are equitably adjusted. Property held by citizens is paying an undue tribute to the state, while the corporations—and by that I mean the railroads—are escaping taxes which should be imposed upon them.

"Guilt of corporations is personal and penalties for guilt should be made personal."

Peterboro Man's Death.

Peterboro, Sept. 17.—Thomas Blois of this city met death by drowning at Rice Lake Thursday night shortly after 6 o'clock.

Thomas Blois had the line, and feeling it pull he drew it in and in doing so upset the boat. He was a swimmer, but his brother was not. The body was not lost, and death is said to have been caused by shock.

Mr. Blois was a signalman for the C.P.R., and was well known in Peterboro, where he had been a resident for many years.

Raided a Montreal Dog Fight.

Montreal, Sept. 17.—Twenty-five men who were caught in the raid of a dog fight Thursday night appeared in court yesterday.

The affair was the first regularly organized dog fight that has occurred in Montreal for many years. It was held in a moving picture theatre on St. Catharines street east, in the French district. About one hundred men were present. They were remanded a week.

Montreal Firemen Hurt.

Montreal, Sept. 17.—The wholesale paint and oil establishment of McArthur, Corneille & Co., St. Paul street, was damaged to the extent of about $50,000 by fire early yesterday morning. Three firemen were injured.

Fire in an icehouse belonging to the G.T.R., yesterday morning threatened the railway's large shops in Point St. Charles, and gave the firemen a three hours' battle.

Who Owns This Canoe.

St. Catharines, Sept. 17.—Port Dalhousie is excited by the discovery of a strange canoe which drifted into the beach near Maple Leaf Camp at noon yesterday.

The canoe was painted red, blue inside, and contained a cashmere stocking and a shoe. The craft is believed to have come from across the lake.

Woodrow Wilson In Politics.

Princeton, N.J., Sept. 17.—Dr. Woodrow Wilson, who was Thursday nominated for governor of New Jersey by the Democratic state convention, said yesterday afternoon that he would offer his resignation as president of Princeton University to the board of trustees at its next meeting on Oct. 20.

A Sudden Death.

St. John's, Que., Sept. 17.—Gabriel Marchand, M.P.P., proprietor of The Canada Francaise, was attacked with a fit of indigestion shortly after dinner yesterday and died in a few hours.

Old Man's Dream of Gold.

At once funny and pathetic is a letter received a short time ago at the Bristol office of Davidson and McRae, Toronto and Winnipeg. It was written from Admiral Street, Exeter, in reply to a letter containing emigration literature. The following is a faithful copy of the letter:

A postman brought a letter from you, and I was so glad to have it, as it looks as if I am going to Foreign parts, as an old witch told me I should years ago.

Me and mother be ready to go. Wages be high for my kind of work yer says. I carries newspapers, and be 70 years old come next August. Were mighty towns like London is, they wants papers too read, so I expects I should have heaps of money out there.

I saves up £1-1-1 1-2 last year, so you see I am of a saving nature. Just what they wants out there.

When the tickets for money comes to go to the ship, us will be off like mad men, as us be told there miles of gold to be turned up and brought home. You shall have your share for sending us out there, when us comes home.

Please send tickets as soon as you can cause us wants to get out from this free trade place, as us can't buy meat here, and I be told beef and mutton is cheap in Canada. It will be a treat to taste a bit of meat. I am so filled with joy cause you be sending Mother and I out thar, that I can't write no more now, but you shall have your proper share of the gold mountains when us comes back.

Please write soon, as us be packing out traps now.

I be, your obedient servant.

Ottawa Cadets Cut Loose.

Ottawa, Sept. 19—There was a small-sized riot at the close of the Ottawa Exhibition, when the members of the Capital Cadets and some of the 43rd Regiment, who had been engaged for the grand stand shows, cut loose in the midway, upset many shows, and did damage all round, until the police could be got together to suppress the affair. Now the exhibition authorities blame the local cadets, and will take the damage out of their pay, and hereafter forbid them from the fair grounds.

Manufacturing In Quebec.

Quebec is now second to Ontario in aggregate of manufactures. There are two main reasons: Montreal and water-power. Montreal contains the largest number of really mammoth industries, including rubber, sugar, and the locomotive and car works of two great railways. These industries are due primarily to navigation, to an abundance of comparatively cheap labor and to the enterprise of men who stand at the head of great corporations.

But aside from Montreal there is a vast aggregate of industries scattered among the smaller cities and towns of Quebec, many of them due to immense water-powers and an inexhaustible supply of pulpwood. Many of the little industrial cities of Quebec have an exceeding great charm in the landscape.

ELECTION IN JANUARY

British Parties May Soon Be at It Again.

Expected Failure of Veto Negotiations May Bring About Another Contest at Beginning of the Year, According to Expert Opinion—Liberals Will Have to Get the Thing Over Before Loyalty Outburst of Coronation.

London, Sept. 19.—An eminent Unionist organizer has expressed the conviction that general election will be held in January, in consequence of the failure of the veto conference. His main ground for this opinion is the effect of the coronation pageantry in stimulating loyalty. The Republican movement in England has collapsed, since Queen Victoria's jubilee, and King Edward's coronation pageants have popularized monarchy and impaired the resources of democracy, and this tendency will be strengthened by the spectacles and revels of next year.

So well is this truth understood on the Liberal side that the best organizers agree that the veto question must be taken up early in the year or dropped altogether. If the Government attempts to continue the present armistice and to defer an appeal to the country until the autumn of next year it will find itself without an issue of paramount importance, and will be overwhelmed by the swelling tide of loyal enthusiasm for the crown and the Empire. This is the opinion of an expert politician, and it is confirmed by evidences of the anxiety of both Nationalist and Labor leaders to hasten the elections. The departure of John Redmond and three associates for American and Canadian bases of supplies indicates an urgent necessity for filling the war chest and being prepared for a crisis at the end of the year.

The labor leaders at the Trade Union Congress have been even more explicit in forecasting a general election in January and a close coalition with Radicalism for legalizing political levies. The pressure of the extremists is increasing for fighting out the constitutional issue instead of compromising it by secret bargaining, and the free traders have persuaded themselves that it will be easier to beat the tariff reformers before than after the coronation. The Unionists are expecting a failure of the conference, and have already begun to canvass in the small towns, where vans are covered with posters, heavily stocked with leaflets and equipped with gramophones and magic lanterns.

Lord Rosebery is expected to play an important part in the political crisis, since his resolutions dealing with the reform of the Lords will have precedence over the veto resolutions. If the conference breaks down, the veto resolutions cannot be blocked, and if the Prime Minister favors an early appeal to the country he may obtain in this way a release from an intolerable situation, in which Messrs O'Connor and Shackleton are constantly threatening the Ministry with desertion and defeat unless their demands are complied with.

Section Practically Completed.

Montreal, Sept. 19.—Hon. George Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, came to the city on Saturday in connection with the coming transfer of the section of the Transcontinental from Superior Junction to Winnipeg. J. D. McArthur, the contractor, was also here, although very little was done, owing to the absence of Mr. Hays in Chicago.

The Minister said, however, that the section, except the completion of a few stations, had practically been completed, and that the company dedesired to take over the road as early as possible, as they wanted to get all the grain possible over the railway.

Hon. Mr. Graham was recently over this part of the Transcontinental and he pronounces it a very superior piece of railway.

Had to Have Their Smokes.

Paris, Sept. 19.—The smokers' strike is petering out. When the Minister of Finance raised tobacco prices three months ago he expected an additional monthly profit of $300,000. The first month showed a deficit of that amount. The second month showed a deficit of $180,000.

By the third month the smokers had used up all the stores they had laid in before the advance in prices. Others got tired of smoking the cheaper brands of cigars and cigarettes and an attempt to substitute the pipe for cigars came to nothing.

Those who had diminished or abandoned smoking weakened in their resolution and the month of August shows an increase of $200,000.

Stoned Non-union Boarding House.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 19.—The injunction granted two weeks ago upon the application of the Columbus Railway & Light Co. against the striking carmen, was continued indefinitely on Saturday, upon the argument of counsel for both the company and the men. The police were informed that Miles Hysell's boarding-house, where a number of non-union street carmen board, was bombarded with stones early Saturday morning. One brick fell on a bed in which a young women was sleeping.

Turkey and Roumania Allied.

Paris, Sept. 19.—The Temps confirms the report that Turkey and Roumania have entered into a military alliance, and say that the convention indicates Turkey's rapprochement with the powers in the triple alliance.

The Parker Trial.

Tweed, Sept. 19.—The trial of Robt. Parker, over 70 years old, charged with the murder of Wm. Masters, also in his 70's, will begin in Tweed on Oct. 3.

Held Up by Armed Men.

Portage la Prairie, Man., Sept. 19.—Four armed men held up the night clerk of the Empire Cafe at 2.30 yesterday morning, throwing him into the street, after taking seventy-five cents off him, and followed this by breaking into the till, where they secured $1.50, and then making good their escape.

LABORITES CONCLUDE.

Last Work of Trades Congress Is Done In a Hurry.

Port Arthur, Sept. 19.—The twenty-sixth session of the Trades and Labor Congress closed here Saturday noon with a brief address by Fraternal Delegate J. J. Manning.

Many resolutions were rushed through the last hour, among which were to seek an increased tariff on cut stone, a provincial or federal pension for those totally blind, for the appointment of more fair wage officers by the Dominion Government; an amendment to the compensation for workmen's injuries act; to seek to amend the railways act to prevent railway engineers, firemen, etc., from working too long hours. An act for compulsory voting was laid on the table. The one against military manoeuvres and displays on Labor Day was carried. The resolution for establishing a monthly magazine by the congress was referred to the executive for a report at the next convention. The adoption of a universal design for a union label by the various international unions was voted down. Unions were enjoined to support the labor press.

The two resolutions that took most of the morning were the ones to appoint a permanent organizer for Western Canada, and the Socialist resolution. With the former the name of W. R. Trotter was coupled. The delegates from the east protested against the appointment of an organizer for any particular section, and charged the western delegates with a desire to create a job for their man. The resolution was voted down, and the appointment was left with the executive council. If a man is appointed it will likely be President Glockling.

The discussion on the Socialist resolution, although brief, was exceedingly hot. Pettipiece of Vancouver led the radicals, while Landers of Hamilton, as chairman of the committee on law, led the anti's. On division the vote stood for the collective ownership of the means of wealth and production 30; against, 60.

The ways and means committee allowed Secretary Draper $800, Fraternal Delegate Pettipiece $400, Solicitor O'Donoghue $200, and the Moral Reform Association of Ontario $50.

The Cause of Ireland's Freedom.

Queenstown, Sept. 19.—John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalist; Joseph Devlin, M.P., secretary of the United Irish League; T. P. O'Connor, and Daniel Boyle, M.P., for North Mayo, arrived here last evening on the steamer Lusitania.

Mr. Redmond in a brief speech said that he was going to tell the Americans that the cause of Irish freedom was tied up inseparably with the wellbeing and freedom of the democracy of Great Britain. The struggle to-day, he added, was between the whole mass of democratic forces in Ireland, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, combined against the last relic of feudalism. The moment the power of the House of Lords disappeared the road to home rule, he declared, was absolutely clear.

Gaynor Will Consider Governorship.

Saratoga, N.Y., Sept. 19.—Mayor Gaynor's first word since he took office as to his own attitude toward the movement now on foot to nominate him for governor, was received here Saturday. In a letter to Frank Gick, secretary of the Saratoga County Democratic convention, who had informed him of the resolution adopted by the convention, endorsing him for the Democratic nomination for governor, and pledging him the support of Saratoga County, the mayor replied:

"I thank you exceedingly for your letter, and the resolution which you enclose. I shall have to carefully consider the matter in the near future.

"I am now quite restored to my usual strength, but have not yet fully recovered my voice."

Entire Block Destroyed by Fire.

Grand Valley, Sept. 19.—At an early hour yesterday, a fire broke out and entirely destroyed the McIntyre block. The building was occupied by J. McIntyre & Sons, flour and feed; Geo. Lawson, shoes; Weather Insurance head office, and George Davey, gents' furnishing. Very little of the contents were saved.

The origin of the fire is unknown. The village and township clerk's office was situated in the building, and unfortunately nearly all of the village and township records are lost.

An Ambitious Project.

Boston, Sept. 19.—A tour by an aeroplane from Harvard aviation grounds on the Atlantic coast to the Los Angeles driving park on the Pacific coast is formally proposed in a letter just sent to the National Council of the Aero Club of America by Charles J. Glidden.

The tentative plan for the contest, as outlined by Mr. Glidden, embraces a daily flight of approximately 200 miles, with stops at Saratoga, N.Y., Syracuse, N.Y., Buffalo, N.Y., Akron Ohio, Fort St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo., Hutchinson, Kas., Syracuse, Kas., Sante Fe, N.M., Fort Apache, Ariz., Phoenix, Ariz., Yuma, Ariz., Los Angeles, Cal.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The question of permanent pavements as far as Belleville is concerned would appear to have now got beyond the mere talking stage, as there is reason to believe that a permanent pavement, second to none in the Province will be laid on our Front street next year. It is simply a matter of common knowledge that with the beautiful and up-to-date stores, the splendid granolithic walks, that all we lack is this permanent road pavement in order to render our main street the envy of many a more pretentious city.

The permanent road question is the crucial question in nearly all of our medium-sized cities at the present time. The smaller towns such as Lindsay and Oshawa, have even faced the problem and are spending large sums for this important and necessary work The actual cost, it is understood spreads over a term of twenty years and is by no means an oppressive tax, and the more one understands the question, the more strange it appears that Belleville has only now wakened up and begins to realize that mere talk will not give us a pavement.

As we pointed out a few days ago, it is a matter of much satisfaction the wonderful amount of substantial work that the city is doing this year. and as a prominent employer of labor remarked recently, "The very air of Belleville seems to have a more vigorous tone," and the old town once more becomes young and vigorous and determined if not to lead, yet certainly not to lag behind its neighbors in the march of progress.

Belleville is undergoing a wonderful change and it did not come a moment too soon.

Do not overwork or underpay civic employees. Give every man a fair wage and every employee a fair shake Aldermen are not elected to make the work of City employees oppressive.

In this column we said on Saturday, "The Mayor moved at the committee meeting Thursday night that Ald. Lott, Ald. Robinson and himself be a committee to visit western cities to inspect permanent road improvements," etc.

Mayor Marsh says "he only moved for a committee of inspection, and that the committee in session selected the Aldermen who were to go." Our reporter copied the above from the record book, and, if written in wrong there, it is no error of The Intelligencer. We still claim that the most important man on a tour of inspection of roadways would be the City Engineer.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell Gives an Interview.

SAYS THAT CANADA HAS PROGRESSED UNDER PROTECTION, AND ASKS WHY THERE SHOULD BE ANY CHANGE—THINKS MOST PEOPLE ARE AVERSE TO IT.

VICTORIA, B.C., Sept. 16.—Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who, with Mr. J. S. Willison, of The Toronto News, spent yesterday here after a trip to Prince Rupert, in an interview, declares against reciprocity with the United States. He said:

"I think the prosperity of Canada would be retarded by reciprocity with the United States, especially if that policy were intended to cover manufactured articles. I have been a protectionist all my life, and the older I grow the more I see that it is the only policy for a country which wishes to keep abreast of the times.

"Who is it in Canada that wants reciprocity? The manufacturers certainly don't; the Conservative party does not. I believe that the majority of the Liberal party is averse to any such policy. It is wanted purely and simply by a certain section of the farming community who believe that through it they will secure farming implements and machinery cheaper than those that can be obtained at present. And it is wanted by President Taft and the United States politicians who are, naturally enough, interested in the prosperity of their own country.

"Canada," he continued, "is big enough, broad enough, prosperous enough, to stand on her own feet in the matter of trade arrangements. She does not need to give other countries advantages unless equalizing advantages will accrue to her. I look upon reciprocity as the first step towards free trade. Canada has progressed and is progressing under protection. Why should she change that policy? That policy has made her great; her trade is expanding in every direction. If reciprocity with the United States is adopted it will prove the first spoke in the wheel of Canada's prosperity."

Dancing Girls Drown When They Plung Into Well.

WORMEATEN TIMBERS OVER CISTERN SUDDENLY GIVE WAY, PRECIPITATING CHILDREN INTO WATER.

Wormeaten timbers over a cistern on which two little schoolgirls of Corona, L.I., essayed to go through the evolutions of a skirt dance in the presence of fifteen companions, collapsed and let them drop into a pool of water fifteen feet below, in which they were drowned.

The boards broke in the middle, the children disappearing from the presence of their companions as if by magic. For a minute the onlookers were spellbound with amazement and fright. The shrieks of the girls in the water below and the gurgling sound that came up alarmed them and they fled screaming. The mothers of the two children were attracted by the cries, but were helpless to save their young ones. By the time a policeman and several men in the fields arrived the children were dead.

A Deadly Garter.

ALMOST CAUSED A WOMAN'S DEATH.

Prisoner at Police Station Tied Cord Around Her Throat—Saved By An Officer.

KINGSTON, Sept. 17.—Grace Forget, arrested at Kingston as a vagrant, and sentenced to three months in jail, apparently attempted to commit suicide, after she was placed in a cell. She tied a string (which had been doing duty as a garter) around her throat, and tightened it up. She probably lost her nerve, for she screamed. Sergt. Snodden went to investigate, and found her with the string around her throat. She had tied the string tightly, for her throat was bleeding, where the cord had cut into it.

Startling Graft to Show up at New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The city is aghast to-day over the intimation that revelations of police grafts that will eclipse the sensational developments of the Lexow investigation, are impending. The "inner circle" is about to be uncovered, and the manner in which gamblers, disorderly house proprietors, "sure thing" workers of every kind, and even the women of the streets, have been forced to contribute for protection, will be fully told, if reports in circulation about the police headquarters are well founded.

G. T. R. Must Keep Faith.

HON. G. P. GRAHAM WILL SEE THAT MEN ARE GIVEN WORK.

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.—There does not appear to be any agreement made in the settlement of the G.T.R. strike to the effect that the company could take back its striking employees "when vacancies occur."

The Minister of Railways says they must be taken into the railway employ again within ninety days of the settlement of the dispute—that is Nov. 2 next, and Hon. George P. Graham will see President Hays on Thursday next to ask justice for the men.

Year In Central For Indecent Assault.

James C. Palmer, a young man who a week ago was tried before Judge Fraleck and convicted of the charge of indecently assaulting two little girls, was this afternoon brought up for sentence. The prisoner is a resident of Madoc Township, and is evidently not of the brightest intellect. He was sentenced to one year in the Central Prison.

Wedding Bells.

At 8 o'clock this morning a wedding took place at St. Michael's church, and a large number were present to witness the ceremony. The bride was Miss Miss Catherine Lynch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Lynch, of this city, and the groom Mr. Jeremiah Murphy, son of Mr. and Mrs John Murphy, formerly of Hamilton Rev. Father Spratt performed the ceremony. The bridesmaid was Miss Marion Lynch, sister of the bride and the best man was Mr. John Murphy of Hamilton, brother of the groom The bride was gowned in a dress of white net over white silk, and wore a picture hat. She carried a bouquet of cream roses. The bridesmaid's dress was of organdie, beautifully embroidered. She carried a bouquet of pink roses. After the ceremony a wedding repast was partaken of at the residence of the bride's parents on Chatham street at which many guests were present. A number of beautiful presents were received which showed the high esteem in which the young couple are held. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy left on the flyer for Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara Falls. Returning they will take up their residence on Church street in this city.

Historic Old Paint.

A NEW COAT IS BEING PUT ON THE SENATE CHAMBER.

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—Workmen are busy repainting and redecorating the Senate chamber in view of the coming to Canada next year of the Duke of Connaught.

The old coat of paint was another of the links with the past that has gone. The last order for paint was given twenty-five years ago by Sir John A. Macdonald.

The new coat will be ready for the opening of Parliament, on or about Nov. 10.

Shot Wife to End Pain Is Haunted by Memory

PROSPECTOR, ACTOR IN DREADFUL DRAMA IN CANADIAN ROCKIES, RETURNS TO HIS HOME A NERVOUS WRECK.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Haunted by the memory of his wife, whose sufferings he mercifully ended by sending a bullet through her head in the wilds of the Canadian Northwest, miles from help, James McDowell, a prospector and miner, is at the home of friends, at No. 2774 Bainbridge Avenue, the Bronx, a nervous and physical wreck. He has been under treatment, but he is growing worse. He says of himself:

"How long I can stand it I don't know."

McDowell granted the plea of his mortally injured wife to end her agony. He was exonerated by a jury of his fellow-men. The remembrance of that awful experience has shattered his nerves until he now hardly more than the wreck of a man.

McDowell is 58 years old, six feet tall and a gaunt reminder of what was once a physically perfect man. The thought that he killed his wife, despite the fact that that was the only course open to him, is with him constantly, and his sunken eyes tell of wearisome days and sleepless nights. He is averse to talking of the experience, but last night he consented to tell his story.

MARRIED GIRL OF TWENTY-TWO.

"My wife was Fanny Crawford, a native of Alberta Province," he said. "Her father was John Crawford, who had been a miner, a prospector, in California and Canada for years. He and I had been close friends, and are yet. Fanny was only twenty-two when we were married. I had a rich claim near Castle Mountain, which is in the British Columbia extension of the Cascade range, and soon after we were married I decided to visit it. I had been there some time before and had cut a rough trail to the claim.

CRASHED OVER PRECIPICE.

"Fanny begged me to take her with me. I demurred, as it was no place for a woman; but she persisted and I finally consented. We visited friends in Calgary for a few days, while I was purchasing supplies, and then started for the mine, a five-day journey by mules. We had three mules—one for my wife, one for myself, and the third for a pack animal, carrying provisions and tools for building a cabin, as I intended to do some work on the claim.

"The trails on Castle Mountain are very narrow and steep, so much so that it is difficult for even a mule to pass over them. One day we were going along one of these trails. My wife was some yards ahead of me, and I was lounging in the saddle, half asleep. It was about 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and we had been riding three hours.

"Suddenly my wife's mule brayed as if in pain, and I looked up to see him rearing on the very edge of the precipice. I have always thought he was stung by a hornet. I tried to reach my wife's side, but before I could do so the mule plunged over the precipice, carrying Fanny with him.

"I threw myself to the ground and peered over the edge. I could hear the mule's body crashing through the trees and among the rocks to the bottom, fully 2,000 feet. I nearly pitched over myself.

"It was almost twenty-four hours later before I found the carcase of the mule. I had eaten nothing for almost thirty hours, and was nearly insane from grief, hunger and thirst. My clothing and flesh were torn by the rocks over which I had crawled, my skin was almost blistered by the heat and my eyes smarted so that I could hardly see.

"I left the dead mule and crawled on. Fifty yards away I found a shapeless mass lying among the rocks. It was my wife, alive, but mercifully unconscious. I think every bone in her body must have been broken. There was a great gash in her forehead, but she was breathing faintly.

"I mixed some brandy with water from my canteen and forced it down her throat. When she revived a few minutes later her suffering was intense. She begged me to shoot her and end the agony.

"There was not a human being within 100 miles, so far as I know. The nearest medical help was at Calgary, 120 miles away. It would have taken me ten days at least to go and return, and wolves would have devoured her before I had been gone one day.

"There was nothing else to do. I placed the muzzle of my revolver against her head and fired. Then I fainted. When I recovered consciousness, hours later, I covered her body with rocks, grass and boughs to keep away the wolves. Then I started for Calgary.

"I was in such condition that I was ten days making the trip. When I arrived I hunted up Sheriff Hamilton and told him my story. He sent two deputies with me to the spot and they found things just as I had said. We buried my wife and returned to Calgary. An inquest was held and I was exonerated. Shortly after that I had a sunstroke and after my senses returned my nerves gave way, and I am here now for treatment."

Smoked 100 Million More of Cigarets.

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—The production of cigarets for cousumption in Canada for the fiscal year ending March last totaled no less than 469,711,091, an increase of a little over a hundred million cigarets as compared with the preceding year, and representing an outlay of probably over four million dollars for "coffin nails," principally by the boys and young men of Canada, during the twelve months. During the preceding year, on the other hand, owing to the reduced consumption which followed the commercial depression of two years ago, there was a considerable falling off in the importation and manufacture of cigarets.

Daily Intelligencer.

The Laurier Tour.

(Letter in Calgary Herald.)

I have read in your issue of the 15th instant the addresses of the "great statesmen" who are touring Western Canada, ostensibly to get acquainted with the people and to study at close range their special needs, but in reality to pave the way at the people's expense for another lease of power to the moribund Administration at Ottawa.

Your editorial in criticism of these gentlemen was timely and courtesy to the visitors was probably responsible for its leniency. Some hard hitting of the "Jack Johnson" type would be quite in order in discussing these gentlemen, and I am certain that the people of Calgary are sufficiently intelligent and well enough posted to know the reason why.

After intimating that his visit had no political significance, and relieving himself of various time-worn phrases and the customary platitudes, Imperialistic and otherwise, Sir Wilfrid launched into a tirade against the Conservative party. With a great pretence at fairness to his political opponents, he admitted that to Sir John Macdonald was due the credit for building the first transcontinental railway. But what, he asks dramatically, has the Conservative party done since his death? What, he asks, has become of the policy of that party?

It requires little intelligence on the part of the people to know that for nearly the whole period since Sir John's death the Conservative party in the Dominion Parliament has been in Opposition and in consequence has not had an opportunity to do as much as it otherwise would have done, but, had Sir Wilfrid been the fair and honest gentleman he was posing to be, he would have answered his first question and told his hearers a few things at least that the Conservative party has done, even in Opposition. He might have told them, for example, that one of the last acts of the Conservative party while in power was to arrange for a fast Atlantic steamship service for Canada, with exceptional cold storage facilities, and that this contract, which meant millions to Canada and was all ready to be signed, had been cancelled by this Government when it took office, with the result that we could never afterwards secure such favorable terms, and have never had the fast service. This act in itself, the result of pure jealousy and party antipathy, is sufficient to stamp Sir Wilfrid as a politician of narrow vision and sadly lacking in business capacity.

Coming to the party in Opposition, he could have explained that it had saved the country nearly a million dollars by defeating the Drummond County Railway Bill, which Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues wished to make a law, and in consequence they were compelled to make a new agreement, with the saving above mentioned. Further, he might have pointed out that the Conservative party had prevented his Government from giving away the whole Yukon territory, with its valuable mineral wealth, to Mackenzie and Mann for building a few miles of narrow gauge railway. In addition, he could have stated that the Conservative party had forced his Government to send troops to defend the Empire in South Africa, in obedience of the people's wishes, when the said Government, led by himself, the great posing, but false, Imperialist, was strenuously objecting to such a course. Again, he could have shown how the Conservative party had forced a cancellation of the nefarious contract which his Government had made with that headless and homeless organization, the "North Atlantic Trading Company," whereby the country was being robbed on a gigantic scale. The time was very opportune for Sir Wilfrid to have informed his audience of the vigorous, though unsuccessful fight waged by the Conservative party against his iniquitous Autonomy Bill, which brought the fair Province of Alberta into Confederation on a status inferior to that of the other provinces, and in addition robbed the people of their lands and minerals. He should have told the people in this connection how he had trampled under foot the much-vaunted Liberal principal of "Provincial Rights" and how he had upon more than one occasion at Ottawa received instruction from an Italian bishop in re the drafting of the bill. In conclusion, Sir Wilfrid could have told how the Conservatives in Parliament, during the last session, had prevented his Government from giving control to Jim Conmee of the entire water power west of Port Arthur, and had also stopped an American company of capitalists from securing a monopoly of the St. Lawrence water power and the right to dam the river on the Canadian side.

To deal even briefly with the great work done by the Conservative party in its fight for the people against graft and incompetence, would occupy far too much space for one letter, but I take it for granted that the Western people are not the brainless and simple individuals that Sir Wilfrid evidently thinks they are when he brazenly asks such a question and then dismisses it with a gesture.

What, he asks, has become of the policy of the Conservative party?

Courtesy, no doubt, kept hundreds in the audience from telling him offhand, what he knows only too well. They could have told him that after securing power in 1896 by a policy of deception and chicanery that would be flounted by any fair-fighting politician, he found himself without a trade policy, and immediately appropriated that of his opponents, to which he has clung ever since. His adherence to this policy, in spite of his former free-trade professions, and his glaring and frantic appeals to racalism which have enabled him to hold solid the Province of Quebec, have kept him in power all these years.

Sir Wilfrid is forever masquerading before the public as an unifier of the races. Here is another evidence that he underrates the intelligence of the Canadian people. What has Sir Wilfrid Laurier ever done to unify the races? Judging from his own speeches and from references made in Grit addresses at various points on his tour, an outsider would suppose that prior to his coming into power there had been civil war between the races in this country. We had a high standard of Canadian citizenship before we ever heard of Laurier, and there has never been anything but the best of good feeling among the different nationalities in the Dominion. Such ridiculous claptrap about Laurier unifying the races is enough to disgust any Canadian citizen who has in him an element of common sense.

The kind of unity promoted by Laurier is well evidenced by the following extract from a pamphlet writen by Oliver A. Asselin, a French-Canadian Liberal. He says in part:

"At the federal elections of 1908 "the barefaced racial appeals of Laurierite politicians throughout French "Canada had become a matter of "shame for all self-respecting French-"Canadians. All the more as these "loot-seeking wreckers of national "unity were posing as the champions "of mutual forbearance before the "country."

If the speech of Sir Wilfrid in Calgary is a fair sample of the brain-power of "Canada's greatest statesman," as his party admirers persist in calling him, then the intellectual status of Canadian statesmanship has sunk to a surprisingly low ebb. If the Canadian ideal of a statesman's utterances is froth and platitudes, then they certainly have the highest type in Sir Wilfrid.

The remarks of George P. Graham, Minister of Railways, are scarcely worthy of passing notice. In a studied effort to be humorous he makes himself rather ridiculous. He knows absolutely nothing about the transportation problem and less about the tariff, although these are the themes upon which he expends his energy. He would be much more at home in telling his hearers about the historic trip of the Minnie M. to Lake Superior with her famous crew of "pluggers," or his noted Sunday interview with Lott and Shibley of bogus ballot-box fame prior to the Dominion election of 1904.

In conclusion, let me say that the West wants nothing from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, or any other politician, other than her rights, and these she is bound to get. Although the people of Alberta have been shamefully treated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his Government, the time is fast approaching when retribution will be demanded, and not only demanded, but secured.

All we ask from any political party is fair treatment and honest and economical government. We want to see the finish of injustice, fraud, insincerity and oppression; we want to see an end to the predominating carnival of graft and extravagance; we want a Government to preserve in their entirety the institutions of the Dominion; we want it to maintain our honor, unstained.

Did Sir Wilfrid Laurier show in his speech in Calgary, or has he, in any speech he has delivered on his tour, shown satisfactorily that his Government is filling the bill? Let the common sense of Western Canada answer!

Wasteful Advertising.

Commenting on the waste of money involved in mail circularization, Printer's Ink says:

"The trouble is that the advertiser's eyes are to blame. He sees the stacks of circulars of formidable size and pronounced color, and his vanity fills his eyes with a mist. He cannot imagine how the recipient will be any less interested than he; nor that it might never reach the individual at all, nor that other great stacks of similarly large and loud circulars are starting out from other points to weary and annoy the be-circularized individual. Inevitably the man who is worth while circularizing is over-circularized by many concerns, and he is callous."

The moral is, of course, obvious. The place to spend your advertising allowance is the newspaper.

Four adjoining governments of European Russia, of a combined area about 17 times the state of Ohio, are almost completely covered with timber, the greatest portion of which has never been explored by civilized man.

New York Police Look Too Smug.

LORD MAYOR OF LONDON ALSO THINKS THEY ARE RATHER FUSSY.

How New York policemen look to a Lord Mayor of London was shown recently when Sir William Treloar, a noted philanthropist, and once the Lord Mayor, was interviewed at the Waldorf-Astoria, where he is staying.

"Do you know," said he, "I was very much struck by the appearance of your policemen. It seems to me that they have such a smug, self-satisfied expression on their faces, and appear to look down on the people as if they were privileged characters—a sort of 'patrician of old Rome' expression, I should say.

"And then it seems to me that they make a great deal of unnecessary fuss about regulating traffic. I think it would be hard to beat our London 'bobbies' when it comes to that, but I think you have a most wonderful city here. I am intensely interested in it. Your great buildings are remarkable. I think your hotels are a bit too big. One is more cosy in a smaller place.

"Yesterday," continued Sir William, "I made quite a day of it. I was up from 4 o'clock in the morning to midnight. We went down to Coney Island last night. I had heard so much about it that I was determined to go. It was a wonderful sight. I never saw anything like it. It quite repaid me for my strenuous day.

"One of my principal objects in coming out here was to find out the most up-to-date methods of treating tuberculosis for my children's hospital. I am going to Canada in a few days, where I shall visit Montreal and Quebec, and will then return to New York and leave for the other side on the Celtic on October 8."

A STORY FOR MEN.

A story credited to the late Justice Brewer has it that, while he was judge in a minor court, he was presiding at the trial of a wife's suit for separation and alimony. The defendant acknowledged that he hadn't spoken to his wife in five years, and Judge Brewer took a hand from the bench in examining the witness.

"What explanation have you," he said severely to the defendant, "for not speaking to your wife in five years?"

"Your honor," replied the husband, "I didn't like to interrupt the lady."

HE SLOWLY AWAKENED.

A certain lady one Sunday induced her husband, who was not a regular churchgoer, to accompany her to evening service. During the sermon he fell asleep, snoring at first softly, and at length so noisily that the good lady was constrained to give him a sharp nudge in the hope of rousing him. To her consternation, however, as he slowly awakened, he exclaimed in a loud tone, "Let me alone! Get up and light the fire yourself—it's your turn."

LONGBOAT BEAT SELLEN.

Won Easily in 12-Mile Race at Port Hope.

PORT HOPE, Sept. 16.—Tom Longboat has regained his best form. In a 12-mile race with Percy Sellen here to-night, he not only defeated the little Englishman by over two laps, but covered the distance in 1.06 10 2-5. The race was run in the covered rink over a track which, after the first few miles, became very heavy on account of the loose sand. The track was 13 laps to the mile and the Indian had the race well in hand at all stages. It was the first opportunity Port Hopers have had of seeing the Indian, and he was greeted by a bumper house.

The ...Veiled Lady...

"Sawbones," hearty friends "who missed his number at mess," timid ladies on tiptoe, and the sturdy troopers gazed pitifully on the mighty Kentuckian whose weary head rolled on his pillow, as he moaned: "They have killed her, my own love, my darling!"

Away sped the twelve troops out on the green prairie sea on a dashing foray, and poor, broken Jack Gordon, tossing on a bed of pain, served by the never-failing Jackson ,with trembling hand, grasped his cup, and thought sadly of "K" troop far away "at the front."

"I want to die!—die here,—alone!" he growled.

"Sure, an' ye won't! Lieutenant, my darlin'!" said stout Molly O'Brien. "Ye'll only die with the 'Seventh' an' in good company!" Alas! for Jack. Kindly Molly O'Brien's rough hand mopped his brow, but the broken heart was "past all surgery." He mended slowly. He was silent and moody.

"I must get a leave! I must see Maxwell! He is at Omaha now!" the lonely Kentuckian moaned, and fell back exhausted on his pillows. "I can tell him all, now!" Little did he know that as the mellow silver moon rose over the castled crags of the valley of the Raab, and gave a softer splendor to the turrets and walls of Schloss Stahrenstein, the Master of the Revels drained his last bumper to the Queen of the Feast!

"Dead at Campoformio,"—and a mocking laugh rang from his lips, while Demidoff showed his flashing Tartar fangs,—and brother Adolf smiled and said—nothing!

Demidoff still lingered at Stahrenstein. Far afield with Adolf, the Russian exercised his skill upon hart and boar. Adolf (uneasy and poisoned with the vicious Muscovite's continued suggestions,) gazed upon the glories of field and moor, on the dark trembling forest, and overhanging sculptured hills; he bided his time.

"This will be mine,—all mine, some day," he muttered. "We two are the last of the Stahrensteins! And the Veiled Venus! I will win her yet!"

For in her gleaming white silk robes, maddened with wine, a sparkling-eyed bacchanal, the mysterious Diva, still masked as at the Opera Ball, flashed before a princely company and, dropping her long white cloak, showed a belt of the family jewels of Stahrenstein, clasping the wondrous loveliness over which all men went wild. Dancing the Czardas,—with a crazy abandon, she would later pour out her reckless feelings at the piano, in the wildest flights of matchless melody. A fallen angel! A lost Pleiad!

Brother Adolf, haunting the banquet hall, glared upon this wondrous Queen of Summer Night Revels. "I will! I swear I will, win her yet!" he pledged, with set teeth. The busy Russian devil at his side laughed! A satanic voice whispered murder in his ear!

And Demidoff (pitiless brute tyrant, and the sycophant of a frightened Sylla) said softly (as he rolled a cigarette from his golden case, studded with the jewelled monograms of his mistresses.) "I must really ask her to visit Petersburg. Everything good comes to Russia!"

Adolf Stahrenstein, (with lowering brow) walked the halls of the old castle, after Demidoff had departed on his world-wandering career.

"I'll see you at Nice, by and by, in the early fall. Nothing like the Riviera!" cried the mocking Russian Croesus.

"If!" said Adolf, "If I were only Lord of Stahrenstein!" he mused as he drank and smoked in his rooms, "I would not be a mere egoist!" for he could hear far below, the merry ringing laughter of the Veiled Venus, and the gruff voice of Max (the great head of the house,) pledging "The Brightest Eyes.!"

"I must leave here," Adolf decided. "Max is no fool! He watched me, with his pitiless eyes, when I gave her the roses, which I had ridden thirty miles to get. And yet he is old! Why does he linger? Why? If I were Lord of Stahrenstein! I will go mad if I stay here! I will not join my regiment yet! I would lose my only chance! I will go over to Italy, the land of Life and Love! I will forget this Bacchante!"

Yet, woo it as he might, sleep visited not Adolf's eyelids. "I'll ride over to Feldburg, and see the Regimental Surgeon."

"Herr Graf!" said the cautious Surgeon, as Adolf told a specious tale, "you have been burning the candle at both ends! You have an incipient heart trouble!—I warn you now, Major—but be careful with this! Five drops a day of this strychnine and aconite mixture, will reduce your sleeplessness and nervous affection. Be very careful!"

"Be careful in your pouring out! Major! I know what young men are! Look at this colorless vial! Twenty drops, three times a day, would send you over the Styx."

"I'm in no hurry, Doctor!" cried Adolf, as his groom announced the horses. "What would it do if I swallowed it all after a 'wine supper?'"

"Oh! You would have a clean bill of health!" the old Doctor chuckled "It would be only 'heart failure,'—heart failure! Don't try it, my boy! Auf wiedersehen! Herr Major!"

Riding like a madman through the leafy lindens, Adolf Stahrenstein raced homewards. Halting his horse on the slope of the valley beyond the castle, his haughty eye rested on its manifold beauties. "Only one old worn-out man between me and the lordship of twenty fiefs. Only an utterly world-depraved cynic between me and the Queen of Queens! By God! It is too much!" He struck his spurs into his steed until the rowels were red, and as he galloped home to Stahrenstein, his horse's feet seemed to beat out only one measured refrain,—"Twenty drops! twenty drops!"

For the dark curse of Cain was settling on Adolf, the reckless, and he coveted the fair dame whom his wicked brother had torn away from a bad world, to a worse doom! Irene, the Veiled Venus, dreamed along her days of gilded misery, in unavailing conjecture.

Pushing her glittering golden hair back from an unabashed brow, she often wondered: "Am I yet sunk so low that they will never find me?" Even in her clinging laces, wrapped in her softest swaths of silk, she would start in the horrid silence of the night, as if ghastly fingers clasped her gleaming silver shoulders.

"Ah! he can never know!" she thought, as her scornful eyes roved over the landscape. "I know that all the letters and papers have been returned from the Bank; for the great Chief of Stahrenstein is all powerful! Gordon will soon forget me! He must! He shall!" And yet the starry-eyed wanton of this distant Austrian Paradise, thought often of a clear-eyed, resolute man, whose arms were once lovingly strained towards her in the midnight darkness of Pittsburg. She shivered as she drew her robes around her. "I cannot die yet! So young! Life is so sweet! And I fear the past that awful past! I am not fit for the future! But—" Her mind went back to the rare, shaded alleys of her Shenandoah home, and the Queen of Queens, covering her eyes, hastened to her lonely room, and drank the hell broth of the sleep potion, which alone could now hide the stately avenues of Seaton Hall from her view! "If Beverly ever finds me, I am lost!" she faltered, as the classic head fell on the lonely pillows, often wet with bitter and unavailing tears!

Driven onward from fault to sin,—from sin to crime,—from crime to shame,—Irene, the waif, asked herself "Can I ever sink lower?" Her animal nature deadened these longings, with its persistent boast: "There is but one Veiled Venus!" For even Graf Stahrenstein's intimates had never feasted their world-wearied eyes on her witching and wonderfully lovely face.

Poor fool of Fortune; she knew not that Adolf Stahrenstein's burning eyes were fixed upon the woman his brother had found so fair, and that this modern Cain had tremblingly mixed in the beaker of his Chief and heart brother the first, and not the last, "Twenty drops!"

As the summer roses drooped and faded, the great noble felt his pulse weaken daily. In her lovely boudoir, Irene, the Veiled Venus, hung over Max Stahrenstein, for the lack-lustre eye, and fluttering nerve, told of the beginning of the end. "I cannot leave you now, Max!" said Major Adolf, as the physician imperatively ordered "The Riviera!" "I must have my leave extended."

The brothers were alone. Even the physician respected the coming crash of the stately oak. Irene, (the lovely world-waif,) was a lonely bird, in a gilded cage.

"Adolf!" said Max. "Stay with me The hand of death is on me! You will not have long to wait! You will rule at Stahrenstein! But, my boy!" he said gently, "don't leave me; I have a debt of honor to pay. If I do not live to pay it, I leave it as a sacred legacy to you!" And as he spoke, the thrilling voice of Irene, the waif rose in her glorious chant of love, "Adelaide."

The glass fell from Adolf Stahrenstein's hand. The "Twenty drops" were wasted for once!

"Don't be nervous, Adolf!" the old campaigner said. "That's the debt! You must pay it! That woman!"

Adolf Stahrenstein refilled the potion. His eyes were steel blue in their lustre. "Max!" he said, "I will guard her with my life!"

"That's right!" cried Max, sinking back on his pillows.

Four days later, the Schloss Stahrenstein was only tenanted by the ancestral pictures and the gloomy shadows of night, falling on spire and turret, mantling the old castle in gloom. From the far, dim blue mountains, the shriek of the owl sounded sadly on the air.

"That's a death in the family!" said Forester Hans, as he laid away his rifle, and lifted a foaming flagon to his lips. "One goes; another comes! There's always a Stahrenstein! But the old Graf looks peaked! Ach! Gott! What a wild man in his youth. I taught him to shoot!" And rosy Gretchen (with her waist encircled by the forester's arm,) told of the wondrous beauty of the "Witch of Schloss Stahrenstein!"

"Not the first,' growled Hans, "but I think this one is the last! They are a mad race, these Stahrensteins! The sword, women, wine, play, duels, —nothing left untasted,—no deviltry, —no madness forgotten!' and the good yeoman reflectively smoked his pipe, while a crooning peasant dame told of the walk of the "White Lady.' "It means Death," she moaned.

"Well! I'm off, Liebchen!" cried the forester as he shouldered his rifle and plunged into the soft thrilling darkness of the summer night.

When Irene, the lawless Lady of the Castle, gazed with a shrinking aversion, upon the relics of her past life, she realized that there had been deft fingers handling the contents of her modest belongings! Fear thrilled her very marrow, as she prepared for her voyage to Nice. In an hour she was measurably re-assured. An old glove, —a little packet of papers,—the dagger, these trifles were probably thrown on some shelf by Victorine! "Silence!" she murmured with a set face. "I must be silent!" for Joseph had reported Victorine as quietly domiciled in Paris. "There is nothing more to do! No! As for the Bank;—all the papers were sent back on Gordon's telegram! But I am too near Paris at Nice! If Jenks were only dead! Beverly would never know me now. I am almost safe! I will bury deep the dead past! No one can identify me now with the unknown girl who sang 'Ave Marias' in an American cathedral!"

The Veiled Venus shook her golden coronal in defiance. "Those trifles! The maid probably threw them away

WOMAN DIES OF FEAR

Farm Laborer's Wife Is Found Dead Near Havelock.

Theory of the Doctors Is That Outrage Was Intended and That Mrs. Crissy Deline Died of Fright—Her Husband Is Slightly "Queer" and His Own Story Is Not Very Coherent—No Stranger Was Seen.

This is the conclusion reached by Dr. Holdcroft, of this place, and Dr. Ford, of Norwood, concerning the death of Mrs. Crissy Deline, who was found dead by her husband, Hugh Deline, in the woodshed of her home, 6 1-2 miles northwest of here on Thursday night.

To the local authorities the case is a mystery, and the whole countryside, from Peterboro down, is much excited. That foul play was committed is certain. The dead woman's face was scratched deeply in several places on each side of the nose, as though she had been clawed with stout finger nails. There was an abrasion on the left side of the forehead, a slight bruise on the right side of the neck, another below the left collar bone, and there were distinct marks around each wrist, indicating that the hands had been tightly tied together by a stout cord. From the way the body was lying when examined by the coroner's jury, and the nature of these marks, opinion would point strongly to the idea that the dead woman's assailant had intended an outrage. The postmortem report of Drs. Holdcroft and Ford will state, however, that this was not accomplished.

Dr. Holdcroft yesterday said that the marks on her body were superficial and not sufficient to cause death. There were no signs of strangulation or smothering, but there were plain indications of terrible fright and death was probably due from shock.

In the search for theories, neighbors are recalling a remark made by the husband of deceased on Monday last:

"I wouldn't be surprised to go home some night and find my wife dead," he is accredited with having repeated several times.

Joseph Doughty, a neighbor, states that Deline made that remark to him four times. James Buchanan's son and Robt. Buchanan, brother of James, a neighbor, also declared he said the same to them. Jas. Buchanan, it is understood, further substantiates this statement, but he has been ill since Thursday and could not be seen.

The fact, however, that Mrs. Deline had been taking medicine, as she complained frequently of severe pains in the head, rather tends to detract from any significance to the remarks. Mrs. McMillan, a neighbor, had, on the evening of the tragedy, read the directions on a bottle of medicine for Deline (who could not read) which he was taking home to his wife, but it has turned out to be soothing syrup. Coroner Kinred, however, has taken charge of the dead woman's stomach with the idea of having it analyzed.

Constable Bennett and County Constable Elias Williams are a little puzzled to account for the lapse of time between the last time Deline was seen prior to the announcement of the tragedy and when he spread the news. Deline had been helping Robt. Buchanan harvest his buckwheat from early morning until after supper, and after helping to milk Buchanan's cows, started for home. On the way he called at McMillan's farm house, where he milked another cow and departed. Mrs. McMillan tells the constables that it wouldn't be later than 8 o'clock when he left. It is not a mile from there to Deline's home, and should be walked in 15 minutes easily.

The neighbors all agree that they never knew of any unfriendliness between Mr. and Mrs. Deline, though they did not mix much with them to know. The unfortunate young couple —they are both 25 years old—never visited and were not called upon. They moved up from Bannockburn in Madoc Township, last fall, he working as a farm laborer, mostly for the Buchanans, of whom there are three brothers, on separate farms, all fairly thrifty. Joseph Buchanan rents and runs the Grattan farm, and it is on his property the rude house in which Deline lives, is situated. It is a good half mile from the nearest neighbor, sits far back from any traveled thoroughfare, and is completely hidden from the view of the roadways by woods.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Deline had been denied ever a meagre education. The man himself has been regarded as a little "queer," having some nervous trouble that affects his speech, and when he is aroused, his lips will emit frothy saliva. Jas. Buchanan's son volunteered the information Saturday that Deline has often halted in his work in the fields and let out queer little shouts, apparently for no reason.

Threw Herself From Window.

New York, Sept. 19.—Hurling aside her two daughters and her husband, who tried to save her, Mrs. Margaret Schunk, forty-nine years old, killed herself Saturday by diving from the sixth floor window of her home, at No. 1247 avenue A. The woman had been suffering from melancholia for some time. Every bone in her body was broken by the fall.

Cree Indians Consumptive.

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—W. J. McLean of Winnipeg, who has just returned from James Bay, reports that considerable consumption prevails among the Cree Indians, whom he was paying off. They are fairly prosperous, however. He found the waters of the Abitibi River higher than for sixteen years.

Throwing the Lasso.

(New York Sun.)

The cowboy is not the only man on earth that can rope things. The tugboatman also is pretty handy with a lasso.

When a tugboat comes alongside a wharf there is very likely to be somebody there willing to take a line and drop it over a spile, but if there shouldn't happen to be, there may be on the boat a deckhand who can drop the loop of a hawser over that spile without leaving the boat, who can lasso the spile. In fact, there are plenty of deckhands who can do that, throw the hawser up over the rail of the boat, and over the stringpieces of the wharf, to have the loop drop with certainty down around the hitching post.

Twelve or fifteen feet is about as far as such a lasso can be thrown, on account of the hawser's weight; that length of it is about as much as any deckhand can handle; but even at that distance lassoing the post is a nice thing to do, as any novice would discover who tried it. The deckhand can do a good deal better still with a heaving line.

Let the boat be coming alongside a wharf or alongside another boat or lighter moored to the wharf end, and if the occasion requires it a deckhand on the approaching boat will make a bowline in the end of a heaving line and throw that a distance of twenty-five feet, the lasso loop on the end of the line to settle with precision around the spile or timber head aimed at; the experts get it every time. Then if this is a heavy heaving line and the tugboat isn't too big, they may, by judicious handling haul the boat alongside by this heaving line if they are going to stay there only a little while without putting out a hawser at all.

When packing lay a sheet of tissue paper between the folds of your skirts, and if the trunk will not take them full-length put a soft wad of paper where they turn over.

LOCOMOTION'S PROGRESS.

Edinburgh Cannot Decide Who Was Inventor of Pneumatic Tire.

The dispute arose about a statue. Who invented the pneumatic tire? To whom should Edinburgh give honor in bronze or marble—to R. W. Thomson who patented an air filled tire in 1845 or to John Dunlop, who invented the pneumatic tire in 1888? The dispute carries the imagination back over one of the most astonishing episodes in industrial history.

It was in 1845 that Thomson patented the idea of affixing a "belt" filled with compressed air to the rim of a carriage wheel, and, although his invention never came into practical use he showed great knowledge of the good effects which would follow from the use of the pneumatic tire.

Forty-three years later John Dunlop, without any knowledge of the Thomson invention, patented a pneumatic tire. The safety bicycle had then come into vogue, but its wheels were shod with solid rubber tires. Mr Dunlop's little son possessed a tricycle, and as the Dunlops then lived in Belfast and the Irish roads were of very bad surface this veterinary surgeon applied a rubber tube filled with compressed air, and it afforded such comfort to the rider than Mr Dunlop brought the idea before adult cyclists, and some enthusiasm was aroused. But Mr. Dunlop would have hardly been more successful in 1888 than Thomson in 1845 had not another man appeared on the scene.

Harvey du Cros was at that time a prominent figure in Irish sporting circles, and his sons were famous for their prowess in cycle racing. With true business instinct, Mr. du Cros saw the immense possibilities of the pneumatic tire for cycles, and he threw himself heart and soul into the work of making this crude invention practicable. His early efforts were greeted with derision.

Then Mr. du Cros took a band of Irish cyclists, including his sons and R. J. Mecredy, to England, and they gained sweeping victories with the pneumatic tire on the racing track. But for the enterprise and ability of Harvey du Cros Mr. Dunlop's invention might have lain dormant for many years.

Had this been the case the whole progress of modern locomotion from motoring to airmanship would have been checked, for we can trace the direct influence of the air-filled tire in all the astonishing developments of the last twenty-two years. So from the bad state of Irish roads, from the solicitude of a fond parent to make smooth progress for his son's cycle over rough roads, Thomson's idea was recreated, and this time the right man was at hand to develop the idea.

Because a new railroad bridge in Switzerland is on an important line, strategically, it has been provided with a chamber which can be filled with dynamite to wreck the structure in event of war.

GOES THROUGH RAPIDS

Captain Larsen Navigates Whirlpool in Motor Boat.

Intrepid Cleveland Man Runs His Little Craft Through Seething Waters of Niagara Gorge and Is Finally Upset In Devil's Pool—Is Thrown Ten Feet High Time and Again by the Current.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 19.—It was not five minutes after he had told a party of newspaper men that he would not make the trip that Capt. Klaus Larsen of Cleveland, Ohio, suddenly changed his mind yesterday afternoon and successfully negotiated the five miles of water between the Maid of the Mist landing and a point a mile and a half above Lewiston.

Larsen's motor boat, the Ferro, became disabled about an hour before he was scheduled to make the trip. He tied up at the Maid of the Mist landing on the Canadian side and attempted to get his engine going, without success. About 3 o'clock he announced that he would not make the trip, and thousands were disappointed. Then an expert worked at the engine for over an hour before he got it running. Larsen had given it to much oil.

When Larsen found that his boat would run, he suddenly announced that he would make the trip. Pulling off his coat and handing his wallet to someone ashore, he started his little craft out into midstream. He stood erect in the cockpit, with the canvas covering tied securely about his body, just above the waist, leaving his arms free outside the boat. This prevented his getting at his engine, and the machinery again stood still just after the Ferro had successfully passed the whirlpool.

Larsen kept in midstream until he neared the head of the rapids. Then he went in towards the Canadian shore. Most of the rocks in the rapids are near the American shore.

As the Ferro struck the rapids, great waves tossed her clear of the water with as much ease as they would have buffeted about a huge cork. The little craft battled manfully with the seething, tossing waters, at times rearing up and taking a leap, after the manner of a racing auto on an ordinary country road, only more pronounced in her movements into the air. Ten feet leaps into space were taken so many times that Larsen was unable to enumerate them after the trip.

In passing the whirlpool, which was reached in less than three minutes, the Ferro went in towards the American shore, cutting across the eastern corner of the pool. She experienced no difficulty in getting past this treacherous piece of water, but had hardly negotiated the feat when the engine stopped.

"It's the luckiest thing that happened on the trip, that the engine held out until I got past the pool. If it hadn't, I would not be here now, I think," said Larsen after he left the boat.

Three minutes after the engine stopped the Ferro struck a big wave that completely overturned the craft in just about the Devil's Pool. She righted herself with no difficulty. It was here that her intrepid navigator injured his leg. He said it all happened so quickly that he had no time to think.

From now on Larsen was the plaything of the mighty river, unable to hold the course, the boat swinging from one side to another. After getting through the Devil's Hole, the Ferro swung toward the rocks on the American side of the river, about a mile and a half above Lewiston, rolled over one boulder and went fast between two others. There Larsen stayed for five minutes, forty feet from shore, working desperately to release the craft. Larsen finally liberated her by working the rudder from side to side, was hit by a comber and sent careening toward the middle.

At the bend, with the Lewiston bridge in sight, the boat drifted toward the American side again, and was then caught in the shore eddy. The Ferro grounded again, this time near enough to shore to be caught by Roy Rockwell of this city, who waded into the water and caught a rope thrown by Larsen.

Larsen wanted to continue the trip, but, having accomplished the worst part of the journey, he was persuaded to board a trolley to Lewiston, setting the boat adrift. She drifted down to Lewiston and was picked up by a fishing boat at five twenty. It was four forty-five when Larsen started on the trip. Only a scratch on the back of his right hand and an injured leg was sustained by Larsen. He was all smiles after he got over his chagrin at the stopping of his engine.

An Automatic Warship.

Berlin, Sept. 19.—A new type of warship, invented by Messrs. Wirth, Beck & Nuremburg, is causing a great sensation in naval stations. All the movements of the new vessels can be controlled from a land station many miles distant.

During recent experiments at Dutzendteich, a 30-foot boat was made to go forward, backward, turn in a circle and fire mines and torpedoes, all its operations, being directed from the shore. Nobody was on board the boat.

Representatives of foreign naval powers are negotiating with the inventors. Experts predict a great future for the new craft.

Three Babes Died In Incubator.

Historic Gold Rushes

H. DE WINDT FORETOLD PRESENT ONE IN STEWART, B.C.

Each Big Branch of the Empire Has Been the Scene of a Gold Madness Where a Few Got Rich—Canada Had the Klondike, Australia the Ballarat Rush and South Africa the Rand Fields

"Stewart went mad. Waiters dropped their trays, workmen their tools, drivers their reins, and stampeded."

Thus a daily paper, in its description of the excitement created in Stewart, British Columbia, when the report came that seventeen miles distant, at a place called Bitter Creek, a great discovery of gold had been made. It is the old, old story of human avarice and greed. Reason disappears when the gold fever seizes on man.

The story of Klondike is even more amazing. The first find of gold of any importance was made in 1897—not by gold prospectors, but by a fisherman—at the junction of the Klondike and Yukon rivers. Immediately the news of the rich deposits of gold which were to be found got abroad there was a mad rush, not only from all parts of America, but also from Europe. Soon 30,000 people were on their way to the diggings, many destined never to return; for some 500 miles of the roughest Alaska country had to be traversed, and the route was literally paved with the bones of those who had joined in the mad rush without stopping to consider the difficulties the journey presented.

Husbands deserted their wives while clerks, merchants, doctors and lawyers sold all they possessed to pay their way to Klondike. But where one unpractical man succeeded in enriching himself, scores of professional miners came away worth hundreds of thousands. In spite of the warnings issued, however, and the fact that it needed a capital of something like $1,500 to get from England to Klondike, hundreds of people came from that country, only to return wrecked in health and pocket.

It is a curious fact that when Mr. Harry de Windt, the well-known explorer, returned from Klondike, in 1897, he said, during the course of an interview published in The Strand Magazine, that the Stewart region was richer even than Klondike. And after a dozen years there comes what may prove to be a romantic corroboration.

The fact is not generally known, perhaps, that it was the discovery of gold in California in 1847 which led to the discovery in Australia. Within four years the annual output from the fields of California reached $60,000,000, and it was a Mr. Hargreaves, who went as a miner to California, who first discovered gold in Australia. He was struck by the resemblance of the rocks near his home in Australia to the gold-bearing rocks of California. He systematically searched for signs of gold, and on February 12th, 1851, he found some of the precious metal for the first time.

The excitement created by the discovery was intense. Towns grew up as if by magic. Even police left their employment to try their luck at the diggings, while sailors deserted from their ships as soon as they arrived at a port near the fields. Men flocked in their thousands to Ballarat and Bathurst, and it was at these places where the world's biggest nuggets were found. Fifty miles north of Bathurst three quartz blocks containing 112 lb. of pure gold were discovered, and the famous "Victoria Nugget," a single mass of pure virgin gold weighing 340 oz., was brought from Bendigo. But the largest nugget of all was that christened the "Welcome." This was found at Ballarat on June 4th, 1858, weighed 2,516 oz., and was valued at over $40,000. Within ten years gold to the enormous value of $480,000,000 had been brought to England from the two colonies of Victoria and New South Wales.

Two years ago one of the discoverers of the famous Kalgoorlie goldfield in Western Australia passed away in the person of an Irishman named Daniel Shea. He and a compatriot named Hannan, while prospecting for gold, camped on the site of Kalgoorlie when it was a wilderness. Hannan, in searching for a horse, kicked a nugget of gold. The news spread, a rush set in, and the wealth of the place soon became apparent. Hannan and Shea as the pioneers were awarded pensions of $500 a year—now the annual output of the Kalgoorlie goldfield is between $10,000,000 and $20,000,000.

There are, however, no gold mines so rich as those of the Transvaal. Since 1884—the year the world's greatest goldfield, Witwatersrand, was discovered—until June, 1908, the total value of the gold production of the Transvaal amounted to no less than $1,000,000,000. It was a prospector named Arnold who first discovered that gold lay among the bare and lonely hills of Witwatersrand. In this case there was no great rush, for the simple reason that there was no chance for the miner without capital.

There are still more chances, however, for prospectors, like Croesus, the first really rich man known to fame, who is said to have discovered a little gold mine of his own, to find one for themselves; for, according to authorities, the world contains several unworked goldfields quite as rich as any yet discovered. Parts of Siberia are alleged to be richer in gold than Klondike, while Sir Martin Conway said some time ago that along the eastern slope of the Andes run many rivers rich in gold.

A HINDU LEGEND.

Brahma made up his mind to make the world and a man and woman. He made the world, and he made the man and then the woman and put them on the island of Ceylon. According to the account it was the most beautiful island which man can conceive—such birds, such songs, such flowers and such verdure! And the branches of trees were so arranged that when the wind swept through them every tree was a thousand aeolian harps.

Brahma when he put them there said, "Let them have a period of courtship, for it is my desire and will that true love should forever precede marriage."

Then they had their courtship, with the nightingale singing and the stars shining, and the flowers blooming, and they fell in love. Imagine that courtship—no prospective fathers or mothers-in-law, no prying and gossiping of neighbors, nobody to say, "Young man, how do you expect to support her?" Nothing of that kind. They were married by the supreme Brahma, and he said to them: "Remain here. You must never leave this island." Well, after a little while the man said: "I believe I'll look about a little."

He went to the northern extremity of the isand, where there was a little narrow neck of land connecting it with the mainland, and the devil, who is always playing pranks with us, produced a mirage, and when he looked over to the mainland such hills and vales, such dells and dales, such mountains crowned with snow, such cataracts clad in bows of glory, did he see there that he went back and told his wife: "The country over there is a thousand times better than this. Let us migrate." She, like every other woman that ever lived, said: "Let well enough alone. We have all we want. Let us stay here."

But he said: "No; let us go." So she followed him, and when they came to this narrow neck of land he took her on his back like a gentleman and carried her over. But the moment they got over they heard a crash and, looking back, discovered that this narrow neck of land had fallen into the sea. The mirage had disappeared, and there was naught but rocks and sand, and then the supreme Brahma cursed them both to the lowest hell.

Then it was that the man spoke. "Curse me, but curse not her. It was not her fault. It was mine."

The supreme Brahma said, "I will save her, but not thee." And then she spoke out of her fullness of love, out of a heart in which there was love enough to make all of her daughters rich in holy affection, and said: "If thou wilt not spare him, spare neither me. I do not wish to live without him. I love him." Then the supreme Brahma said: "I will spare you both and watch over you and your children forever."

READY TO TALK.

A very brilliant Irish lady some years ago arranged that Mr. Lecky should meet an able and famous Irishman of very advanced opinions in politics. It was intended that they should exchange views, and the Irishman had a good deal to say about Mr. Lecky's later work and was well able to put what he had to say in the most effective language. The door opened, and Mr. Lecky was announced. He was introduced to the Irishman, and before the latter had time to say anything the historian began a political harangue which he kept going without cessation the whole time he was there. The Irishman at first tried to break in with a word, but he was swept away, as it were, in the unceasing flow of Mr. Lecky's language, so after a time he sat in amused bewilderment, waiting until nature gave out. But when Mr. Lecky felt he was getting exhausted he rose from his chair and shook hands with the hostess and her guest, keeping on talking all the time. They came out with him to the top of the staircase, but could not get a word in edgewise even then, as he talked all the way down to the door and was even in an unfinished sentence when the door was shut behind him. They looked at each other and roared.

FIRST ENGLISH BOOK ON SPORT.

The first book on sport ever printed in the English language was a rhymed treatise called the "Boke of St. Albands," its author being a woman, Dame Juliana Berners. Its second edition was printed by Wynkyn de Worde in 1496. A descendant of her family, Lord Berners, was the translator of Froissart's "Chronicles." It is true that old manuscripts existed, such as the "Venerie de Twecy" of the time of Edward II., but it was Dame Juliana who was the real ancestress of sporting literature in England, for she also composed an essay on hawking and another on "Fishing With an Angle," the last being of such excellence that Izaak Walton himself did take a hint from its pages.

A titled kleptomaniac almost a century ago was the Countess of Cork. She had a reputation for stealing any thing she could lay her hands on, whether it was useful or valuable or not. Once, when leaving a country house where she had been staying, she saw and quietly picked up a hedgehog that was crossing a hall, a pet of the porter's, and took it away in her carriage. Finding it an uncomfortable foot-warmer, she decided to dispose of it at the first town where she changed horses and then offered it to a confectioner in return for a sponge cake.

BEFORE MARRIAGE.

Fuddy—There would be fewer unhappy marriages in the world if men and women would try to find out each other's disposition during courtship instead of doing their best to deceive one another.

Duddy—Yes, I guess there would be, as you say, fewer unhappy marriages. In fact, there would be fewer marriages of any kind, I guess.

TEA FOR THE GUARD.

The Festivities Were Conducted on Strict Military Lines.

While looking for Pirates along the Chinese coast Admiral John Moresby encountered some strange adventures and some that were ludicrous. One of his experiences he describes in "Two Admirals."

When visiting the mandarin of Tien Pach, he with his blue button, robes and attendants, I with our paymaster, gunner and a guard of ten marines, and a sergeant, tea was offered to us and accepted as a matter of course. Then, in an access of politeness the attendant proceeded with the tea to the guard, stiffly drawn up in the courtyard, the men with rifles shouldered.

The sergeant looked round distractedly for guidance: he had no precedent for a tea party on duty. The men stared with cool contempt at the spoonful of acid tea.

Fearing lest a refusal might be an affront, I hastily said, "Sergeant, let the men take it."

He looked at me for an instant with a long, horrified look of remonstrance; then, stepping to the front as if drilling, he gave the word:

"Order arms! Ground arms! Take the cups! Drink the tea!"

Like Wordsworth's "forty feeding like one," they grasped the cups and with a single gesture emptied them down their throats.

Next came the stately commands: "Return the cup! Take up arms; Shoulder arms!"

It was done. The sergeant was himself again; he felt he had been equal to the occasion, and I stifled my unseasonable laughter in a cough and a handkerchief.

FISHING FOR TUNA.

(Sydney Record.)

Colonel C. G. Conn, whose band instruments are blown in every city of America, but who is better known in Cape Breton as a millionaire sportsman, has trekked westward again after chasing the tuna for several weeks without tangible remuneration for his pains. The white-haired, eagle-eyed Colonel is nothing daunted, however, He will come again next year.

"Do you think that the Cape Breton tuna can be landed?" a Record reporter asked of Colonel Conn as he sat in the Sydney Hotel last evening just before taking the train for Indiana. "Yes," was the reply, "I am sure of it." Then the all-American fisherman proceeded to explain why he was able to exhibit such confidence in the accomplishment of a feat which has never yet been turned.

"I am rather disappointed that I have to return without having landed an Atlantic tuna," he said, "but I have labored, I believe, under the disadvantage of striking a season when the fish are scarcer than during several seasons. I am told by the native fishermen that this is the case.

"Then, too, we have labored under the incubus of having extreme difficulty in securing bait. Herring and mackerel have been almost as hard to secure as have the tuna themselves, and we have had to send long distances for them. Even when we did have the bait the tuna lay around in schools and refused to take it, although we exhausted every artifice within our knowledge.

"I hooked three of the big ones in all. One I held for an hour, one for a minute and one for between two and three hours. The fish are bigger here than at Catalina, going, I should judge, from 300 to 800 pounds, but there is less fight in them than in those of the Pacific Coast. This is but natural, as any variety of fish is more sluggish in cold water than in warm.

"Two of these fish I had at the surface when I lost them through accident to my gear. One of them was so large that my 72-inch leader only reached to his dorsal fin. Another I had so near to the boat that I had wound in a portion of my thirty-foot leader when I lost him. One of these fish I lost by trying to manoeuvre him close to the boat a little prematurely, straining my tackle so severely that I broke my rod after I had brought the tuna to the surface. Another, which I had in the same position, lashed out with his tail and cut in two the 36-strand line which I was working, each strand of which was capable of holding a weight of 70 pounds.

"There is only one way of working a fish the size of a Cape Breton tuna. He must be chased and worried along after he is hooked until his heart is broken. It is no use to hook a fish of such power and attempt merely to let him tire himself out by his own exertions. You must press him by making all speed after him and giving him something more to do than he feels like doing of his own accord. While his head is away from you, you cannot hope to do anything with him. He could tow you around the bay for a whole day and never feel the exertion. I think Mr. Ross realizes that this method, which is the one he has been following, is not the correct one for fish of the size you have here. Nothing can be done with a power boat because one cannot be turned quickly enough. A row boat is the only practicable craft. If your fish takes it into his head, he can dive directly under your boat, and if you are in a power boat you will probably break your line before you get him as you want him again. Some of the fishermen, too, have been attempting to manage with only one oarsman. I found after my first experience that one man could not furnish enough power for the long fight which may be expected from one of these fish."

Col. Conn has fished in almost every part of America. He wears the blue button of the Santa Catalina Fishing Club, the high-trophy awarded in America; he has landed a 2,600-pound giant ray at Cape St. Lucas, with the assistance of a steam yacht and a crowd of Mexicans; and, in short, he spends practically all of his time in hunting for choice bits of fishing, but he declares that he has never encountered anything more delightful than Cape Breton's combination of placid coves, crisp air and sunny summer days. He will write a booklet on tuna fishing here as compared with that at Catalina, and he undoubtedly will come again.

THE OSTRICH.

That ostriches hide their heads in the sand and think that their bodies are thereby hidden seems to be pure myth, says The London Times. Old birds on the nest and young birds when seeking to evade notice squat close to the ground and stretch their necks out flat on the sand. In the case of the young, which harmonizes as perfectly with their sandy surroundings as young ringed plover do with the stones on a beach, the ruse is said to render them almost invisible, and on the wide expanse of the desert it is evident that the upright neck of a sitting bird would render it unnecessarily conspicuous to a marauding enemy. But there is no more ground for accusing the ostrich of "self illusion" than there is for bringing the same charge against the partridge chick, which by merely sitting still among the grass practically disappears from sight.

SCARED THE SAVAGES.

The pluck of Sir Harry Johnston, the famous explorer, who has lately been elected a corresponding member of the Italian Geographical Society "in recognition of his research work in Africa," is unquestioned, but stratagem has got him out of many a tight corner. On one occasion his zareba was surrounded by a howling mob of savages, who sent an envoy asking him to surrender. Sir Harry merely told the envoy that they had smallpox in the camp, and a wretched albino was trotted out as the awful example. Five minutes later the scared tribesmen were busy putting as large a stretch of Africa as time would permit between themselves and danger. As Sir Harry well knew, they were more afraid of "the white disease" than they were of all the inventions of Maxim!—Tit-Bits.

The Brotherhood Of St. Andrew

CLOSING SESSIONS OF CONVENTION LARGELY ATTENDED.

Montreal, Sept. 19.—The convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew was brought to a successful close last night with a farewell meeting in St. George's Church, at which brief addresses of encouragement were delivered by Bishop DuMoulin of Niagara. Bishop Farthing, and Bishop Worrell of Nova Scotia. The principal event yesterday was the mass meeting for men in St George's Church, presided over by Bishop Worrell, the subject being "Canada's Problem; The Development of Manhood." the speakers were Bishop Taylor-Smith, Chaplain-General to His Majesty's forces; Rev. Canon Almon Abott of Hamilton and Mr. N. F. Davidson of Toronto. Hundreds of men were unable to gain admittance to the church.

Anglicans and Their Faith.

On Saturday night Canon Tucker of Toronto addressed a large gathering on the duties of laymen, and incidentally replied to Father Vaughan's "soulless religion" sermon by pointing out that the Church of England was perfectly satisfied with its religion, "a living faith in a living Christ." He declared that laymen had a large part in the Church of England. Though it was a divinely-appointed body established by Christ Himself, and as such was governed mainly by the Christian orders of the Bishop, priest and deacon, there was the priesthood also of the laity. They were all kings and priests unto God where all heartily took part. Spiritual life was of a two-fold nature, both giving and receiving. Every man should be a priest in his own household gathering his family around him for daily prayer. There was no higher priesthood than that of men and women who taught the young in religion.

The Lord's Day Alliance.

There was also the priesthood of finance. They who gave of their means were ministering unto God! There were a number of bodies, such as the Y. M. C. A., working for the moral uplift of the people, and the Church should throw the whole weight of her experience behind them 'You have all heard of the Lord's Day Alliance, I dare say," remarked the speaker later, "and though the zeal of some of its members may outrun their discretion, there is no reason why we should not support the Alliance,"

During Saturday's sessions, Mr. B J. Hart, probation officer of the Ontario Society for the Reformation of Inebriates, gave an interesting sketch of the work of his society.

Pille, the Bohemian.

Pille has been all his life long the worst dressed man in Paris; he looks the shabbiest of all the shabby artists, poets and songsters who people that ideal resort of bohemian life, Montmartre. He used for many years to live in a fine four storied house on the Boulevard de Rochechouart. There he occupied on the second floor an immense front room with four windows, two of which opened on a balcony, wherefrom a really fine view was obtainable to the left and right on the boulevard. When the quadruple range of trees were in foliage it was his favorite recreation to lean on the balustrade of the balcony, and, smoking his eternal cigar, to observe the bustle and hustle of the passing people and vehicles. I myself had been at the time dwelling just opposite. One hot July morning I left my den and came down to the boulevard in search of a companion for a drink. Pille was on the balcony.

"Alloha!" he shouted. "What are you looking for?"

"For a companion and a drink!" I shouted back.

"I'm coming!"

He came down, wearing a reefer jacket of threadbare frieze, a stain-covered scarlet red Bretonish waistcoat, color besmeared canvas trousers, slippers of an indefinite stuff and color, and a hat—well, a hat a ragpicker would have refused to pick up with his hook.

"You do look a beauty!" I exclaimed in shaking hands.

"Where shall we go?" he asked.

"Wherever you like," I replied.

"Then let's go to the Mille Colonnes," he said.

The Mille Colonnes was the most respectable cafe of Montmartre. Well-to-do tradesmen, employees, rentiers and such kind of people used to play there their games of cards or dominos. No Bohemians frequented this trysting place of the Philistines.

Slowly the waiter advanced to our table and said:

"Messieurs, I have to remind you that we charge 40 centimes for a Pernod."

"Is that so?" replied Pille. "Then," he added in a stentorian voice, throwing a five-franc piece on the table so that it sounded like a gong, "garcon, bring two of them for each of us."

The noise brought the boss of the show forward, who at once recognized Pille, and, advancing rapidly, rubbing his hands—every Parisian cafetier rubs his hands when he sees a distinguished guest in his establishment —smiling, courtesying:

"Ah, cher maitre, what honor for my humble house! What can I do for you?"

A week or two later a heat wave went over Paris. After a sleepless night, at 5 o'clock in the morning I went down on the boulevard for a breeze of fresh air. Pille was already on his balcony, leaning on the balustrade, a cigar in his mouth.

"What brought you out so early?" he asked me.

"The heat," I replied.

"Come up. It's cooler here."

"I will."

"But ring gently, not to startle the old housekeeper."

Gently I did ring, noiselessly the door sprang open and quietly I went up the two flights of stairs. At the landing place Pille received me. I lit my pipe, he relit his cigar, together we went on the balcony, leaned on the balustrade and breathed the balmy morning air. Suddenly the braying of a donkey could be heard. "My friend is coming," said Pille, and left the balcony. A ragpicker's donkey cart stopped before the house. The donkey looked up and brayed. Pille returned, carrying a huge bundle of carrots, which he dropped over the balcony on the pavement. The bundle broke, the carrots jumped and were strewn all over the roadway. The ragpicker collected them and fed the donkey. The animal brayed his thanks up to Pille, who looked down on the welcome spectacle.

"How did you become such good friends with that donkey?" I asked.

"Well," replied Pille, "that's a rather peculiar thing."

"Narrate."

"You see, on the same 14th of July on which I had been decorated with the red ribbon of the Legion of Honor this very donkey won the bunch of red ribbons at the donkey race of the Buttes-Montmartre. We had been honored on the same day. Such comradeship must be kept in memory."

A Message of Peace

MGR. BRUCHESI LOOKS FOR HEALING OF DIFFERENCES.

Montreal, Sept. 19.—The feature of the annual ceremony of blessing the half million dead lying in the Catholic cemetery behind Mount Royal yesterday afternoon was the reference made by Archbishop Bruchesi to the recent Eucharistic Congress. His Grace paid eloquent tribute to "the support received from our separated brethren," and added he hoped the time was coming when, through the mercy of God, there would be but one cemetery in Montreal, and that all religious barriers separating the people would disappear. Thousands witnessed the ceremony of sprinkling holy water, and the singing of the Libera by the choirs was impressively simple. Archbishop Bruchesi was attired in mouring robes.

Hours of Labor Cut For Employees.

McCORMICK MFG. CO. MAKE A POPULAR MOVE — NO REDUCTION IN WAGES.

London Advertiser, June 13th, '10.

"Hereafter, the girls will commence work at 7.30 a.m., and quit at 5.30 p.m., making a nine-hour day, in place of ten, as it has been all along. The men will commence at 7 a.m., and quit at 5.30, in place of 6 o'clock."

Perhaps the most pleasant feature of the announcement was that although there will be a reduction in hours, there will be no reduction in pay This will mean from 5 to 10 per cent. increase in wages, and will amount to a very large sum to the firm annually.

An Advertiser representative called on Mr. T. P. McCormick, vice-president of the company, this morning who confirmed the above, and said that the reason the firm made this move was that after a close study of conditions they felt that they would get more efficient service from their employees, and that a reduction in hours would be mutually profitable to all.

NEW ARTILLERY FOR THE CZAR WILL BE BUILT BY A FOREIGN FIRM.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 19.It has just St. Petersburg, Sept. 19—It has just ernment has ordered new artillery abroad at Le Creusot for some 3,000,000 roubles, despite the pledges to the Duma that orders for fresh ordnance would be given to Russian works. The only plausible excuse for the deviation from the professed policy of the encouraging national industries is that French works are liable to deliver six months earlier. This explanation is not considered satisfactory in view of the present state of universal peace. It is rumored that the actual reason for this exceptional favor shown to a foreign firm is due to female influence on high personages connected with the department concerned.

The Kingston Whig says: There is quite a lot of petty stealing in downtown stores, and boys are not the chief offenders, either. There are a number of little girls who make a practice of picking up articles from counters and show cases and secreting them about their person. Last evening a little girl was detected in a Princess street drug store, slipping some small articles in a basket she carried. She asked change for a quarter, and before the clerk gave it to her, he went back to tell the proprietor. The girl suspected what was going to happen, and made a bolt for the door and up the street, leaving her quarter behind. Merchants have complained of this petty stealing for some time, and now they have a clue to those who are responsible.

GENERAL HAMILTON.

Many Good Stories Are Told of Lord Kitchener's Successor.

Some good stories are being told of General Sir Ian Hamilton, who was recently appointed to the post of inspector-general of the Mediterranean forces to succeed Lord Kitchener. Here is one of them:

In the late Boer war one of the columns, half regular, under General Ian Hamilton, became so notorious for looting that the soldiers were nicknamed "the Thousand Thieves." Consequently General Hamilton reviewed them one day in a small village near Bloemfontein for the purpose of warning them against any future depredations. The column had just drawn up and was waiting for the general to begin the review when a ragged rooster ran out from a hut and across the front of the line. Suddenly a private left the line and ran after the rooster,

"Halt!" shouted Hamilton.

The soldier ran on. He soon overtook the rooster and turned back, wringing the neck of the fowl. As he passed the general he noted the fierce scowl on his face. The soldier was not easily daunted, but this time he temporized. Throwing the defunct rooster at the feet of the general, he said: "There now; I'll tacte ye t' halt whin the general says so."

At which the column roared with laughter, and even the general smiled, and the soldier got only two days imprisonment.

Continued.

Liveing says that the nerve-storms in megrim have their point of departure of principal focus in the optic thelami, and that the normal course is from above downwards to the nuclei of the vago, and from before backwards in the sensory tract, thus explaining the peculiar visual phenomena.

Of course there are cases of true megrim, when the "point of departure" is from above downwards, but I believe a very large percentage of cases labeled "megrim" are purely ocular in origin, and if the error of refraction or the want of muscular equilibrium is corrected the megrim disappears.

It is a good rule never to attempt to treat a headache as a megrim without previously eliminating eye-strain

Harvest Festival At St. John's Church.

Harvest festival services were held yesterday at St. John's Church, which were well attended. The interior of the sacred edifice was tastefully decorated with grain, fruit, roots and flowers. Rev. W. L. Armitage of Picton, was the preacher of the day and gave two discourses, which were in keeping with the occasion. In the evening the Rev. gentleman's text was from 107th Psalm, 8th verse:

The theme of his address was the goodness of God to mankind in providing material blessings and above all His estimable love in giving His only Son to die for the sins of the world. The Divine made an eloquent appeal to his hearers to accept Christ as the Savious of the world.

James Gordon Joins The Great Majority.

In the death of Mr. James Gordon, which occurred at Kingston on Saturday evening, an aged and well-known resident of this city has passed away to his reward. Deceased, who was in his 80th year, was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland. In the year 1853 or 1854 he came to Belleville, where he had since resided. With the late Mr. Henry Jack, Mr. Gordon was in business here, conducting a tailoring establishment. Afterwards he was for some time a valuator for the Grand Trunk Railway Company. In later years he became the proprietor of what is known as the Walker Foundry, which he conducted for some time. Of late the deceased, owing to ill health, had been unable to attend to any business. Mr. Gordon was for some time a representative of Baldwin Ward in the City Council. He was a canny Scotchman and a man who made many friends. The deceased was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and for years was a member and took an active part in the St. Andrew's Society. In religion he was a Presbyterian, being a member of St. Andrew's Church. In the year 1860 he was married. The widow and one daughter, Miss Katie, survive him. Mr. Gordon was a man who was beloved by all who knew him, and in this city he had a host of friends. The remains will be brought here for interment.

A Cobourg Shooting

TONY TORIS, AN ITALIAN, SERIOUSLY WOUNDS A FELLOW-COUNTRYMAN.

COBOURG, Sept. 18.—A shooting affray took place here Saturday morning about noon, when Tony Toris fired four shots at a fellow-countryman named Cresenzio Anitone. One of the shots went through Anitone's hand, and one inflicted a severe wound in the neck which may prove fatal. The other two shots went wide. Toris tried to make his escape, but was caught by Chief Ruse near the town limit, who went after him in an automobile.

Settlement Has Not Changed Weather.

SUMMER FROSTS AND SEVERE WINTERS IN WEST HAVE NOT DISAPPEARED YET.

Query in the Journal of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada:

Is it true, that the cultivation of the land in the Canadian North-West has appreciably changed the seasons? Are summer frosts and intensely low temperature in winter less frequent than formerly?—F. B. T.

"We have seen then that the winds and weather of the Dominion as well as of the other countries are governed by the general circulation of the atmosphere of the globe; to a certain extent modified by continent and ocean. The air which passes over any territory today is gone to-morrow to other regions and disturbances which lead to temperature changes and rainfall represent the expenditures of such enormous energy that it is difficult to conceive that tillage and drainage of the soil can change the climate of a country to anything approaching the extent that persons unfamiliar with weather maps sometimes imagine.

An observing station was established at Winnipeg in 1871, and in 1883 and 1886 stations were established at Minnedosa, Qu'Appelle, Swift Current Port Arthur, Battleford, Calgary, and Edmonton, and from the records obtained from these stations there is no conclusive evidence of any permanent change in the climatic conditions of the West, either as regards precipitation, or the severity of the winters. There is just some small reason for belief, however, that the plowing up and draining of the land may have a slight effect towards lessening the danger of the summer frost, but evidence in support of this is inconclusive."

Squirrel Whiskey

Kingston, Sept. 17.—Judging from the actions of some arrested drunks of late, squirrel or chemical whiskey is still to be purchased in some drinking places in this city. Enquiries are made as to whether the food inspector takes samples of liquor for analysis by the authorities at Ottawa. At present, the inspector has no instructions to include liquors in his food samples. Only the drinker gets sore when he is given watered whiskey, but when a drink is given for whiskey that makes a man crazy drunk, its contents require to be analyzed.

Making Amends.

Managua, Nicaragua, Sept. 19.—The new municipality of Granada, which was established May 15, has passed an act ordering that the bodies of the Americans, Cannon and Grace, executed by order of ex-President Zelaya, be exhumed for burial at Granada with national honors. A marble monument will be erected to them. If the families desire, the bodies will be sent to the United States.

A decree was published Saturday outlining the program for the government of the country until the constituent assembly formulates the new constitution. The program includes a complete change in the present judiciary, and provides for the security of property and individuals, the inviolability of the domicile and epistolary and telegraphic correspondence, freedom of worship and speeches, freedom of the press and trial by jury, and the abolition of capital punishment and torture.

Jealousy the Cause.

Vancouver, Sept. 19.—Jealousy between two rival trappers was responsible for a cold-blooded murder in the north, news of which reached Vancouver Saturday, when Constable Minty of Rock Bay brought down Donald MacDonald, a Salmon River rancher and trapper, and the body of his neighbor, Frank Savage, shot by MacDonald Sept. 14, during a quarrel.

A charge was laid against McDonald for having beaver skins illegally in his possession, and Savage was sworn in as special constable to execute a search warrant at the trapper's home. MacDonald resisted execution, and Savage called in the aid of another rancher, P. Cushman. As the two special officers came out of MacDonald's hut, after making their search, the latter shot Savage through the breast, killing him instantly. He gave himself up to the provincial police.

Credit Men Want Protection.

Winnipeg, Sept. 19.—An important business meeting of the Canadian Credit Men's Association, at the sixth monthly dinner in the Royal Alexandra Hotel, resulted in the adoption of a resolution to start a $10,000 fund for the prosecution of unscrupulous persons. President H. H. [illegible]ott occupied the chair, supported by R. R. Wilson, vice-president, and the board of governors.

A feature of the meeting was the desire expressed for a higher state of efficiency in mercantile agency service, and a determination to obtain more up to date and reliable information by means of harmonious working together on behalf of the members and agencies supplying the information.

HOW THE NAVY IS RUN

RANKS AND GRADES IN ORGANIZATION OF GREAT SHIPS.

Old Office of Lord High Admiral Has Given Way to a Body Called the Lords of the Admiralty — Under Them Is Naval War Council, and Under That Committee the Admirals of the Fleet.

Once upon a time our navy was ruled by a lord high admiral, a fine old title resplendent with many of our greatest maritime achievements, says a naval expert in a recent article. This ancient office is now represented by the Lords of the Admiralty under the headship of the First Lord, a civilian member of the Government, impersonating the national control of the navy, and responsible to the King and Parliament for the entire naval machine. This responsibility may be described as embracing the building of the required types of ships, the appointment of efficient captains, and the bestowal of honors and rewards upon the proper persons. He, in fact, sees that the policy of the Admiralty is directed in accordance with the policy adopted by his party towards the international situation.

His chief instruments are the Naval Lords of the Admiralty led by the First Sea Lord, who is his adviser touching all matters relating to the efficiency of the navy as a fighting machince. He has the right to appoint officers to positions of second in command, and in effect largely influences all other appointments. Should the readiness of the fleet for war on its mobilization ever fail in emergency, his would be the supreme responsibility. His understudy is the Second Sea Lord, who must be ready to step into his shoes if required. His special responsibility is for the manning of our ships and the training of our sailors, and he may make appointments up to the rank of navigating officer. We then come to the Third Sea Lord, whose duty is the control of shipbuilding, the designs of our ships, their progress and completion as well as the provision of guns and machinery. Below these a junior lord is in charge of transport and coaling, a civil lord of contracts and building, while a permanent secretary deals with the staff of the department and a Parliamentary secretary with finance.

The organization of our navy for war has recently been supplemented by the creation of a new body which is to be known as the Naval War Council. While its functions will be largely analogous to those associated with the general staff of the arm its constitution will differ materially from that of the latter. Its standing members will be only three in number, comprising the First Sea Lord, the Director of the Naval Intelligence Department, and the director of a new department to be known as the Naval Mobilization Department. The latter will now take over all the duties hitherto devolving upon the War College at Portsmouth and upon the Intelligence Department.

Its duties will embrace the preparation and working out of plans for the conduct of war with every possible antagonist and the disposition of our fleets and squadrons in accordance with the strategical schemes decided on.

At this point we leave the administrative for the active and fighting branch, whose chiefs are the leaders of our battle fleets, full admirals, vice-admirals, and rear-admirals—the general officers, lieutenant-generals, and major-generals of naval war. Superior to these are the admirals of the fleet—the field-marshals of the navy—who are generally officers on the retired list. To the hands of our admirals is committed the safety of the realm. Thus the admiral commanding at the Nore guards the mouth of the Thames, the east coast, and coasts of Scotland. The admiral holding the Portsmouth command keeps watch and ward in the Channel from beyond Dover to Torbay; whence the safety of our shores round Land's End and up the west coast is ensured by the admiral in command at Plymouth. These commands are the plums of the service. A fourth admiral is entrusted with the care of the Irish coast.

Vice-admirals take supreme command of a fleet and of an important foreign naval station. The rear-admiral acts as second in command of a sea-going fleet, or may be first in command on a foreign station of lesser importance.

The success of an admiral in any operation of war will entirely depend upon the efficiency of the captains commanding the various fighting units of his fleet. More than ever in these days of mammoth battleships crammed with gigantic engines of destruction will "the captains courageous" of our navy exercise a determining influence upon the issue of battles.

A captain's authority, power, and responsibility, especially when in command of a big ship, altogether transcend those of a colonel in the army. In a vessel carrying, say, 800 men, all confined within a small space, adamantine discipline is indispensable. The captain afloat, therefore, maintains the state of an almost sacred autocrat—a sort of Dalai Lama of the sea—living and messing alone apart from all his subordinates. Acting through his first lieutenant or commander he is responsible that the King's regulations and Admiralty instructions are observed throughout his ship. His further promotion to admiral is determined by seniority, but he may remain a captain from fifteen to sixteen years.

Every rank in the navy has to sustain a heavy weight of responsibility, and probably the commander is more burdened than any. His post is no sinecure, and he has few moments of leisure. He seems, indeed, to be a portion of the machinery which is always in most active operation. Not a detail of the interior life of the ship escapes him.

There are three grades of lieutenants—the sub, the junior, and the senior lieutenant.

Seventy square feet of belt surface per minute will transmit one horse power.

A meat and fruit press that a Pennsylvanian has patented is inclined so that the juices flow into a receptacle placed under it as rapidly as they are extracted.

CANNOT BE ARRESTED.

Ambassadors and Their Servants Are Immune.

Except on felony charges peers of the realm are immune from arrest. If they are arrested for treason or felony they can demand to be tried by their fellow nobles, and should they have the misfortune to be sentenced to death they can exact the use of a silken cord instead of the hempen rope commonly used by the public hangman.

The members and servants of every one of the foreign embassies to the Court of St. James's cannot be touched by British laws, even if they commit murder. The official headquarters of the representatives of foreign powers in London are the territory of the particular country or state which the embassy in question represents. This being so, the laws passed by Parliament and the judges, being operative only in the dominions of the King, have no effect upon the persons residing in the little foreign "countries."

The reason why ambassadors and their servants have this advantage over the average Britisher is that during the reign of Queen Anne a statute was passed by the law makers owing to an imbroglio arising from the seizure of a Russian envoy's effects for debt. This law, which was passed for "the preserving of the privileges of Ambassadors and other public Ministers of foreign Princes and States," has it that any person "presuming to prosecute any writ or process for the arrest or imprisonment of an Ambassador or his domestics shall be deemed a violator of the law of nations."

Though exemption from criminal courts is granted to foreign diplomats and their servants, there is no written law declaring the fact. It is merely a privilege of international law. Immunity from criminal jurisdiction was not always granted to these persons, for it is on record that a secretary of the Portuguese Legation, who was arrested for killing a man in the Royal Exchange, was tried by jury, found guilty, and sentenced to death.

Although it is generally known that the laws of Britain cannot affect in any way the King or any member of his family, most people are not aware that no civil action can possibly lie against the servants of His Majesty, including lords of the bedchamber and other officers of the household. The employes of the King while being immune from arrest, cannot go free if they commit a crime, however. All misdeeds committed within the precincts of the royal palaces and residences are tried by special courts presided over by the Lord Steward, Treasurer, Comptroller, and Master of the Household.

Any crimes committed by the servants at Buckingham Palace are adjudicated on by the Board of Green Cloth, whose powers are limited to a circuit of twelve miles from Whitehall; while the Court of Marshalsea, which dates from the reign of Henry VIII., administers justice between the King's servants at Windsor and elsewhere. Both courts are ruled over by the high officials stated.

Members of Parliament cannot be arrested while actually within the precincts of the Commons, and they are immune while Parliament is in session and for forty days before and after. It will be remembered that in 1888 a Metropolitan police officer made an attempt to arrest a member of the Irish Parliamentary party in Palace Yard. His colleagues were greatly upset at the incident, and the adjournment of the House was moved, a committee being appointed to consider the alleged breach of privilege. The breach was finally affirmed, and the unfortunate officer was severely censured by Parliament.

Barristers on circuit, solicitors engaged on a case, and witnesses in any case are temporarily protected from arrest, and clergymen enjoy the same privilege while actually conducting divine service.

Indian Sedition Trials.

The activity of the Calcutta police in the search for arms continues. One night recently the authorities raided a house in Northern Calcutta, and found two revolvers, some gun barrels, and a quantity of cartridges. The occupants of the house are two Bengali youths, who, however, succeeded in effecting their escape. Information received by the police pointed to this house being the centre of a new conspiracy. Meanwhile the special tribunal is engaged upon the trial of thirteen respectable Bengalis from Khulna, whom the Government charge with conspiracy to wage war against the King. When these proceedings are over, the tribunal will try the sensational Howrah conspiracy case. There are forty-five accused, some of whom are men of wealth and position. All the preliminary hearings will be held in camera. The nature of the charges and also the evidence is unknown.

Dr. Johnson's Fruit Appetite.

No man ever welcomed the return of the fruit season more heartily than did Dr. Johnson. Of strawberries and cream he declared that he could never have enough, though in his later years he devoured enormous quantities of them. A voracious eater at any time, Johnson's appetite for fruits was limitless. Mrs. Thrale says that he used to eat seven or eight peaches before he began his breakfast. Lucy Porter, at Litchfield, used always to keep the best gooseberries on the bushes in her garden until Johnson came down to pick them.

Using Left-Over Apples.

There is money even in poor quality apples, and Australian growers are deriving considerable profit from apples formerly thrown away. An apple-evaporating plant has been introduced, and a new industry started, which last year yielded profit of over $5,000,000. The machines pare and core the apples, which are then sliced into chips and dried. Even the cores and skin peelings are utilized, being exported to France for the manufacture of vinegar, sauces, etc.

Electricity, generated from dynamos on the axles, is used in the British royal train for lighting, heating, cooking and ventilation.

Milady's Mirror

"An idea many women possess that all cosmetics are expensive is erroneous," declared a beauty doctor who was anointing the throat of a patient and massaging it vigorously. "Now, why didn't you try cucumber peel for this stain on your neck, instead of coming to me? It is not good business for me to tell you, but really you could have made your throat white if you had taken the cucumber cure.

"It isn't the whole cucumber which has efficacy for bleaching the skin, you know. It is the peel mostly, and so the pulp might just as well be saved for the table. It's good.

"The way to prepare the peel is to slice it in long and thin pieces. There is arsenic in the green, and it is this ingredient which is bleaching. The juice is astringent also.

"When your throat gets yellow you should use at night a cucumber compress. Lay the strips on a piece of muslin and then bind them on with a thin piece of cloth. Put the juicy side of the vegetable next the skin. It isn't flesh making; don't use it under that impression, but it is refreshing and bleaching.

"Such a compress should be put on every night for a week or more, and in addition I think the throat should be rubbed in the morning with some simple cold cream. The grease might be washed off or wiped off, according to the texture of the skin. If the flesh is firm it would not need nourishment for the tissues, as would skin which is withered."

Hair Brushing Hints.

Do not use a brush to remove tangles. This is a too common practice that is responsible for much of the badly split hair of the present day.

Remove tangles with a comb of smooth, even teeth, used gently and regularly, then brush steadily from the roots down to the very end of the hair.

There are few scalps that are not benefited by daily brushing for five minutes. Occasionally, however, when the hair is fine and delicate or is falling badly, brushing should be omitted as too severe.

Brushing with an unsanitary brush is worse than nothing. If it is too much trouble to wash a brush after each using, at least wash it once every two days.

This cleanly precaution takes but a few minutes if a little ammonia is put in a basin of water and the brush dipped into it several times, then into fresh water. Dry quickly in the sun and the back is not injured.

Do not economize in your brush buying. Cheap bristles tear the hair and may injure the scalp. A brush with an air filled back is advised by many hairdressers. When the hair is not heavy a narrow brush, such as is used for shampooing, is a good choice for daily brushing, for it is more likely to get into the scalp.

Another Secret of Beauty.

Sleep is a wonderful beautifier. Nothing so rounds out hollows as sound, healthful sleep, nothing so soothes and mends irritated and broken nerves, nothing so restores the tissues of the tired body as plenty of natural sleep in a well ventilated room, and nothing is fairer and softer and more peacelike than the delicate flush on the cheeks of one who has just stepped out of the realm of dreams, where all things are rose colored.

A clever writer says worry is a mortal enemy to beauty and charm of manner. This is undeniably true. Worry over the inevitable is not only a wrinkle inducer and a frown instigator, but it is a senseless and wicked rebellion against what cannot be helped. Worry clouds the eyes, makes the voice sharp and impatient, puts hard lines about the mouth and destroys poise and gentleness of manner. Whatever is, is best. Therefore one would best control one's feelings and learn as soon as possible to know that bright eyes, a sweet voice and smiles about the mouth will add much to one's beauty and to one's circle of friends. A gentle, caressing touch is a rare possession. It goes hand in hand with beauty of character, and that means tenderness of heart, purity of purpose, honesty of soul and kindliness of thought.

A Shining Nose.

Summer is a sorry time for the woman whose nose shines. She usually resorts to power, which coarsens the pores, or she mops with alcohol, which dries up the skin.

Instead of these, try bathing the parts with hot water in which a teaspoonful of powdered borax has been dissolved to each pint.

Wiping the surface of the nose with a soft flannel or piece of silk keeps down the shine. Do not rub hard or redness results.

To Whiten Skin.

The girl whose face and neck are not as firm and white as she wishes may try the following treatment with good results: Into a pint of fresh sweet milk put one teaspoonful of salt. Dissolve the salt well and wash the face and neck with this at night, letting it dry on and washing off with tepid water the next morning. This makes the skin firm and white if persisted in.

To remove hot-water marks on japanned trays, use sweet oil. Rub it in well till all marks disappear, then polish the tray with dry flour and soft cloths.

The Patient Camel.

The Arabs desire three good things in a camel: It must have a soft back, must not require the whip and must not scream when it gets up or lies down. In desert lands the camel is exceedingly valuable. It is a riding steed and a rapid one, for camels of the desert can accomplish distances and speeds such as no other tame creature will attempt. It is a beast of burden that can carry the heaviest of loads. Besides, the camel supplies its owner with food and clothing. The milk mixed with meal is a favorite dish among the children of the desert. The long hair of the camel is spun into a coarse thread and is used in the manufacture of cloth. At certain times of the year the camel sheds its hair in order to replace its old coat by a new one, and the Arabs pluck it from the skin without hurting the camel and use it to make cloth.

Squirrel and Pine Cone.

If you wished to strip a pine cone you would probably begin at the top—and have lots of trouble. The squirrel knows better than that. He does not prick his fingers or pinch his whiskers or gnaw into the solid cone any more than is necessary. He knows better than to cut off the top and work his way downward or to gnaw into the spiny shields. He whirls the cone bottom upward in a twinkling and then cuts through the thin and tender bases of the scales, soon laying bare the two seeds, which he at once eats. He strips it so easily and quickly that you cannot tell how he does it unless you drive him off and inspect his unfinished work.

Sunrise and the Rooster.

Once there was a man who was awakened every morning by the trumpet of a rooster. This so provoked him that at last, putting his head out of the window, he shouted:

"Miserable creature! Is it not enough that you crow by day? Early every morning you crow and crow until you cause the sun to rise. Then I have to get up and work. If you do not keep quiet in the morning I shall certainly wring your neck."

And so he did, but too late he found that the sun rose from other causes than the crowing of a rooster.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN PRAIRIE CITY.

Big Apartment House at Winnipeg Burns and Many Have Narrow Escapes.

DAMAGE ABOUT $126,000.

Conflagration In Fort Rouge One of the Best Residential Sections of the City — Several Private Residences Destroyed.

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—Fire, which broke out at 2.30 yesterday afternoon in the fashionable residential district of Fort Rouge, and which was not under control till night, did damage roughly estimated at $125,000, while thirty men working on the roof of the unfinished apartment block in which the fire started had a narrow escape.

It broke out in the apartment house of Hicks & Patterson, being erected at a total cost of $150,000, totally destroying it, and then jumped back to McMillan Block, where seven frame houses were speedily licked up. The apartment house was brick and stone, wood finished, and the fire started from an explosion of the plumber's gasoline furnace. A high wind was blowing, and the unfinished structure, being not closed in, the flames spread so rapidly that the men working on the roof were cut off before they recognized their predicament.

Some jumped, others slid down by ropes, and all escaped with a few minor injuries. Forty-five men working inside escaped uninjured.

The $80,000 so far expended on the building is represented by $20,000 insurance.

Racing from house to house, the occupants of the burned residences on McMillan avenue had no time to save even their personal belongings.

Seventy-five firemen and five engines battled with the flames, and F. H. Ireton, engineer of Fire Station No. 4, stoically watched the conflagration lick up his own home.

Archbishop MacLagan Dead.

London, Sept. 20.—Dr. MacLagan, the former Archbishop of York, is dead.

Most Rev. Wm. Dalrymple MacLagan, P.C., D.D., D.C.L., LL.D., was born at Edinburgh in 1826, and was the fifth son of David MacLagan, M.D. He served in the Indian army 1847-52, retiring as lieutenant. He left the army for the church, and was ordained a deacon in 1856. He became Bishop of Lichfield in 1878, and Archbishop of York in 1891. It was he who crowned Queen Alexandra in 1902. He retired from the archbishopric in 1909, and was succeeded by Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Bishop of Stepney, who had a short time before declined to become Bishop of Montreal.

Met Tide-Rip; Are Drowned.

Vancouver, Sept. 20.—A small launch, containing four men and four women, was upset outside the harbor Sunday night, and two men and a woman were drowned. The little craft met the tide-rip, and turned over. An Indian rescued the balance of the women in a canoe, and a launch later picked up the other two men. The names of those lost were: William Woodruff, Robert Young and the latter's sister, Mary.

OBLIGATORY ARBITRATION.

Peace Society Hopes to Effect Treaty Between Britain and U. S.

Boston, Sept. 20.—An unlimited treaty of obligatory arbitration between the United States and Great Britain is the hope of the American Peace Society, as a result of the proposal that the two countries join in 1914 in a celebration to observe the completion of 100 years of peace between them.

The plans for a celebration commensurate with the position among nations of the countries directly interested, and with the occasion, have not yet approached the point, it is said, where details have been definitely discussed, but it is proposed that the observance of the centenary be exclusively along the lines of peace without military forms of demonstration, and that it include a parade of the merchant marine of both nations, as well as features to commemorate the growth and mutual assistance of educational institutions of Canada and the United States.

Accidentally Killed.

Cornwall, Sept. 20.—While working in the lumber woods near Cloquet, Minn., Dan McDougall, son of the late John Ridley McDougall, and brother of the late Alex. McDougall, lot 32, concession 9 of Lancaster, Glengarry, was accidentally killed.

Suffocated In Tar.

Sharon, Pa., Sept. 20.—Playing about a vat of tar yesterday the 2 1-2-year-old son of John Kiss fell in and was suffocated. Several hours after being missed, the child's mother found his body, half submerged in the tar.

Oldest Barrister In Canada Dead.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 20.—Robert Hutchinson, K.C., clerk of the peace in Kent County, registrar of vital statistics, and Norwegian and Swedish consul, is dead, aged 85 years. He was probably the oldest practicing barrister in Canada.

GAYNOR BLAMES YELLOW PRESS.

Hearst Charged With Inflaming the Minds of Mayor's Enemies. In New York.

LETTER TO SISTER.

Mayor Tells of His Feelings When Shot — Not Surprised, He Says, When He Realized That he Was Winged.

New York, Sept. 20.—Mayor Gaynor's own story of the attempt upon his life was published yesterday in the form of a letter written on Sept. 2 by the mayor to his sister, Miss Mary Gaynor of Utica, N.Y. It is a remarkable human document, in which the mayor describes in detail his feelings following the shooting.

The mayor directly accuses the Hearst newspapers of instigating the attack, in which Gallagher was the active agent. False articles, he says, worked upon people of wicked or disordered minds to such an extent that these persons flooded his mail with clippings from the Hearst papers, and caused him to abandon his habit of walking across the Brooklyn Bridge.

"I was not surprised when I was shot," wrote the mayor to his sister. "I had been expecting an assault."

Miss Gaynor, in giving out the letter, said that she did so because she felt it belonged to the whole public, and that the publication would do much good.

Mayor Gaynor, in referring to the pictures of the Reno prize fight, said he had no way to stop the theatres from showing them.

That was the beginning of the attack on him by the Hearst papers. "But the Hearst newspapers kept on denouncing me for not stopping them," says the mayor.

"Finally," continues the mayor, "one day they printed in large type an officer of the Christian Endeavor Society who had called on me and asked me on behalf of that society to stop the pictures, and stated that I told him he was a fool, and was sent by fools. I had never said such a thing.

"Meanwhile, people of wicked or disordered minds would cut these articles out and send them to me with abure and threats.

"Finally they printed that terrible cartoon of me, entitled 'The Barker.' I was dressed up as a ruffian, standing outside of a prison fight with a cane and barking for people to go in and see the sport. Two men slugging each other, one of them down and bleeding, were exposed in the ring."

The mayor says that he has not read a line of what has been published of the shooting, nor does he now remember the name of the man who shot him. Mayor Gaynor wrote that after the shot was fired:

"My next consciousness was of a terrible metallic roaring in my head. It filled my head, which seemed as though it would burst open. It swelled to the highest pitch, and then fell and then rose again, and so alternated until it subsided in a continuous buzz. It was sickening, but my stomach did not give way. I was meanwhile entirely sightless.

"I do not think I fell, for when I became conscious I was on my feet. I supposed they saved me from falling, and they were supporting me. My sight gradually returned, so that after a while I could see the deck and the outlines of the crowd around me. I became conscious that I was choking. Blood was coming from my mouth, and I tried all I could to swallow it, so those around me would not see it.

"Though the thing had not entered my head that morning, I was not surprised when I realized that I was shot. I had had a feeling for some weeks that I might be assaulted, on account of anonymous threats I was getting by mail. I had not received so many nor so regularly since I was opposing the ring corruptions and the McKane conditions in Brooklyn and Gravesend when I was a young man."

Robert Adamson, the mayor's secretory, said last night that the mayor's condition continues to improve. "It is true," he explained, "that he has had pains on the right side of his head since he was shot, but they are due to neuralgia. It is true also that his voice is husky and low. This is because he has been compelled to do too much talking since he left the hospital. The mayor plans to return to his desk at the city hall on Oct. 3, and in the meantime to do as little talking as possible."

Conference of Catholic Charities.

Washington, Sept. 20.—Everything is in readiness at the Catholic University of America for the first national conference of Catholic Charities, which will begin a four days' session next Sunday. At least 300 prominent churchmen from all parts of the United States and Canada, who are interested in this first movement to perfect a permanent national organization of the charitable work of the Catholic Church of the continent, will be in attendance.

Will Send Big Delegation.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—Orangemen here will send a big delegation to Toronto if any demonstration is planned there for July 12th. They are entirely in sympathy with the proposal to have an Orange demonstration there on a large scale to offset the remarks of Roman Catholics in the recent Eucharistic Congress at Montreal.

CHURCH FOUNDED UPON SOCIALISM,

Parables of Christ Full of Socialistic Teaching, Declares Dr. Chown.

ILLUMINATING ADDRESS.

Christian Ideals Differ From Those of Socialism — Social and Moral Reform Conference.

Toronto, Sept. 20.—"The Church of Christ does not stand for competition How could a church stand for competition that believes in the Golden Rule? The Church stands for certain principles, and if the outworking of these principles smashes competition it must go. If this outworking smashes Socialism, then Socialism must go."

In these words Rev. Dr. Chown Associate General Superintendent of the Methodist Church addressing the Social and Moral Reform Conference in Elm street Church yesterday, defined the relation of Christianity to Socialism The General Superintendent took up the social teachings of Jesus and showed point by point where Christian ideals differed from those of Socialism.

The Conference, which was called for the study of downtown social problems and the relation of the Church thereto, opened at 3 o'clock with about 150 delegates from the Methodist churches of the city present.

In showing the connection between Socialism and Christianity Dr. Chown declared that the parables of Christ were full of Socialistic teaching; the constitution of the Kingdom of God was built upon Socialistic teaching. Taking up the points of difference Dr. Chown pointed out that the principal Socialistic theory was that the public should own and control the instruments for production, exchange and distribution of commodities. It was a belief common to all forms of Socialism that all the progress of the world has been made under economic pressure. They held that the progress of the world must be made through class struggle.

Socialism, he continued, was founded upon certain teachings of Jesus, yet Socialism did not care to ally itself with Christianity. It was willing to accept part, but would not accept all.

"I do not believe," said Dr. Chown "that the present scheme of economic arrangement that is in the thoughts of men now will be finally accepted. The final working-out will contain elements of all schemes.

"There is a strong tendency to social action in many directions; in the supplying of light and power and in the postoffice system. How far that tendency is to advance, it appears to me, must be left to the common sense of the people.

"This much is noticed, that when a municipality accepts the responsibility of controlling its utilities very seldom do the people desire to place such matters back into the hands of private companies.'

HUDSON BAY IS CANADA'S

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Many people in Washington are of the opinion that the decision of The Hague Tribunal settles the question of Canada's rights in Hudson Bay. The tribunal decided that "in the case of bays the three marine miles are to be measured from a straight line drawn across the body of water at the place where it ceases to have the configuration and characteristics of a bay. At all other places the three marine miles are to be measured following the sinuosities of the coast."

The entrance to Hudson Bay is narrow, and is British territory. From Button Island, which is the most northerly point on the coast this side of the strait leading to the bay, to Hatten Head, the southerly point on Resolution Island, is a little more than thirty miles. Possibly the figure by actual measurement may be thirty-five miles. After passing through this narrow gate the strait widens until Hudson Bay is reached. The decision of The Hague court is thought to mean that in a case of this kind the interior waters are national and not common to all.

By a section of the press it is admitted that the decision of The Hague Tribunal settles the question in favor of Canada.

STOLE TO BUILD HOME

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—During the past two years Joseph Brisbois has been building a house on Spruce street. He had done nearly all the work himself, and the police claim that practically all the material used in the construction of the house was stolen. For his lumber, it is alleged, he selected D. O'Connor's lumber yard, and from there he collected sufficient to board up his walls. Then he started to hunt for interior fittings. He paid atention to new houses only. Elaborate chandeliers for the drawing-room came from houses on Clemow Avenue and Bell Street. Lavatory fittings were easily found in houses close at hand on Spruce street. A house on McLeod Street supplied the basin. A new dwelling in Rochesterville furnished the drainage pipes. Seven hot air registers were found in a house on Bank Street and verandah posts and a railing come from houses on Percy Street and Carling Avenue. As Brisbois built the house himself, he needed tools. There are many of the kind he wanted in Ottawa. So planes, braces, saws, hammers and other carpenters' supplies, it is alleged, appeared in his house. Like the material in the house itself, they came from all over the city.

Brisbois was brought up in the Police Court this morning and remanded for trial.

CURRENT EVENTS.

As The Intelligencer advocated, the City Engineer was last night placed on the deputation to inspect permanent pavements in other places.

At the Council meeting last evening no mention was made of the electric pumps for the pump house. The sooner this matter is disposed of the better.

When you see the word "special" in front of a despatch in The Intelligencer our readers can rest assured that it is a despatch sent exclusively to this paper and not a bit of the regular press service, or boiler plate sent daily to dozens of papers in Ontario dressed up with a big heading and marked "special." The Intelligencer does not stoop to false or dishonorable journalism. The special despatches in this paper are exclusively our own and sent to us daily by wire.

Speculations in stocks is reported dull both in London and New York, the bulls being somewhat afraid of the future, and with seeming reason. Such a situation, however, may be good for the bulls, without anyone else suffering. They may keep their money in their banks, where, if it does not increase rapidly, it does not disappear while six inches of paper tape is running out of a stock ticker—Montreal Gazette.

The hobble skirt is declared by the Adrian (Mo.) Journal to be the finale of feminine folly. "But," says the Kansas City Journal, "the editor probably will see several more 'finales' before he dies. A 'finale' doesn't last long in woman's fashion world." This thing's getting complicated. Presume that a "finale" is what a woman puts on last.

Physician holds that catching cold is only a bogie, "a veritable lemon among the fruits of the forefathers' medical lore." So mote it be. Unthinking persons of common mold, however, will probably refuse to believe it. Job, when his boils were in full bloom, had a fine chance to start the Christian Science movement, but he didn't. Job was very human. He just grumbled.—New York Telegram.

The payment of $40 a seat to witness the performance of a play would seem high even to the American Croesus, but it appears that the price did not deter Paris folk from attending "Pelleas et Melisande" when a special presentation of the Maeterlinck drama was given Aug. 29 in the ancient Convent of St. Mandrille, now the home of Maeterlinck and his wife, Mme. Georgette Leblanc. The scenes were laid in the various parts of the Convent, and the principal role was taken by Mme. Leblanc. The proceeds were given to charity.

THE MARKET.

The attendance at the market this morning was fair and considerable farm produce was offered for sale at prices which prevailed on Saturday last.

A NOON DRUNK.

A drunk whose name was not ascertainable was at noon to-day taken care of by the police and locked up.

MELBA'S CONCERT.

Between forty to fifty people went to Kingston last night to hear Melba sing—paying from two to four dollars a seat. The company was excellent, gross receipts being about $2,000.

DOESN'T BELONG HERE.

Although the police have made every inquiry to ascertain if Mrs. Maria Halpin resides in this city they are unable to locate such a person. Their search was in consequence of a telegram the Chief received yesterday of the drowning at Elk Lake of Michael Halpin.

A LUCKY FISHERMAN.

Mr. C. I. White of this city, was this morning a proud man and he certainly had occasion to be. Whilst trolling in the bay opposite the city hospital he hooked and landed a maskinonge which when weighed, tipped the scales at 25 1-2 pounds. It was certainly a fine specimen of this gamey fish.

WINS SCHOLARSHIP.

At the recent matriculation examinations at Toronto University, Miss Jessie L. Penfold, a pupil of the Guelph Collegiate Institute, secured three scholarships in classics amounting to over $400. Miss Penfold is a pupil of Mr. J. T. Luton, formerly classical master of Belleville High School.

PICTON FAIR.

Picton opens their two days' Fair to-morrow. The management this year have excelled themselves. They have special attractions galore, which are sure to attract very large crowds. Among the special features is Mr. Bert Daniels, cornet virtuoso, of the "Kilties" Band, who made a decided hit at the Belleville Fair only a few days ago. The entries for the horse races also promise good sport. Special excursion rates via Steamer Varuna.

CIVIC DELEGATION.

It is not yet definitely known just when the permanent paving delegation will leave on their tour of inspection Mayor Marsh said this morning that they were waiting for further information before their plans would be decided on. It is possible, however, that the delegation will leave tomorrow. They will visit Toronto, Brantford and other cities, probably going as far west as Berlin.

THE LATE WM. RAGAN.

The funeral of the late Mr. Wm Ragan who died in Toronto, and whose remains were brought here, took place this morning and was attended by a large number. At St. Michael's Church services were conducted by the Rev. Father Meehan. The interment took place at St. James' Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. J. Fahey, F. Barrett, H. McNabb, W. Wims G. Lee and R. Huffman.

DEATH OF ALEX. REID.

Mr. Alexander Reid, who has been ill for some time passed away last evening in this city. Deceased, who was 44 years of age, was born in Scotland but the greater portion of his life was spent in this city. For some years Mr. Reid was an engineer on the G. T. R. but failing haelth compelled him to relinquish that occupation and recently he had done but light work.

He was a member of the Presbyterian church. A widow and a daughter survive.

BACK FROM CONFERENCE.

Rev. Messrs. B. Greatrix and H. B. Kenny who were in attendance at the Methodist General Conference at Victoria, B. C., have returned home. Both gentlemen express themselves as highly pleased with the trip and also are confident that much good will result to the Church in consequence of the Conference. They speak in glowing terms of the City of Victoria where the General Conference was held. Everything possible was done for the pleasure of the delegates.

KINGSTON'S POPULATION.

Kingston Whig.—While the assessment of Kingston will show a good increase, there seems to be the impression on the part of those who observe civic conditions closely, that the population is not quite as large as it was a year ago, when the increase over the preceding year was only twenty. It is to be hoped that these observers have figured wrongly, but things point to their way of thinking. The assessment has increased, the school population has increased, a large number of new houses have been erected, and yet the population seems to change but little.

CHURCH UNION.

The Kingston Presbytery is meeting here this afternoon in St. Andrew's Church with the Rev. J. R. Conn, of Napanee, Moderator in the chair. Only routine business is being transacted this afternoon. At to-night's meeting the question of church union will be discussed.

THE LATE JAMES GORDON.

The remains of the late Mr. James Gordon, who died at Kingston arrived here this afternoon, and were conveyed to the Belleville cemetery where interment took place. A number of friends of the deceased were at the station to escort the remains to the cemetery. Rev. A. S. Kerr, pastor of St. Andrews Church, officiated at the grave. The bearers were Messrs. H. Corby, J. W. Walker, J. Roy, H. and A. R. Walker.

INTERESTING LECTURE.

That the residents of Ontario are living in one of the most favored spots on "God's Footstool" was again demonstrated when Rev. J. W. MacCallum, in his lecture at Bridge st. Church last evening, showed his vivid pictures of the recent earthquake in Italy and reminded his hearers that Ontario is out of the earthquake zone, and that this part of the earth's crust is older and more stable than the major portion of its surface. The pictures were taken by experts in the photographic art, and told their story of the terrible ruin and desolation wrought by the earthquake wave Amid the ruins of homes were to be seen the bodies of the dead—babes thrown from the cradle, husband and wife together in their last sleep. while the horrors of the times were made more realistic by views of corpses suspended in mid-air in the wrecked houses and left there for a month while the more urgent matter of rescuing the living was attended to. The good work of the American Red Cross Society was emphasized by the lecturer. Godd illustrations of the active volcanoes, Vesuvius, Etna and Stromboli were shown, and also a photograph of a portion of the business section of San Francisco, taken after the earthquake, to demonstrate the superiority of the modern steel framework building as an earthquake resister over the grout construction prevalent in Southern Italy.

The principle of the spring tape measure has been utilized by a Massachusetts inventor of a coiled wire attachment for electric lights to permit them to be carried about a room.

Beneficial results are said to have attended experiments in a London hospital by which asthma, bronchitis and even tuberculosis patients were required to breathe compressed air for a few hours at a time.

Four adjoining governments of European Russia, of a combined area about 17 times the state of Ohio, are almost completely covered with timber, the greatest portion of which has never been explored by civilized man.

FORCE OF GRAVITY.

How It Would Affect Man's Weight on the Celestial Bodies.

If the planet Mars be really inhabited the people who live there must be an exceedingly agile race. The average weight of a man is about 140 pounds, but the force of gravity on Mars is so much less than on the earth that the 140 pound man would weigh only fifty-three pounds if he were transported thither. With such light weight, and still retaining the same strength, an individual would be able to run with the speed of an express train, go skipping over ten foot walls and do various other extraordinary things. On the moon a man would be even lighter.

But on the sun our 140 pounder would have his troubles. Instead of being an airy individual he would weigh in the neighborhood of a ton and three-quarters. He would probably have the greatest difficulty in raising his hand, for that member would weigh about 300 pounds.

According to scientific computation, a man who on earth weighs 140 pounds would on the other celestial bodies weigh as follows:

The moon, 23 pounds; Mars, 53 pounds; Venus, 114 pounds; Mercury, 119 pounds; Neptune, 123 pounds; Uranus, 127 pounds; Saturn, 165 pounds; Jupiter, 371 pounds, and the sun, 3,871 pounds.—Chicago Tribune.

Nothing in a Name.

"Look here, waiter," said Mr. Grouch, scowling deeply over his plate. "I ordered turtle soup. There isn't even a morsel of turtle in this."

"Of course not," returned the waiter. "Shakespeare said there was nothing in a name. If you ordered cottage pudding would you expect a cottage in it? Any tea, sir?"

BEDTIME FOR CHILDREN.

Sunset should be the time for every child under eight years of age. When the chickens go to roost and twilight begins to deepen, the country baby's head begins to droop and he is ready for his cot. The more nervous town baby, who has nothing for an example except the sun, and who, at any rate, on rainy days is used to twilight atmosphere at midday, seldom wishes to go to bed with the chickens.

If he lives in an apartment he must hear drifting down the hall the tantalizing voices of his elders at dinner, and the smell of savory things from the kitchen greets his nostrils. But hard as it must seem the city mother must have even more rigid rules about bedtime than the country mother. Her child is at a greater disadvantage in the first place in not living where he can breathe the purest air in the midst of healing country sights and sounds. The distractions of city life are so numerous and so varied that city bred children need more repose than children in smaller towns or the country.

Between 6 and 6.30 o'clock they should be undressed and put to bed.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

In order to preserve the whiteness of the neck demanded by the coming low-cut gowns, most women will find it necessary to use some good cold cream or emollient. One that is found helpful in whitening the neck is made from the raw white of an egg beaten to a froth, into which an equal quantity of sweet oil has been added. After the oil is put in it is beaten again and applied to the neck with a soft cloth. After this mixture is thoroughly wiped off the neck is washed with soap and water.

AVOID EXTREMES.

Many girls and young married women often are disappointed at the candid criticisms passed by their male belongings about their clothes. "You never seem to please a man," said a girl one day. "Something always seems wrong about a gown in his eyes." Doubtless she had reason for her complaint in many ways, but the real secret of pleasing the average man is to avoid the usual extremes in dress — the outrageous flaring hats and the unwalkable skirts.

Women ought to have a set of rules about the personal note in their gowns. They should study the colors that become them, as it is from the whole that the result, pleasing or otherwise, is taken.

Man's highest praise is usually "She was awfully well turned out," which means that the object of their admiration has refrained from the ultra eccentricities of fashion and was smart from the top of her well coiffured head to her trim footgear, and also that her gloves were neat and stylish.

SPOTS ON CARPETS.

Whether the spots are made by milk, oil or grease, the process of removing them is practically the same. The surest method is by absorption. Cover the spots with wet fuller's earth; place a newspaper over this and let it stand for two or three days, then brush off the dry paste, and unless the stain was an old one, it will have disappeared. In case there is any trace of the grease, repeat the operation. Should it be inconvenient to let the earth remain on the floor so long, set a warm iron on the paper when it is placed over the fuller's earth, and the grease will be extracted in a few hours. There are other methods of extracting grease, but this one is the simplest and safest.

There has been another escape from Toronto jail. It seems, easier, nowadays, to get criminals out of prison than to get them in.

ONE WAY OUT OF IT.

(Buffalo Express.)

New York City must enforce the law against gambling and disorderly houses—if for no other reason—to prevent the corruption of the police force. A very effective way is to prosecute the owners of property rented for such purposes. They are entitled to no sympathy.

PROS., TOO.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

Now is the season when distinguished amateurs in the sporting line suddenly develop retiring dispositions and announce that they are "out of the game for good," and then graciously consent to be persuaded to return, or turn up as members of some other club.

TORONTO WATER.

(Peterborough Examiner.)

Dr. Sheard, medical health officer for Toronto, gives the honest farmer his due. He says that the water in Toronto's daily supply of weakly milk, is put in by the city dealers after it leaves the farmer's hands. This is an unfortunate matter. If Toronto would encourage the farmer to put the water into the milk, it would at least be clean water, and not the sewage-garnished city water, muddy with microbes.

MERELY INIATION ANYWAY.

(Peterborough Review.)

The Halifax Herald and a Philadelphia paper are agitating against burial at sea. That is a worthy object. However, what difference does it make whether a shark or a worm does the trick. Cremation is by far the most sensible method in disposing of the dead. We cremate our friends and if we wish we can put the ashes in a rose jar and have them ever near us. Besides, when one is cremated he is certainly not buried alive. Cremation is rapidly meeting with popular favor in all the large centres of the world

Daily Intelligencer.

A Caution Signal.

The bulletin of the Census and Statistics Office at Ottawa, says the Montreal Gazette, giving the Department of Agriculture estimate of the crop yield of the year, without being unsatisfactory, is somewhat sobering in its tenor. The advices on which the estimates are based are brought up to the end of August; and while there is still in the West some grain to cut in the middle of September, neither in quantity nor condition is the remnant of the harvest likely to seriously change the general result. The estimate of the bulletin, for the three chief grain crops, wheat, oats and barley for the present and preceding years follows:

	Bushels
1910	445,420,000
1909	575,614,000
1908	409,573,000

The outcome of the present year's farm work, therefore, while about a fifth less than in 1909, is considerably better than in 1908, but as it is gathered from a larger area under crop by a considerably larger number of farmers, the general outcome will on the average be less satisfactory this year than it was two years ago. The yield by special crops for the present and last year are set out as follows

	1910 Bushels	1909 Bushels
Wheat	122,783,000	166,744,000
Oats	283,247,000	353,466,000
Barley	39,388,000	55,398,000

This means that the farmers will get for their year's work some forty or fifty million dollars less than went to them in 1909 for their principal crops; and though there may be compensations in connection with the dairy and cattle trade and the large yield of hay in the East, it is plain that the situation will not permit of their continuing their expenditure on the past twelve months' level. It should be remembered, of course, that last year's was a better crop than usual; and that this year's is not by any means a failure, and is likely to command fair prices. The situation gives point, however, to some remarkably recorded as to the importance of people not buying as if they expected to get rich in a year. There is more need of heeding this, also, because so much of the trade activity about which politicians have been boasting themselves is the result of the expenditure of borrowed money by governments, municipal and other corporations, and even individuals, and only in some cases gives promise of those permanent returns in profit that makes the incurring of big debts good business.

IN LIGHTER VIEW.

"It was a very disappointing story."

"What was wrong?"

"When I had finished writing it, I noticed that it was published last year."

"I think those gowns are just stunning," said the girl, with her eyes on the stage.

"The prices might be," said the man.

The driver of a police automobile in Richmond, Va., who has been fined $50 for violating the speed law, evidently took too seriously the popular name of his vehicle, which is "hurry-up wagon."

"I am glad to hear it. What's he done now?"

"He has reached the stage where he hangs up the 'phone without saying good-bye."

"Why do you always take things which don't agree with you?" scolded Mrs. Peckem when her husband complained of being ill.

"If I hadn't, I don't know what would have become of you," he answered, trying to smile.

POLICE FORCE REWARDED.

A meeting of the Police Commissioners was held yesterday afternoon, at which all members were present, namely, Judge Deroche, Magistrate Masson and Mayor Marsh..

Tenders for clothing for the force were opened and Mr. Morgan's tender for tunics was accepted and Mr. A. McGie's tender for trousers.

In view of the fact that the Chief and members of the force did considerable extra duties during the recent G. T. R. strike it was decided to remunerate them for their services. The Chief was given a gratuity of $25, the two Sergeants $20 each and the six officers $15 each.

SUNDAY ANGLERS NABBED

WHITBY, Sept. 20—The Lord's Day Alliance is actively responsible for a large party from Toronto being arrested in Frenchman's Bay Sunday afternoon.

Chief Constable Jameson, assisted by High Constable Calverly, of this town, and Wm. Sparks, of Frenchman's Bay, made the arrests.

The party were in half a dozen boats busily engaged hauling in bass and perch, with plenty of bait on board, when the officers appeared during the afternoon in another boat. One boatload containing two young ladies and a male escort escaped by landing on shore. The fair ones waved their handkerchiefs in a farewell to the constables and disappeared amongst the shrubbery.

Those arrested will be tried here Friday afternoon before the police magistrate. They are all from Toronto and are: R. W. Fraser, Alf. Vigo, G. A. McDonald, Mrs. Fitter, Pat Harland, John McIlmurray, Walter and Mrs. Johnson, Wm. Fox, Geo. Sheppard, W. London, C. Swinson and Jas. Corbett.

IRISH LEAVING IRELAND.

Washington, Sept. 20.— Too many Irish are leaving Ireland this year in the opinion of the home Government. A clipping from an Irish journal forwarded here by Deputy Consul J. S. Armstrong, jr., of Cork, says: "The Irish emigration statistics prove unsatisfactory, 1,861 persons left this country during July, as compared with 1,602 for July of last year, an increase of 259. Of the emigrants 1,097 were males and 764 females. In all 20,816 persons have left Ireland during the last seven months of 1910—an increase of 2,047 in the same period in 1907. The total emigration last year was 28,677 and was the second lowest on record for six decades. If the same rate of increase is kept up for the remainder of this year emigration will reach nearly 32,000 for the year.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

Parents whose minds have been uneasy concerning the ravages of the dread disease, infantile paralysis, that new and mysterious malady which has swept like a scourge from one coast of America to the other, can rest assured that their children are immune from the disease until next spring melts winter's snows. Dr. Blackader, the well-known specialist of children's diseases, and probably the best-informed in Montreal on this point, stated to the Herald Saturday that the disease is essentially a hot weather one. He said: "Infantile paralysis is a contagious disease, and is treated as such now. It is a germ disease and the infection is breathed in through the nose and throat. It is essentially a hot weather disease, and with the coming of the cold weather it will also stop. Some months ago I had a number of cases, but I have none now."

Dr. Laberge, the civic health official, made the following statement: "We believe infantile paralysis to be a form of cerebro-spinal meningitis, but it has not been established that it is contagious. I have heard nothing official concerning its prevalence in Montreal, though I know there are a lot of cases in Ottawa. Our physicians, and we have 500 of them in Montreal, are not obliged to report the cases they have, so we have no means of knowing how many cases exist. Our board does not come in contact with it all. One doctor told me last summer he had fifty cases, but he probably exaggerated. I know that there have been many cases during the summer."

CANADIAN'S ADVANCE.

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 19.—This is something about Thomas H. Atkinson, veteran of the famous Gordon relief expedition to Khartoum, now a fruit grower on the Columbia River, who has been nominated to represent the 56th district in Chelan County, Wash., in the State Legislature of Washington. He is a progressive Republican, and has pronounced views on legislative matters, among others being a revision of the present horticultural laws to benefit the grower and consumer alike.

Atkinson was born of Scotch-Irish parents and was raised in the home of a Methodist minister, in Western Ontario. He was educated in the schools at Hamilton, Ont., and later at Cobourg. The death of his father made it necessary for the boy to shift for himself, and at the age of seventeen years of age began work in the Phoenix hat and fur store at Toronto. When Gilbert & Sullivan's comic operas were in vogue Mr. Atkinson sang in the leading play houses of Canada, with the New York Comic Opera company. He was also identified with musical organizations of Toronto, and received great praise for his rendition of solo parts, in the "Creation," "Redemption," "The Hymn of Praise" and "The Messiah."

While at Winnipeg, Man., in 1881, Mr. Atkinson was one of the first to volunteer for the Gordon relief expedition, then being equipped. He was accepted and hurried with a few others to Africa, where he was finally attached to the "Old Black Watch," or Forty-Second Highlanders, the crack regiment of the British service, and destined to the relief of Khartoum, where General Gordon was imprisoned by the Turks.

On this expedition he came in close touch with Lord Wolseley, Lord Charles Beresford, Lord Kitchener, General Wauchope, Colonel Fred Barnaby, and many others who were then most noted in the service. Mr. Atkinson was frequently called upon by the general and his staff, sitting in the glow of the evening, to give a little cheer to the hard and arduous life by singing ballads and sketches from the popular operas of the day.

On returning to London Mr. Atkinson and his companions were treated with every courtesy. They were commanded to appear before Queen Victoria to receive decorations. Unfortunately, the day before this interesting occasion was to take place Col. Kennedy and Mr. Atkinson's companion was stricken with small-pox, the result of which was the Queen's decoration, as well as that of the Khedive of Egypt, was delivered by proxy, through one of the secretaries. When leaving his friends General Wauchope, who later was cut to pieces leading the Highland brigade in South Africa, gave Mr. Atkinson a watch and chain, saying: "Whenever you look into the face of this watch remember that of your old Highland chief."

Returning to Winnipeg, Mr. Atkinson became land agent for the firm of Biggs, Dawson & Curran, remaining until the fall of 1887, when he removed to the United States, where he has had an active life. He had two reasons for coming to Washington. One was to pass a few years in seclusion and the other to get acquainted with his family. Since coming to this country he has had several flattering offers to engage in business, but he has chosen to remain on his little fruit ranch on the Columbia.

FOUND DEAD AT TWEED

After a day's search for John Ray of Tweed, his dead body was found in a manger. Deceased had acted strangely, and on Friday his wife sought a warrant for his arrest. Then Ray disappeared and could not be found till Sunday. There was nothing about the body to indicate suicide, and a post-mortem will be necessary. Deceased was 35 years old, and leaves six children.

THE ANTRIM JEWELS.

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—The latest arrest in connection with the theft of the heirlooms and jewels of the Countess of Antrim in the Royal Alexandra Hotel a week ago is that of A. G. Smith, who admits he comes from New York, and says he is a traveller for a baking powder firm. The name of the firm he is working for he refuses to give. Neither will he tell the address in New York where his wife and children now reside. He is a dressy man, and has apparently lived a free and easy life in this city, and is held on the technical charge of owing money for his board and room at the Royal Alexandra Hotel, Winnipeg's leading hostelry, which he is unable to liquidate Incidentally, when arrested, diamonds and other gems to the value of over a thousand dollars were found on his person.

TO PROBE WOMAN'S DEATH

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—Provincial Detective Henry Reburn has been despatched to Havelock by Superintendent J. E. Rogers to investigate the death of Mrs. Deline, the woman who was found dead in her house on concession twelve of Dummer Township. The unfortunate woman was badly bruised and lacerated when found, but the physicians ascribed her death to fright.

The Provincial Police are satisfied, from the report of the Crown Attorney received yesterday, that death was due to a shock resultant from an attempted assault by someone yet unknown.

The ...Veiled Lady...

carelessly! As for Gordon, in his budding years, he will soon forget the woman buried at 'Campoformio!' That was a plan magnificent in its conception!"

Wicked and corrupt; sunk to the mere semblance of the glorious promise of her youth; driven by abject physical fear of the rope, to the door where rosy-fingered vice waited her, Irene, the Sultana of a dying potentate, yet blushed to think of the loyal man, whose kisses burned in memory on her lips!

"When Max dies,—when he is called away,—whither do I drift?" She covered her face with trembling hands, and tried to shut out a picture so dark that even her bright eyes could not scan it. "Russia! Demidoff!" Her bright eyes gleamed, for the Tartar had bluntly wooed her! "Buried in shame; alone; hunted; hated; pursued; and yet, I dare not die!" she moaned. Forever at the threshold of the Dark Gate, stood the pallid spectre of Egbert Neill. It drove her away from the friendly Gates of Death, to a living Hell on Earth!

Vinton Maxwell, (in his office at Fort Sanders,) read with alarm the letters of Surgeon Selfridge. The rising Captain of Engineers was a different man from the dashing graduated cadet.

"I will try and run down to see Gordon. His mind seems broken,—his interest in life gone: and yet the world is only wide enough for Seaton to stay on one side of the Atlantic, and poor Jack on the other. If he would only speak! If he would tell me all! That quarrel! That ring! Some wicked woman! Ah! Jack! Jack!" the steady Engineer cried, "I am afraid you are in hopeless trouble! Heart and head both gone astray! The old, old story!" For Maxwell had received several pressing letters about Gordon from St. Louis, from Horace Jenks, who was fain to be content with the meagre answer that First Lieutenant John Gordon, Seventh Cavalry, U.S.A., was seriously ill, and that no possible interruption of his convalescence was allowed.

Horace Jenks, chafing at St. Louis, was fain to turn his steps once more to the friendly Cercle des Etrangers.

"No, sir!" said the Chief of Police, "you shall have no extradition papers in the Neill case! There is not a shadow on the young lady who left Dr. Selfridge's house! She may have her own reasons for retirement; we do not use Russian methods here! This is not Siberia! She may be dead; but you bring me only an alleged letter and a pair of gloves, and ask extradition. I believe now that Neill was artfully killed as an outcome of an old quarrel! Look here! Mr. Jenks!" said the Chief, "I warn you of the great risk you run in your zeal to avenge your murdered friend! Amateurs are always too eager! The Governor will not ask the President for papers on such a flimsy show! Doctor Selfridge, (who is just dead now two months,) idolized this singular and reserved girl! You will have to face the whole enraged community, if you drag her back here! And you admit you do not even know where she is!" The Chief paused.

"But," cried Jenks, "I will find her!"

"Then do so, and come back here with a more probable case!" The Chief nodded brusquely, and left Jenks.

"Ah! If I only dared to make Orton and Brayton speak? But I must not now; not yet!" and Horace Jenks hastened back to Paris, where the convives of the Cercle mourned for the Chief of the Plungers. He swore, again, to hunt the guilty woman down!

As Jenks grasped Baptiste's hand on his arrival in Paris, he quickly asked: —"Brayton?"

"Here! still at the Hotel Athenee!"

"And Stahrenstein?"

"Dying, at Nice!" said Baptiste.

"Great Heavens!" cried Jenks. "Anything of her? the woman?" he quickly interrupted.

"Never heard of her again! Victorine is here; and Jean on duty! Duprez has never heard of her proposed return; but all the bills were paid. I learned that at the Avenue de Jena!" The steward smiled as he concluded.

"What do you mean, Baptiste?" said Jenks, in a rage. Everywhere he was baffled.

"She was too smart for us," the servant replied. "Jean is now simply insupportable! He has plenty of money; and Victorine has a house and wine shop at Neuilly!"

"And the woman; what think you?" Jenks roared.

"She gave you the slip, and bought these people right over your head! They were simply paid twice!" The sly steward laughed. "Let us stick to our regular business! The paying season opens now! Don't fool your priceless time away over a woman! The best one in Paris it not worth a sleepless night! And you cross the green water for this worthless Will-o'-the-Wisp." Baptiste shuddered. He was a thorough landsman! Much contact with the fickle sex had embittered the man of the omelet and corkscrew. "Let us reap our harvest now! I am glad that Stahrenstein is gone! I always feared that cool Austrian devil; and old Pelham, too!"

Jenks was fain to be silent and agree. He needed Baptiste. He plunged nightly into the heaviest play. Brayton, cold, self-contained and unbending, was a silent spectator of Jenks' coups de maitre. Did he suspect? Horace Jenks read nothing in the pale set features of his close friend "Alfred Brayton."

Three weeks after Jenks' return, while he was deeply engaged in scanning the signals cautiously transmitted by Baptiste, as the play warmed up at midnight, De Brissac quietly threw his cards on the table, and remarked, with a pale face, "Messieurs! Pardonnez moi! Je m'en vais! Je quitte pour toujours! Il ya des escrocs ici!"

In a half hour the gambling room was deserted, for Horace Jenks had met his Philippi! No amount of frantic urging could force De Brissac to say another word!—Baptiste hovered gravely in the distance, (napkin over his arm,) while Horace Jenks found an ample promenade space, in the latitude allowed him by the excited frequenters of the club.

The ominous word "Police" was heard in excited tones. "I will walk home with you, Brayton!" said Jenks, finally, taking his new friend by the arm.

A strange light burned in Beverly Seaton's eye, as the gambler's hand rested familiarly upon him. On the green cloth reposed the card of the Baron De Brissac. No one had taken it up!—The sensibilities of the unknown scoundrels were not keen enough to challenge the nervous arm of the best swordsman in Paris.

Horace Jenks was silent, as Seaton, (quietly shaking off his hand,) lit a cigar. "What does this mean! Jenks?" he coldly said.

"Oh! It's some tomfoolery of this crazy Frenchman. He has lost a few francs. I will run down to Monaco for a few weeks. I do not wish to involve my social friends, here,—men like Pelham and Fenton Dennis, in a dirty public row!"

Beverly Seaton said: "You had then better leave me all those papers and things you have in that case; also your address! I will not be mixed up in this gambling club row. I have only thrown away a few gold pieces to pay for my suppers. I do not excuse Pelham for bringing me into a nest of blackguards." Jenks winced, and was silent.

"I think you are right!" the gambler finally said. "Will you post me while I am away?"

"I think it is useless!" said Seaton, turning in the moonlight. "Baptiste will keep you advised!"

And Horace Jenks knew that the keen-eyed Southerner had caught his secret at last.

"Damn this fellow!" he thought. "I forgot he was a trained detective! I will bring you the things to the hotel, in an hour," Jenks said, turning on his heel; "for I shall take the two o'clock train for Nice! I'll go back and get them somehow!"

"Why this haste?" pursued the merciless Seaton.

"Well! I don't care to have to kill De Brissac! He is a Frenchman of high family; it would make a racket."

"Then you are the man he has tried to insult?" Seaton proceeded to thrust in the spear!

"Yes," said the unabashed Jenks. "I suppose am, and I am a dead shot, too!—If he follows me on to Nice, God help him! I am then on the Italian border! I'd like to see him stand up at ten paces!"

Seaton smothered his disgust and walked home. In an hour Horace Jenks handed Seaton a bundle at his room.

"There's the whole stuff! I have put in Orton's and Gordon's letters and the whole thing. I may get hurt!" he said reflectively. "I want you to follow that woman up! But if I ever meet her, there will be a clear 'fight to the finish' and no favor!"

Seaton was silent, and gravely showed Jenks out. With a muttered curse the detected card-sharper descended the stairs. He would have leaped back like a tiger had he known that Phineas Orton had a room on the same corridor with the supposed "Alfred Brayton." Before Jenks was fifty miles on his road to Nice the police were in possession of the Cercle des Etrangers, and the sly Baptiste, (in hiding,) was ready to slip away to the coast of Normandy, and run over to the Isle of Jersey. His money was safe; he had no character to lose! For months Baptiste had remained ready for any sudden mishap, and poor Jean, now in charge, howling and dejected, was sternly interrogated by the Agents de Police. It was a day of ruin!

"Thank God! these proofs are now safe!" said Seaton, as he deposited the whole trophies of Irene Hope's past in the vaults of his bank, next day. "I am now master of the situation, for I do not think that Mr. Horace Jenks will care to talk! He is too much occupied with keeping out of Mazas Prison! Orton must never know of this. I have cut the wires forever between him and Jenks! I will follow the inquiry legitimately! I can deal with the erring, as I wish;" . . .

While Orton took a general run around Paris, Seaton drove to the Cercle des Etrangers. A policeman admitted him to the deserted rooms. De Brissac, (en toilette des grandes affaires,) ready for court appearances, or the duel, was haranguing the more prominent members. For even in the Cercle des Etrangers there was a respectable background. "Ah! ce brave Brayton, mon ami!" signalled the excited, but chivalric De Brissac. In a half hour Fenton Dennis, De Brissac, Brayton and others knew the whole story of the shame. "Monsieur Brayton knows all! He plays not! C'est un homme comme il faut! I appeal to him!" De Brissac shouted as he descanted loudly upon Jenks' singular winnings, and his flight; now a matter of fact, and told of his detecting the signals of the fellow-scoundrel.

Brayton shrugged his shoulders and walked away for a lemonade. The marked cards were a sufficient proof; Baptiste had supplied them. Poor Jean, under surveillance, (the man in the gap,) brought the lemonade to Seaton, for the police recognized the servant as a mere pawn in the game, and allowed him still to control the rooms.

"I could tell Monsieur something he would like to know!" he whispered.

"What is it?" coldly said Seaton.

"Victorine, the woman who took 'Mees Isabel' away with the Count de Stahrenstein, is my own wife! She is at Neuilly! I will bring you to her!"

Jean was rapidly hedging. Jenks had fled! Baptiste's desertion was a sore cut to his heart. The fiery Gaul burned for la revanche and—any loose

World's Largest Cheese.

Appleton, Wis., Sept. 20.—The largest single cheese ever made in the world will be constructed on a flat car at the John L. Jacquot cold storage plant in this city this week, for exhibition at the National Dairy Show at the Coliseum in Chicago, Oct. 20 to 29.

The cheese will weigh 4,000 pounds. It will take from 40,000 to 50,000 pounds of milk to produce the curd. That will mean all the milk for one day from 2,100 of the best dairy cows in the county, and it will take the entire output from 2,500 dairies in the county for that day. From 400 to 500 men will be required to do the milking, but the entire cheese will be made in one day by N. Simon of Neenah, assisted by six of the most expert cheese makers in this county, and six helpers. It will cost over $800 to produce the big cheese, which will be valued at from $1,000 to $1,200.

Spent a Busy Day.

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—Cardinal Vannutelli, papal legate, spent a busy day in Winnipeg, beginning his work at an early hour. At 7 o'clock he said mass at the chapel of the Grey Nuns, and took breakfast there. At 8.30 he was at the Hospice Tache, where an entertainment was presented by the orphan boys and girls under the care of the church. He then attended, in company with the Archbishop of St. Boniface, the reception at St. Mary's Academy, and also visited the Ruthenian, German and Polish schools. At noon he was at the St. Boniface Hospital, which he inspected, and where he took lunch. In the afternoon he was present at a public reception at Government House. He left yesterday afternoon for St. Paul.

Big Merger of Power.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—The advance of Montreal Power to 150 and over, and the calling of a meeting to-day by that company, leads to the belief that there is a grand merger of the Montreal Street Railway, Montreal Power and Shawinigan Power Companies on the tapis.

It is stated "on the street" that the Street Railway will go in at 250, Power at 170 and Shawinigan at 125, with a working understanding with Canadian Power, whose friends have captured, perhaps, the absolute control of Street Railway.

Grabbed Gun the Wrong Way.

Langham, Sask., Sept. 20.—A. S. C. Latchford, accountant of the Northern Crown Bank, died as the result of a wound received in a goose-hunting expedition near here. He grabbed the gun by the muzzle and received the charge in his neck. He came west from Toronto in 1908. A. J. Wells, manager of the same branch, who also hailed from Ontario, was drowned a short time ago.

Retired From Office.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—W. C. McMahon, superintendent of printing at the Government Bureau, has been superannuated, following the enquiry into the Printing Bureau scandals. Mr. McMahon went to the Printing Bureau in 1890, and was appointed assistant King's printer, controller of stationery and superintendent of printing on Sept. 1, 1908. He was born in 1856.

Third Caretaker to Drown.

Cobalt, Sept. 20.—Mike Hilpin, caretaker of the Gavin-Hamilton mine, Elk Lake, has in all probability been drowned, as his upturned canoe has been discovered, and he is missing.

He is the third caretaker of Elk Lake camps to drown or die within two months. The last seen of him was when he got provisions at Elk Lake.

Attempted Suicide.

Welsh Colliers on Strike.

Cardiff, Wales, Sept. 20.—Twelve thousand miners employed in the Cambrian colliery trust, went on strike yesterday, forcing the temporary closing of the mines that supply practically all of the coal for the English navy.

Charged With Forgery.

St. Thomas, Sept. 20.—Marshall McMillan has been arrested, charged with issuing forged checks on the tradesmen and banks here during the past month or so.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Belleriver, Que.—"Without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would not be alive. For five months I had painful and irregular periods and inflammation of the uterus. I suffered like a martyr and thought often of death. I consulted two doctors who could do nothing for me. I went to a hospital, and the best doctors said I must submit to an operation, because I had a tumor. I went back home much discouraged. One of my cousins advised me to take your Compound, as it had cured her. I did so and soon commenced to feel better, and my appetite came back with the first bottle. Now I feel no pain and am cured. Your remedy is deserving of praise."—Mrs. EMMA CHATEL, Valleyfield, Belleriver, Quebec.

Another Operation Avoided.

Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from female troubles, and my doctor said an operation was my only chance, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me without an operation."—LENA V. HENRY, R.F.D. 3.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases.

Woman and Automobiles.

A traveller for a threshing machine firm once said, that women were his worst enemies. When asked what he meant he explained that women, as a rule, have a much stronger aversion to going in debt than a man, and that the suggestion of giving a mortgage on their home for a threshing machine raised all the fight there was in them. Many a "deal" has been spoiled for him by the interference of his wife and he always tried to get the agreement signed before going to the house. When asked regarding the wisdom of many of these purchasers he said that in many cases he expected that the farm would eventually belong to the company, but the men were determined to buy, and it was his business to sell.

At the present time, it is not threshing machines, but automobiles, that are being given in exchange for farms and city homes, and the question is are the women more willing to give a mortgage for a luxury, than for a threshing machine, a machine that often ruins a man financially, but which is nevertheless a necessity.

So great has the craze become for automobiles at the present time that it is said one automobile firm alone in Minneapolis holds mortgages on 1500 homes. Real estate firms claim that the demand for homes has lessened since this craze started, and bankers are losing deposits, patrons, intending to buy machines. Nor is this all, for in some districts where the craze is the greatset, the city municipal bonds, have depreciated in value.

It is estimated that in the United States next year $375,000,000 will be spent in automobiles, as well as the money necessary to keep them going and the half million or so cars now in operation.

It would seem that it is nearly time for women to step in and preach the doctrine of caution. It may, at times be a wise investment, to go in debt for a necessity, but it is always dangerous to the individual and a menace to the country, to go in debt for luxuries. This is a craze that will doubtless wear itself out, as did the bicycle craze, the automobiles will take their proper place of the horse and buggy were such is a necessity or can be afforded as aluxury, and the sooner that time comes the better. For the protection of the home, it is surely the woman's right to kill this craze as quickly as possible, and also prepare to fight a craze for aeroplanes which will surely come in time.

A small, dark man, accompanied by two beautiful women in eastern dress and with a train of olive-skinned dependents, landed in England the other day. No one who saw him land or who watched his pleasant, modest demeanor on board during the voyage from America would have guessed that he was the ruler over 2,000,000 people, the richest, one of the most enlightened, and one of the most powerful of the princes of the native states of India. The Gaekwar of Baroda is a great admirer of English institutions. He has been especially struck with the quiet, friendly charm of its country life. "One object of my journey," he said, "is to add to my knowledge of educational methods and ideals. Baroda is the only state in India where schools are free and compulsory. I established them because I am sure that it is useless to expect any real progress among the Indian people until they are less ignorant."

Cheetahs Train For the Hunt.

Trained cheetahs are used in Persia and India in much the same manner that hounds are used in European and North American countries. The game they are used to hunt is principally deer and antelope. The cheetah is an animal with black and brown spots resembling a leopard, but longer in body and limb. The Indian princes keep packs of them for the hunt. The heads of the hunting cheetahs are usually covered with a hood until within 200 yards of the game. The hoods are then removed, and the animals creep stealthily toward the herd and, having approached as near as possible, pounce upon their prey, killing with one blow of the paw.

"THE SWEETHEART OF THE CORN"

Woman's World

Wife and Daughter of Indian Prince, Maharajah of Baroda.

TWO OF INDIA'S LOVELIEST WOMEN.

The maharajah of Baroda and his wife and daughter have recently been in America. This great Maharatta chief holds sway over 2,000,000 subjects, and it is to him that India owes most of her progressive ideas and economic advancement.

The gaekwar is said to possess the finest collection of pearls in the world, to say nothing of the "Star of the South," that marvelous diamond once the delight of Napoleon.

Her highness the maharanee of Baroda is a very progressive woman and ably assists her distinguished husband in looking out for the welfare of his subjects.

When asked whether she believed in suffrage for women a dignified shake of the head and a quizzical smile was the answer to the question. She glanced toward her daughter, the Princess Indira, the most beautiful princess in India, who is the first girl of her rank to pass the entrance examination to the University of Baroda, where she will enter this fall as a student.

"I enjoy my studies so much," enthusiastically cooed the princess. "I shall graduate from the university and be as bookish as my brothers, one of whom is in Harvard and the youngest, a darling of fourteen, in an English preparatory school.

The wife and daughter of the gaekwar dress in native costume. When walking they seem to glide, and there is no necessity of asking the maharanee if she believes that girls should wear stays. Dark flashing eyes and perfect teeth are the only jewels with which the young Princess Indira is adorned, but her mother is a blaze of marvelous gems.

The royal oriental party are on their way round the world, having left India last spring for the journey.

Suggestions For the Housewife.

One tablespoonful of extract will flavor one quart of mixture to be frozen.

To keep a washboiler from rusting after using it on washday, wipe dry, then take a piece of cloth and saturate with kerosene and wipe the boiler inside and out.

A plain cloth dipped in hot water and then in a saucer of bran will clean white paint and not injure it. The bran acts like soap on the paint.

If a loaf of bread has become stale hold it under water for a second, then place in a brisk oven for a quarter of an hour. It will taste like new bread.

When you are ironing any dark material do not put a linen cloth underneath, as the lint will come off on the stuff and you will have great difficulty in brushing it off again.

Chinaware that has been burned or darkened through use may be brightened in this way: Take a teaspoonful of soda, moisten with water and scour till the spots are removed.

To mend an umbrella take a small piece of black sticking plaster and soak it in water until quite soft. Place this carefully under the hole inside and let dry. This will be found to be better than darning, as it closes the hole neatly without stitches.

A Wife's Influence.

Lookers-on often see the wonderful influence a wife can exert for the good or failure of her husband. By a gracious, genial manner she may win hosts of friends for him. In nearly every walk of life where he has to look to the generous public for a livelihood, she can help him make the yoke easier and the burden lighter. A powerful factor in the world of business today is found in the influence of woman.

Out, D— Spot.

To remove grease from garments dissolve a tablespoonful of salt in four tablespoonfuls of alcohol, shake it well and apply with a sponge.

Good Form

Every housekeeper should realize that the appearance of the maids in her house is an indication of her good taste and management. They, in a measure, set the standard of your establishment from the moment the front door is opened. It need not be a matter of expense to have them neatly and properly dressed; it is largely a matter of judgment on your part in providing the correct things to wear on different occasions and of your carefulness in seeing that everything is neat and clean.

For the morning a neat percale dress of pale pink or blue always looks well, or one of a gray blue and white stripe. With this dress is worn a plain white apron, usually without a bib or bretelles, a white linen collar and a three cornered swiss muslin cap with a ruching around it. Before luncheon the waitress or parlormaid should change this dress for a simply made black one or one made of a pretty shade of gray. These are, of course, made of some woolen material. Gray dresses are an innovation and are not so serviceable as the black. With this dress is worn a plain white linen collar and turnover stiff linen cuffs. The apron should be quite small and made of thin lawn, batiste, swiss or muslin or fine linen with a frill or embroidered scallop around the edge. Instead of a cap the maid may wear a bow of fine muslin or a plaited small frill on which is sewed a black ribbon or black velvet bow.

In asking a friend to visit her the hostess should always state clearly how long the guest is expected to stay. This makes it much simpler and more comfortable for all persons concerned. The guest to be knows just what luggage to bring and how to make her plans accordingly. At the end of the visit it is simple for the hostess, if she wishes, to ask her friend to prolong her stay.

A well bred hostess never shows that her guest's visit is a burden to her. She keeps her household duties in the background as much as possible, never consults her servants before her guests and never embarrasses her by discussions of household finances. She makes her feel at every moment that she is a welcome addition to the household and that her presence is a real pleasure. On the other hand, she is not too attentive, leaves her friend to herself for an hour or two and gives her an opportunity to rest or read. She never obtrudes family troubles on her, never corrects the servants in her presence or permits family differences, which often amount to quarrels unimportant perhaps to the persons concerned, but exceedingly uncomfortable for the visitor.

A good hostess is careful to make her guest comfortable. The guest chamber in many homes is a special apartment, furnished with the best and choicest belongings of the family, but if the guest finds a vase of flowers and books and magazines on the table, she feels somehow that she is really most welcome in the household.

Traveling Etiquette.

A woman who is traveling alone should remember that it is not good form—

To pull up a window shade in a car where this will throw the sunlight into her neighbor's eye or pull it down in such a way as to deprive him of light when he is reading.

To put her feet on the seats.

To open a window in a railroad car without asking those who are sitting within reach of the draft whether they object to it.

To move up and down the aisle an unnecessary number of times.

The lone traveler will find that courtesy to subordinates will win her attention and service more quickly than the sharp, short, almost peremptory manner sometimes assumed by well meaning but misguided persons.

It is the woman with a sense of humor who gets the most out of a journey, while the woman who is given to worrying over trifles cannot enjoy the finest trip that ever was planned.

Good Breeding on Tennis Court.

Good breeding clearly shows itself while on the tennis court. If a man has a woman for a partner and it is her serve, he should pick up and hand her the balls before each service if no attendant is about. He should also second her more carefully than if she were a man and take charge of the extra balls for her.

If a man's opponent is a woman he should consider her by recognizing her lesser strength and serve gently.

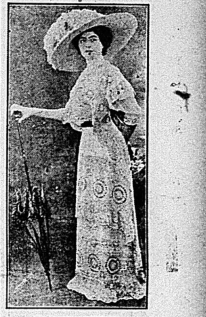
In double service a man should not serve the second ball until the woman has recovered her position from pursuing the first. The choice of rackets should be the woman's, and any work, such as putting up the nets, hunting the lost ball, and so on, is done by the man.

A SAD STORY.

The Misfortune That Came With a Terrible Tumble.

Fowling is now very little practiced in the Shetland islands, although many eggs are secured annually. Many thrilling stories of fowling adventure are told by the Shetlanders. A man who had undertaken to climb a certain steep cliff was neither very experienced nor very brave, although he boasted of being both. He pushed upward, however, briskly without looking behind until he had got up about 150 feet, when he stopped to breathe. The pause was fatal to his self possession, and he called out in tones of terror, "Men, men, I am going—I am going." But he still held on for a little, and it was not till he had shrieked many times "I am going" that he did fall headlong.

His comrades, having thus been warned, moved the boat out of the way so that the poor fellow came sheer down into the deep water. Mighty was the plunge, but at length he rose to the surface, when of course he was instantly caught hold of and dragged into the boat. After many gasps and much spluttering of sea water from his mouth his only remark was: "Eh, men, this is a sad story. I have lost my snuffbox."—"Sketches and Tales of Shetland."



IN LACE AND BRODERIE.

Quite the smartest and most successful of the white frocks for afternoon wear are the simplest. The great fashion authorities are everywhere emphasizing the charm of the graceful outline and attaching the greatest possible importance to bring this result about without any extraneous help from furbelows.

The dominant white frock is made over a one piece lining that is cut on the simplest lines and has no bones in it. The skirts are of three styles, the flounced, the puffed and the straight and scant model finished with a four inch hem. At first glance the voluminous skirt appears to be of endless width and fullness; but, although a great deal of material goes into its makeup, it is invariably mounted over the closest fitting and narrowest of foundations, so narrow that it seems at times unsafe to take a step in it.

The garden party gown pictured is a charming affair, a simple but exclusive creation of lace and broderie.

Veils as Cause of Red Noses.

A prominent physician has given voice to a definite protest against women wearing veils. This authority asserts it is one of the most injurious practices of which he has knowledge and insists red noses are the result of veils and nothing else. If there is anything a woman objects to it is a red or greasy nose, and these troubles, according to this physician, find their origin in the wearing of a veil on almost every occasion. The veil prevents the air striking the face as it would if the veil was off, and when the face is heated the nose becomes greasy and almost invariably has a reddish appearance. This doctor would not even advise a veil to be worn on automobile rides, asserting a pair of "goggles," merely to protect the eyes from dust and insects, is all that is required for a woman who cares about her complexion and general facial appearance, and what woman does not?

Play a Good Game.

A girl once started in business, a very young, green and awkward specimen. But she had always played games as a boy might, and she started out to work in the same spirit. She wasn't personally hurt when the manager was worried and less polite than usual; neither was she mean and fussy over small things. She had a normal, healthy attitude toward her fellow employees. Her work was not mere drudgery, but a part of the game to be skilfully played. Moreover, she worked for the firm who employed her as eagerly as she had played on her basketball team. This same spirit carried her to victory in the bigger game.

It's a great game. To be happy and wise we must play a good game. Let's get into the game and—play ball.

For Bald Heads.

A TREATMENT THAT COSTS NOTHING IF IT FAILS.

We want you to try three large bottles of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic on our personal guarantee that the trial will not cost you a penny if it does not give you absolute satisfaction. CONFESSION AND RELIEF.

What a Woman Surmised While the Man Faltered.

"Margaret," said Arbuthnot Warburton. "I have a confession to make, but before I speak I want you to promise to forgive me."

A wild look of alarm came into the big soft eyes of his lovely wife, and a deathly pallor overspread her beautiful face. She was unable to speak.

"Tell me that you will be generous; that you will not despise me when I have told you all."

"Oh, why did you tell me? Why did you not let me continue to be happy? If you had only kept on deceiving me! Arbuthnot! It is all a cruel jest. Tell me that it is."

"No, darling, it is not a jest. But I have not deceived you."

"How can you say that if you have a confession to make?"

"Tell me that I shall be forgiven and you shall know all."

"Oh, Arbuthy, Arbuthy! How could you?"

"It was a hard thing to do, but I accomplished it."

"You accomplished it? I can't understand."

"No, little girl. Women are not supposed to understand these things. Shall I tell you how it was?"

"I don't know. I'm afraid. Perhaps when I know it I shall despise you. Perhaps it would be better if I never"—

"No, no, sweetheart, don't say that. Tell me you will forgive me. You must."

"You are breaking my heart. I have had a premonition all day that some terrible calamity was hanging over me. How could you be so cruel—so heartless?"

"I haven't done you any wrong at all, dearest. I merely wanted to tell you that I had made $500 today by taking an unfair advantage of another man and that I intended to hand the money over to you."

"Oh, Arbuthnot," she exclaimed, throwing her soft, white arms around his neck, "why have you jested with me? I thought you were going to tell me that you had taken your stenographer out to lunch or done some other terrible thing."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Thrift at the Palmist's.

"I had a client the other day the lines of whose hand spelled money," said the palmist. "Before I got through with him I found that he didn't need to come to me to be told that. Thrift such as his sweeps a man on to fortune regardless of the palmist's art. The man had only one hand. I read that. When I had finished he said, 'How much?'

"I named my modest price of $1 a sitting.

"'A dollar?' said he. 'That's outrageous. You read only one hand.'

"'That is not my fault,' said I. 'If you had another hand I would read it.'

"'All for a dollar?' said he.

"I said I would.

"'Then,' said he, 'this isn't fair. I only pay half price for my manicuring, and when I patronize a palmist who reads palms at the rate of a dollar a pair I expect a rebate.'

"He handed out a half dollar, and I took it. I was so amazed at the rapidity with which my prognostication was coming true that if he had refused to pay anything I doubt if I should have had nerve enough to put up a fight."—New York Times.

The blockhead calls a pail a 'bucket.'"

Oh, Smith and Jones; oh, Whig and Tory;
Oh, feudists turning green fields gory,
Why will it never dawn on you
A pail might be a bucket too?

WANTED, A POPULAR SONG.

I had a dream of long ago—
I heard the bygone hits,
The weepy home-and-mother tunes,
The sentimental skits.

A shade sang "Annie Rooney,"
And it moved my heart to hear
A song that charmed its millions,
Though dead for twenty year.

And then a haunting measure
Came floating down the hall,
And I almost failed to recognize
"After the Ball."

An air of sprightly sadness
Then wove a dreaming spell,
And I murmured in my vision,
"Goodby, Blue Bell."

A swinging ragtime ditty—
Its title will not rhyme,
But it often made them merry—
Good old "Hot Time."

They're dead and most forgotten
In this modern day of grace,
But where, I ask you gently,
Are the songs to take their place?

For the measures of the moment
Are neither sweet nor strong,
And a man could make a million
With an old time popular song.

Lunch Room Repartee.

The young man with the iron cheek entered the quick lunch room and seated himself at the third table.

"Belinda," he called familiarly, "you look fresh this morning."

"Not half as fresh as some others," retorted the pretty waitress with an elevation of her nose.

"Well! Well! Have you calf brains?"

"If I did you wouldn't order them, for you have an oversupply now."

"My, but you are getting good for the matinee. With the high price of meats, eggs come in handy these days, don't they?"

"No; they come in crates."

"Wow! Did you ever hear the story of the incubator chick? It's not out yet."

"That will do, sonny. Did you ever hear the story of the cold porridge? Well, it's on you!"

There was an unexpected tilting of a dish, and the young man with the iron cheek was showered with oatmeal.—Chicago News.

Novelty.

"I thought you told me you had something original in this libretto," said the manager scornfully. "Here at the very outset you have a lot of merry villagers singing, 'We are happy and gay.'"

USEFUL EXPERIMENTS IN THE OLD ORCHARD.

If those people who wonder why there are so many wormy apples will take the trouble to tie an old rough sack tightly round the body of an old apple tree and will leave it there for a week, then carefully remove it and examine the codling worms, they will probably find, to their surprise, a large number of these worms hiding away to pupate. The writer recently found more than 40 of these worms hiding under the rough bark on a single tree which he scraped. When one considers that each female moth is capable of laying from 100 to 300 eggs, can we wonder why there should be so many wormy apples? Last year the writer found under the bands which he put on a single tree nearly 200 of these worms in a period of three weeks. If every person owning an orchard will do this experiment there will doubtless be a large number of orchards shed their old bark this fall and get a good coating of white wash to help clean off these nasty bark lice which are so numerous.

SPRAYING FOR OYSTER SHELL BARK LOUSE.

In view of the fact that the oyster shell scales are very numerous this year on the apple trees, it would seem necessary for the fruit growers to get busy without delay if the trees are to be preserved.

It is a known fact that the oyster shell scale or bark louse is most numerous on trees that have been checked in their growth by winter injury, disease or unsuitable soil conditions. A very simple and cheap, yet effective remedy has been found most satisfactory. It is lime wash made by slaking two pounds of fresh stone lime and one gallon of water. Apply the mixture this fall as soon as the leaves are off the trees. Put on a second spraying as soon as the first has become dry, and cover the trees from top to bottom. Experiments at Ottawa show that this treatment will cause the scales and eggs to fall off by spring. Experiments will be conducted this fall at Stirling with the lime wash and lime sulphur wash to see which has the greater effect on the oyster shell scale. We recommend, however, in the meantime, both for young trees and old, the application of the lime wash, as it is not only cheaply and quickly applied, but has been found to be positively very beneficial.

What is very much needed in Hastings County is a "County Fruit Growers Association" to look after such important matters as caring for the orchards properly, conducting demonstration orchards, the proper picking, packing and marketing of the fruit. While steps are being taken towards this end there needs to be a strong and hearty co-operation among all the fruit growers if the best results are to be attained.

The local district representative is endeavoring to make an orchard survey of the county in order to find out what districts are growing fruit, what varieties are being grown, what are the most suitable varieties to grow and what varieties are giving the best results for grafting stock, etc. As much of this work will be done through correspondence and through the press, let the fruit growers, one and all, give their earnest support to the work, as there is positively no doubt that large quantities of most excellent fruit can be grown in Hastings County as well as in many of the other counties of Ontario that have already gained the reputation of being fruit growing districts.

ON MT. OF OLIVES.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Advices from Jerusalem are to the effect that recent excavations on the summit of the Mount of Olives resulted in the discovery of the remains of a Christian church dating from about the year 330. The floor of the nave is still buried. That of the transepts is entirely exposed. It is of mosaic and is perfectly preserved. There is a baptismal pool in the south transept. One tombstone has been found bearing the inspection: "Theodorus" in Greek, which is quite legible. In the chancel there are two separate mosaic floors of different designs, one 30 inches above the other. The lower is considered to be a floor of St. Helena's Church, dating from 330, while the upper floor is a restoration by the Crusaders. The site is taken as the place where Christ taught the disciples "how to pray."

The Manifestations Of Eye-Strain

Continued.

Peripheral Irritation of Eye-Strain Unaccompanied by Pain.

The chief types of this form of eye strain are epileptic attacks and choreiform movements of the facial muscles.

It is important to remember that it is not the error of refracfition that causes the peripheral irritation, but the unconscious correction of the error by the patient. When the defect is great no attempt is made to correct it, as the ciliary muscle can only correct low degress of astigmatism; hence there is no eye-strain.

The removal of eye-strain does not, in the strict sense of the word, cure epilepsy any more than it cures a headache, but by removing the eye-strain we solve one of the causes, Delegation to Inspect Permanent Pavements.

COUNCIL IN SESSION, AFTER SEVERAL WEEK'S HOLIDAYS, DECIDES TO SEND THE MAYOR, ALD. LOTT AND THE CITY ENGINEER ON A TRIP TO THE WEST — SEVERAL OTHER MATTERS DEALT WITH.

After enjoying a holiday of several weeks duration the civic legislators met last evening and transacted considerable business.

The members present were: Mayor Marsh, Aldermen Woodley, Wallace, Fairfield, Bogle, Robinson, Lott, Chown, Adams, Parks, Wallbridge, Canning, Sills, McCrodan and Vermilyea.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, after which the Council went into committee of the Whole on reports, etc., Ald. Woodley in the chair.

The reports of the various civic committees as already published, were considered and the accounts passed without discussion.

A recommendation passed that the Mayor be authorized to sign cheques in the absence of Ald. Ackerman Chairman of the Executive Committee, who is ill.

The recommendation from the Public Works that the Mayor, Ald. Lott and Robinson be a committee to visit western cities to investigate permanent pavements and report to the Council caused considerable discussion.

Ald. Wallbridge said that the recommendation had never come before the Executive committee. This was irregular, as the Executive Committee should pass upon all recommendations He considered it was nonsense to send a deputation to the west to inspect permanent pavements at the present time. The work could not be commenced before next year and the members of the deputation might not be in the Council. If the deputation went, he considered that the members of it should pay their own expenses.

Mayor Marsh said that if the City of Belleville was going to have a permanent pavement on Front street it was necessary that preliminary steps should be taken this fall.

Ald. Robinson was of the opinion that it would be money well spent if a committee were appointed to visit places where there is permanent pavements.

Ald. McCrodan said it was not necessary to send such a deputation There was material at Zwick's Island which was good enough to make a first class road on Front street. He contended that there was no such a thing as a permanent pavement. This had been proven in other cities.

Ald. Wallace was in favor of sending a small deputation to certain cities to ascertain the best pavement to be put down here.

Ald. Robinson said that before a permanent pavement was put down on Front street it would be necessary to see that the sewer was all right. Gas and water connection would also have to be made.

Upon a vote being taken to adopt the recommendation there was a tie (7) voting for the recommendations and (7) voting against it.

Ald. Woodley, chairman declared the recommendation defeated as he voted against it.

A recommendation was presented from the Public Works Committee that an Inspector be appointed to superintend the laying of the sewers.

Ald McCrodan— "Where is our City Engineer, and why could he not do this inspection?"

Ald. Wallridge considered it was necessary to have an inspector as the Engineer was too busy with other duties.

Ald. Wallace spoke in favor of an Inspector being appointed.

City Engineer Lindsay being heard stated that he could not be in half a dozen places at one time. A number of sewers were being constructed.

Upon a vote being taken the recommendation prevailed and an inspector for the werk will be appointed.

The following accounts were passed:

Intelligencer Printing Co.	$102.10
J. W. Walker	256.53
Geo. Smith	7.00
Bell Telephone Co.	12.50
D. M. Waters	50.00
F. C. Clarke	16.14
Gas Department	7.75
C. W. Cook	20.00

A communication was read from the Trenton Electric Company, stating that their guarantee bond had been renewed in connection with the city for lighting purposes.—Ordered to be filed.

A communication was read from the legal department of the C. N. R. detailing what streets it was proposed to cross in the city by the railway.

On motion the communication was referred to the Railway Committee.

A communication was read from Mr W. J. Diamond, Sec'y.-Treas. of the Board of Education notifying the Council that there was a vacancy on the Board caused by the resignation of Mr. J. L. Tickell, and asking the Mayor to issue his warrant for an election to fill such vacancy.—Laid upon the table.

A petition was presented from a number of residents of Coleman Ward complaining of the smoke nuisance issuing from Mr. Gills laundry building near the upper bridge.

Ald. Fairfield stated that some months ago when a committee was appointed to wait on Mr. Gill, he promised to erect a smoke stack, but he had not done so. Something should be done in this matter.

On motion the matter was referred to the Solicitor to write Mr. Gill to ask him to make a necessary change in order to obviate the nuisance.

COLLECTION OF TAXES.

Mr. F. D. Diamond tax collector presented a report which showed that $81,068.50 had been collected of the 1910 taxes. The report also showed that taxes unpaid and the years were as follows:

1907	$ 9.06
1909	14,000.00

Mr. J. McGowan who was the successful tenderer for the construction of certain sewers in the city was heard by the Council. He said that he had been handed a bill of quantities, and he was prepared to enter into and sign the contract when that bill of quantities was attached to his contract.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received. On motion that it be adopted Ald. Robinson moved in amendment that the report be not now adopted but referred back for the purpose of reconsidering the recommendation to send a deputation west to ascertain the best pavement possible.

Upon a vote being taken the amendment carried and the Committee of the whole resumed business with Ald. Vermilyea in the chair.

In regard to the recommendation appointing a deputation Ald. McCrodan said he would be in favor of a committee being appointed providing the City Engineer were a member of that Committee.

Mayor Marsh said there was an agitation for a permanent pavement on Front street and it was necessary to make a move towards having the same constructed next year. He did not desire to be on the Committee.

Aldermen Wallbridge and Adams considered that it was possible to secure the information about a pavement without sending a deputation which would cost a considerable sum

Ald. Fairfield moved, seconded by Ald. McCrodan in amendment that the Mayor, Ald. Lott and the City Engineer be the deputation.

Ald. Wallace was in favor of the deputation proposed by the Public Works Committee.

A vote being taken the amendment carried.

The Committee rose and reported The report was received. On motion that it be adopted Ald. Robinson moved in amendment that it be referred back for further consideration.

The amendment was lost and the report was adopted.

ENQUIRIES.

Ald. Wallbridge asked the Chairman of Public Works how the appropriation of that committee stood. Had it all been spent.

Ald. Lott said that about $300 had been expended above the appropriation. About $12,000 had been expended thus far this season on granolithic walks.

Ald. Sills asked if a culvert could be built on Church street near Bridge street.

Mayor Marsh—"That matter will be attended to."

Ald. Canning asked if anything futher had been done in reference to annexing to the city a piece of property near the G. T. R. station and in the Township of Thurlow.

Mayor Marsh — "Thurlow Township Council objects to this being done, and nothing has been done in the matter."

INTRODUCTION OF BY-LAW.

Ald. Vermilyea introduced a By-law to ratify and confirm a contract between the city and Messrs. Thompson and Donohue for the construction of sewers on Foster Avenue, George and Albert streets.

The Council went into Committee of the Whole on By-laws, Ald. Chown in the chair. The By-law was passed through its various stages and numbered.

Ald. Robinson, moved, seconded by Ald. Bogle that the $30,000 debenture By-law for the erection of a public school be published.—Carried.

Ald. Woodly moved, seconded by Ald. Canning that Catherine street from Isabel to Octavia streets be repaired.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Wallbridge, seconded by Ald. Woodley, that the City Solicitor be instructed to notify the County authorities that the city refuses to pay the demand for interest made by the County re the settlement of the Administration of Justice accounts.—Carried.

Ald. Adams moved, seconded by Ald. Robinson, that a special committee be appointed for the purpose of considering the advisability of drafting a general By-law respecting the erection of buildings or using the streets for sewer, gas, water or other utilities, and that permits be issued for same, and that the Committee be composed of the mover, seconder, Ald Wallbridge, Vermilyea and Lott.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Adams, seconded by Ald. Chown, that Aldermen Robinson and Wallbridge be appointed to act with the Harbor Commissioners and Board of Trade in reference to the Grand Junction wharf.—Carried.

Ald. Wallbridge moved, seconded by Ald. Bogle, that after the granolithic walks recommended by the Council are constructed, no other walks be constructed this year, as the appropriation for granolithic walks has been exceeded by a considerable amount, that no further money be expended on Public Works, except repairing Catherine street and making some necessary repairs as the appropriation given the Committee has been exceeded.—Carried.

Council adjourned.

THE RING

Jack Johnson, world's champion slugger, conqueror of the "white man's hope" and others, rolled down St. James street, in his big grey automobile this morning, with a coterie of his friends of both colors, says Monday's Montreal Herald. The glint of lavender pajamas in the window of a haberdashery store caught the eye of the big pugilist, and his car came to a sudden standstill.

The clerk produced the most glittering colors in stock and they were spread before the eyes of the big fellow. His golden smile harmonized very nicely with the lavenders, pinks, purples, sky-blues and other shades.

"Jes' come across with 'bout a dozen sets of those" said the champion. They were eighteen dollars a set, but he didn't ask the price.

"An' gimme some silk underwear—'bout a dozen outfits," he added. "An' sling in some of these here" as he gathered up a glorious bunch of neckwear.

Altogether, the champion's purchases amounted to about $300.

And while he was buying, a big crowd had assembled around his car outside. One of Jack's retainers came out of the store entrance, staggering under the weight of an armful of parcels, but he couldn't get through the crowd. So a shower of parcels was sent flying out into the hands of the colored gent in the auto.

Then Jack in all his glory emerged, he lifted his big grey felt hat in response to the cheers, beamed his golden smile, and the car rolled off.

BASEBALL

The race in the two big baseball leagues is practically over and the attention of the fans is on the batting average lists to see who will win the auto for having the highest average. Last week Napoleon Lajoie passed Ty Cobb, but the past week has changed matters and Cobb is leading again with an average of .364, with Lajoie right on his heels with .361. Snodgrass is again leading the National League swatters with .338, with Magee of Philadelphia and Hoffman of Chicago chasing him with .327 each.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The theory that "they can't come back" in baseball has been disproved by Harry Covaleski, the Polock miner, now pitching for the Cincinnati Reds, according to the opinion of those that watched the big southpaw mow down the Brooklynites yesterday. Covaleski has been shunted around from team to team and league to league in a rather disheartening manner, but Manager Clark Griffith is authority for the statement that he is now in the big league to stay. Covaleski gained fame two seasons ago when he was a member of the Philadelphia Nationals by beating the New York team three times in one week and killing all its pennant hopes. He fairly "burnt up" the Southern League this year and Griffith is counting on a continuance of the brilliant work.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Christy Mathewson—matinee idol. That is to be the latest achievement of the champion twirler of the National League, or "Big Six," as he is affectionately called by all fans. The conquest was made by William Hammerstein, who announces the exclusive engagement of Christy Mathewson and "Chief" Meyers, the Giants' star catcher, at the Victoria Theatre, beginning Monday, October 24, directly following the closing of the baseball season.

In following the example of Mike Donlin, Captain Dooin, of the Philadelphia team, and other ball players who have striven for histronic laurels, Mathewson and Meyers will be equipped with an ambitious vaudeville offering, in a sketch prepared for them by Bozeman Mulger, called "Curves," not to be outdone by the favorite ex-captain and Giant outfielder, they will interpolate a song and dance—the latter being in the nature of a war dance, constructed by the worthy Indian noble, "Chief" Meyers.

As the title suggests, the sketch will enable "Big Six" to illustrate some of his remarkable "curves" and ball controls. They will be assisted by a capable young actress who will play the part of a feminine baseball enthusiast, upon whom the burden of the actual dramatic development of the story depends.

GOLF

The tenth annual ladies' gold championship tournament of the Royal Canadian Golf Association opened yesterday on the links of the Toronto Golf Club. There are 64 entries in the various events, and included in the list are all the crack lady players from Winnipeg to Halifax. This year's entry list is the best the tournament ever had and some good golf is expected before the prizes are distributed. Miss Mabel G. Thomson, of St. John, the ex-champion, has rounded to excellent form, and with Miss Henry-Anderson, of Montreal, Mrs. Handsomebody, the ex-Maritime Province champion, Miss Florence Harvey, Miss Nesbit and Miss Dick, is expected to make the redoubtable Scotch player play to her best form to retain the title.

THE TURF

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—Four carloads of horses arrived last night from Montreal, and eleven more came in this morning for the Woodbine races, which begin on Saturday.

The horses of Sam Hildreth, the New York turfman, were due to leave Saratoga last night, and are expected here this afternoon. Mr. Hildreth has asked for stabling accommodation for eighteen horses, and it is expected that Fitzherbert, Novelty (the Futurity winner), Firestone, Hampton Court, Black Bridge, Kormak, and Restigouche will be among the list.

W. S. Vosburgh, the official handicapper of the New York Jocket Club, will allot the weights at Woodbine.

THE AUTO

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 19.—A stringent Customs regulation affecting motor cars has gone into effect here which provides for a means to suppress the repairing and equipping of Canadian-owned machines in Detroit.

Car owners have been in the habit of purchasing accessories and having repairs made in the Detroit shops and stores. The car upon returning to Canada gets by the Customs Inspectors without paying duty on new equipment. Canadian car owners will, hereafter, have to present a complete record of their machines, in which is itemized a description of every section of the car.

This will have to be shown the inspectors when the machine goes across the river to Detroit, and it will be held by the Customs Inspectors until the machine is brought back. In this way any new equipment or repairs that have been made will be immediately apparent and made subject to duty.

Canadian Grain Inspection All Right.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—Russell A. Thornton, an official of South Africa, is in Canada looking into the Dominion system of grain inspection. He was advised by the British authorities to examine the Canadian inspection which they regard as the best and most reliable in the world.

Captive of Another Sort.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—Joseph Brisbois was to get married yesterday, but upwards of a dozen charges of theft interfered. He is under arrest. He was building a house, and, it is alleged, stole the lumber and all of the material for building, not forgetting the tools.

Murdered Father.

Gull Lake, Sask., Sept. 20.—Lewis McBride murdered his father Friday evening in a drunken frenzy. Both occupied a homestead ten miles from the city.

McBride and his son had been in town drinking freely. They returned to their homestead shack and engaged in a drunken brawl, during which Lewis grabbed a double-barrelled shot gun, and discharged the contents of one barrel into his father's stomach.

The shot brought the younger man to his senses, and, realizing what he had done, he immediately set out to town for medical aid, but it was too late. Upon explaining what had occurred at the homestead, he was arrested by Constable Fisher of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

Burglar Gets 18 Months.

Owen Sound, Sept. 20.—A series of petty burglaries which have been perpetrated during the past fortnight, in which entrance was forced into several business houses, and small amounts of money taken, came to an end on Saturday night, when Sidney Hope, a young Englishman, was arrested. This morning he confessed to having committed the burglaries when he was confronted by the owners of the articles found in his room in connection with a Chinese restaurant.

The prisoner is an undersized man and was able to force his way through very small openings. Eighteen months in the Central Prison was the sentence he received.

Affairs In Portugal.

Lisbon, Sept. 20.—It is believed that King Manuel's appointment of sixteen peers, all supporters of the present Liberal Cabinet, will afford sufficient new strength to the Government to avoid the necessity of a dissolution of Parliament and new elections, which the Republicans declare would mean revolution.

The Government continues its campaign again the Jesuits, and is proceeding with the expulsion of other religious orders, which re-entered Portugal after the issuance of the decree of 1901.

The "Rue Edouard VII."

Paris, Sept. 20.—Paris will in a few months have a new street. It will be called the Rue Edouard VII., after "the most Parisian of Kings," and as a fashionable shopping and lounging thoroughfare it will probably rival the Rue de la Paix.

The Rue Edouard VII will be a rainbow-shaped street, about a quarter of a mile in length, situated between the Rue Scribe and the Rue de Caumartin.

Five Injured In Tenement Fire.

New York, Sept. 20.—Five persons were injured, two perhaps fatally, in a panic which attended an early morning fire in a downtown tenement district on the west side yesterday. Two of the injured are women. All were hurt by jumping from windows.

Hotel Gutted by Fire.

Lindsay, Sept. 20.—A serious fire broke out in the Queen's Hotel, Woodville, Sunday afternoon, which was only extinguished after a stern fight made by the bucket brigade. The hotel was badly gutted and will not be ready for occupation for some time.

WAITED FOR DIVORCE

Ethel Leneve's Landlady Tells of Girl's Jealousy.

In Outburst of Depression Crippen's Paramour Told Witness at Inquest of Her Hopes and Fears—Crippen Was Only Waiting Till He Had Cause For Divorce Against His Wife.

London, Sept. 20.—Something of what Ethel Claire Leneve suffered as half mad with jealously, she impatiently awaited the fulfilment of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen's promise to make her his wife, was revealed at yesterday's session of the inquest into the death of Belle Elmore, with the murder of whom the doctor and his typist are jointly charged.

In her distress, Miss Leneve confided in her landlady, Mrs. Jackson and the story that the latter told on the witness stand rivaled the most sensational evidence introduced at the murder trial.

Mrs. Jackson said that the accused girl gave up the room which she had occupied at the home of the witness on March 12, explaining that she was leaving to be married to Dr. Crippen.

Until the first week in February Miss Leneve had slept regularly at Mrs. Jackson's. After that she stopped at the house only occasionally. She said that she spent the other nights at the homes of friends. On one occasion Miss Leneve mentioned having been at the Hilldrop Crescent home of the Crippens, early in February, to help the doctor in a search for a bank book which showed an account for $1,000. She added that a diamond tiara and rings had been found in the house and that the doctor had raised $850 on these.

About the middle of February the witness said Miss Leneve appeared most miserable and depressed. The landlady insisted upon an explanation, telling the girl that she must have something awful on her mind to be in such a condition. The witness testified that the other replied:

"Would you be surprised if I told you that it was the doctor and Miss Elmore? He was the cause of my trouble when you first knew me. She is his wife, and when I see them go away together it makes me realize my position, as to what she is and what I am."

Mrs. Jackson asked: "What is the use of worrying about another woman's husband?"

To this Miss Leneve answered: "Miss Elmore has been threatening to go away with another man. Dr. Crippen has been waiting for her to do so when he would divorce her."

Solicitor Newton, who is looking out for the interests of Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve, suggested that her lodger's excitement was due to the landlady having resurrected a trouble which the girl experienced during her earlier association with Crippen, but the witness maintained the correctness of her evidence as given.

Another blow was given to Dr. Crippen's fight for liberty when the wife of Dr. T. H. Burroughs, Crippen's closest friend in London, identified a lock of hair, which was disinterred with portions of the human body, in the cellar of the Crippen Hilldrop Crescent home, as being from the head of Belle, as Mrs. Crippen was known on the stage.

Prof. Pepper, the pathologist, repeated the testimony which he had given at the trial in the Bow street police court. In response to questions by the coroner he said:

"I can form no definite opinion as to whether the parts found were those of a male or female. If I take the hair discovered into consideration there is a strong presumption, almost conclusive evidence, that the parts were those of a woman."

Investigating Unemployment.

Paris, Sept. 20.—Former Premier Bourgeois, in opening yesterday the first international conference on unemployment, said that the purpose of the congress was to investigate the scientific causes of unemployment, with the object of organizing methods for conserving human resources. Besides discussing means of combatting unemployment, the delegates will attempt to lay the basis for a labor legislation between the city and the country districts, and between different countries.

Col. Gibson In Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Hon. J. M. Gibson, arrived in this city at noon, and was met by a delegation of prominent Scottish Rite Masons. Last night a reception was held by the craft in the Masonic Temple. Mr. Gibson, who is being entertained at Government House, said "the bountifulness of what I have already seen in the West strikes me as most impressive. Ontario, for her part, is blessed with a rich harvest this year."

White Gloves For Judge.

Kingston, Sept. 20.—When Hon. Justice Falconbridge opened the fall assizes yesterday afternoon there were no criminal cases and he was presented with the customary white gloves. There was one jury case, that of R. S. Johnston v. Thousand Islands Railway Co., for $5,000 for the death of his wife in Gananoque on May 16.

GOING! GOING!! GONE!!!

When Auctioneers Sell by Hour-Glass and Candle.

The English property market is in such a bad way that a well-known firm of London auctioneers have recently tried selling by Dutch auction.

This auction is the exact reverse of the ordinary English method. Instead of starting at a small price, and running up the bids, the auctioneer begins by putting up the property at the highest possible price, and then lowering it until someone makes a bid, when it is at once knocked down.

One of the most ancient forms of auction is "sale by candle." This still exists in a good many out-of-the-way parts of the country. It was the great King Alfred who is said to have invented the method of measuring time by candles, and one place where his memory is still kept green is Aldermaston, a quaint, old-world village near Reading.

Aldermaston possesses a field known as the "Churchwardens' acre," which is let each year to the highest bidder by candle auction. The churchwardens meet in the vestry, and measure off a certain length of candle, which represents an allotted time. Then the candle is lighted, and bids are received until it goes out, the last bidder becoming tenant for the year.

Pepys, in his diary, records the sale of two ships by the candle method. So keen was the competition that he says, "We have much to do to tell who did cry last."

Bidding by sand-glass is still more ancient than that by candle. It is now almost extinct, but still survives in the Somerset town of Chard in connection with the annual letting of the market tolls. A sand-glass is placed upon the table, and at a given point in the proceedings is turned over. As the sand runs down bids are taken, the last bidder before the sand is all run down becoming the lessee for the ensuing year.

A field known as the White Bread Meadow, at Bourne, in Lincolnshire, is let by auction annually. The auctioneer takes his stand upon a bridge in the Eastgate, and as each bid is made a boy is started to run to a certain public house, and so long as the last boy has not returned the bids continue. The last bid which is unchallenged when the last boy returns is the successful one.

South Africa For Holidays!

It may be the fine climate that makes the arranging of holidays a certainty at almost any time; or maybe it is a trait of indifference whether they work or not developed in the colonial character; but it is certain it requires a very small excuse for the South African Colonial to claim a general holiday. They began with Ascension Day on the 5th; then, on the arrival of the news of the death of King Edward, they had a day of mourning; whilst a few days afterwards it was Whit Monday. Then came the day of King Edward's funeral, which was another holiday; and on the 24th they celebrated Victoria or Empire Day; whilst on the 31st they had a grand finale in the proclamation of the Union of South Africa. On the day the world was supposed to pass through the tail of Halley's comet a workman at Pretoria coolly asked if there was any chance of getting a holiday on the strength of it.

A LIVELY TIME.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 21.—When Colonel Lattimer, a wealthy Detroit citizen rushed down to the ferry dock in his automobile to-day and demanded that the gates be put up for him, Douglas Kay, a Toronto University athlete, who is temporary gate keeper, refused. An altercation led to blows, and the Detroiter was knocked down. There is now talk of making an international incident out of it.

FASHIONABLE WEDDING.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

OTTAWA, Sept. 21.—A fashionable wedding took place here this afternoon at St. Andrew's Church, when Clare, daughter of Hon. Frank Oliver, was married to Allan Keefer, a son of C. H. Keefer. There were many out-of-town guests. The presents included beautiful things from the Earl and Countess Grey and Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier.

PRETTY GIRL UNDER ARREST.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 21.—Jessie Sweet, aged 22, and pretty, is under arrest in connection with the finding of the body of a fully developed child in a house on John street, where she boarded some months ago.

The body was in a valise in the attic, where she placed it, saying it contained clothing. The landlady discovered it this morning. The girl refuses to make a statement.

No Place for Flirts.

The Owen Sound Herald is going to reform that town. Henceforth it will "freely and without regard to rank and person publish the name of every child of tender years, that is below the age of fourteen, whom it shall see upon the street after ten o'clock at night without the escort of a parent or guardian."

At any rate, some people are going to have an uncomfortable time unless they mend their ways. As a preliminary to the name-printing campaign, The Herald hurled a broadside entitled "Knocking the Flirt," followed the next week by an equally crushing article entitled "Landing the Flirt."

PUBLIC HEALTH TO BE DISCUSSED

CONFERENCE OCT. 12.

Pollution of Waterways, Tuberculosis and Harmonizing of Health Laws Subjects to be Dealt With at Gathering.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 21.—An invitation has been extended to the Prime Ministers of each of the provinces of the Dominion, as also to the Minister of Agriculture of the Dominion, by the Hon. Clifford Sifton, chairman of the Commission of Conservation, to send a representative of the Parliament or of the Provincial Board of Health to meet in conference, with the committee on public health of the commission, for the purpose of discussing various matters of public health, which are somewhat of a national character.

The subjects which will come up for discussion and which have been intimated to those invited to attend are:—

The suggestion of means to prevent the pollution of international, interprovincial and other waterways.

The discussion of questions of international and interprovincial quarantine.

The relationship of the Federal and Provincial Governments to the subject of tuberculosis.

The desirability of the harmonizing of the public health laws and suggestions in regard thereto.

The formation of a central council of health (consultative.)

The calling of the conference by the commission was mainly upon the recommendation of the Standing Committee of the Senate on public health and inspection of foods.

The Conference will be held on October 12 next at Ottawa, when it is expected all the members of the committee on public health, and of the commission of conservation will be present, viz.:—Mr. E. B. Osler, M. C Chairman H. S. Beland, Hon. J. A Calder, Hon. Sydney Fisher, Sir Sandford Fleming, Dr. Cecil C. Jones.

Something Wrong With the Brakes.

Brantford, Sept. 21.—A rear-end collision in front of the Grand Trunk depot at noon yesterday derailed a dozen cars and smashed a number of others. Engineer Connell of Mimico and Fireman Melanson jumped from their engine when they saw the impending crash, both escaping with slight injury.

The Fort Erie way freight stood on the main line track ready to pull out, when a through freight from Sarnia to Mimico came down grade behind it. Engineer Connell was unable to stop his train, something going wrong with the airbrakes. The caboose of the way freight was demolished and a freight car containing Amos Crandell of this city and his horse, Hol B, bound for the Dunnville races, was turned turtle, but the occupants escaped injury.

Prince Rupert and Land Values.

Taxation of land values only and the relief of improvements is steadily gaining ground in Canada, particularly in the western states, which have been prompt to perceive the value of the principle. Prince Rupert is the latest city to inaugurate the system and it is doing this at the beginning of its history. The purpose is openly explained to be the elimination of the land speculator who proposes to keep his lots unused pending the increase in value which comes from the energy and enterprise of the real makers of the city. By compelling the speculator to pay taxes on the true market value of his land he must either utilize it himself or sell to those who will.

Laudable Ambition.

Irvine, the cheese king, was in the Soo on Monday and Tuesday. He says he is going to get about four more factories and is also going to be member of Parliament for the district some day. That's right, Frank, there's nothing like being frank in the matter and looking at the bright side, although it is safe to say that such a thing will never happen you.—Algoma Advocate.

The Grain Census.

Grain and other field crops for the harvest of 1911 will be taken by areas only, as none of these crops will be ripe at the taking of the census. The products of these crops will be gathered later in the year from the reports of correspondents.

DELINE CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Spots on Clothes Responsible For Theory That He Killed His Wife.

ARRESTED AT HAVELOCK.

Accused Is Remanded to Appear at The Inquest on Friday — He Takes Arrest Coolly, and Persists in Asserting His Innocence.

Havelock, Sept. 22.—The Dummer Township mystery took a startling turn yesterday afternoon when Hugh Deline was arrested at 3.30, charged with the murder of his wife, Chrissie May Parks.

Deline came to Havelock at two o'clock to buy some coal oil and other household necessities, and from the time he placed foot in the municipality he was shadowed persistantly by local Constable Bennett.

Provincial Constable Reburn, who has been detailed to the case by the Attorney-General's Department, was, at the time, on his way to the Deline home, accompanied by County Constable Williams, armed with a warrant for Deline's arrest. Learning that their quarry had driven in to Havelock, they turned back and took Deline into custody immediately upon reaching here. The warrant did not minimize in the slightest, but charged straight, unadulterated murder.

Deline did not evince the slightest emotion, other than natural surprise in a mild degree. The childish simplicity of the man makes his predicament almost pitiful. After warning him that anything he might say would be used as evidence against him, the police interviewed the prisoner. He persisted in declaring that he was innocent.

He was arraigned before Magistrate Joyce last night, and was remanded to the county jail at Peterboro, where he was taken at 7 a.m. to-day, and where he will remain until Friday afternoon, when he will appear at the inquest here at 1 o'clock. He may not be put on the witness stand at this session of the inquest.

The reason the crown authorities decided to arrest Deline is that, in addition to the suspicious circumstances already cited, which would appear to identify him with the case, spots were found on his trousers corresponding to spots on the dead woman's clothes. These spots were emitted from the woman's body during the violent spasm of fright, which the doctors say, was responsible for her death.

It is contended that if analysis identifies the spots on the man's clothes with the spots on the woman's skirt, it will be difficult for Deline to explain their presence there, since he declares he was too frightened or horrified, upon discovering his wife lying in the woodshed, to go near her, and that he did not touch her body at all.

This, then, gives the constabulary three points of incrimination against Deline, viz., his statements to three persons that he expected to go home and find his wife dead; the fact that it took him two and a half hours to go, as he says, almost directly, about two miles, and the spots on his clothing.

Calls It Outrage.

Winnipeg, Sept. 21.—A. G. S. Smith, commercial traveler of Duluth, who was held by the Winnipeg police for four days on a nominal charge of vagrancy, on suspicion that he was connected with the jewel robbery at the Royal Alexandra Hotel, has been released, largely through the intervention of the United States consul-general and personal friends.

Smith declares that the whole proceeding is an outrage. The fact that he occupied a room on the same floor as Countess Antrim, and that his board bill was not paid, seem to have been some of the excuses for taking him into custody.

Acquitted of Bigamy.

Cobourg, Sept. 21.—A. Speirs of Port Hope was tried here yesterday on a charge of bigamy. In Februray, 1873, he married his first wife in New York, and deserted her, leaving seven children. Ten years ago he again married in Cobourg.

Speirs was acquitted on the ground that he had lived seven years without knowing his first wife was still alive.

This being Judge Huycke's first court in his native town, short complimentary addresses were made by H. A. Ward, K.C., and Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr, K.C.

$5 Fine for Attempted Murder.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—John Lewis of Hull was tried there yesterday morning on a charge of attempted murder, and got off on the trivial fine of $5.

Levis got into a row with a neighbor's wife, and ended by throwing an axe at the woman, which missed her, but stuck in the side of a door.

A Defeat for Roosevelt?

Albany, N.Y., Sept. 21.—W. Barnes, jr., in a statement last night, claims that the result of yesterday's primaries gives Vice-President Sherman a clear majority of 55 votes over Col. Roosevelt for the temporary chairmanship of the Republican State Convention.

HON. MR. PUGSLEY FAILS IN HIS SUIT.

Agent Cannot Investigate Principal Says Chief Justice Barker of New Brunswick.

NO RIGHT OF ACTION.

If a Bill is Filed By the Attorney General of the Province. Investigation May Proceed, is Ruling of the Court.

St. JOHN, N. B., Sept. 21.—In the Chancery Division of the Supreme Court this afternoon His Honor the Chief Justice allowed the defendants' demurrer in the case of Hon. William Pugsley, v. the N. B. Coal and Railway Company. The effect of this is to throw the case out of court. The case of the Minister of Railways was based on a request for a full investigation into the affairs of the railway company during the time when he was Attorney-General of the province and therefore ex-officio a director of the company along with Premier Tweedie, now Lieutenant-Governor After Mr. Pugsley entered the Dominion Cabinet and the remains of his Government here were snowed under by the Hazen party the latter began immediate investigation into the affairs of the railway company, about which some startling stories of graft had been in circulation. They appointed a Royal Commission, of which Mr. Justice Landry was chairman. This Committee made an investigation and on March 20, 1909 reported that they found, after making allowance for all disbursements made by the coal company and taking account of the receipts, there was the sum of $135,035.35 unaccounted for. It was strongly suggested that the ex-Attorney-General, as guardian for the people and others, should be called upon to explain where this money went to. Mr. Pugsley, in his action just decided upon by Chief Justice Barker, claimed that a charge had been made against him and asked for a complete investigation, declaring that certain sums had been omitted in the committee's finding. The Court found that Mr. Pugsley had no right to bring an action, as it would be a case of an agent investigating the principal. The Court stated, however, that there could be no judicial objection to the fullest investigation if a proper bill was filed—that is by the Attorney-General. Under the circumstances, however, the demurrer was allowed with costs.

An Australian Plant Pest.

Just thirty years ago a lady at Bright, Victoria, planted in her garden a few seeds of St. John's wort sent her from the old country. The lady's intention was to have one or two of the plants at hand for medicinal purposes. The hardy weed, however, soon spread beyond the garden, and before any one had grasped the magnitude of the evil it had been carried by cattle along all the main stock routes and jumped the Victorian watershed into Gippsland. It has now completely taken possession of something like 20,000 acres of agricultural land, and the agricultural department of Victoria is spending thousands of pounds in the endeavor to eradicate it, some of the methods tried costing nearly £50 an acre.—Westminster Gazette.

Intolerance In Alsace-Lorraine.

Tolerance is not the most important factor in the German rule of the conquered provinces of Alsace-Lorraine, as an instance from Guebwiller shows. A merchant had his telephone number, together with his name, painted above his door, forgetful that an ordinance passed two years ago required authorization to put any legend in French on a building. The merchant spelled his name "Camille" and "telephone" as in French, "telephone." The police soon discovered the breach of the law, and forthwith the merchant received a formal letter intimating that his name must appear as "Camil" and "telephone" as "telephon;" otherwise he would be considered contumacious and treated accordingly.—London Globe.

A Village Without a Man.

By direction of the highest official of Saratow a commission was sent to the village of Krugloe, in Russia, to consult with the inhabitants with a view to making improvements in the village. The commission returned to the province headquarters without having had a conference with the citizens, because, as stated in the report, there was not a man in the place. Every one of them had taken part in a recent agrarian uprising and had in consequence been sent to prison. Not even the priest or the schoolteacher was spared, and the hamlet was absolutely manless.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The following timely matter on filtration of drinking water has been furnished this paper and will no doubt interest many of our citizens.

The quality of water for human consumption depends upon the polluting and purifying influences to which it has been subjected before reaching the consumer. It is well known that the general health of a community using a sewage polluted water gradually falls lower and lower and the death rate increases proportionatel, Of the diseases most frequently following the use of an impure water, typhoid fever holds, at the present day the most prominent position in the public eye. It is a curious fact, as yet unexplained, that the change from an impure water to a pure suppiy diminishes the sickness and death rate, not only from typhoid fever, but also from tuberculosis, pneumonia, and other serious diseases. It is also a fact that in certain cities using a sewage polluted water the death rate from typhoid fever is many times more than that for cities using a filtered water supply taken from the same source.

Generally speaking, there are two methods in use for the filtration of public water supplies: they are known as the "Slow Sand" filtration and "Mechanical" filtration. In the former type, the water filters through beds of sand and gravel at varying rates of from two to five million gallons per acre every twenty-four hours, according to the character of the water. In mechanical filtration, a precipitate is first added to the water, which is then passed through a medium of sand under pressure, the rate of filtration being many times more than in the slow sand filters.

The type of filter best suited for any particular water must be carefully considered before adoption by a municipality, and this can only be done by a competent sanitary engineer When either system can be used, it resolves itself into a question of primary cost and annual maintenance. The slow sand filters cost, approximately, $30,000 per million gallons of the daily consumption and about ten per cent. of this per annum for operating while a mechanical filter costs about one-fourth, and, if carefully operated a high degree of efficiency as regards purification can be obtained. This is well exemplified at Chatham, Ontario where for some years filters of this latter class have been in operation the water treated being that of the river Thames.

POLICE NOTES.

Two drunks, one of whom walked into the station and asked to be locked up, were last night taken care of by the police. The only item upon the police blotter this morning was the report that the side door of a business place was found unlocked.

DELEGATES OFF.

Mayor Marsh, Alderman Lott and City Engineer Lindsay left on the Flyer to-day for Windsor, where they will go first, to inspect pavements, and will drop off at other towns on their way back to make further inspections.

BURGLARS AT WORK.

Brockville Recorder: A circular from Chief Graham, of Napanee, received at police headquarters this morning gives descriptions of quantities of jewelry stolen from five farm residences near Selby last Friday night.

POLICE COURT.

Two drunks this morning appeared before the Magistrate, and both were old offenders. Wallace Ross desired to be discharged but the Cadi imposed a fine of $5 or 1 week in jail. He went up. A. W. Rowlands asked to be sent up for a few days and his request was granted. He will spend the next 21 days in the County jail.

DEATH OF CHARLES CHESSON,

Mr. Charles Chesson passed away last evening at his late residence on Church street. Deceased who was 48 years of age was born in England, but had spent the greater portion of his life in this vicinity. For seven years he was employed with Col. S. S. Lazier and was a faithful worker. Latterly he was sexton of St. Andrews Church. A widow survives.

DEATH OF WM. T. BRISTOL.

Mr. Wm. T. Bristol, a yeoman who resided at Coe Hill died in the city this morning from an attack of typhoid fever. Deceased who was in his 52nd year, had been a resident of the northern part of the County all his life, and was highly respected in the community where he resided. A widow survives. The remains after being prepared for burial were shipped to Coe Hill for interment.

FORMER BELLEVILLE LADY MARRIED.

Calgary Daily News.—A quiet wedding took place on Saturday afternoon Sept. 3rd, at 1.30 at the home of Mrs. J. W. Vermilyea, when Miss Margaret Elizabeth Sanders, daughter of Mrs (Rev.) Wm. J. Sanders, Belleville Ont., was united in marriage to Mr Hubert Alexander Rose, of Calgary. Rev. Mr. Luttle of Wesley Methodist Church officiated. Only the immediate friends were present. The bride who was given away by Mr. J. W. Vermilyea, wore a smart travelling suit of grey cloth, and a becoming hat of peacock blue with Dresden sash and steel ornaments. Mr. and Mrs. Rose are both known in Calgary, where they will make their home. They left on the evening train for Laggan.

RETURNED MISSIONARY.

Dr. Buchanan, who has been engaged in missionary work in India on behalf of the Presbyterian Church, last evening gave a brief address at the meeting of the Kingston Presbytery at St. Andrew's Church. He stated that he was pleased at the missionary spirit that was displayed. The work in Central India, where he had labored, was most encouraging to the church. It was solid Presbyterian there, as no other church missionary was in close proximity to where he was stationed. What was needed now was a true Christian man to continue the work, and especially among the Beals. These inhabitants needed a teacher to instruct them in the right path. They were a class of people who were susceptible to the truth and were anxious and willing to learn. Dr. Buchanan said that there would yet be seen a Christian people in the heart of India, and his prayer was that such would be the case in the near future.

ARRESTED FOR THEFT.

Some time during the latter part of July twelve bags of cement, the property of Mr. Charles Vanderwaters were stolen from a shed in rear of the Church at Canifton village. The cement in question was part of consignment which was being used by Mr Vanderwaters in the construction of a sidewalk in the village near the Church. The matter was reported to the authorities who have since been working upon the case. Yesterday acting under a search warrant High County Constable Duffin and Sergt Naphin of this city visited Charles Edward Powley's place on Grier street and made a search with the result that in a shed under some hay six full bags of cement, one partially filled bag and two empty bags were recovered. Powley was placed under arrest and locked up. This morning the accused was brought up before the Magistrate, but the Crown was not prepared to proceed in the case and an adjournment was granted until Saturday. Bail was refused. Mr. Anderson, County Attorney for Crown and Mr. Carnew for the accused.

TAKEN TO PETERBORO.

Hugh Deline, charged with the murder of his wife at Havelock, was taken to Peterboro this morning and lodged in jail. To the officers in charge of him he continually murmured, "I am innocent."

A GOOD CATCH.

Senator Johnson, of Newark, N. J., and a party of friends spent yesterday fishing at Mosquito Bay. They succeeded in catching five maskinonge which weighed on an average twenty-four pounds each. The members of the party were highly elated over their success.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The Harriers had their first run out last evening. It was to have taken the form of "follow the leader," but owing to the few that were ready to start, it was turned into a practice run. Those who turned out had a good time, and it is hoped these runs will be held frequently. Besides the training, it helps to get the boys in closer touch with each other. The senior gymnasium class will hold its first session to-night at 8 p.m. Come along, fellows, and get into the game; it will do you good. All boys, old and young, who are interested in the Boy Scout movement are requested to be at the rooms tomorrow evening at 8 p.m. Watch the paper to-morrow for further notice.

WORK ON THE C. N. R.

The work of grading on the Canada Northern Railway at the city limits and just west of same is progressing in a most satisfactory manner. Yesterday a few more workmen were engaged upon the work and teams, waggons carts, etc., were brought in here for the purpose of taking part in the work It was rumored that some forty or fifty men had arrived here to work on this branch of the contemplated railway but such is not the case. A number of the railway employees were in the city last evening but a number of them came from Trenton where a section is being graded. It is expected that a considerable quantity of grading will be accomplished between the city and Trenton before the snow flies.

THE PRESBYTERY.

The meeting of the Kingston Presbytery, held here yesterday in St. Andrew's Church, was brought to a close last evening. Rev. G. W. Smith, Moderator, presided over the sessions and Rev. W. T. Wilkins, of Trenton, was Secretary. The principal business transacted was of a routine nature. In the evening Mr. Harvey Mills was recommended by the Presbytery as a suitable person to engage in church work at Bannerman, Man., where he is at present located. Mr. Mills had been an elder of the church, a Sunday School superintendent, and had always taken a deep interest in church work. It was agreed by the Presbytery that the Moderator, Rev. Mr. Smith, should be appointed to obtain a suitable person for church work at Consecon. The Presbytery agreed to send a man to engage in mission work near Bancroft and other stations in the northern part of the County of Hastings. The Presbytery adjourned, to meet in Kingston the second Tuesday of March next.

Woman's World

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Your correspondent has investigated the question of the cost of board and lodging for the benefit of Canadian art students who intend to spend the winter in Paris.

The girl student in Paris, who is willing to cook her own breakfast and supper, and patronize a cheap table d'hote at noon, can get along on twenty-two dollars a month. If she wants to take full board at a decent house, she must pay at least thirty dollars per month.

Foreign women and girls who object to take dinner in places where wine is used may patronize one of the many dairies lately sprung up. They are especially numerous in the Quartier Latin, where otherwise "red ink" flowed in rivers.

There are very good restaurants for women only in the neighborhood of the Louvre and near the Sorbonne. They are exceedingly cheap.

Young girls and women of good address, and well recommended, do well to apply at the semi-philanthropical hotels known as "Societe philanthropique" and Maison moubles pour dames et jeunes filles." These are the cleanest hotels in Paris. They rent rooms and roomlets, which latter rent for $4.50 per month. The rooms rent for six dollars per month. Roast meat sells for six and one-half cents a portion, the price of vegetables is two cents.

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING.

Mrs. Mary Morre-Willson, who has recently published a book on "The Seminoles of Florida," has lived in Florida, and is said to have learned to know the Seminoles, first employed by her guides, better than any other white person living. She says officially the Indians in Florida do not exist

A woman suffrage league has been formed in Hungary, with only men for its members. Dr. Diner is the president of the league, which numbers more than 200, including three members of Parliamnet, several university professors, and other men of learned professions.

Women who have had treatment of the hair in Berlin say that the German dermatologists do not approve of the frequent shampoos the hair receives in this country. They make examinations with microscope, and treat the hair as they think it needs it.

Countess de la Boissorire-Masarin, the sister of the Count de Lesseps, who was in Toronto during aviation week may be one of the first women to fly as her brother has promised that he will take her up as soon as he can find an aeroplane that will carry two. They have recently come to this country from France.

The Woman's Club of Cincinnati established the vacation schools in that city twelve years ago, and, as clubs in other cities have done, supported them until the city took charge The playgrounds and vacation schools are now practically good, and the clubwomen still take an active interest in them.

VALUE OF CRESS

Lettuce is one of the most easily digested of all green vegetables Watercress is another valuable green food. The Greeks realized its merit as a mental stimulant, and system invigorator. There is an old Greek adage "Eat cress and learn more wit." Pliny believed that watercress eaten with vinegar had the power to restore sanity, but this, with many other of Pliny's ideas on therapeutics, must, I fear, be taken with salt. Watercress, however, does take high rank among substances possessing the double quality of food and medicine. Analyzed, it contains a sulpho-nitrogenous essential oil, a bitter extract, iodine, iron phosphate, water, and other salts — properties, which enable it to promote digestion, to clear the skin, and to induce perspiration. It is eaten very generously in France.

A PICTURESQUE HAIR ARRANGEMENT.

THE FASHIONABLE FIGURE.

In the smart silhouette to day the lines are extremely straight and slender. The bust is neither high and low, the waist is large in comparison with the hips, and the hips themselves are very small in comparison with their dimensions a few years ago. A woman ought to be slender; if that is impossible, she must at least look slender. It is easier than it sounds for the modern corsets are cut so cleverly that they can accomplish miracles. They do not really reduce the figure, but they do reduce its actual measurements. If the flesh is loose and flabby they compress it to within reasonable limits. It is hard and firm, they push it here and there as skilfully as a masseuse till it is out of harms' way. They do nothing to hurt the figure and a great deal to help it.

Daily Intelligencer.

What Canada Needs.

In the course of a sermon delivered in St. George's Church, Montreal on Sunday last, Bishop Taylor-Smith Chaplain-in-Chief of His Majesty's forces, declared that Canada's problem was how to develop a strong manhood. We entirely agree with His Lordship. A saner or more timely utterance has never been been publicly delivered in Canada. In this age of commercialism, we of Canada, hear day in and day out of the magnificent future which is ours through the development of our marvelous natural resources. The commercial genius who thus predicts, fails to reason that such inheritances as fertility of soil and an abundance of water power do not alone guarantee a glorious future for any country. They may supply bread and butter to the populace and untold riches to those who come and go; but that is all. They alone do not make a nation great. We need these vast resources, but there is something that we need more and that is, a strong young manhood. Canada should have to-day more than anything else young men who lead clean,, wholesome lives—young men who are not given over to any of the almost countless vices which sap the life and energy of youth and often lead to degradation and ruin. A new vice is created almost every hour. It goes without saying that never in the history of the world has there been so many snares and pitfalls for youth as there are to-day and probably, we are loath to state, never so great a disinclination to resist them. The crowd, while not naturally vicious as a whole, is weak, and the individual is prone to go with the crowd. It takes a strong man to resist. What Canada needs is strong men. With them she will become truly great; without them, she may estimate the time of her decay And let us have a race of men who are not only honest with themselves but with their fellow beings.

Labor For Railway Building.

Western papers have been quoting Mr. Alfred Smithers, chairman of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, on the subject of labor. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, he is reported to have said, needs 5000 men for construction work at Prince Rupert and cannot get them. Some of the classes that were regarded as undesirable by the framers of our immigration law, are, he considers, the reverse of undesirable.

In thus expressing himself he may have had in mind the arrangements to limit the importation of Oriental labor, for it is known that the builders of the Grand Trunk Pacific system strongly urged a modification of these arrangements, observes the Toronto Mail and Empire. On that point however, Canadian public opinion will not give way, and British Columbia public opinion is especially averse to the making of our Pacific slope anything but a white man's country. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway people can hardly expect any further sacrifices to be made in their behalf. For their sake the country has undertaken much more than it ought to have been asked to undertake. It will not add the additional favor of an unrestricted admission of coolie labor. Mr. Charles M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, has also been interviewed in Western papers. He is represented as saying that, owing to the difficulty of securing sufficient labor in British Columbia, no further contracts will at present be given out for eastward construction from the Pacific end of the road. This, it is said will mean the deferring of the completion of the road for at least three years beyond the time last set therefor. It is rather remarkable that the Grand Trunk Pacific project should be retarded by the difficulty of getting labor at a moment when the Canadian Northern Railway people are entering upon large building construction in British Columbia. Mr. William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern Railway Company, is reported in the Edmonton Bulletin to have said that his company has had no great difficulty in securing laborers, and that it foresees none The Canadian Northern has this year built 350 miles of new lines in the West, and Mr. Mackenzie says that it is the intention to bring the main line as far as the Yellow Head Pass by the end of next year, at the same time as the line is being pushed across British Columbia from Vancouver. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company has gone on with its large construction programme without any hindrance from labor shortage. In his report for the year ending last June, a report that will be laid before the shareholders on the 5th of next month, the president, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, states that authority will be asked by the directors to provide for the construction of 553 miles of branch lines, and nothing is said about labor scarcity.

Why should the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company find itself at a disadvantage when the builders of the other great railway systems of the country are able to get all the labor they require? This question suggests another. Is it really on account of labor scarcity that the company is not pushing its line to completion as fast as it appears to desire?

When Fashions Change.

The man who pays his bills does not require any array of statistics to inform him that there has been an appreciable increase in the cost of living. He knows from painful experience that it is becoming increasingly difficult to make both ends meet. But the popular discussion serves one very good purpose. Under individual conditions the tendency has been to conceal with a good deal of care any difficulty that might exist in making the family income cover the family expenditure. Prices were discussed in an academic fashion. The cost of living was a matter demanding impersonal treatment. But, as everyone knows, it has never been considered just the thing to admit any necessary economies. People have publicly pitied the poor when there has been any jump in prices, but they have never ventured to publish their own distress.

But in these days the fashions are changing. Everybody is now more than willing to confess the necessity of the practice of rigid economy. People who do not complain of the high price of dry goods and groceries are distinctly out of touch with popular conversation. We are all eager to admit that we are hard pressed. Everybody now knows that nine-tenths of us are struggling desperately to make both ends meet.

The cat is out of the bag. We understand one another a good deal better. We now know that we all play the same game. Moreover, we will be able to pity the few people who can never have any real cause for complaint.

There is, moreover, promise that this crisis in prices will produce yet another civilizing effect. As everybody knows, the impelling motive of every ambitious family has been to live a little better than the other families of the neighborhood. We have cheerfully concealed the annual deficit and ostentatiously displayed the daily luxuries. In fact, it has been quite fashionable to glory in extravagance.

But now that we have reached the limit in that competition, there is promise of a fresh move. One Canadian sheriff calmly announces that he has a dozen automobiles, more or less, in his keeping because their owners were unable to pay their dry goods and grocery bills. There are, doubtless, other sheriffs similarly situated. It is the beginning of the end. Would-be millionaires have lately been taught a hard lesson. But we believe that this is the beginning of a new day, when it will be considered fashionable to be frugal and distinctly vulgar to be extravagant.

For human nature is quite capable of just such a right-about-face. One day we may find two women tactfully boasting of their extravagance, and the next day, with equal pride, displaying their bargains. At bottom, it is the same quality of human nature that they exercise. We wish to excel, to be well thought of, to appear to advantage. We boast of a bargain, if bargain hunting is fashionable, and will reflect upon our superior shrewdness. We boast of extravagance if that is the proper cult. And the housewife of to-morrow may boast of her frugality for the very same reason that her sister of yesterday frankly displayed her reckless extravagance.

INVITING DISHONESTY.

"The experiment of forcing the millenium is being tried out in Washington," says the Philadelphia Inquirer. "One hundred farmers have started a co-operative store without clerks. A young lady, says Vanity Fair, who was about to be married in the church did not relish the prospect, and instructed her prospective husband to tell the clergyman that she did not wish him to kiss her. The bridegroom did as directed. "Well, George," said the young lady when he appeared, "did you tell the clergyman that I did not wish him to kiss me?"

The selling of Toronto's best known street name is somewhat peculiar, but its very oddness is an aid to the puzzle department of the post-office, which shows wonderful skill in directing incompletely addressed letters to the proper recipient. THE CRIMINAL INSANE.

(Buffalo Express.)

Federal detectives have arrested a man accused of wilfully starting forest fires. He is said to have placed spectacle lenses in such a way that the rays of the sun would be focused by them upon a collection of matches and leaves. His device was discovered by following the trail of his horse which had a defective foot. How many of the forest fires he caused is not known, but he probably will now get something for at least one of them.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

PANDORA RANGE

for Coal or Wood

YOUR convenience was given the deepest thought by our brainy stove experts when they were designing the Pandora Range. Among the many handy features that they originated, the Nickelled Towel Bar (patented) is one of the most popular.

One-third of the Towel Bar consists of high grade Emery. A few passes across its surface will put a keen edge on your knife blade. Unlike the easily misplaced steel, you cannot lose the Pandora Emery. It is always on the range ready for instant use.

The ...Veiled Lady...

napoleons in sight. Beverly Seaton's face gleamed with a fierce new light.

"At last!" he murmured, "my vengeance is near!" Jean howled forth his tale of poverty,—the loss of his place,—and the damage to his "respectable character" from the expose.

Holding a thousand-franc note before his astonished eyes, Seaton remarked: "Get yourself out of here instantly; make the best excuse you can! Meet me at the corner! We will drive over and see your wife! Keep your mouth shut, or it will cost you just a thousand francs." Jean was free to go and come now. The club was being closed forever! He only watched the property!

After Beverly Seaton had revolved in his mind the drawing of the net around Irene Hope, he waited in the little wine shop at Neuilly; Victorine had greeted him with all a French soubrette's caution.

"Jean, will you mind the shop, while I talk to Monsieur?" she said, suggestively. The steward gazed doubtfully at his wife, who resolutely closed the door of her own special haunt. "Josef has told me all!" she cried.

In an hour Beverly Seaton was master of Victorine's secrets. "This brute—this scoundrel has betrayed my poor husband!" The anathemas upon Jenks were the usual outpourings of a servant spy's wrath. Josef's revelations flooded the dim past with a new light.

"You did not give Mr. Jenks all the things you found in 'Mees Isabel's' luggage!" Seaton finally remarked, with a flashing eye! "I am not here to be deceived! This Jenks is now a criminal, a fugitive! These paltry tokens are valueless to him! As for me, I leave Paris to-morrow forever! This is your last chance! Speak now!" The woman hesitated.

Victorine's greedy eyes twitched! Her hawk-like gaze fell harmlessly on the impassive Seaton.

"Tenez! I am a poor woman,—but swear to me that fool Jean will never know of this!"

"I shall not tell him anything!" said Seaton carelessly.

"There, then! malediction on the whole affair!" cried the maid, and she threw him an old-fashioned leather pocket-book, with a lettered inscription: "Egbert Neill, Lt. Col. 11th Michigan Cavalry, U.S.A." It was tightly tied with a ribbon. Beverly Seaton slowly read the enclosures, dated 1864. They were signed "Agnes," and addressed to her soldier lover in the field.

"I don't see where this comes in: these are from Neill's fiancee. It helps to clear poor Beatrice. The murderess must have found this on his body. But this Irene Hope, (fiend or witch,) knows my lost sister. She is either her accomplice or her only friend. Gordon she and Beatrice, are an inner circle of conspirators! Where does the truth lead to?"

Victorine, anxiously awaiting, (taking the bank address of Seaton) thanked him for a five-hundred-franc note, as Jean skulked away at the nearest point to his club. When Seaton reentered Paris, Jean was soon in his "secret service," and clutched joyously at his blue billet de banque as a token of future increased rewards.

Seaton spent a day in pondering over the frank revelations of Victorine. "Whither shall I move? Shall I try to force myself alone into this Austrian robber-nest? I ought to have at least a witness! I must think!"

Next night, (as he sat at dinner with Orton,) Beverly Seaton said quietly: "I fear we may be watched here; we had better separate. I will take a little run alone down to Nice, Monaco and the Riviera." Orton nodded. He was yet in the dark, for Seaton had kept his counsel as to the late events, and was fingering a telegram just handed him. It read: "Here in the dark,—come to the Hotel Chaurain,—have found the woman. Stahrenstein's villa here. Come at once. I will communicate." It was unsigned; but Seaton knew that Jenks had found his prey at last!

"Orton!" he said to the young man. "I will telegraph you orders from Nice. I will pack now and take the train.

"By Heavens! I will force my way into that brute's villa, if I die on the threshold!" thought Seaton, as he closed his weary eyes in the railway carriage, and the lights of Paris faded behind him in the night mists.

"At last, I shall meet this strange woman face to face!"

In a darkened chamber of a splendid villa, bowered in silver-gray olive-groves, fringed with dark cypress, and graceful ilex, the Prince of Furstenfield, the haughty head of the wild clan of the Stahrensteins, lay slowly dying. Voluble Italian practitioners, earnest French medical luminaries, and a calm Briton, who dispatched his clients to the tomb with truly insular apathy, assembled daily, and effected nothing save the dignified acceptance of their fees, and a consensus of opinion that even Max Stahrenstein, of the sixteen quarterings, must die. This general doom hangs over us all! In the case of the Austrian magnate, the pallid finger of Death was already touching his marble brow!

"Silence! No excitement! Stimulants! Rest!—and then quietly await the inevitable conclusion!" Such was the regimen directed.

"The lamp of life is burned out! The Count drained too deeply the Circe cup of Pleasure!" the grave Italian in charge, poetically announced. He indulged in unpublished verses!

Adolf Stahrenstein moved about with serious face, and unruffled brow, and gravely accepted the pro-forma expressions of the medical staff. His dark, fierce eyes burned with a wolfish glare, as he noted Irene Gordon's imperial form, gliding among the trees and through the shaded alleys; her lovely face hidden in a silvery veil. The Hussar gazed along the Riviera di Ponente, with its beauty-haunted shores, and the blue Mediterranean stretching away a sparkling sapphire zone! .. . Yachts swiftly flitting along, spreading their graceful white wings, seemed to call him away to where Corsica and Sardinia hovered, washed by the dancing waves, plowed once by the galleys of Rome.

"I would make a heaven for her in the islands of the Greek Sea!—She should see the storied East, with its lotus and fronded palms fringing exquisite Philæ! With her as my own life would take on a new gladness as the golden hours were dreaming away. Great God! Will Max never die? I fear I give him too weak a dose! But I will win her! She shall be mine! She is a woman to die for!

"But I must have some diversion? I shall go mad here, waiting!" Fortune favored Adolf. The sly Italian Doctor (now a resident of the villa,) looked toward the rising social sun. The coming Count was a fountain of golden gain!

"My dear Baron!" the Doctor said "your brother may linger for weeks! You can do nothing! Madame suffers from this isolation and suspense! You are too active for this confinement! Induce her to go out with you! We must guard the living, as well as fight for the life of your noble brother!"

Adolf Starhrenstein was now easily friendly with the beautiful modern goddess. At the board she presided with a consummate grace, and in low tones they carried on an intercourse which was a prelude of the future.

"Did she suspect?" Adolf was fearful! It was not so! Her eyes only dropped before the burning glances of the coming Lord Stahrenstein, the man who found the woman his dying brother had loved, to be the fairest of the daughters of Eve!

Day by day Max lingered! His desperate struggle for life was buoyed up by his maddening passion for the hidden Diva.

Her voice was silent now.

"You must go! Go with Adolf! I will not chain you to this house of gloom!" he whispered. This was the sly Doctor's work. So, flashing though the mellow moonlight, drawn by the Count's superb Hungarian steeds,—or floating in a dainty shallop on the sparkling waters,—and in gazing together, on the throngs on the Promenade des Anglais, Adolf Stahrenstein gloated daily on the beauty of the woman whose slightest touch now thrilled his whole being. Watching him from beneath her veiled lashes, her witching smile inflamed his ardor. They were both silent,—both "waiting!"

No passionate words yet broke the thin veil between these guilty minds in their burning unrest! On the terrace, wandering down the Corso, or listening to dreamy heart-moving music at Monaco, Adolf Stahrenstein's passion, fed by a now unrestrained intercourse, grew daily. He was the abject slave of Diva.

Veiled as ever, she gazed on the deluded fools battling for unearned gold in the grand gaming halls. And still Max lingered,—the dark angel's wing just sweeping his pallid face!

"Take me home, home at once! Baron!" cried Irene with a sudden clutch at his protecting arm, as they strolled around the beautiful grounds of the Palace of Fortune, a few evenings after Beverly Seaton had arrived at Nice.

"What is the matter? I will protect you! What is it?" quickly said Adolf.

"We are dogged! We are followed!" the frightened beauty said.

"By whom?" the officer fiercely demanded.

"I cannot speak now! Take me to the carriage!" Adolf hastened to bear the half-fainting woman away. She trembled as he wrapped the robes around her. Well she might! For the cold, pitiless eyes of Horace Jenks, now desperate, were glaring at her only a few yards away. His quick glance caught the blazonry of the Stahrenstein arms, and noted the well-known livery, in the blaze of the myriad brilliant lights.

"By heavens! I have her now! Revenge, at last, shall be mine!" Jenks swore, under his breath. Warned by Baptiste of her real protector, he had haunted the approaches to Stahrenstein's villa, and he swore, now that his fair quarry was at bay,—"She shall not give me the slip again!"

In telegraphing Seaton, he wished to loose a double thunderbolt to strike her down. "I must get these proofs back from him! But I must seem to yield to him. He shall be the hand to strike, I will be the directing mind!" The devil smile came back to his haggard face.

As the carriage rolled along on its velvet springs, Adolf Stahrenstein, in the half hour of quiet gazing at Irene Gordon's beaming eyes, poured out at last his passion in a flood of burning words.

"Let me protect you! Let me guard you! I am the only hand free to strike a blow for you! Listen! In a few weeks I will be the Lord of Stahrenstein! You shall be a Queen! I will make your life a heaven! Isabel! I love you madly! You must be mine forever! Let me strike down the villain! Tell me all!"

His voice quivered with the intoxication of his mad love, for her perfumed hair swept his face. The curves of her voluptuous beauty in soft contact, drove him farther into an ecstasy of unholy desire!

She grasped his two hands. "Can I trust you? You are brave! Will you be brave and silent?"

"I swear it by my life!" the soldier murmured, covering her hands with passionate kisses. They were nearing the great arch of the villa gateway. The night wind softly rustled the olive leaves; the gentle dash of the breaking waves dying on the silvery sanded beach, alone broke the silence of the hushed and wooing night, whose soft shades wrapped the romantic shores of the Riviera. Irene's eyes blazed like lustrous darkened diamonds.

"Tell your man to drive down the road a half hour!" There was an accent in her melting voice which made him shudder. "When we are free,—when you are Lord of Stahrenstein, I will give you a life for a life! I

CATTLE MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—London and Liverpool cables quote American cattle easy, at 12c to 15c per pound, dressed weight; refrigerator beef lower, at 10½c to 10¾c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—The railways reported 131 carloads of live stock at the City Yards since Friday morning last, consisting of 2210 cattle, 687 hogs, 2376 sheep and lambs, 152 calves and 5 horses.

Exporters.

We did not hear of a single export steer or heifer being sold, but we did hear of twelve bulls being bought by T. Connor at $4 to $5.35 per cwt.

Butchers.

The best butchers' cattle sold at $5.56 to $6; not many reached the latter figure, and few sold at or over $5.60, simply because the quality was not there. Medium to good cattle sold at from $5 to $5.50; common and inferior at from $4.25 to $4.80; cows, $3 to $4.90, with a very few at $5 or over.

Stockers and Feeders.

Murby & Wilson Co. report a good trade for feeders and stockers of the right kind, and, in fact, all the commission salesmen report the same. Best feeders, 950 to 1100 lbs. each, sold at $5.25 to $5.55, the latter price being the top reported; steers, 800 to 900 lbs. each, at $4.75 to $5.25; yearling stockers at $4.25 to $4.75.

Milkers and Springers.

The market for milkers and springers was as strong as at any time this season. This may be accounted for by the Quebec and Montreal demand; besides which there were several local outside buyers on hand. Prices ranged from $35 for inferior to $80 for a supeior quality cow, the bulk going at from $50 to $65 each.

Veal Calves.

There were many inferior eastern mongrel grasser calves, which sold at from $3 to $4.50 per cwt., but good quality calves sold at $6 to $7.50, with $8 per cwt. for a few select.

Sheep and Lambs.

The market for sheep was firm at Monday's prices, while lambs were a little stronger. Sheep, ewes, sold at $4.50 to $5 per cwt.; culls and rams, $3 to $3.50 per cwt.; lambs, $6 to $6.25 per cwt., with a few choice lots at $6.30 and $6.37½ per cwt.

Hogs.

Hogs, selects, fed and watered at the market, $9 to $9.10, and to drovers for hogs f.o.b. cars at country points $8.65 to $8.75 per cwt. Both prices were paid in the country, and we heard that the farmers got $8.75 at some places in the country.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Sept. 20.—Cattle—Receipts 150 head; fairly active and steady.

Veals—Receipts 50 head; active and steady.

Hogs—Receipts 1500 head; dull and 20c to 30c lower; heavy, $9 to $9.30; mixed, $9.55 to $9.65; yorkers and pigs, $9.60 to $9.70; roughs, $8 to $8.30; stags, $6.75 to $7; dairies, $9 to $9.60.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts 1000 head; active; sheep steady; lambs, 5c higher; lambs, $5 to $7.90.

New York Live Stock.

Calves—Receipts 84; feeling steady for all sorts; dressed calves, firm; city dressed veals, 14c to 17½c; country dressed, 10c to 15c.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts 31,754; market firm; sheep, $3 to $4.62½; culls, $2.50; lambs, $7.50 to $8; culls, $5.50.

Hogs—Receipts 1943; easy at $9.50 to $9.80.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Cattle—Receipts 11,000; market weak; beeves, $4.80 to $8.25; Texas steers, $3.75 to $6; western steers, $4.25 to $7; stockers and feeders, $4.25 to $5.90; cows and heifers, $2.25 to $6.35; calves, $6.75 to $9.50.

Hogs—Receipts 13,000; market slow, 5c to 10c lower than yesterday's average; light, $9.25 to $9.75; mixed, $8.45 to $9.55; heavy, $8.25 to $9.45; rough, $8.25 to $8.45; good to choice heavy, 8.45 to 9.45; pigs, $8.50 to $9.55; bulk of sales, $8.55 to $9.10.

After a long series of tests German scientists seem to have disproved an old theory that resin is a beneficial ingredient in soaps, their decision being that the washing power of a soap decreases as the resin content increases.

In the making of hot starch soapy water should always be used. This gives the necessary shine to the linen, while it prevents any chance of the iron sticking to the surface of the article.

MODEST VICTOR HUGO.

The Great Master Thought No Honor Too Great For Himself.

It was Theophile Gautier who said something to the effect that if he thought that one line of the great master, Victor Hugo, was bad he would not acknowledge it to himself if he were alone at the bottom of a dark well. On another occasion Gautier spoke of Victor Hugo as "a new Moses fresh from Sinai, charged to deliver the tablets of the law." Decidedly, Victor Hugo was a man who knew how to cast a spell upon those about him. For example, look at the following picture drawn in the "Souvenir sur Turgenieff:"

"One evening Hugo's admirers assembled in his drawing room, were competing with one another in the eulogy of his genius, and the idea was thrown out, that the street in which he lived ought to bear his name. Some one suggested that the street was too small to be worthy of so great a poet, and the honor of bearing his name ought to be assigned to some more important thoroughfare. Then they proceeded to enumerate the most popular quarters of Paris, in an ascending scale, until one man exclaimed with enthusiasm that it would be an honor for the city of Paris itself to be renamed after the man of genius. Hugo, leaning against the mantelpiece, listened complacently to these flatterers outbidding each other. Then, with an air of one engaged in deep thought, he turned to a young man and said to him in his grand style, 'Even that will come, my friends—even that will come.'"—Bookman.

THE OVARINAS.

Picturesque Barefooted Fish Hawkers of Portugal.

The ovarinas are perhaps the most interesting people in Portugal. They are probably the lineal descendants of the original inhabitants of the land, and now come from a small place called Murtosa (Estarreja), not far from Oporto. As the termination indicates, the overinas are the women of these people.

Both old and young, for even young children are thus employed, are exceedingly active and energetic. They go about barefoot, wearing a peculiar costume, and carrying huge baskets of a peculiar shape on their heads. They travel many miles a day and penetrate into every corner of the city, crying their wares in a loud, unmusical shout. They mount even to the sixth floors and bargain with buyers. They go barefoot not because of their poverty, many of them possessing expensive gold ornaments, but because they can thus more easily cover the many miles they run during the day. Attempts have been made to do away with this method of selling fish, but they have all failed. The customers like to deal with these fish girls and can purchase from them very small amounts.

Fish is not purchased by weight, but by the fish or part of fish. The price averages 12 to 15 cents per pound. There are not less than 2,000 ovarinas engaged in selling fish in Lisbon.—Consular Report.

When He Didn't Stutter.

A confirmed stutterer went into a restaurant and met a few casual acquaintances, who at once commenced chaffing him most unmercifully respecting the impediment in his speech. At last one of them, a pert little fellow who had been making himself rather conspicuous by his remarks, said, "Well, old man, I'll bet suppers round you can't order them without stammering." "D-d-d-done," says Brown, and, to the astonishment of the company and the discomfort of his challenger (all of whom were unaware of his being, as is often the case with stutterers, a first class singer), he beckoned the waiter and sang the order without the slightest hitch, then, turning round to his tormentor, said, "N-n-n-now, y-y-y-you c-c-c-can p-p-p-pay."—Argonaut.

The Start of an Author.

Soon after "Treasure Island" had appeared and attracted public attention to Robert Louis Stevenson, two gentlemen were traveling up to London from Norfolk. One of them was reading "Treasure Island." Presently, having finished the book, he dropped it into his traveling bag, remarking: "Well, I think I could myself write a better child's story than that." The other, who, by the way, was his brother, urged him to try. Six weeks afterward the former handed to the latter a complete tale in manuscript. It was "King Solomon's Mines," the first novel that made a reputation for Mr. Rider Haggard.

The Phrenological Test.

A distinguished phrenologist while dining at a hotel stated at the table that he had formed an opinion of the character of each one present. An Irishman said that he would propound a question and that if it was truthfully answered he would forever believe in phrenology. The phrenologist said he was satisfied and told him to proceed. "Thin," said the Irishman, "will yez be afther tellin' me am I married or single?"—London Telegraph.

WHAT CHANLER BOUGHT FOR MME. CAVALIERI

The Swell Repast Was Not Paid For and Caterer Now Enters Suit

THE MENU.

Here is the menus of the May 7th dinner which was purchased by Mr. Robert Winthrop Chanler when he was in the maddest throes of his passion for the handsome Parisian diva:

Two Manhattan cocktails.
Pint of white wine.
Two hors-d'Oeuvres.
Two consommes.
Two filets of beef.
One lamb steak.
One order of French peas.
Spaghetti.
One Chartreuse.
One creme de menthe.
A pitcher of Pilsener beer.
And one raw apple.

Check, $8.15 (not including the tip).

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The crusade of the creditors which heretofore has been in verbal form, to-day took legal shape against Robert Winthrop Chanler, whose unprofitable investment in matrimony with the beautiful Lina Cavalieri has resulted in the filing of two suits for the collection of debts and preparations by the singer to carry the pre-nuptial contract through the courts in a legal battle for the Chanler fortune that will be the society sensation of two continents.

The second suit against "Sheriff Bob" was made known to-day, when it was learned that Jean Martin proprietor of the Cafe Martin, had asked the courts to have Mr. Chanler satisfy a claim for two dinners which were served to "Bob" and Lina in the courtship days.

The first suit, which was placed on the calendar to come up in court today, was brought by Wm. Barnes, a Fifth avenue tailor, who desires payment. This suit is for $987. The second suit, brought by M. Martin, is for the two dinners, which were served on May 7th and November 17th, 1909, the cost being $15.20.

Aside from the court action to-day, the principal feature of interest was the watchfulness of the attorneys for the next step in the international domestic case and the complete effacement of "Bob."

Lawyers believed that Mme. Chanler-Cavalieri is packing up for a trip to America to press her claims in person. There is also the possibility that "the most beautiful wife in the world" will effect an agreement with the Astor-Chanlers by which the famous antenuptial agreement will be voided. It is known that the first offer of the Chanler clan, consisting of $10,000 down and an annuity of $5,000, was spurned by Mme. Cavalieri-Chanler. That the figures have been more than doubled and the annuity increased enormously was the persistent report to-day. The lawyers interested declared that the next definite move will be made by the singer. If the peace negotiations fail, her attorneys will immediately file a suit which will establish something new in international litigation.

CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS.

Vancouver, Sept. 21.—The report of the Parliamentary committee of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association which yesterday convened here for its annual meeting, submits for consideration the very important matter of compensation to workmen. It refers to it as a matter "that will undoubtedly require careful watching," and proceeds:

"While your committee are not in a position to bring in any recommendations, they are inclined to believe that there is a good deal of justice in the contention sometimes put forward that the artisan who works for a wage which is little more than sufficient to support his family, and who, while engaged in his regular occupation, suffers injury through no fault of his own, should be entitled to compensation of some sort without having to fight his case through the courts. They feel, therefore, that the association should be prepared to make some concessions. The tendency, however, on the part of organized labor is to press legislation which will carry things to the other extreme, and, in order to secure for the workman the compensation to which they think he is entitled they would impose upon the employer conditions so arduous as to constitute a very serious tax upon production.

"If the matter could be compromised by relieving from all further claims for compensation those employers who insure their pay roll up to the extent of a year and a half's wages it would seem as though a solution of the difficulty could be reached that would be satisfactory to both sides, for in that event the cost of insurance could be accurately ascertained by the employer beforehand, and provision made for the same, while the employe in the event of an accident would receive the compensation to which he was entitled without having to have recourse to legal process. This arrangement, of course, presupposes that the employe would insure himself for an amount equal to that carried for him by the employer, so that in the event of fatality his family would receive the equivalent of three years' wages, which is generally conceded to be about right."

JOHN HENDRY.

The committee also notes the establishment in connection with the association of a legal department, in charge of F. W. Wegenast. Its work has already necessitated a considerable addition to the clerical staff. A great deal of attention has been given the British Columbia Companies Act. In addition to the test case before the Supreme Court relative to the federal power for the granting of company charters, steps have also been taken to bring to the attention of the Provincial Governments the vexatious diversity in the laws of the different provinces in a number of subjects affecting the manufacturing and commercial interests of the country generally. These subjects include not only that of company law but also conditional sales, lien notes, bulk sales, assignments and preferences, etc., etc.

The work of the tariff committee for the year has largely related to the administration of the present act. Of Canada's negotiations with the U. S. the report says: "It was perhaps well a compromise was arrived at, but it would have been more satisfactory had it not affected any Canadian industry, or if the tariff rates payable in the United States on the articles in question had been made reciprocal." A large number of complaints of a confidential nature respecting foreign manufacturers dumping their goods into Canada at export prices have been investigated with excellent results.

"This occasion is unique in that it marks the first time in 39 years of activity that the association met in annual session west of Winnipeg," President Hendry of Vancouver told the delegates. Two special trains brought 200 delegates from the east, while some 200 from all parts of British Columbia joined them here.

President Hendry made a vigorous plea for the continuance of the preferential tariff in favor of the old country and her colonies, and dwelt on the desirability of Canada preserving the right she now exercises of making her own trade treaties. He strongly opposed reciprocity with the United States.

"As an association of Canadian manufacturers, it is our proud boast that we stand first, last and all the time for the inviolability of the British preference," he said; "and while all true Canadians will endorse the Government's attitude toward negotiating our own treaties, the recent convention with France and the removal of the [illegible] surtax, together with the concessions to the U. S., diverted a certain volume of trade from imperial channels.

"In this expression of my views I do not wish it to be assumed that I am of the opinion any serious harm has already been done. My object has ever been to call attention to a tendency which seems to be leading up into dangerous paths," he said.

OPEN DOOR HOPELESS.

London, Sept. 21.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At the annual conference of the Association of Chambers of Commerce, which has opened at Leeds, in his presidential address, Lord Brassey took what he described as a new venture. He described his recent cruise to Newfoundland and Canada, and after emphasizing their remarkable progress, he dealt with Canada as a market for British goods. He said that in many lines Britain could compete with the United States, but that consignments for Britain far exceeded those from all other countries.

It would be vain to look for admittance through the open door into Canadian markets. The manufacturers of the Dominion gave employment to some 400,000 workers, but were unable, as yet, to compete with the huge industries of the United States and the skilled factory labor of this country. There was, however, a movement in the far west for a reduction of duties, and he pointed out that Sir Wilfrid Laurier on his recent tour said that the Canadian tariff must be gradually reduced.

Britain was grateful to the states of the outer Empire as customers for goods and for supplies of food, but there was another benefit which they conferred, far reaching in its effects, of momentous import in relation to industry and finance, namely, the borrowing of sums for railways and public works, built mainly with British capital.

A resolution in favor of Imperial immigration for land settlement and the desirability of holding an Imperial conference on the subject was carried unanimously.

HENS NOT STUPID.

Every automobilist knows that when his car approaches a hen instead of calmly stepping to the side of the road and safety in nine cases out of ten she runs along ahead in hysterical excitement, doing what she should have done in the first place only when completely exhausted and then only by accident apparently. Other domestic animals have the same annoying habit, and as it often causes their wholly needless death, the usual explanation of it is their stupidity. That is an unfair criticism, for neither birds nor animals are ever stupid—never are, that is, about meeting exigencies which their ancestors were in the habit of meeting.

It is the lesson of immemorial experience for all these creatures that from the pursuit of an enemy that cannot be fought there is safety if anywhere in straightaway flight at topmost speed. Motion in any other direction would give the pursuer a fatal advantage by enabling him to "cut corners" and cover a shorter distance than his selected prey. The hen's mistake is not in running along the road, but in assuming that the automobile wants to catch her and will do so if it can. That assumption is a perfectly natural one, and every living hen is the descendant of innumerable generations of hens that acted upon it exactly as she does.—New York Times.

GOLD LEAF.

Made New Practically as It Was Made Nine Centuries Ago.

In an article on gold leaf in the Magazine of Commerce John Mastin says that just as the date of the discovery of gold is too remote even to be guessed at so is the origin of gold leaf lost in antiquity.

On some of the most ancient mummies discovered gold leaf has been used on the skin, tongue, teeth, etc., and in some instances on the coffins also. It also appears on tombs, monuments and the like, and, strange to say, though gilding with "thin sheets of hammered gold" and "skins of gold"—otherwise gold leaf—was known to be practiced at least in the eighth century B. C., the process of bringing the gold into these fine sheets or "skins" was, at any rate in the eleventh century A. D., substantially the same as that used today, no advance whatever having been made in the intervening nine centuries.

Further, on some of the Grecian pottery of the fifth century the gold leaf used is as thin as that used today, so that in results obtained also we have not advanced in the least, but still keep practically to the same average thickness as that used on the Egyptian coffins of the third century A. D. and most of the Greek vases of the fifth.

Brougham and Mulled Port.

Lord Brougham who as a member of the house of commons was a most abstemious man, upon his promotion to the peerage acquired less commendable habits. During his long and impassioned appeal to the lords to refrain from rejecting the reform bill of 1832 "five tumblers of mulled port, with a dash of brandy, were brought to him at intervals." When he came to his last sentence ("I warn you, I implore you—yea, on my bended knee I supplicate you—reject not this bill") he knelt on the woolsack, whence he slipped to the floor. It is recorded in the "Lives of the Lord Chancellors" that "he remained some time as if in prayer, but his friends, alarmed lest he should be suffering from the effects of mulled port, picked him up and placed him safely on the woolsack."

A Proud Moment.

"The proudest day of her life, this is," said the woman who watched the third floor bride go out dressed in her prettiest frock.

"How do you make that out?" said another woman enviously. "I thought last Thursday was her proudest day. She got married then."

"Ah, yes, but today she goes calling for the first time and leaves one of her husband's cards with her own. Any married woman who can remember back that far will tell you that the first time she distributed the calling cards of some man who belonged to her was the day she truly felt her importance."—New York Sun.

When the Barber Was a Wit.

In original literature the barber is a great figure, and Arabian tales are full of him. In Italy and Spain he was often the brightest man in town, and his shop was headquarters for wit and intrigue. Jasamin became famous as a poet in southern France and recited his verses with razor, scissors, brush and comical gesture as he dressed the hair of fine ladies and gentlemen in his shop. He had a great run, made money, hived fame, and Smiles made a book about him.

Hadn't Heard It.

"Money talks," asseverated Gildersleeve.

"I am not so sure of that," retorted Throckmorton. "It is not on speaking terms with me."—Detroit Free Press.

Of Course Not.

HARDLY A LAND IN WHICH ENGLISH IS NOT NOW HEARD.

The traveller of to-day, unless he is going to Tibet or Tierra del Fuego, can get along very well with a knowledge of the English language. The farther he goes the more he is surprised at finding that English is really "the" world tongue. In France and Spain and Italy the American traveller is craftily "spotted." He is approached on the streets by those who would for a consideration make him feel quite at home. One of his chief worries is to escape the pests who can speak English and who wish to apprise him of the fact. They may not necessarily desire to mulct him. Sometimes they are seeking merely to "show off." At any rate, they classify distinctly as bores. One may go to Smyrna or Constantinople or Beirut and still find the streets plentifully full of English speaking nuisances. At Jerusalem he will be fairly flooded with English. He may penetrate even to Damascus, and he will find at least a befezzed hall porter who can converse glibly with him and any number of fluently willing dragomans. He may go to Cairo, and in the shadow of the pyramids he will find blue gowned Bedouins speaking more than passable English. He may go hundreds of miles up the Nile and may be steered through the locks of the first cataract by frizzly haired Nubian boatmen who make insistent demands for backsheesh in very intelligible terms. He may wander donkey back to the tombs of the kings in the Sahara desert and be painfully disillusioned by a few words of concise information or explanation by some barefooted, dusky tent dweller.

BALFOUR AGAIN CHAMPION.

England's ex-Premier, A. J. Balfour, has long distinguished himself in politics, but it is as a golfer that he is now winning fame, recently capturing the parliamentary handicap on the links for the third time and thereby making a record, no other golfer having won it more than once. His previous victories were in 1894 and 1897. In this year's event the leader of the Opposition was driving farther than he has done for several years, and his play was steady and consistent throughout, a good sign of his physical fitness for the stress of politics.

THE ACME OF LUXURY.

Modern hotels have reached the acme of luxury and are adapted to the long purse of the multimillionaire, who requires, as a matter of course, luxuries which the most powerful monarch in the world might long for in vain. He can live in regal apartments hung with priceless Gobelin tapestries and spread with the most costly rugs of the orient. He can bathe his tired body in perfumed waters and refresh the inner man with the marvelous creations of a $20,000 a year chef. He can sleep in a bed of carved tulip wood, an art treasure, an heirloom from an old French castle, hung with silk after the ancient style and worth a little over $10,000, and last, but not least, he can be attended by a retinue of servants who will anticipate his every wish.

His bedroom timepiece is regulated for him by Washington observatory, and his business may be carried on in the seclusion of his own apartments over a private or long distance telephone. At one of the new and beautiful hotels, which employs 1,032 people for its 746 rooms, he may even skate on real ice in midsummer, for during the hot weather the grill room is turned into a skating rink, a coat of ice being placed at great expense over the tiled floor. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that scores of American millionaires who could well afford palaces of their own have made their homes permanently in these great and marvelous Aladdin's palaces. Many of them, in fact, have deserted magnificent private residences and taken up their abode in a hotel in order to escape the servant problem.—Literary Magazine.

The Aeroplane in War.

It takes very little to cause a stampede among cavalry horses; hence the need to tether them on the right principle. In the next war on the continent, where huge masses of cavalry are ever concentrated close to the frontiers ready for an immediate advance, the possibility of airships or aeroplanes dropping explosives among a mass of tethered horses will have to be considered. With horses badly tethered a few small explosives might easily stampede a whole brigade of cavalry.—London Saturday Review.

Laurier Used As Tool By Free Trade Party.

His Speeches in the West Have Given Them a Lever to Push Their Arguments--Conditions in Canada Misrepresented by Liberal Press--Sir James Whitney's Words an Antidote.

Special Correspondence to Mail and Empire.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The average Canadian can scarcely appreciate the prominence of his country in the political discussions now in progress throughout the United Kingdom. Little does he know that the example, the opinion, and the experience of Canada are now cited as arguments against the adoption by Britain of anything of the nature of tariff reform. For years the free traders have been handicapped by the fact that Canada under protection is prosperous. They have never been able to use the Canadian situation in their own interests.

Disgusted with Canada, they have turned to other countries to help them out. During the last general election they thought to use the United States as a frightful example. But their efforts were soon paralyzed. The report published by them to the effect that a large proportion of the population of New York was on the verge of starvation owing to the tariff, was promptly denied officially by the Mayor of that city. Then they began a campaign with Germany as their illustration.

THE HORSEFLESH LIE.

They circulated the story that the German workman lives on black bread and horseflesh. This allegation had a pretty good run, but was met by the explanation that black or dark bread is a favorite bread with Germans, and that horseflesh does not enter into the diet of the people, although there are some people by whom hippophagy is practiced. The failure of the horseflesh yarn was promptly followed by something worse. It was solemnly averred that the working people, owing to their terribly depressed condition under protection, eat cats and dogs. This disgusting statement was the last straw. The friends of tariff reform answered it by sending a deputation of British workmen to Germany to enquire into the conditions themselves.

The deputation did good work, and made a report that was evidently impartial. It found in some places conditions that were not good. Poverty and slums were discovered in the larger centres. But the reports about horseflesh, cats and dogs were shown to be untrue. Out of work cases were met with. On the whole, however, the German workmen were busy, and were well fed and well housed. The situation with them was, of course, capable of improvement. It was, however, not bad, and far better than it had been represented to be by the shrieking free traders. The report of the impartial workmen shattered the free trade case, and the situation was looking gloomy for the opponents of tariff reform, when news came from Canada of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's tour in the West.

HOPE FROM CANADA.

The first rift in the clouds was the reception by Sir Wilfrid Laurier of the grain growers addresses, in which free trade was advocated. This was accepted as evidence of a revolt in Canada against protection. The farmers, we were told, were up in arms against the ruinous system that was emptying their pockets and doing them no possible good in return. The yellow organs of the free trade politicians made it appear that something of the nature of a rebellion had taken place in the Dominion. Multitudes of farmers, brought to the verge of starvation by the protective system, were bombarding the Premier and demanding relief.

The speeches of Sir Wilfrid Laurier added to the artificial excitement. One of these declared that Sir Wilfrid was a free-trader after the British style, and expressed regret at the inability of the speaker to give Canada, at once, the degree of free trade he would like to confer. Here was an example for the British people to consider. This great Imperialist was not ashamed to announce himself a free-trader, and to put to the blush such men as Chamberlain and Balfour. An even greater windfall for the free-traders was the announcement by Sir Wilfrid that he would have the tariff enquired into by a commission. This, according to one of the free trade papers, was "the greatest blow the tariff-reformers have yet sustained."

It is largely the outcome of the many appeals for free trade made to the Dominion Premier during his recent tour. Sir Wilfrid has again declared that free trade is the ideal fiscal system for the world.

AGAINST A PREFERENCE ALSO.

Sir Wilfrid is also cited here as an enemy of preferential trade. The opponents of tariff reform and of a preference throughout the Empire repeat over and over again his statement in the West that Canada does not wish a preferential bargain, and his further remark that to say that Canada does desire one or that without one the solidity of the Empire is weakened, in an insult to the loyalty of the Dominion. From the speeches of the Canadian Premier the conclusion is drawn by the free trade papers that Canada is opposed to preferential trade within the Empire, that she proposes to abandon protection owing to the terrible outcry from the oppressed farmers, and that tariff reform, as proposed in Britain, is therefore opposed by the Dominion.

The changes are being rung upon these notes day in and day out by the free trade politicians. In fact, the position attributed to Sir Wilfrid Laurier is the best thing that has come to them in years. An antidote, however, has been furnished by Sir James Whitney, who, in an interview, maintains that the story about the free trade uprising is an exaggeration, and urges that something be done to bring the various parts of the Empire into closer touch. Sir James makes a strong appeal for the strengthening of the British sentiment and the improvement of the trade relations between Canada and the Motherland.

DELINE AN EPILEPTIC

Havelock, Sept. 20. — That Hugh Deline, the Dummer Township man who found his wife strangled to death last Thursday, is an epileptic. is the belief of the authorities here.

The presence of a Provincial detective lends interest to the situation and startling developments are expected hourly. The arrest of Deline on the charge of murdering his wife was foreshadowed by a statement made to-day by Constable Williams, of this town, who is in charge of the case. "We have nothing tangible as yet on which to base our suspicion, but Deline himself is the man we want. We know just where he is and I have a man watching his movements. The first false step by Deline will mean his apprehension,' says Mr. Williams.

Deline, along with fourteen others has been supoenaed for the inquest which will be held before Coroner Kindred in the Havelock town hall at one o'clock on Friday afternoon.

All the neighbors will give their testimony adding their quota to the chain of evidence that all unknown to Deline seems to be tightening around him.

There are facts in the case that to the observer, seems to indicate only one thing. Deline made repeated statements that he would go home some night and find his wife dead The presence of a quantity of Paris green in the woodshed where the body was found by Deline, the marks of someone's hands on the women's neck, the scratches on her face, the cut in her forehead and the evidences of a struggle everywhere near are strong points.

Deline and his wife were illiterate desperately poor and shiftless. Deline's spasms seemed to verge on insanity, and he had periods of distress when he would froth at the mouth These all incline the neighbors in the belief that he was subject to epileptic fits. Their lonely life, away from friends of any kind, devoid of all social intercourse, and the little that is known about either of them all seems to lend color to the supposition that Deline, unknown to most people, was an epileptic. Local doctors knew nothing of him; he was regarded as simple, that was all.

"But," said Constable Williams, "he was not so simple that he did not know enough to keep his mouth shut on the subject of his wife's death."

The stomach of Mrs. Deline will be sent to Toronto to the Provincial analyist. There is little to lead the local authorities to suppose poison was used but they want to know if it was. The tramp theory has been practically dismissed.

ROOSEVELT TO VISIT TORONTO.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Theodore Roosevelt will visit Toronto next year. This much he has decided, but whether it will be in the spring or fall is not yet settled. The visit, so far as arranged now, will not be under any particular auspices. But he has been under invitation by the Canadian Club for some time. It had been hoped to secure him this year, but his political engagements will not permit. He will make a tour of the southwest as far as the Pacific next spring, and may return through the northern States and stop off at Toronto. The former President's tardy yielding to the importunities of Toronto people came at last through his secretary, Frank Harper. Mr. Harper is an Englishman, and a few weeks ago, while on his vacation, visited his uncle, Mr. Arthur Hewitt, General Manager of the Consumers' Gas Company, Toronto. He heard then how anxious Toronto people were to see and hear the Terrible Teddy, and when he mentioned this to his chief subsequently, Mr. Roosevelt expressed a desire to meet "those dear Toronto people," and agreed to the plan above outlined.

The Last Ditch.

When William, prince of Orange, afterward William III. of England, was elected stadtholder of the United Netherlands in 1672 and found himself in the midst of war with England and France he was asked by the Duke of Buckingham whether he did not see ruin impending over his country.

"Nay," he answered. "There is one certain means by which I can be sure enough to see my country's ruin. I will die in the last ditch." And, rejecting all terms of peace, he checked the invasion of France by opening sluices and flooding every tract of land, drove them from Holland in 1674 and made honorable terms with England and finally after varying effort brought the war to a successful close by a treaty with France in 1678.

The doctor was telling how he came to lose one of his best paying patients. The man was a hypochondriac, who was always imagining that something terrible was about to happen to him, and the doctor, who was a great jollier, was kept busy trying to reason him out of his morbid condition.

"You have worried yourself until you are bordering on a nervous collapse," said the doctor to him one day. "You shouldn't think about your symptoms all the time, but just attend to your affairs as if there was nothing the matter with you."

"All right, doctor," replied the patient. "I'll do as you say. You needn't come to see me any more."—New York Times.

and frequently the only cause, that determines an attack. An epileptic attack and some forms of headache only differ in degree; they are "nerve-storms."

The foregoing remarks apply equally to those so-called choreiform movements, tics and habit-spasms which are so distressing to children, and young adults, which take the form of spasmodic involuntary twitching of the facial muscles.

In all such cases it is most important to eliminate eye-strain. Such cases are purely functional, and it is not too much to say that a pair of suitable glasses will immediately alleviate, and not infrequently cause a complete cessation of the symptoms.

Vertigo as a symptom of peripheral irritation may exist, but its commonest manifestation is in connection with diplopia.

Weakness Of Church To-day Is Division, Declares Dr. Gordon.

Principal of Queen's Makes Eloquent Plea For Church Union At Meeting of Presbytery Here--Lengthy Discussion on the Subject Follows--Matter Goes Over Until Spring.

At last evening's session of the Kingston Presbytery held in St. Andrew's Church a lengthy and somewhat animated discussion took place on a most important matter namely Church Union.

Rev. J. E. Smith, of Menie, Moderator, occupied the chair, and Rev. W. T. Wilkins of Trenton was Clerk of the meeting.

After some routine business had been disposed of the question of Church union was discussed pro and con until midnight hour was reached when it was decided to postpone the taking of the vote until the March session of the Presbytery which will be held in Kingston.

Rev. Dr. Gordon, Principal of Queen's University was the first speaker. He presented the following resolution, which was adopted at the General Assembly in June last, and asked for the adoption of the same:

RESOLUTION ON CHURCH UNION

Whereas this Church was invited along with the Congregational Church by the General Conference of the Methodist Church which met at Winnipeg in 1902 to enter on negotiations for the organic union of these churches:

Whereas this Church, after due liberation, consented unanimously, at the meeting of its General Assembly in 1904, to enter on such negotiations, and appointed a Committee for this end to act along with similar Committees from the other Churches:

Whereas the Joint Committee, after five years' diligent consideration of all the questions requiring to be determined in view of the union, have reported with substantial unanimity in favor of a basis of union:

Whereas that basis has been recommended to the Assembly for adoption by their Committee on Union:

Whereas all the Assemblies which have been held since the inception of the movement for union have approved of the labors of the Committee:

And Further, Whereas the teaching of this Church regarding the nature of the Church and the Communion of Saints implies that Union is a duty wherever it is not forbidden by conscience:

Whereas in view of the report of their Committee there does not appear to this Assembly to be any bar in principle to such a union:

Whereas the benefits arising from union are many, obvious and great:

Whereas the relations of the negotiating churches to one another, the conditions of Christian progress in Canada and Canada's due share in the evangelization of the world seen to require the Union of these Churches:

And whereas it may reasonably be hoped that such a union will prove the percursor of a still wider union:

Therefore the Assembly declare their approval of the Documents agreed upon by the Joint Committee as a basis upon which this Church may unite with the Methodist and Congregational Churches, and they direct that this resolution, along with the above mentioned Documents, be transmitted to Prebyteries for their judgment under the Barrier Act, instructing Presbytery Clerks to report the decisions arrived at to the Clerks of the General Assembly not later than the first day of May, 1911.

The Assembly are of opinion that in the event of the returns from Presbyteries warranting further steps being taken in the direction of union the Assembly of 1911 will proceed to consult Sessions and Congregations regarding the whole matter.

Dr. Gordon in support of the resolution spoke at some length. In his opening remarks he referred to the work of the Joint Committee and the negotiations that have been going on for the last five years, looking to an organic union of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational Churches in the Dominion of Canada. He was surprised in attending that meeting to see the unanimity of feeling which prevailed. It was indeed to him a revelation. Various factors were at work drawing together members of the various religious bodies contemplating union. Devotional literature had some thing to do with assimilating the forces. The Young People's Societies at the church had assisted in it to a material extent, and moral reform and Mission work had done their part. Why should there not be a union and what were the main objections? He contended that one of the chief reasons for union was the fact that church work was not ideal in this country and better work for the Master could be done. He would not wish to cut himself off from the historic Church of Scotland, union would not do this. He would still be attached to that old historic church. There was a time when there was a division even in the Presbyterian Church, but such was not the case to-day. He claimed that the circumstances of to-day were such that union would prove profitable. It was our duty to unite where conscience did not forbid. It would mean a more forward movement in home and foreign mission work. The weakness of the Church to-day is division rather than unliberality. The more we are alive spiritually the more we will solve problems. The Church must solve a great problem in this country namely, the increasing immigration. Would it not be worthy of a united church. How are the vast multitudes of heathens to be christianized if not by a united organic church. The mission forces of the world recognize the fact that a union is necessary for a work within and without our borders.

In concluding his address Dr. Gordon moved the adoption of the resolution, which was seconded by the Rev. Mr. Gracey.

REV. DR. MACKIE.

Rev. Dr. Mackie, of Kingston, said that this was an occasion when one had to be true to his conscience. He was opposed to the union as too great a price had to be paid, and too great sacrifices had to be made. Our relationship with the Methodist and Congregationalists were pleasant and he hoped it ever would be. There would be blessings without such a union as is proposed. Blessings had come out of secession. England was blessed when Methodists came out of the church of England at John Wesley's time. Blessings come out of the reformation. One reason he was opposed to the union was the fact that congregations did not have the full liberty to choose their minister as they have to-day in the Presbyterian church. He did not like the idea of a settlement Committee as is proposed by the union dealing with the minister. The stability of the minister he contended was in danger were this course pursued. The ordination vows were to be somewhat eliminated and other things so dear to the Presbyterian church were to be taken away that he considered it was not feasible to have such a union.

Rev. W. T. Wilkins said that if he consulted his own feeling he would oppose union, but in the interest of the Church of Jesus Christ at large, he felt constrained to support the resolution and would do so. When he loked at the future of this country and the thousands upon thousands who are emigrating here he was in favor of the union proposed as it would prove he had no doubt beneficial.

Rev. Dr. McGillivray, of Kingston said he endorsed every word uttered by Dr. Gordon. What is anticipated and expected by this union is a great spiritual blessing. There was no doubt but what the Presbyterians had borrowed some from the Methodists and the Methodists had borrowed some doctrine from the Presbyterians. He thanked God that the prospects for an organic union was so bright. No greater blessing could come than unionism."

Rev. James Cumberland said he disapproved of the basis of union as submitted and could not support it.

Rev. J. W. Mitchell said he trembled for the future of the church if this union was consummated. If organic union is passed it would, to his mind, mean disunion.

Rev. John McClung of Queensboro, spoke briefly but in support of the resolution submitted by Dr. Gordon.

After some further discussion as to the taking of the vote, Rev. Prof. Laird moved, seconded by Rev. Mr. Binnie that the taking of the vote be postponed until the meeting of the Presbytery in March next.

This amendment prevailed and the Presbytery was brought to a close by the benediction being pronounced by the Moderator.

Montrealers Interested in Plant to Be Built at Spokane.

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 19.—Papers were mailed to the Secretary of State in Olympia to-day for the incorporation of the International Portland Cement Company, Limited, with a capital of $1,500,000 preferred, and $1,500,000 common stock, which it is announced will build an expensive plant in Spokane and do business in this city.

J. S. Irvin, of Ottawa, managing director of the International Portland Cement Company of Canada, accompanied by H. D. McKinnon and S. G. Near, have been in Spokane for some time studying local conditions and making preliminary arrangements, which have resulted in the formation of the new company, the charter for which was drawn and filed by F. W. Dewart, of this city. The new company has secured options on two large mill sites east of the city, and announces its intention of duplicating the great plant which Mr. Irvin's company has built near Ottawa. The new company has secured an abundant supply of cement materials as the basis for the new industry.

BASEBALL

What should be the odds in the world's series? Even money, and take your choice. In Coombs and Bender Connie Mack has every bit as good pitchers as Cole and Brown, and boxmen have a lot to say about the winning or losing of world's series. Chicago has certain advantages, notably behind the bat, and certain weaknesses—notably in base running. The fact that the Chicagos are a "going" club should dampen the enthusiasts who are playing the Cubs as a "sure thing." Then, again, the admission that Chicago's pitching staff isn't as effective as it was three years ago should make the fan cautious. The further fact that the National League has won the world's championship three times running makes the American League's chances exceedingly bright. The worm is bound to turn. What goes up must come down, etc.—Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

There is a mystery regarding Cobb's eyes, which have kept him out of the game for a fortnight. An oculist took a bit of gravel out of the ailing optic Monday and Ty says he can see as well as ever and will be in the game in a couple of days. The mystery is how the first oculist, with his elaborate magnifying and examining instruments happened to miss that rock pile in Ty's eye.

In connection with stories that come so straight as to admit of little doubt that Ty has been playing for his release so he can take up an offer of $15,000 per year from either the New York or Boston clubs the length of time the said boulder has been in Ty's eye observers of events are so mean as to say that it might have gotten there opportunely in order to be picked out and open a plausible avenue by which to back out of an untenable position.

Pres. Herrmann of the Cincinnati Baseball Club and Chairman of the National Commission, has issued a duplicate of a letter he wrote to Business Manager Frank Bancroft concerning the playing of "Barnstorming tours". He says it has long been the practice of major league clubs to pick out about fourteen or fifteen players and go on short tours after the season is ended in order to add to the finances of the players. Herrmann points out the injustice of the practice to these players who are not invited to go, and then tells Bancroft that if the Cincinnati Club wishes to go on any trips of this kind it will have to take all the players and divide the money received among them all. He says by those barnstorming tours the minor league owners have been drawn into trouble with their patrons, caused by the advertisements that such and such a club would play in the city with all its famous stars, and the club then playing the games without several of its better-known players.

Larry Lajoie is still batting away. His three safe swats in as many times up boosted his average up to within one point of that of Cobb's, who is now sitting on the bench with his eye bandaged up. It is said that the cause of the trouble to the Tiger player's eye was a speck of dust. The averages to date are:

	G.	A.B.	R.	B.H.	Av.
Cobb . .	126	460	95	168	.365
Lajoie . .	135	538	81	196	.364

It is not at all unlikely that before the Yankee-Sox series closes at Chicago that Manager Geo. Stallings will quit his position as head of the New York Americans, and that Hal Chase will be put in charge of the team. There has been trouble in the Yankee camp for some time, and the crisis is expected daily. Stallings has accused Chase of not giving the club his best efforts on the field. The manager is backed by a number of the players in this regard, but despite this, conditions are such in the camp that the upheaval is expected at any minute, and when it is all over Chase will be in charge. Stallings has done much for the club. He has advanced the youngsters into a second position club. It would not be surprising if the manager left the club at any minute, for he announced last night that he was discouraged at the way he had been crossed and double-crossed, and that he felt like leaving at once for his former home in Georgia. Chase refuses absolutely to discuss the situation at all, and says he knows nothing about the plans of owner Frank Farrel of the team to make any managerial changes.

There is no doubt but that the Yankees are in open rebellion. On the way back to the Lexington Hotel yesterday afternoon, after the game, which was lost to the White Sox, there was a quarrel in the bus which came almost to the point of blows being struck. Chase was the storm centre, the other players blaming him for the loss of the game.

The serious charges made against Chase by some of his team mates culminated in the final game in St. Louis, when, Stallings claims, Chase changed the customary signals used by the club for the squeeze play in order not to be interfered with from the bench. Then, according to Stallings and the other players, Chase worked the new set of signals, and called for the squeeze when it was absolutely fatal.

The occasional report of the return of the marvellous leader of the 1906 world's champions was sprung yesterday at Tacoma, Wash., and there is a ring of truth to the report in view of recent talks by President Comiskey, of the Southside team. The old Roman has confided to friends that he was tired of bench managers and that, in case of trouble next year Jones would be back to play his old berth in centre and direct the destinies of the team.

Comiskey can't stand for a losing team, and it is known that he has been angling for the return of Jones ever since Fielder packed up his things in the winter of 1908 and went to Washington to locate. The owner of the Sox could not be reached, he being at Excelsior Springs, Mo., so no confirmation of the story from him was obtainable.

The report from Tacoma says Jones has accepted Comiskey's terms, which call for a salary of $20,000 a year, the highest sum ever paid a baseball manager, and 10 per cent. interest in the profits of the team. Jones, it is said, figures that his annual earnings would be $35,000 under the contract.

"Cooney" Starkell, a teammate of Jones on the Chehalis (Wash.) team, is authority for the report that Jones is coming back. According to Starkell, after a game at Chehalis the other day, Jones pulled a letter from his pocket and handed it to Starkell to read.

The letter was from Comiskey and offered Jones the contract mentioned above. Starkell asked Jones what he would do and Fielder replied that it meant $35,000 a year or more, and that he would accept.

That baseball players up in the big show are not tickled to death with the manner in which the magnates have been passing laws which make the balltossers a bit of property and nothing of rights" is about to be presented to the National Commission. The players will ask for certain things which will not be granted so quickly. The one on which the greatest "kick" will undoubtedly occur is that which asks that after a player has been with a club a certain length of time he be declared a free agent. The idea of having representation on the National Commission will also hardly be looked on with favor. As a matter of fact, it is not likely the Mogils will cast any pleasing glances at the entire business, which is liable to cause some decidedly unfriendly feeling before it is settled. If the players ever banded together and did not break faith with each other, the magnates would find themselves in a most ticklish position.

WRESTLING

Frank Gotch, who announced his permanent retirement from the mat recently, but who may not retire, after all, has proved himself the greatest wrestling champion since the days of Jack Carkeek. Gotch has had 331 matches since he started in the game in 1898, not counting many minor affairs, and of this number he lost seven, five of them being handicap matches, in which he failed to throw his man as many times as bargained for.

Gotch practically became champion in 1906, when he defeated Tom Jenkins, who was then considered the best in the country. He met all the stars in the country and defeated them all. His greatest match was with Georges Hackenschmidt, the Russian Lion, whom he won from in Chicago in 1908. This match was arranged by W. W. Wittig, the Milwaukee and Minenapolis theatrical man, and was the sensation of the age in wrestling circles. Gotch won without a fall, as Hackenschmidt gave up after two hours and eight minutes of work on the mat, without a sign of a fall. Gotch went to England afterward and tried to get another match with Hackenschmidt, but after much dickering it fell down.

They were to have met in Australia, but this, too, fell through. Gotch then defeated Dr. B. F. Roller, and his last big match was with Zbyszko, whom the promoters brought from Europe to defeat the champion.

THE RING

Hilliar Lang, the champion of Canada, has been matched to meet Bob Moha, the Milwaukee Cyclone, at Buffalo on Monday next, September 26th, at the Social Club. Moha defeated Jimmy Clabby at Milwaukee last month and is now acknowledged to be at the top of the 145 pound class. Lang's fights with Paddy Lavin at Buffalo June 16th when he bested him in ten rounds, and his draw with Fighting Dick Nelson, of New York, have placed him on a level with Moha, and it should be a slashing ten round bout. If Lang is successful over Moha he has been promised fights with Willie Lewis, Quill and Mike Twin Sullivan.

Conforming to the wishes of a number of friends, not a few of whom take an active interest in boxing, Mike (Twin) Sullivan decided to make his training headquarters for his bout with Paddy Lavin at the Buffalo Gymnasium. He started work yesterday. Sullivan originally intended to open a training camp outside the city, but some of his friends wished to box with him afternoons and argued that it would be impossible for them to work out with him if he went outside the city line to train. He will box afternoons with a number of the gymnasium members.

FOOTBALL

The visit of Tigers and Rough Riders to New York at the conclusion of the Inter-Provincial season seems to have borne fruit. Many football wiseacres across the line said the Canuck style was too much like parlor billiards, much too tame. There were others, however, who attended the game that day at Van Cortlandt who frown down these hair-raising, bonebreaking seances 'twixt Harvard and Yale, and who, upon this account, would never permit American Rugby to be played in the schools of New York. But a change has come, and the committee of the Board of Education has handed down a decision permitting Rugby to be played in all High Schools. The new rules are practically those in use in Canada, and if these are not adhered to, and undue roughness begins, Commissioner Sullivan asserts he will put down his official foot. Not only is this a feather in the cap of the Canuck mode of play, but how many fond mothers and fathers will bless the New York Herald that financed the venture, and that is wholly responsible for the Canadian game being introduced into the High Schools of New York City.

HOCKEY

Mr. J. A. Jewell arrived home from Belleville yesterday. Jack is going to play pro. hockey for Belleville, and expects to return Thursday.—Picton Gazette.

GOLF

On the whole the golf on the opening day of the ladies golf championships at Toronto links was of an inferior nature. Outside of Miss Dorothy Campbell, of Hamilton, the holder; Miss Henry-Anderson, of Montreal; Miss Nesbitt, of Woodstock; Mrs. Rodger, of Lambton; Mrs. Dick, of Lambton, and Miss Florence Harvey, of Hamilton, and a couple of others, the playing was below par. Even Miss Mabel G. Thomson, of St. John, was off color, so there is some consolation.

Miss Campbell's magnificent performance, however, almost made up for the shortcomings of others. The Canadian champion rounded the course in the remarkable score of 85, only 4 behind bogie.

Her card read:—

Out .. ..4 4 6 3 6 5 4 5 5—42
In .. ..6 5 5 4 6 5 4 5 3—43

In the handicap she caused a penalty of three strokes, but on form she could have caused another one or two, for she was only beaten a single point in the handicap by Mrs. Rodger, of Lambton. That excellent player rounded in 94, and this with a handicap allowance of seven made her score 87, while Miss Campbell's 85 plus 3 made her only 88.

Miss Campbell was paired with Miss E. Cox, but Miss Cox was beaten 10 strokes. Miss Campbell played a great game all the way. She drove hard and accurately and approached magnificently. In putting, too, she was very strong. Miss Cox, who paired with Miss Campbell, played a good game, but luck did not show her any favors. She drove well.

To Miss Campbell and Miss Florence Harvey belong the credit for the Hamilton team's victory in the team contest. Miss Campbell's 85 and Miss Harvey's 96 held the team on its feet against the Lambton team's nice score, led by Miss A. Rodger with 94, and Miss Dick with 95.

Companies to Amalgamate.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—The truth of the statement that the ticker tells the tale was once more exemplified yesterday, when power ran up to 159, sagging back to 155, and at the conclusion of a meeting of street directors, held later in the day, a statement was given out to the effect that the directors of the Street Railway were of the opinion that an amalgamation of the two companies was necessary, and that a committee of the two had been appointed to discuss details.

Bank President Dies.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—The death took place yesterday morning at an early hour of F. X. St. Charles, president of the Bank of Hochelaga, who had been connected with the bank since its foundation thirty-nine years ago.

The succession will probably fall to Hon. J. D. Roland, Robert Bickerdike, M.P., is vice-president, but it is quite likely that he will decline the presidency, thinking that a French-Canadian should have the first place on the directorate.

Former Toronto Clergyman Dead.

Brandon, Man., Sept. 21—Rev. F. W. Walker, rector of St. George's Church, died in the hospital yesterday afternoon, after a month's illness from typhoid pneumonia. He came west from Toronto, and had lived in Brandon for five years.

New Wing to Hospital.

St. Catharines, Sept. 21.—The cornerstone of the new wing being added to the General and Marine Hospital was laid yesterday afternoon, in the presence of a large gathering of prominent citizens, by Robert McLaren, president of the hospital trustee board.

Suffered an Eclipse.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 21.—When The Sun and Star ceased publication six months ago an afternoon paper called The New Star was issued from the office of The Standard, the Conservative morning daily. The Star has now ceased publication.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The schools have been closed at Middletown, Conn., because of the epidemic of infantile paralysis.

One hundred and fifty persons were injured in a railroad wreck near Oporto, Portugal. None were killed.

Both factions of the Republican party are claiming victory as a result of the primaries in New York State yesterday.

Hon. Geo. E. Foster has returned to Ottawa from New Brunswick. He looks in better health and spirits than during last session of Parliament.

Daniel Gillam, employed at Beatty's shipyard, Welland, was struck by a heavy plate of iron about 6 o'clock last evening and almost instantly killed.

Warrants have been issued for a number of candy manufacturers at Philadelphia on charges of using sulphuric acid in the manufacture of marshmallows.

Five men who took part in the production of the Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures at St. John have been fined $30 each for showing the pictures without a license and committed for trial on the charge of giving an immoral show.

Will Awake French Sentiment.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—Le Temps, the local French daily, publishes a strongly worded criticism of Mgr. Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster, for his speech on the English language, delivered at the Eucharistic Congress, and of Bishop Fallon of London, in regard to his dealings with the bilingual schools of his diocese.

"It is under the blows of misfortune that apathy disappears," says the editorial part, "and we say to Mgr. Fallon, very well; continue your work of Anglicization, and you will contribute to the awakening, not only in the French-Canadians of your diocese, but also in all our compatriots in Ontario, of the national French sentiment, unfortunately somewhat dormant in some of us."

Who Pays the Piper?

Montreal, Sept. 21.—If a train runs off the track on the uncompleted G.T.P. Railway between Winnipeg and Lake Superior while it is carrying the 1910 grain crop to water, who will pay the piper? That is the question that is agitating the Government, the contractors, the G.T.P., and even the wheat people of the west. The railway refuses to take the risk, claiming that it should rest with the contractors until the road is out of the contractors' hands. At the same time they would like to start earning dividends and to get a share of the western grain crop movement. The track is finished and trains are going over it daily, but they are Contractor McArthur's trains, and not for business traffic.

Tailor Gets After Him.

New York, Sept. 21.—Notice of service by substitution in the suit brought by Wm. Barnes, a tailor, to recover $987 he claims Robert Winthrop Chanler owes him for wearing apparel, including the suit in which Mr. Chanler led Lina Cavalieri, the singer, to the altar, was filed with the clerk of the city court yesterday.

It is in connection with this application that the validity of the famous Chanler-Cavalieri pre-nuptial agreement will be tested. If the court names a receiver to take charge of Chanler's possessions, it will, it is said, in legal circles, amount to practically a decision that the singer has no legal claim on the goods and chattels the bridegroom bestowed upon her.

Lenient to Gas Company.

Berlin, Sept. 21.—Before Sir William Meredith, in the fall assizes, Jas. L. Bastin of Galt brought suit against the Dominion Natural Gas Co. for $25,000, for damages sustained in the natural gas explosion in Galt last winter, which resulted in the death of his wife and daughter and damages to his property. A settlement was effected in court, endorsed by the judge, by which the defendant company pay J. Bastin $3,500 and $200 to cover the costs of the proceedings.

Fishermen Struck.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 21.—There has been an immense run of sardine herring in the harbor and Courtenay Bay for a week past, and scores of fishing crafts have been busy taking the fish, which are carried on motor boats to factories down the bay.

The price was $8 per hogshead, but was cut to $6, and the whole fishing fleet went on strike.

Steamers Collide.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 21.—The passenger steamer Lakeland of Port Huron and barge John Smeaton, belonging to the Pittsburg Steamship Co., were badly damaged in a collision in a fog early yesterday in Little Rapids Cut, below this city. The Lakeland was beached and the Smeaton was anchored alongside.

England Takes a Turkish Loan.

Paris, Sept. 21.—According to The Temps, the Turkish loan, over which negotiations have been conducted with France, has been placed with an English group of financiers, headed by Sir Ernest Cassel.

An Expensive Joy Rider.

Winnipeg, Sept. 21.—J. J. O'Flaherty, lately from Ontario, was charged with fraud yesterday, because he could not pay a bill of $408 for taxicab expeditions.

Summer Hotel Burned.

Sala, Sept. 21.—The Summer Hotel at Camp Sutton, Muskoka, was totally destroyed by fire. Only a few persons were in the building at the time of the fire. The amount of loss is between $3,000 and $4,000.

Title and ancestry render a good man more illustrious, but an ill one more contemptible.—Addison.

AWAKENING OF SCIENCE

TO THE VALUE OF FRUIT

What is "FRUIT-A-TIVES"?

Medical men are just beginning to realize the possibilities of fruit in curing disease. Its action on the liver, kidneys and skin is wonderful. Yet fruit in its raw state is impracticable in treating disease because of the minute quantity of the active or curative principle contained in fruit juice.

A physician in Ottawa, after years of patient work, discovered a process, whereby the medicinal or bitter principle of fruit juice is increased in quantity and thus a more active and more valuable substance is obtained.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit.

Hundreds of prominent people in every section of the Dominion owe their good health to "Fruit-a-tives." Hundreds more are daily becoming stronger and better by taking them. "Fruit-a-tives" is daily proving its inestimable value as a natural cure in all cases of Constipation, Biliousness, Torpid Liver, Backache and Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Kidney and Skin Troubles.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. Sold by all dealers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Trolley Cars Collide, Death Toll Forty-Two.

Two Interurban Cars at Fort Wayne, Indiana, Come Together at Full Sbeed and Bring Fearful Loss of Life--Conductor Flags Third Car.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 22.—Forty-two passengers were killed and seven were seriously injured in a head-on collision between two interurban cars on the Fort Wayne and Bluffton division of the Fort Wayne and Wabash Valley Line yesterday. The wreck occurred seven miles north of Bluffton at a sharp curve.

The cars in collision were a northbound local car, crowded to the steps, and a southbound extra car from Fort Wayne. They met while both were running at high speed.

The collision is said to have been made by a misunderstanding of orders for the southbound extra to take a switch near Kingsland. The motormen of the two cars did not have time to set brakes when they sighted each other.

The heavily loaded northbound car was crushed and the bodies of the dead and injured were strewn on either side of the track amid the wreckage. The screams of the injured men and women, following the crash of the cars, brought the neighboring farmers to the scene.

Conductor Spiller of the southbound car was unhurt, and ran back toward Kingsland and flagged a car which was approaching the wreck at full speed and would have plunged into it.

Wrecking cars and physicians were rushed from Fort Wayne and Bluffton and the bodies of the dead and the injured were conveyed to hospitals in the two cities.

MME. CURIE'S DISCOVERY

PARIS, France, Sept. 22.—Scientists are awaiting with extreme interest a second communication from Mme. Pierre Curie, the reticent and retiring scientist, on her latest and wonderful discovery of a process of reducing radium to the form of a metal.

Since Mme. Curie, some time ago, sent a communication to the Academy of Sciences announcing her discovery, innumerable efforts have been made to interview her and have her add to the document. The efforts, so far, have been unavailing. What has practically amounted to a promise has been secured from her, however, to send a second communication to the Academy, giving more details of the discovery.

Mme. Curie, who, with her husband, discovered radium, is regarded as one of the most remarkable women of France. She is retiring and modest in the extreme over her invaluable contributions to science.

STRANGE WOMAN ENDS HER LIFE.

Woman Registered As Mrs. J. M. Erown, Hangs Herself in Montreal Hotel.

LEAVES A NOTE.

Asks That Mrs. M. W. Gibbs, of Battle Creek, Mich., Be Notified — Suicide Apparently About thirty-five years of Age.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—The body of a woman, who registered at the Corona Hotel on Tuesday as Mrs. J. M Brown, New York, was found there last night hanging by a strap attached to a hook in a bathroom door. The woman was fully dressed and was wearing her hat, and life apparently had been extinct for some time Nothing is known of the woman at the Corona, and little was seen of her after she registered. On Windsor Hotel, Montreal, note paper was found the following:— "Please notify Mrs M. W. Gibbs, 125 Fremont street, Battle Creek, Mich." On the inside of a ring on her hand were found engraved the initials of J. M. B. She is apparently 35 years of age, and in her baggage were found letters addressed to Mrs. J. M. Brown, Wellington Hotel, Boston, Mass.

LATER

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—It is ascertained that the woman who hanged herself in the Corona Hotel here last night is Mrs. Bernard K. Mumford, a prominent society woman of Boston whose husband is now in Minneapolis

EX-OFFICER OF 81 WEDS LADY OF 73

Leamingtn, Ont., the Scene of a Most Unusual Marriage Yesterday.

COURTSHIP OF 2 MONTHS.

Bridegroom Is a Hero of the Civil War — He Came to Canada in July —Couple Fell in Love on Short Notice.

LEAMINGTON, Ont., Sept. 22.—Major A. W. Morley, eighty-two years of age, was to-day united in marriage to Mrs. Mary Wood, aged seventy-three years.

The Major, who was born and raised in Lake County, Ohio, is a veteran of the Civil War of 1861-65 and to-day carries two of the Southern army bullets as a memento of the service he rendered his country. He was one of the first to enlist from the State of Ohio, and served in the 7th Regiment of Infantry of Ohio three years. He arrived in Leamington on the 14th of July this year, where he became acquainted with Mrs. Wood, and they fell in love with each other.

Mrs. Wood came from England to the United States, where she made her home until about a year and a half ago, when she came to Leamington. The happy couple left for Cleveland by boat from Detroit for their honeymoon, after which they will take up their residence in Leamington.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—Some sixty master plumbers met last evening and decided that they would fight the demands of the men for 40 cents an hour and a closed shop.

Taxi Drivers Out on Strike.

Pittsburg, Sept. 22.—All Pittsburg taxicabs were tied up at midnight because of a strike of the chauffeurs, who declare they will not return to work until the companies agree to pay for the gasoline.

LETTERS REFUTE COLONEL'S DENIAL

Show That He Tried to Get Red Hat For Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul.

SENT AN ENVOY.

Another Document Shows That he Tried to Get Assistant Secretary From the Late President McKinley — Letter From Mrs. Storer.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 22.—The Republican will print to-day a letter from Mrs. Bellamy Storer, written in France September 6, reviewing the controversy between the Storers and Mr. Roosevelt concerning the former President's alleged authorization of the former Ambassador to Austria-Hungary to visit Pope Pius X, and ask him as a personal favor to the President of the United States to make Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, a cardinal.

Letters written by the Archbishop in 1903 and 1904, hitherto unpublished, are quoted by Mrs. Storer to show that at repeated interviews in the White House between the Archbishop and the President, Mr. Roosevelt acknowledged that he had commissioned Mr. Storer to act as his personal envoy at the Vatican in behalf of the Archbishop. Mr. Roosevelt has hitherto publicly denied that Mr. Storer was so authorized.

Mrs. Storer includes still another letter, written by Mr. Roosevelt to her just after the Presidential election in 1896, in which Mr. Roosevelt asked Mr. Storer to see President-elect McKinley and urge him to appoint Mr. Roosevelt Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

This last letter seems to refute a recent assertion that Mr. Roosevelt never sought a public office until the Presidential campaign in 1904.

A Dreadful Murder.

Westchester, Pa., Sept. 22.—Search is being made to-day by the police of all towns in this vicinity for a man who is suspected of murdering Mrs. John Saus, her two small daughters, and a young son, at their home at Byers, Pa., 12 miles from here. The suspect formerly boarded at the Saus home, and it is believed robbery was the motive for the terrible deed, and that the four victims were killed in order to prevent an identification. The skulls of the woman and her children had been crushed in as though by an axe or heavy club.

The bodies were discovered by the husband and father upon his return from work Tuesday night.

A Novelty In Strike.

Halifax, Sept. 22.—A new phase of the strike in the Cumberland Railway & Coal Co.'s mines in Springhill, is being experienced. The men have been out for fourteen months. When the school re-opened the children of the strikers went out in a body, refusing to sit beside the children of the strikebreakers or men at work in the mines. The former were in the majority, and they not only went out, but stayed out.

The school authorities, to tide over the trouble in the meantime, have asked the non-union youngsters to stay away from school.

Chained to His Chair.

Uniontown, Pa., Sept. 22.—The spectacle of a man charged with double murder being chained to his chair was presented here yesterday, when B. Frank Smith was brought into court in the continuance of his trial upon the charge of having killed his father and brother-in-law. Smith on Tuesday made a spectacular attack upon District Attorney Patterson during the court session, in a futile attempt to brain the public prosecutor with a heavy bottle.

Wife Murderer a Suicide.

Vancouver, Sept. 22.—George Reid, who murdered his wife at Clayburn two weeks ago in a fit of jealousy, committed suicide, for his body was found yesterday floating in the Fraser River. The throat was cut from ear to ear, apparently with the same razor that was used by Reid in killing his young wife. The young couple were from Midland, Ont.

No Frivolity for West Durham.

Bowmanville, Sept. 22.—West Durham fall fair yesterday was another record-breaker, for there were larger crowds than have been. This has been for years and continues to be a purely agricultural exhibition. No horse racing, midways or fake attractions. It is emphatically a live stock show, with horses far in the ascendancy.

Boy Charged With Killing.

Gretna, Man., Sept. 22.—Diedrich Hiebert, a 13-year-old boy, has been committed for trial on a charge of having caused the death of Isaac Hiebert, who was found dead with a bullet wound in his head on Sept. 4.

Killed by Falling Gun.

Lindsay, Sept. 22.—At Lotus, a small village near Janetville, Donald Finney, went to visit a neighbor. A loaded gun fell down from a peg, went off and killed him instantly.

A swimming suit for beginners which a Washington man has invented has a life preserver around the body, elastic bands to pull the legs forward and fins at the ankles that open as the feet are pushed backward.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY.

Bishop Hoare killed at Hongkong, 1906.

Sir A. Wilson born, 1814.

CURRENT EVENTS.

A prominent New York financier says that it isn't right for one-tenth of the people to have 99 per cent. of the wealth of the country. He musn't let his conscience trouble him. We appreciate that it is an oversight, rather than an intentional fault of eminent financiers that the one per cent. is left.

BOY SCOUTS.

The Boy Scouts is an organization the purpose of which is character building for boys between the ages of 12 and 18. It is an effort to get boys to appreciate the things about them and to train them in self-reliance, manhood and good citizenship. It is peace scouting these boys indulge in, living as much as possible out of doors, camping, hiking and learning the secrets of the woods and fields.. Endurance, self-reliance, self-control and an effort to help someone else are scout objectives.

The Boy Scouts were started in England by General Sir Robert Baden-Powell. He was impressed with the fact that 40 per cent. of the boys in England were growing up without any knowledge of useful occupations, and wanted to do something that would help the boy to become a useful citizen.

The Scout idea has sprung up spontaneously all over America. In Canadian cities the Boy Scouts are in the thousands. Gangs of boys are to be seen on every hand doing their best at scout craft, "doing a good turn every day to someone," and getting fun out of it. Prominent business men and our leading educators are behind the movement, and a popular organization that needs no equipment is filling a big gap in the recreational education of the boyhood of America. Those who were at the Toronto Exhibition this year are able to judge of its worth.

Before he becomes a scout a boy must take the scout's oath, thus:

On my honor I promise that I will do my best (1) To do my duty to God and my country; (2) To help the people at all times; (3) To obey the scout law.

Belleville happens to be one of the cities that have not a Boy Scout organization. The time seems to be ripe for it, and, with this in view, several interested parties are calling a meeting for to-night in the Y.M.C.A. rooms at 8 p.m. for the purpose of giving any further information necessary and to organize this movement. A cordial invitation is extended to pastors, Sunday School superintendents, teachers, all the older men who are still interested in the welfare of boys, and the boys themselves between the ages of 12 and 18.

Choosing a Good Book.

To fall in love with a good book is one of the greatest events that befall us. It is to have a new influence pouring itself into our life, a new teacher to inspire and refine us, a new friend to be by our side always, who, when life grows narrow and weary, will take us into his wider and calmer and higher world.

Whether it be biography, introducing us to some humble life made great by duty done, or history, opening vistas into the movements and destinies of nations that have passed away, or poetry, making music of all the common things around us and filling the fields and the skies and the work of the city and the cottage with eternal meanings, whether it be these or story books or religious books or science, no one can become the friend even of one good book without being made wiser and better.—Henry Drummond.

Do You Know the value of OLIVE OIL?

Its action is midly laxative and its being a nutritious food. it should be taken by all who are of a habit constipated to any degree.

No prescribed dosing is required, you are simply to take as much as you care for on your food probably on salads and in meat or fish dressings.

Our French Olive Oil is the kind to use. It is absolutely pure,

HEAVY FROST.

There was a heavy white frost last night.

CANINE POISONED.

A valuable collie dog, the property of Mr. Joseph Mills, of this city, yesterday died very suddenly, and the symptoms were such as to suspect the canine had been poisoned.

INQUEST AT TWEED,

County Attorney Anderson was at Tweed to-day acting on behalf of the Crown at an inquest on the body of John Ray, who was found dead in a manger at that village.

HE PAID UP.

Last evening the driver of a hack conveyed a party from the station to a down town hotel, and when he asked for pay the passenger refused the same. When an officer of the police force was called to the place the man paid promptly.

NOTES FROM POLICE BLOTTER.

Two drunks, both of whom are strangers in the city, were last evening placed under arrest. A post office key, picked up on the street, is at the station awaiting an owner.

WHIP STOLEN.

Mr. D. W. Valleau, a yeoman who resides in Prince Edward County, reports to the police that a rawhide whip was stolen from his conveyance a few days ago. The vehicle was standing on Front street when the whip was taken.

PRESENTED WITH UMBRELLA.

Last evening Mr. Eddie O'Flynn was the recipient of a handsome gold-headed silk umbrella, the gift of some of his friends in this city. Eddie leaves to-morrow to pursue a course of law study at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. The presentation took place at the Hotel Quinte.

SOLD HIS FELDSPAR MINE.

R. R. Gamey, M.P.P., has disposed of his feldspar mine at Verona. The purchasers are a Canadian syndicate, who already have secured some corundum properties in Hastings. Mr. Gamey's and the Richardson mine have been the only two properties successfully operated so far.

THE SOLICITOR HERE.

A. B. Colville, solicitor for the Seymour Power Company, Campbellford, was in Kingston yesterday to urge action by the Council in regard to the purchase of power from the company, as suggested in a communication sent some time ago. They can give an unlimited supply at $25 per horse-power. The city committees should get busy.

AT THE POLICE COURT.

Wm. Lane, on a charge of drunkenness, was fined $5 or thirty days this morning. Not having the change, he went to jail. James Walsh, a young man and a stranger, claimed he was not a vagrant and was willing to work. The Magistrate allowed him the opportunity of securing work by discharging him.

WILL RESPOND TO TOAST.

To-morrow evening at Toronto, Zetlodge, A. F. and A. M., will hold their annual Canadian gathering. Bro J. W. Johnson, M. P. P., of this city will respond to the toast of Canada which will be proposed by Bro. Hon J. W. Hanna, Provincial Secretary.

CASE POSTPONED.

The case of R. Fenn & Son, who are charged with an infraction of the grocery by-law by keeping their place of business open after 7.30 p.m., the hour designated for closing under the by-law, has been postponed until Monday next. The Intelligencer is informed that the defendants' contention is that their sales of meat in connection with their business is far in excess of that of groceries and that there is no by-law regulating the hours of meat shops.

G. T. R. ROUNDHOUSE.

A visit to the immense roundhouse which is being constructed by the Grand Trunk Railway Company shows the building is progressing rapidly towards completion. It is situated just east of the Midland track and about a quarter of a mile east of the station premises. As its name suggests, it is a circular building, occupying at least three acres of ground. It is a cement structure and is certainly of the most substantial character. Large steel girders are used inside for support. An idea of the size of the building may be obtained from the fact that there are 42 spaces where tracks will be laid for engines to enter. A large turntable will be erected in the opening and in the centre of the building. Adjoining the roundhouse, to the east, a spacious machine shop is being erected, which will be of cement, and, in addition, work on a large oil shop and office apartments is being started. The cost of the roundhouse and other buildings is roughly estimated at about $250,000.

CHEESE BOARD.

At the Cheese Board this afternoon the offerings were 2,425 boxes of white and 100 boxes of colored cheese. Nearly all were sold on the board at 11c., 11 1-16c. and 11 1-8c. Last week the highest price reached was 11 cents.

THE LATE MR. CHESSON.

Under the auspices of the Plainfield Lodge of Orangemen the remains of the late Mr. Charles Chesson, of this city, were interred this afternoon. Services at the house were conducted by the Rev. A. S. Kerr, of St. Andrews Church. The bearers were members of the Orange Order.

THE LATE MR. ALEX. REID.

Yesterday afternoon the remains of the late Mr. Alexander Reid, of this city, were interred. Services were conducted at the house by the Rev. J. Ferguson, and the interment took place at the Belleville cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. J. McCarthy, C. Thompson, J. May, Frank, James and Joseph Mills. The floral tributes were beautiful.

UNKNOWN MAN FOUND DEAD.

At an early hour this morning the body of an unknown man was found beside the Grand Trunk Railway tracks near Marysville, a few miles east of this city. That the unfortunate man met his death by being run over by a train is certain, but whether he was hit by a passenger or freight is not known, as there were no eye witnesses to the accident. The remains were found by some employees of the road, who were on their way to work in that vicinity. It is said that the body is that of a middle-aged man. The remains were badly mutilated. Dr. Moore, of Shannonville, was notified of the occurrence and he endeavored to make arrangement to have the body removed to this city. Up to the hour of going to press it was not known whether the body would be brought here or not.

STRONGEST BILL THIS SEASON.

A bill of the first calibre has been secured for the last three days of this week at Griffin's Opera House.

The head-liners, "The Alascon Trio," Mexican Street Singers, will render native sonatas and arias in voices which are acknowledged the world over to be of the purest Castillian. In every city visited by this remarkable troupe they have created quite a furore among music lovers and have nightly packed the houses in which they play.

Mr. King is sure to please the patrons with his ready flow of Irish witticisms and songs.

Miss Brandon, who helps complete this extraordinary bill, is a singer of exceptional merit.

A remarkable set of feature pictures have been gathered to make this bill one of the best ever produced at this theatre.

The Biograph, "An Arcadian Maid," shows a farmer's daughter succumbing to the seductive flattery of a gypsy peddlar. Not content with winning the love of the girl, he forces her to steal money from her father. His untimely death and the recovery of the money before it was missed enabled her to make full reparation.

Another Biograph, "A Flash of Light," portrays the life of a young chemist, who, married to a younger daughter, is beloved by the elder. While experimenting, an explosion temporarily deprives him of his sight.

The young wife, fascinated by the glitter of the gay outside world, leaves home for the stage. The sister, enacting the role of wife to the blind youth upon the doctor's verdict that the afflicted man will regain his sight, goes forth to force her faithless sister to return to her home. Its climax is intensely interesting.

The Edison film shows the United States submarine boat, "The Salmon," running through the water at 14 1-2 knots an hour. This is an excellent apportunity afforded to those who are unable to get to the sea coast towns to witness this marvellous craft diving down into the sea until only her periscope shows.

Wims & Co

Woman's World

It is possible for a woman to do most of her own work and still be daintily attired. I recall a lovely little lady whom I met some years ago in a parsonage among the New England hills. She was as beautiful as a damask rose, yet she personally, with her own hands, did nearly everything that was done under the roof.

She dressed a great deal in soft grays and browns, and was always spotless, ready to step into the parlor and receive a friend, or to go across the street for a call on a neighbor, or to meet the Sewing society or a circle of King's Daughters without taking time to change her indoor dress.

She had devised for herself large aprons, high in the neck and long in the sleeves, coming down to the hem of her dress. These aprons, of dark, serviceable gingham, effectually protected her from soil, and on her hands she wore rubber gloves when it was necessary to put them in hot water. No woman need entirely ruin her hands by housework if she will follow this simple method and, as far as possible, use a mop for washing her cups, saucers and plates.

Every one might not wish to imitate the example of my friend, and a print gown, made prettily and easily washed and ironed, is a great comfort about the house.

Do not wear wrappers or any variety of teagown when you have work to do. Negligee dress has its place, and is comfortable and luxurious when worn by a woman taking her ease in her own room or resting after a busy day. Indeed, there are teagowns so elaborate and expensive that they have completely lost the negligee look, and are quite nice enough to be worn by a lady when doing her best to be attractive to her husband and children in the evening hours.

Every one who possibly can should make her toilet in the afternoon when her work is done. It is very depressing to a husband returning home after a long and strenuous day to find his wife in a dress which is careless, slovenly or unbecoming. As his fiancee she did not think it too much trouble to dress beautifully that she might please him. Surely a husband is worth as much pains and care, and should be greeted by his wife in as becoming a dress as she can achieve. On his part, he should not consider it a burden to make some sort of preparation, and perhaps a change of dress, before sitting down to an evening meal.

Children care more than mothers sometimes think about the way their mothers look. A little chap of 6 gazed pensively at his mother one day and finally said: "I really do think mamma, that you would be as pretty as Fred's mother if you only had some pretty clothes to wear." The mother took the hint, and afterward dressed more charmingly for the satisfaction of her little son.

DAILY HEALTH HINT.

"More than half of the disease which embitters the middle and latter part of life is due to avoidable errors of diet," according to a recent medical authority. "More mischief, in the form of actual disease, of impaired vigor, and of shortened life, accrues to civilized man from erroneous habits of eating than from the habitual use of alcoholic drink, considerable as I know that evil to be."

THE SHORT SKIRT.

There was a flutter about the Palmer House Chicago, Monday among some 250 dressmakers there to decide what should and should not be worn during the coming season, when it was announced that Lillian Russell would give a demonstration late Monday of "What an Actress Owes to Her Dressmaker."

"Fair Lillian," long the wonder of theatres goers is expected to give away one or two secrets of her perpetual youth. Clothes have something to do with it Miss Russell says, but not all

"I intend to appear before the dressmakers in my street costume, which I will take off," said Miss Russell. "Then I will dress myself a piece at a time in a stunning gown, so that the dressmakers may readily see that much of the success I have attained on the stage is due to their handiwork Clothes have much to do with making an actress."

Several mere men dressmakers were fitting about the corridors of the hotel this morning, but their case is hopeless. They are ruled out.

Models were shown in gowns that will be the height of the dressmakers' art. The hobble-skirt will be hobbled higher up this season, but the short skirt is here to stay. The gowns that looked as though the wearer had been poured into them have been ruled out. The dressmakers say this is because of the difficulty in pouring just right.

A plan to establish a dressmaking institute in connection with Chicago's Public schools system will come up at a dinner of the dressmakers next Friday. Supt. of Schools Ella F. Young representatives of the Chicago Association of Commerce, and others will discuss the matter. It is said that dresscuss the matter. It is said that dressmaking schools in Boston and New York have proved successful in providing much needed expert assistance to the makers of women's apparel.

Earrings In Vogue.

All women are not wearing earrings, but there is an ever growing number who are beginning to realize that "pinching the lobes of the ear with a needle is not exactly a form of barbarism." In other words, earrings are the fashion again, and modish mondaines are vying with each other in the originality and variety of their ear decorations.

OLD FASHIONED STYLES REVIVED.

The illustration shows some examples of earrings in enamel that are modern instances of old time jewelry art, and very effective they are when worn by the right woman. In passing, just a hint anent earrings—they are not for the round, full faced woman, who invariably looks her worst in them.

Stronger Pillars Needed.

According to the Reverend Chancellor Burwash the church is losing power. This is a rather indefinite admission. Does it mean that mankind is looking elsewhere for spiritual guidance or does it mean that mankind is falling from grace altogether and is fast losing interest in the problem of a hereafter? We are inclined to believe that it means both in a greater or lesser degree. We are told that the Chancellor denounced in no uncertain terms, formalism in the churches — the worship of organization and machinery, instead of reliance upon spiritual power. Said he: "The church to-day must rise to a higher life, or I fear God will set her aside." We fear Chancellor Burwash is rather severe on the church. So far as we can see the church is all right. It is the same church to-day it always was Whether Protestant or Roman Catholic its object is to promote righteousness through the teachings of Jesus Christ We repeat the Church is sound; it is the the people in it who are unsound It is the rank hypocrisy so prevalent among church members that is weakening the power of the church and inducing others to either ignore all things spiritual or to seek them elsewhere. If the men who are in the church would set a good example in their daily lives by being generous and honest and tolerant toward those who are out of the church there would soon be fewer empty pews. But when men of the church stoop to commit all sorts of mean and petty acts to promote schemes of selfish aggrandizement those outside the church are content to remain there and decent men within the church are tempted to withdraw from it.

The Premier in the West.

It is somewhat refreshing to obtain from a genuinely independent source an opinion of the reception accorded Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the West. That the Premier was not greeted with the acclaim which eastern Liberal newspapers would have us believe we have long since realized, but the trouble is, there are always easy marks, so to speak, to be found and it is just possible that the false and misleading accounts of the Premier's tour which have appeared from time to time in the government press may have been accepted as gospel by persons who are so unthinking as to be gullible. We therefore take pleasure in presenting the comment of the New York Outlook on the strange experiences of the Prime Minister in the golden west The Outlook which numbers among its editorial contributors former President Roosevelt, observes:—

"Hitherto, when a Dominion Premier or political leader of first rank went on a speechmaking tour, he delivered his addresses, and resolutions of confidence and congratulation on the English model were all that followed.

There were new and wide departures from this mode of procedure when Sir Wilfrid Laurier was in the West.

It was in no sense a triumphal progress with eulogy all along the line, that the Premier made from Ottawa to Vancouver.

Crowds there were at every place where the Premier's special train was brought to a halt. But there was very little of the enthusiasm that greeted Sir Wilfrid Laurier when between 1887 and 1896 he went into the constituencies, urban and rural, east and west of Ottawa, as the trusted and esteemed leader of the Liberal Opposition in the House of Commons, and as the most vigorous and fervid opponent of the National Policy of the Conservatives.

Complaint and criticism and expressions of disappointment, for the most party bluntly stated, were awaiting the Premier from his own party all the way from Winnipeg to Calgary.

No Premier in any British country ever had to listen to more outspoken criticism outside the walls of the House of Commons than was addressed to Sir Wilfrid Laurier by the numerous spokesmen of farmers and grain-growers' associations as he travelled through Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

This strong and unexpected criticism of the Premier arose out of the feeling that the Liberal party since 1896 has been false to its pledges with regard to the tariff, and false to its pledges with regard to the Liberal program of 1893 on which the Liberals, now in control of the Government at Ottawa, climbed into power."

Well, how does that strike you? It ought to convince you, coming as it does from such an independent source that the Premier's tour was far from being a triumphal one. It would have been better for the whole Liberal party had Sir Wilfrid stayed at home.

One effect of the Premier's tour through the West, however, has been to place before the country the exact position of the Liberal party on the trade issue. For a long time it has been practising protection and collecting the votes of the low tariff element. The Western farmer confronted the Premier with so energetic a demand for low tariff, and so rude a reminder of his former free trade promises, that several things happened. One was that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, always anxious to please his immediate audience, uttered a lot of vague free-trade sentiments. Another was that he summoned up courage enough to tell the farmers that there must be careful regard for "vested interests," and that even agricultural implements cannot be admitted free of duty so long as the United States maintains duties on any of the materials which enter into their construction. Fifteen or twenty years ago these considerations were treated by the whole Liberal party as base subterfuge. Sir Wilfrid Laurier to-day is speaking the language of the Conservative campaign literature of 1878, and 1883 and 1891 and 1896.

Yet another thing was that the Prime Minister dealt with the question of reciprocity in the language of the protectionist. He said that the disposition of United States politicians is to look after Number One, and that that msut be the disposition of Canada. He is anxious to secure the market across the border for the Canadian people, but not at the sacrifice of Canadian industries and Canadian self-respect. This is exactly what Conservatives said in their day of power, and exactly the language at which the Liberal press used to wax satirical and angry.

A fourth consequence has been that the Eastern Liberal press has been stirred up to make sundry plain statements that the present tariff will be maintained by the Liberal party for an indefinite period. The Globe, for example, explained in effect that free trade is right, that protection is wrong, but that if the Liberal party were to attempt to give lower tariff it would go out of office, and therefore it will stick to high tariff. The Evening Times of St. John, N.B., says:—"Sir Wilfrid has no quarrel with free-trade but everybody, including the grain growers, knows that free-trade is at present out of the question." These are but samples of Liberal newspapers utterances.

In short, the Liberal party, has been dragged into the open. It intends to keep on practising protection because it believes that the majority of the electors are protectionists and because it wishes to remain in office. It still believes free trade to be right, but that is a small matter compared to staying office. It has hoisted a flag inscribed: "Any policy, right or wrong, that means office.

Ontario Peaches In London.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—C. C. James, deputy Minister of Agriculture, received a cablegram from N. B. Colcock, Ontario Government agent in London, yesterday, stating that the first shipment of Ontario peaches to England have arrived in excellent condition and the fruit is on sale in Covent Garden, where it is eagerly sampled by dealers.

The fruit was grown near the experimental farm at Jordan, and was selected by P. W. Hodgetts.

Consignments of peaches have been made from South Africa to London, and Mr. James states that 5,000 baskets will be shipped from Ontario to London this season.

(Detroit Free Press.)

A well-dressed man entered a florist's shop, threw down a bill, and said he wanted some flowers to take home. He was very unsteady, and had evidently been looking on the wine when it was red. The flowers apparently were intended as a domestic peace-offering.

At the door he hesitated.

"I shay," he said, thickly, "watsh these flowersh called?"

"Chrysanthemums."

The customer shook his head. "Got to have something easier than that," he said. "Gimme a dozen pinks."

WHEAT

WATT—MARTIN.

An event which had been looked forward to with considerable interest by many, was solemnized at the Presbyterian Church at Ormsby, at 7.30 Wednesday evening, Sept. 14, it being the marriage of Miss Jessie B., eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Martin, of Ormsby, to Mr. Robert Watt, of Coe Hill. When the hour for the ceremony arrived the church was filled with friends from far and near, the interior being prettily decorated with flowers and an arch for the bridal party to stand beneath. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. McClurg, of Eldorado.

To the sweet strains of a wedding march, played by Miss Florence Mawson, the groom and groomsman, Mr. Colin Martin, brother of the bride, entered the church and took their places beneath the arch and were immediately followed by the handsome looking bride, leaning on the arm of her father, and the bridesmaid, Miss Sara Watt, sister of the groom, with the bride's mother. The bride looked very sweet in a princess dress of white silk mull, with allover embroidery front and lace insertion and lace trimming. Her only ornament was a handsome gold brooch, which belonged to her grandmother Menzie. She wore sweet peas in her hair and carried a beautiful bouquet of carnations, snow ball and maiden hair fern. The bridesmaid wore a pretty white lawn princess dress, with lace insertion and lace trimmings and carried a lovely bouquet. Directly after the ceremony the wedding party and invited guests repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where upwards of one hundred partook of a most tempting repast. The many useful, costly and beautiful presents testified to the high esteem in which the young couple are held. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome gold chain and locket; to the bridesmaid a gold crescent brooch set with brilliants and to the groomsman a pair of gold monogram cuff links.

Mr. and Mrs. Watt left on the 6.30 train Thursday morning, amid showers of rice and good wishes, for Peterboro, and upon their return will proceed to their home at Coe Hill. The bride's travelling dress was a suit of navy diagonal serge with white silk blouse, and her hat was blue gray silk velvet, with trimmings of wings and silk ribbon and veil to match. All join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Watt every success and prosperity.

SHADOW LEGENDS

Zulus Believe the Bodily Shade Is the Future Spirit.

TAKING AWAY ONE'S SHADOW.

Why Some Races Are Forbidden to Look Into a Dark Pool of Water. The Way Donald McKay Managed to Escape the Clutches of the Devil.

That mysterious counterpart of a human being which lengthens with the day and disappears with the sun, to reappear more faintly with the rising of the moon, which we call a shadow, has always struck the imagination of man. It has played a prominent part in primitive superstition and in later folklore. Shadows or shades was the classical name or figure for the spirits of the departed which still remains in use.

This idea is not confined to civilized races. Among the Zulus the spirit is the shade. Bishop Callaway, whose knowledge of Zulu beliefs and modes of thought was unrivaled, says that the Zulus connect the bodily shade with the future disembodied spirit. They believe that the shadow cast by the body will ultimately become the "itongo," or spirit, when the body dies, and they say that the long shadow shortens "as a man approaches his end and contracts into a very little thing. When they see the shadow of a man thus contracting, they know he will die. The long shadow goes away when a man is dead, and it is that which is meant when it is said, 'The shadow has departed.'" There is, however, a short shadow which remains with the body and is buried with it. The long shadow becomes an ancestral spirit.

Identification of the shadow in any mysterious or spiritual way with the person whose body casts it, naturally leads to respect for the strange second self. To tread on the shadow of a chief is an insult to the chief himself. In the Institutes of Manu, the ancient Hindu law giver, the law runs:

"Let him not intentionally pass over the shadow of sacred images, of a natural or spiritual father, of a king, of a Brahmin who keeps house, or of any reverend personage, nor of one who has just performed a sacrifice."

There are traces of the survival of these primitive ways of regarding a man's shadow in the English country feeling that it is unlucky to cross the path of a newly married man as he leaves the altar; and in another rural belief that it is unlucky to cross the path of horses ploughing when the sun is shining behind them.

Association between shadows and mirrored representations of the human form is obviously natural, so it is not surprising to find superstitions about the shadow mingled with widely scattered versions of the Narcissus legend. The story of the beautiful youth who became enamored of his own image, as he saw it represented in the water, and languished thereafter till he died, has its origin in the belief that trouble follows from beholding the watery image.

"Let him not look at his own image in water; that is a settled rule," commands Manu, the Hindu law giver.

The reason for the prohibition is to be found in the beliefs of man in a primitive state of civilization. The Melanesians of the Pacific, says a learned observer, say: "There is a stream in Saddle island, or, rather, a pool in a stream, into which if any one looks he dies; the malignant spirit takes hold upon his life by means of his reflection in the water." Some such idea as this was probably the root of the Narcissus legend.

The Zulus explain why it is ill to look into the water of a pool by a story of a great beast in the water which can seize the shadow of a man and when his shadow is gone a man no longer wishes to turn back, but desires to enter the pool. He goes in, dies, and is eaten by the great beast which inhabits it. So, says Bishop Callaway, "men are forbidden to lean over and look into a dark pool, it being feared that their shadow should be taken away."

There are other ways in which a man may lose his shadow. There was a temple of Jupiter in Arcadia which, if entered by those who were forbidden to do so, robbed them of their shadows.

In the north of Scotland there are some quaint legends of folk who lost this usual attendant. In Sutherland they tell more than one story of a wizard named Donald-Duival McKay. Donald went to a school in Italy where the black art was taught by the devil, who sat in the professor's chair, and at the end of each term claimed as his own the last scholar to depart. Breaking up at this academy was naturally a scramble, none wishing to be last.

On one occasion Donald was really the last, but just as the devil was about to seize him, the resourceful Donald pointed to his own shadow, which fell behind him, saying, "Take thou the hindmost!" Accordingly, his shadow was seized, while he himself escapes, and after his return to Scotland was never seen to have a shadow!

A companion illustration of "de'il tak the hin'most," from Aberdeenshire, is a story of a witch helped laird watching his reapers, whose shadow was seized by Satan, and who was ever after shadowless. In literature Chamisso's famous tale of "Peter Schlemihl" is a well known example of the stories of the shadowless.—New York American.

WOLVES MAY GO MAD.

Rabid Dog Showed Signs of Having Bitten the Animals.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—That danger exists of the epidemic of rabies in Ontario spreading to wolves and other wild animals in the northern part of this province is the statement made by the veterinary-general's department in regard to a report received from Toronto that such a danger was apprehended.

The situation is the latest phase of the rabies question, which, particularly in Western Ontario, has been engaging the attention of the Dominion and provincial authorities for many months.

A particular case, which has served to bring the matter prominently to notice, is that of a dog biting a man at Elk Lake which was killed and the head forwarded to the Provincial Health Department for examination. It was found that the dog was rabid. Before the animal was killed there were unmistakable evidences that it had several conflicts with wolves, in the woods from which it came, and the fear is expressed that, once inoculated with the dread disease, wolves and other wild animals will run amuck through the forests of Northern Ontario.

"Wolves are certainly very prone to the disease when exposed to it," said Dr. Tennant, acting veterinary-general, in discussing the affair. Rabid wolves have little fear of man, and have been known to run right into mining camps, biting everyone in sight."

The Blood Liquefied.

Naples, Sept. 21.—The phenomenon of the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius took place Monday after prayers lasting 55 minutes, in the presence of a great multitude. The people interpret the rapidity of the liquefaction as proof that the peril from cholera is over.

In the great church at Naples there are preserved the head and some of the blood of Januarius, Bishop of Benevento, who was beheaded for the faith near Puteoli. The blood, as his acts relate, was gathered from the ground by a poor woman at the time of the martyrdom and placed in two small glass vials. On several occasions, it is recorded, his relics were carried in procession during eruptions of Vesuvius. The standing miracle of the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius consists in bringing the congealed pieces near the head, the vials being placed on the altar, and prayer being made. After a longer or shorter interval the blood is said to become liquid and flow.

Their Motor Boat Run Down.

Brockville, Sept. 21.—Four prominent citizens of Brockville, ex-Mayor Cossitt, H. B. White, Allan Gilmour and W. H. Downey, almost went to the bottom of the St. Lawrence yesterday afternoon by their launch colliding with a log some three miles east of Brockville in mid-stream. The boat, one of the largest and fastest on the river, was going at top speed when the crash came.

The collision not only bent the shaft putting the engine out of commission but stove a large hole in the keel. The boat quickly swamped, but with life-preservers the quartette succeeded in keeping afloat until assistance came from the shore. The boat sunk just as land was reached.

Not For Mabee.

Edmonton, Sept. 21.—"There is nothing in it." In these words Chairman Mabee of the Railway Commission, in session here, refuted the story that he was about to be taken into the Dominion Cabinet to replace Hon. A. B. Aylesworth.

Sir Louis Davies, judge of the Supreme Court, put a quietus on another rumored shuffle of the Ottawa Cabinet when asked about the reported resignation of Hon. Frank Oliver to become Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta and to be succeeded at the head of the Department of the Interior by Premier Sifton. It was all newspaper gossip, he said.

A Homeric Poet.

Dalton, Ga., Sept. 21.—Georgia's "cornfield poet," John W. Groucher of Crow Valley, is dead at the age of 77.

Groucher's celebrity did not extend outside this state, but he had a claim to distinction rarely attained by modern poets. Like many Homeric bards he never wrote his verses, but recited them instead, improvising the meter as he proceeded, and often setting the words to the original and spontaneous musical themes.

Roy Gzowski Ill.

Toronto, Sept. 21.—C. S. Gzowski received a cablegram yesterday from Cambridge Hospital at Aldershot stating that his son Roy, who went over with the Queen's Own Rifles, was very seriously ill of typhoid fever in that institution.

Norman Gzowski, his brother, left Toronto last night for Aldershot. Roy Gzowski is 20 years of age and is employed in the offices of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation, Ltd.

Would Remove Police Commissioner.

New York, Sept. 21.—Acting Mayor Mitchell has recommended that Police Commissioner Baker be removed on the ground of unfitness, in permitting gambling to flourish in the city unchecked.

Mr. Mitchell said that Commissioner Baker, in a letter to him, showed insubordination.

May Ask Conciliation Board.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—The Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen of the Intercolonial are appealing to the Deputy Minister against a refusal by Chief Superintendent Brady to consider their demand for readjustment of their wage schedule. Should this fail of success they will ask for a board under the Lemieux Act.

Died on Way to Telephone.

Welland, Sept. 21.—John Dunn, who lived between Ridgeville and Fenwick near here, driving Monday evening to Welland with his wife, and when near the Button farm, got out to telephone. A few feet from the rig he was seized with an epileptic fit and died instantly.

Jackson Caught In Toledo.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Word was received by Superintendent of Provincial Police Rogers yesterday that Frank Jackson, colored, has been arrested in Toledo, in connection with the murder of Jacob Enos at Chatham on July 18 last. Inspector Greer left last night for Toledo with the necessary papers, to apply for extradition.

The story of the affair is that Jackson, John Johnson and one Needham, were going home together about 11 o'clock on the night in question. They met Enos and a quarrel ensued. The latter was stabbed in the abdomen and Enos received a bullet in the eye, which penetrated the brain and proved fatal. Johnson has been arrested in Detroit, and if Jackson is extradited the pair will be charged with murder at the assizes in Chatham.

Big Fur Merger.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—Two of the leading Canadian fur houses with branches and warehouses in leading Canadian cities have completed a merger. They are Holt, Renfrew & Co. of Quebec, and the Dunlop, Cooke & Co. of Montreal, Boston and Winnipeg. The output of the two firms reaches $2,000,000 annually. The Winnipeg business of W. J. Hammond is also absorbed.

The new company will be known as the Holt, Renfrew Co., Limited. The negotiations for the merger have been in progress for some months, and the new Holt, Renfrew store in Toronto was erected with a view to their completion. The business, as before, will be managed from Quebec. A new building is in course of construction in Montreal, and another will likely be built in Winnipeg soon.

Tried to Poison Herself.

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—There was a scene of excitement in the police cells yesterday, when Rose Cyr, aged 19, who had just been sentenced to nine months with hard labor, swallowed three mercury pills in an attempt to commit suicide.

The strength of the dose probably saved her life, for in a few moments after swallowing the poison she became violently sick, and the pills were ejected before they had time to dissolve and permeate her system.

Columbia's Right to Property?

New York, Sept. 22.—The right of Columbia College to property worth approximately $1,000,000 bequeathed to it for a cancer research fund by the late George Crocker, the California millionaire, was attacked yesterday, when Crocker's stepchildren applied to the Supreme Court for an injunction to prevent the executors of the will from selling the property.

SIDNEY WEDDING.

Wednesday evening, Sept. 14th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Thrasher, of the third concession of Sidney, was the scene of a very pretty home wedding, when their neice, Miss Mabel Thrasher, was united in marriage to Mr. Ellwyn Delong, only son of Mr. Jacob Delong, of Huff's Island, Prince Edward County. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. H. Dafoe.

Promptly at 8 o'clock the bridal party entered the parlor to the strains of the wedding march, which was beautifully rendered by her aunt, Mrs. J. L. Thrasher, and took their places under an arch of evergreens trimmed with a bell of asters and banked with ferns. The bride, leaning on the arm of her uncle, looked very charming, attired in a dress of cream silk mull, trimmed with insertion and cream satin, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Lena Roblin, cousin of the bride, was tastefully attired in pink silk trimmed with Paisley and pink velvet ribbon, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The groom was assisted by his cousin, Mr. John Delong, of Big Island. After the customary congratulations to the newly married couple, about thirty were invited to the dining room, where a wedding supper was prepared with all the delicacies befitting the occasion. The bride received a number of very beautiful presents, among them being a handsome gold watch and chain from the groom. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a beautiful gold bracelet and to the groomsman a gold stick pin.

About ten o'clock the couple left, amid showers of rice and confetti, for Belleville and other places. Upon their return they will reside on Huff's Island.

The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held last Wednesday at the home of Miss Emerson. Mrs. E. Bates gave an instructive paper on "The rights of children in the home." Others who contributed to the programme were Mrs. W. Elliott, and Miss H. Kerr, of Thomasburg, who gave readings, both touching on Institute work. Mrs. F. McCready gave a recitation and little Helen and Margaret Fitchett sang. The entire programme was much appreciated by all who attended. Two new members were added. The next meeting will be held in their new room, which is being made ready. Mrs. Arbuckle, of Tweed, District Secretary, is expected at the next meeting.

AFTER SUFFERING YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fox Creek, N.B.—"I have always had pains in the loins and a weakness there, and often after my meals my food would distress me and cause soreness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better, and I can walk with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it, as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. WILLIAM BOURQUE, Fox Creek, N.B., Canada.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

WOMEN HOOT MISS LENEVE.

Crowds Surronud the Fair Typist And Yell Their Opinion of Her.

CRIPPEN DEATHLY PALE.

Long Strain is Visibily Telling on the Doctor — His Financial Affairs Gone Into — Newton Asks for Bail For Miss Leneve.

London, Sept. 22. — Following the Police Court hearing of Dr. H. H. Crippen and his alleged accomplice Miss Ethel Leneve, charged with the murder of Crippen's wife, Belle Elmore, to-day, the doctor was committed to jail to await trial for his life before the Central Criminal Court

Miss Leneve also was remanded Crippen will be formally charged with his wife's murder when arraigned and Miss Leneve will be charged with being an accessory after the fact.

Barrister Newton, counsel for both did not present his defence at the hearing, saying he would reserve it for the formal murder trial.

A graphic account of the finding of the body, supposed to be that of Belle Elmore, was given on the witness stand by Inspector Dew, of Scotland Yard to-day, when the murder case of Dr. H. H. Crippen and Ethel Leneve was resumed in Bow street Police Station.

Inspector Dew testified that he made a searching investigation of the Crippen home at 39 Hilldrop Crescent, North London. He said that he found the body on July 13th buried from eight to twelve inches beneath the surface of the cellar floor.

The usual throng of fashionably dressed women were in evidence today. Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve showed signs of nervousness when led into the court room. The girl was pale and hid her face as much as possible from the curious stares of the women spectators.

The shock of recent set- backs with which his defence has met evidently preyed upon Crippen. His face wore a death-like pallor, but he glared defiantly about him and frequently consulted with his attorney, Arthur Newton.

A crowd of women and girls followed the "Black Maria" containing Miss Leneve on its way to court today and yelled their opinions of her as the carriage rolled along. A crowd of men and women were clustered about the door of the court. As the pale and trembling girl was led shrinkingly in the crowd hooted and jeered at her.

Miss Leneve held an open umbrella before her face and partly escaped observation, but she could not escape the torrent of abuse which was heaped upon her.

The crowd to-day was the largest in the history of the trial.

The financial affairs of Crippen were gone into. It developed that the "Curnow" to whom Dr. Crippen's $185.00 check was made payable is Miss Marion Curnow. who succeeded Crippen as manager of the London office of the Munyon Medical Concern.

The manager of a bank testified that Mrs. Crippen notified the institution on December 15th, 1909, of the withdrawal of the joint account which she maintained there with her husband.

Miss Curnow took the witness stand She testified that the poison alleged to have been purchased by the doctor traces of which were found in the mutilated body in the cellar, was not used in the office. She admitted that Crippen frequently bought drugs for his own use.

Miss Curnow said that Dr. Crippen after giving her the $185 check, said: "If anyone inquires for me you are to know nothing. Say nothing."

The witness further testified that Crippen left several packages with her with insctructions to give them to Miss Leneve "if anything happened to him."

Attorney Crippen asked to have Miss Leneve released on bail, but the court would not accede to this.

HOBBLE SKIRT NO LONGER AU FAIT.

"Bolster Slip" or the "Steve Pipe" Gown is the Latest Creation For Women.

A JOY FOR EVER.

The Bolster Slip Hasn't Any Buttons and it is for Slim People Only —The Dressmaker's Convention at Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—The hobble gown is to have a short life in America. In the first place, a man invented it—he was a Frenchman, and in the second place, the first newspaper man who posed as a fashion writer, and attempted to tell about this wonderful piece of art, must have been a former racetrack writer.

This is the way the women attending the Chicago Dressmakers' Convention attacked the hobble skirt, and introduced their newest creation, "the bolster slip" or "stove-pipe" gown There will be hobble gowns this season, a few of them, but the hobble will be raised slightly, and it will not be necessary for wearers to wear ankle boots to prevent "interfering."

'The "bolster slip" gown will, the dressmakers say, prove a source of joy forever for the male members of the household, who have struggled with long strings of buttons down the back This gown will be Oriental as to color and as nearly one piece as possible. At the waist line—which will continue to be most anywhere between the ankles and shoulders—there is a drawstring.

To enter this contrivance, one may choose her own means from crawling through, as with a Polar sleeping sack or having some one hold the gown and jumping in. With this gown also goes a small jacket of flimsy material which hangs loosely from the shoulders, and is intended to set off the bolster effect. Mrs. Middleton, who has spent sixteen years in Paris, and intends to see that America sets some of the fashions hereafter, called this "chemise." Mrs. Middleton says the French call any kind of a covering a "chemise," so this jacket really is not a real "outside chemise," as she feared Americans might understand it.

"The bolster slip' gown is called a "glorified Empire," and one must be slim to wear it. With it go a turban much on the order of the East Indian head-dress. It will slip down over the ears, and hatpins will not be necessary.

GATEMAN WAS ATHLETE.

American Colonel Is Beaten by Canadian Student.

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 22.—Excitement reigned for a short time yesterday morning at the ferry dock when Douglas Kay, one of the best known athletes in Ontario, and winner of medals and trophies that would fill a bushel basket, gave Col. Lattimer, of Detroit, a demonstration of his pugilistic prowess.

Lattimer is one of Detroit's most prominent citizens and lives on the Canadian river-front above Walkerville. He came down to the ferry dock in his auto yesterday morning, just as the gates closed. Kay is acting as gateman at the ferry during the summer vacation. Words were exchanged between Lattimer and Kay and the former said he would thrash the young man. He received an invitation to come ahead. Lattimer jumped out of his auto and was promptly felled by a well-directed blow from Kay's fist.

Kay is a Toronto University student and holds an amateur record as shot-putter. He is also a disc thrower of renown.

A Delightful Hair Dressing That Makes Hair Grow.

FAVORITE WITH MEN AND WOMEN THE COUNTRY OVER.

There is a reason for the phenomenal sale of Parisian Sage in the Dominion since it was first introduced into Canada.

And the reason is plain to all: Parisian Sage does just what it is advertised to do.

Ask J. V. Doyle about it, he will tell you that he rigidly guarantees it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair or itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

There is no reason whatever why any man or woman should fail to take advantage of the above generous offer.

But one thing that has made Parisian Sage so famous is its peculiar power to turn the harsh unattractive hair that many women possess into luxuriant and radiant hair in a short time. Women of refinement the country over are using it, and it never disappoints. Read this letter:

"I procured Parisian Sage and found that it was a great hair tonic and cleanser. I have used other preparations, but Parisian Sage cleaned the scalp, stopped all irritation, made my hair fluffy, silky, and left no trace of stickiness as some other hair tonics had."' Mrs. Sarah Sanderhoff, 1403 N. Washington St., Owosso, Mich., June 22, 1909.

Sold by leading druggists everywhere, and in Belleville by J. V. Doyle for 50 cents a large bottle. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package; mail orders filled, charges prepaid, by the Canadian makers, Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont.

"I find Parisian Sage a good hair remedy. My brother has also used Parisian Sage and says it is fine." Yours sincerely, Julia Corbin, Huntingdon, Pa., Oct. 29, 1909.

A Reformed Horse-Thief.

Years ago, when horse-stealing was a common pastime in Ontario, "Joe" Rogers, now Superintendent of the Ontario Provincial Police, tracked and corralled a brawny horse-thief up in the environs of a little town near Georgian Bay. This man was rapidly making a record for The Police Gazette. When Rogers got hold of him he pulled out a knife and sunk it in the detective's shoulder—not, however, before he had got a life scar from Rogers, with which he was retired to Kingston Penitentiary for seven years.

Some years afterwards Rogers went up to a northern town in Ontario for a hunt. He met a doctor who proposed an expedition to an outpost where there was good moose and one sole inhabitant; a little-known character who had gone quietly in, built a house, taken up land, married and had got a family and was fairly well known to hunters in the fall.

Mention of the man's name and the description convinced Rogers. "Why, I guess that's the horse-thief I put in the penitentiary after he had knifed me. That's exactly who he is."

"Hmm!" said the doctor. "Well, for heaven's sake not a word about that round here. There isn't a soul that suspects him."

Years went by before up in that same town doing Government detective work following a circus for crooks, Joe mooched round among the canvas and saw near the fence a man with a woman and several children—who the moment he got sight of him came over.

"Say, I guess you're Detective Rogers."

"That's me, my friend. Do I know you ?"

"Well, I guess yes. I knifed you once. Yes, I'm farming now. Got a good piece of land up north here. Yonder's my wife and family."

"By George! I'm glad to hear it," said Rogers.

That same ex-horse-thief is now a wealthy man.

Used Rum and Money Too.

The charges and counter-charges of political corruption which were recently voiced in connection with the Manitoba provincial elections have led certain observers in the Maritime Provinces to recall a political incident in Prince Edward Island several years ago.

An ardant supporter of one of the Island's well-known public men came to him during a campaign, in great distress of mind. "Mr.——," he said, "them Tories are using rum and money in this fight. Yes, sir, rum and money."

The candidate was appropriately shocked. "I can hardly believe that such practices are being pursued," he said, "are you quite sure?"

"Am I sure? Why, look here, Mr. ——, I was asking John Smith last night to vote for you, but I couldn't get much satisfaction from him. I offered him $2 and still he wouldn't promise. Then (in a whisper), I slipped a little bottle into his pocket and he said he would come back and see me later. And I watched him going across the street to the Tory rooms and he never came back. Yes, sir, the Tories are using rum and money, and it ought to be stopped."

When packing lay a sheet of tissue paper between the folds of your skirts, and if the trunk will not take them full-length put a soft wad of paper where they turn over.

and frequently the only cause, that determines an attack. An epileptic attack and some forms of headache only differ in degree; they are "nerve storms."

The foregoing remarks apply equally to those so-called choreiform movements, tics and habit-spasms which are so distressing to children and young adults, which take the form of spasmodic involuntary twitching of the facial muscles.

In all such cases it is most important to eliminate eye-strain. Such cases are purely functional, and it is not too much to say that a pair of suitable glasses will immediately alleviate, and not infrequently cause a complete cessation of the symptoms.

Vertigo as a symptom of peripheral irritation may exist, but its commonest manifestation is in connection with diplopia.

Magistrate Commits The Desislet Women

Mother and Daughter Charged With Failure to Provide Medical Attendence For Infant And With Unlawlully Burying Same At Trenton.

At Trenton yesterday afternoon, Mrs Mary Desislet and daughter, Vina Desislet were given a preliminary hearing before Magistrate O'Rourke on a charge that they did unlawfully dispose of the body of an infant and also neglected to provide proper medical attendance and care for the child. As a result of the examination the two women were committed for trial and were subsequently brought to the city and lodged in the County jail.

The circumstances of the case are rather peculiar. It appears that the daughter, Vina, was at Trenton in April, and the early part of May, being medically treated for dropsy. Some time about the middle of May, the exact day is not known, she gave birth to a child which, it is alleged was still born. The body, was wrapped in some clothes and buried upon the premises occupied by the accused. Hessie Hewson a young woman who was an inmate of the Desislet home at the time, is alleged to have stated that she saw the child move after it was born.

The accused were not required to give evidence owing to the fact that Magistrate O'Rourke decided that he would not try the case. After some evidence had been taken he decided that a case had been made out, and committed the two women for trial to a higher court.

Mr. Anderson, County Attorney for Crown and Mr. Wm. Carnew for the accused.

Mr. Robt. P. Hamilton Dead

It was a great shock to the many friends of Mr. Robert P. Hamilton when it became known this morning that he had passed away. A message received in this city conveyed the sad intelligence that he died last evening about 8 o'clock at Hampton, N. B. He had been ill but a short time. Deceased, who was about 72 years of age was born in the Township of Tyendinaga. Nearly all his life had been spent in the city and vicinity where he was well known and highly respected. For some years Mr. Hamilton conducted successfully here an implement business but of late had been travelling in the Maritime Provinces in the interest of a seed firm. Mr. Hamilton was a member of Belleville Lodge, I. O. O. F., and also a member of the Masonic fraternity. In religion he was an Anglican being an active member of Christ Church. The deceased had always taken a deep interest in politics and was a staunch supporter of Conservative principles. A widow and daughter, Miss Lillie, of this city, survive, also one sister, Miss Hamilton who lives here. To the bereaved ones will be extended the sincere sympathy of many friends. The remains will be brought here for interment, of which due notice will be given.

POLICE NAB "CRIPPLE"

Sergeant Harman last evening placed under arrest a stranger, who gave his name as Harry McDonough, on a charge of vagrancy. The man gave the Sergeant considerable trouble on the way down to the police station and called him vile names. When searched a large number of small envelopes the majority of which were empty, while the others contained a small piece of sticking plaster, were found on McDonough's person. Upon these envelopes was printed the following:

Dear Friend—

Being crippled in such a manner that I am unable to obtain employment I am trying to be self-supporting until able to work, by selling the contents of this package. The price is whatever you wish to give.

This morning McDonough was brought before Magistrate Masson and remanded to jail for a week.

WILL AWAIT OUTCOME

Vancouver, Sept. 22.—Practically rejecting a resolution to conduct a campaign of education along tariff policy lines, but, at the same time expressing the hope that the Dominion Government would not overthrow the present fiscal arrangements in favor of those more radically making for free trade, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association yesterday debated the most important features of the present situation with respect to free trade and protection.

"Let us not listen to a sectional, parochial, little meeting of grain growers," said C. S. J. Phillips of Montreal, in urging that no discussion of the issues be undertaken at the present time.

"The less said now, the better," remarked A. Saunders of Goderich.

It was in adopting this idea of silence for the immediate present that the convention decided not to make any move towards instructing its tariff committee to go ahead with a campaign along protection lines.

The debate came at the close of the reception of the tariff committee's report. It was to the effect that the committee mentioned undertake the duty of issuing pamphlets, laying the tariff situation before the citizens of Canada, especially those in the agricultural districts, and that a select committee meet their representative body for the purpose of taking up the whole issue.

H. J. Waddie of Hamilton proposed the resolution, and R. A. Robertson seconded. While nothing in it specifically stated that protection was to be laid before the people as a desirable policy, yet that was the understanding, and the entire debate was not centred on whether protection was needed or not, but rather as to whether the association should advance protection arguments now, or wait until the opening of Parliament before attempting to meet the memorials recently laid before Premier Laurier by the farmers of the middle west.

Mr. Waddie, who was responsible for the unsuccessful resolution for a tariff educational campaign, said the farmers needed the lesson the most. The discussion had been missed by the manufacturers on their way across the prairies. There the free trade germ had been started, and, with advent of so many free traders from the old country, who found the present tariff conditions in this young land rather irksome, the doctrines of free trade would be largely spread, unless a counter campaign was carried on. The farmers evidently thought that they were being "soaked" for the benefit of the manufacturers' interests, and it was the duty of the latter to demonstrate that this was not so.

P. W. Ellis of Toronto thought that it would be wiser if the manufacturer would take some action to hold a conference with the agricultural interests, with a view to arriving at some amicable arrangements as to tariffs. At the present time some of the free traders, such as one man in Portage la Prairie, declared that the seven million people in Canada should not be taxed $100,000,000, but they did not go on to say to what they proposed doing to raise the money necessary for the improvements demanded in the Dominion, and they did not offer any changes to the present policy of tariffs prevailing in the country. It was strange why so many took exception to the levying of duties which provided money for the needs of Canada. He followed with illustrations of what had been achieved by the protection in the United States.

R. A. Robertson of Hamilton, confessing himself as one of the "extinct dodos" in the manufacturing ranks who did not favor high protection, declared that, instead of starting a campaign to spread the doctrines of protection, it would be wiser to approach the farmers with a little sugar coating and hold conferences with them. It could perhaps be termed "A Conference for the Discussion of Ways and Means for Maintaining the Revenue of the Country."

The supporters of the "wait" idea won, and an amendment to leave the whole question in the hands of the committee to do as was thought best, took the place of the resolution which was withdrawn.

Only one business session was held yesterday. Three will be held to-day, the closing day of the convention, with a banquet in the evening, following the election of officers and members of the executive council. Ballots have been handed out to the delegates and will be returned to-day.

WOODROW WILSON SLAMS ROOSEVELT

Men Who Flout at the Law Retard Progress, Says the Hope of the Democrats.

HAVE POISE AND PATIENCE.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Sept. 22.—"When public men flout at the law, they retard the needs of progress. Our courts may be imperfect, and some of them undoubtedly are; some of our judges may be imperfect, but they are the instrumentalities of law, and the moment you flout at the instrumentalities of law, you flout at the instrumentalities of order, and therefore all instrumentalities of progress. Are some of our leaders growing impatient at the slow progress of law? The characteristics of all great governing peoples have been poise, patience, and ability to make for progress by these virtues."

That Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, and Democratic candidate for Governor, had Col. Roosevelt in mind when he made the above remarks in opening his campaign here last night, was generally accepted to-day. While he did not mention Col. Roosevelt by name, his speech throughout was a studied defence of the courts of the nation, and his attitude is generally regarded today as challenging the "New Nationalism," inasmuch as the Wilson backers continue to admit they are grooming Wilson for the Democratic nomination in 1912 should the Conservatives control the national convention.

"You cannot accomplish anything with a mob save destruction," said Wilson, "and when I think of the processes of politics, I believe that the object of politics is law. If you will think of what the people are clamoring for, you will find that it is law—better law, new law, or laws to correct abuses which the people believe exist. Progress is not proportioned to the capacity for revolution, but is proportioned to the capacity for law."

BASEBALL FOOTBALL HOCKEY SPORT THE TURF THE RING BASKETBALL

OFFICERS VS. SERGEANTS.

At the Armories last night an interesting indoor baseball match was played between teams representing the officers and sergeants of the Fifteenth Regiment. A number of spectators were present to witness the game, some of whom were ladies. The officers proved to be the victors, winning by a score of 17 to 12. In the early part of the game the sergeants were in the lead, the score at the end of the fourth innings being 5 to 4 in their favor. In the succeeding four innings the officers rallied, with the result that they added 13 runs to their score, while the sergeants had to be content with three runs. The latter, in their last innings, made a bold stand and succeeded in securing 4 runs, but the lead which their superior officers had secured was too much to overcome.

Mr. L. Moore was umpire and filled that position in a most acceptable manner.

Sergeants.	Officers.
Sharp, p.	Cook, p.
Hyland, c.	Fish, c.
Dowrie, 3b.	Hyman, 1b.
Bateson, 1b.	Barragar, 2b.

Clarke, 2b.	Allen, s.s.
Hayes, c.f.	Wills, c.f.
Spafford, r.f.	Orr, r.f.
Ketcheson, l.f.	Wallbridge, l.f.

The following shows the score by innings:—

BASEBALL

Never in the history of the national game has there been so much advance talk about a world's series as now is going on. Unless all indications fail, the set of battles to be played next month between Connie Mack's White Elephants, representing the American League, and Frank Leroy Chance's Cubs, representing the National League, will shatter all records for attendance and for almost everything else. The baseball community is awaiting with impatience the coming clash between the pennant winners of the junior and senior organizations, and the games between the champion clubs are likely to attract more spectators than any previous set of contests in which the chief honors of the baseball firmament were at stake.

This year it is not a question so much as to whether Chicago possesses a better team than Philadelphia, but whether part of the National League is not decidedly the superior of the American League. The Cubs are acknowledged to have class even by warm adherents of the Athletics. The White Elephants, however, are not recognized generally as being wonders, which is rather a surprise, as they have had to face this season only one joke team—St. Louis.

Persons supposed to know something about the national pastime aver that there are just three real ball teams in the National League—Chicago, Pittsburg and New York—and say that the other clubs, all of which are now going through the reconstruction period, cannot be taken seriously and are unable to play good ball for more than a week or two at a time. The adherents of the Athletics (and of the American League) say there is only one easy proposition in the junior organization—St. Louis—and that the White Elephants have not received their rightful amount of credit for having won the championship of the organization headed by Byron Bancroft Johnson.

The followers of the Cubs point out that Chance's great machine has had an easy time conquering the Giants and the Pirates, its two real opponents, and has made the Cincinnati, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Brooklyn and Boston clubs look as if they ought to be either in the American Association or Eastern League, instead of in the National League.

Supporters of the Athletics come back with the argument that while the Cubs undoubtedly are a wonderful set of athletes, due consideration should be given to the fact that the White Elephants have earned their right to be considered classy by the way they have performed against their seven opponents.

"There is only one team in the American League that can be considered a cinch," remarks the man who is rooting for the younger organization, "and that is St. Louis. Yet, with Joe Lake on the knoll, the Browns are dangerous—most dangerous. The Mackmen are entitled to more credit for winning the American League pennant than are the Cubs for capturing the National League standard. This is the way I figure things out: Ty Cobb is a wonder and he is about half a team himself. Yet Chesty Tyrus couldn't keep the Athletics from winning a majority of the games they played against the Tiger troupe. The Detroiters are a great band of hitters, but the Philadelphia pitchers kept them from breaking down the fences.

"Then, take the Boston Red Sox. The Speed Boys can hit like fiends, and are fast as lightning on the bags. Did they make the Athletics look like second-raters? Not a bit. The White Elephants trampled their Beanville opponents under foot and are highly regarded in Boston.

"The New York team of 1910 is the best that ever has represented Gotham in the American League, but the Athletics beat the Hilltoppers in a majority of the bouts and registered three of their victories when that young wizard of the mound—Russell Ford—was pitching. If there is any better pitcher in the National League than Ford, I haven't seen him.

"The Athletics have found the travelling rough at all times this year; and in order to gain their commanding lead have been forced to take falls out of such eminent boxmen as Walter Johnson, Ed. Walsh, Cy. Young, Addie Joss, Frank Smith and Jim Scott. I am not knocking the National League pitchers, but the American League slabmen are much their superior.

"If one were going to pick all-star teams in the two leagues, the best outfit in the National would be recruited almost wholly from three clubs—Chicago, Pittsburg and New York. In the American there would be candidates from practically every club, as even Joe Lake, of St. Louis, would be one of the nominees of the experts. The American League is stronger on the whole than the National, and this is the year for the Johnsonites to regain the honors of the baseball universe."

The foregoing is the American League's side of the argument. The fans who fancy the Cubs and the National League cannot see the Athletics with a field glass. Their contention is that while the White Elephants certainly deserve a lot of praise for having won the American League pennant, Mack's juveniles will be shown up awfully in the series to be played next month. It is admitted that the Cub curvers are not nearly as good as they once were, and that Chicago might not possibly be the National League's representatives in the series if young King Cole had not done such demon work.

However, the enthusiasts who are picking Chance's men to win declare that Mordecai Brown will be just as effective against the White Elephants as he was against the Tigers, that Cole will prove to be a regular Mathewson and that either Pfiester or McIntyre may be counted on to turn in a victory.

From the viewpoint of the adherents of the Cubs, the Cook County athletes are going to win the series by their speed on the bases, by their great defence and through the ability of their pitchers to baffle the hard-hitting Mackmen, who have been able this year to wallop such curvers as Walsh, Johnson and Ford.

One thing is certain, the series is going to be a thriller, with the chances almost even for either team to win it. The games are sure to be attended by more persons from other cities than ever before. New York will send a tremendous delegation to Philadelphia for the games to be played there, and many Gothamites already have announced their intention of journeying to Chicago.

The battle royal which has been waged for some time between George Stallings, manager of the New York American baseball club, and his first baseman, Hal Chase, promised a speedy settlement, when the manager prepared to leave Chicago for New York yesterday afternoon on the Twentieth Century Limited. Stallings has been recalled to New York by owner Frank Farrell, where the trouble is to be remedied as soon as possible.

During the absence of Stallings, Thos. Davis, secretary of the club, is to hold the helm of the Highlanders.

Stallings admitted his recall to-day, and stated emphatically that at a near meeting with Mr. Farrell he would "settle the trouble once and for all."

"I am going back to straighten out this tangle," said Stallings. "I am sick of the war and trouble, and a rigid remedy is needed. I shall place before the president the exact status of this trouble with Chase. Each player knows the conditions existing in the club."

It is strongly rumored that Chase may be traded as a result of the New York conference. However, in contrast to this idea, certain fans declare that Chase stands high in the estimation of Farrell, and that his position is in no danger.

THE RING

The long and fruitless "chin chatter" between Jack Johnson and Sam Langford was expected to end Tuesday with the meeting of the two at a Boston newspaper office, each with a $20,000 roll in his pocket to bind a match for the world's heavyweight championship.

"I'll fight Johnson for $20,000 in a cellar or on an aeroplane," the "Tar Baby" called it "earplane"), was the challenge issued by Langford.

"Well, I'm here to make a match with Langford," was the champion's retort.

With such expressions of good faith as the basis of their hopes, fight followers were counting on a match between the two ebony maulers at last being made.

Langford, who has camped on Johnson's trail for many moons, had his inning Tuesday night at the weekly show at the Armory Club, when he climbed through the ropes and interrupted an oration that Johnson was delivering by his "cellar or earplane" challenge. Langford's action created a storm of enthusiasm, and virtually forced the champion to say that he had come to Boston in the hope of signing up with the Hub's eminent scrapper.

Although admitting that there is a technical flaw in his title, "Fighting Dick" Nelson declared yesterday that he will hereafter bill himself as the "welterweight champion," as the result of his victory Monday night over the "Dixie Kid," the title-holder. As a title can only pass as the result of a knockout or a decision, fight fans will question Nelson's claim, as no decision was given in his fight with "Dixie," the New York law not permitting decisions.

"Everyone said I won by a mile," Nelson explains.

A likely candidate for the bantam championship has been uncovered in Joe Coster, who defeated Phil McGovern, brother of "Terrible Terry," Tuesday night. Coster's friends are claiming for him the right to a match with Champion Johnny Coulon.

ATHLETICS.

"A national disgrace" is the way a leading authority of Toronto refers to the holdout of the Ontario athletes selected to represent the Province at the Canadian championships at Montreal this Saturday. "If the boys haven't a better idea of patriotism—if they will stand by and watch a number of American and foreign athletes carry off all the best prizes at our greatest meet, I feel sorry for them."

In an interview with the Toronto News, President J. G. Merrick, of the A. A. U. C., said that he knew nothing of the strike, but that in case the men did not go that the Union would be strong enough to handle the case. It had dealt with larger problems before to-day. Mr. Merrick intimated that the union would not accede to the demands of the athletes.

When asked how soon the national championships would be held in Toronto, Mr. Merrick said that it would be Toronto's turn in about four or five years. Next year the event will go to Vancouver. The Westerners had applied for the games in 1912, and have been assured that they will get them. The idea seems to be to hold the championships in places where athletics in general will be benefitted by such games. Toronto apparently needs no coaxing. An effort will be made, however, to bring the championships here next Exhibition time.

The athletes are still united. Probably the only Toronto man to go down will be Charlie Watson, the East End sprinter, who lately came from Buffalo. He was not one of the original twelve selected, and will go down at his own expense.

The M. A. A. A., under whose auspices the meet is being held, are demanding a $1 entry fee for each event. Archibald, of West End, who had intended going in for the all round title, would have to dig for at least $6. Sebert, Knox and others would have to dig for $2 or $3 each. This they sider steep.

Entries from athletes from all parts of the Dominion have been received by the Montreal secretary, while the New York clubs will be fairly well represented, but the athletes who would have best able to uphold the honor of Canada, namely, the local boys, will be missing.

Bobby Kerr, of Hamilton, stated that he would not run any more this season. This means that Bob will not take in the championships at Montreal, giving Lukeman a chance to win something.

GAME.

Local hunters will do well to take notice that bittern is a species of bird which is protected by the law. Chief Inspector Tinsley, writing, says it is unlawful to kill bittern. They are scavengers and eat up a great deal of matter which would otherwise breed disease.

THE TURF

What promises to be the banner fall meeting in the history of the Ontario Jockey Club will open at Woodbine on Saturday, and prospects never looked brighter for high class racing. The picturesque course, with its large lawns, look pretty and green, and the infield, for steeplechasing, which is always a feature of the O.J.C.'s racing, is in first-class condition.

The stabling accommodation is all taken up with the exception of eighteen stalls, which are reserved for the string of Sam Hildreth, which was due to arrive from Saratoga yesterday. In the Hildreth stable will be such cracks as King James, Dalmation, Fitzherbert, and the Futurity winner, Novelty. All the largest stables that raced at Bluebonnets, including those of R. T. Wilson, jr., and August Belmont, who will race here for the first time, are already on the grounds. Many stables laid up at Woodbine and did not ship to Montreal, including S. A. Clopton and the Valley Farm, and the scarcity of horses that was in evidence at Bluebonnets will not be found here.

There will be seven races on the programme, including a steeplechase daily, and the post time for the first race will be .15, fifteen minutes earlier than heretofore.

The fall meeting of the Montreal Jockey Club, which opened at Montreal, Que., September 10 and came to a close September 17, embraced seven racing days, during which 50 races were decided, and $32,910 was distributed in stakes and purses. The horses of R. F. Carman, who heads the list of winning owners, earned $7,165 during the meeting, and M. C. Pritchard was second with $2,200. Thirty-one owners won $300 and over, those winning $1,000 and over being:

	1st.	2nd.	3rd.	Amt.
R. F. Carman	13	3	1	$7,165
R. T. Wilson, jr.	3	1	1	1,670
C. S. Campbell	2	2	1	1,520
Mr. Chetland	1	1	3	1,495
C. H. Smith	3	0	0	1,370
A. E. Ogilvie	2	0	0	1,250
M. C. Pritchard	3	0	2	2,200
J. E. Seagram	1	1	0	1,085

Starbottle, from the Carman stable, was the chief money winning horse of the meeting, with $1,605. G. Archibold led the jockeys.

Plot to Kill Emperor.

Tokio, Sept. 22.—A sensation was created by the publication yesterday afternoon of the alleged details of a plot among his own subjects to assassinate Emperor Mutsuhito.

The startling story appeared in The Hochi Shimbun, which states that the plotters, who are now under arrest, certainly will be sentenced to death, after trials before a special secret court.

This is the first time in the history of the country that the life of the sovereign has been plotted against by his own people, and the fact known. There are now in jail in this city a number of persons who are alleged to be active in the Allied Socialist movement.

Eighteen Thousand on Parade.

Atlantic City, Sept. 22.—Eighteen thousand grizzled veterans of the civil war, with cadence that showed the weight of years they bear, marched yesterday through flag-bedecked avenues. Along the line of march arose the cheers and applause of the greatest crowd that ever saw a parade in Atlantic City.

Never before had the thinning of the ranks been so noticeable. Many of the states were represented by a mere handful of veterans. The smallest delegation was from Arizona, just an old grizzled veteran in line, who got nearly as much applause as he marched along as did the big army of Pennsylvania, which had the largest number of men in the parade.

To Oust Cavalieri.

New York, Sept. 22.—A civil suit to set aside the ante-nuptial agreement between Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the opera singer, and her husband, Robert Winthrop Chanler, was instituted late yesterday by Mrs. Julia C. Chanler, his former wife. The papers alleged that the ante-nuptial agreement was obtained by Mme. Cavalieri by fraud and undue influence.

Arrested in Calgary.

Calgary, Sept. 22.—A young man and young woman, giving their names as Roy and Margaret Marshall, and claiming to be brother and sister, were arrested here for theft. P. C. Wade, formerly of Toronto, identified the man as Roy Ostrum, who had been convicted of theft in Toronto. The girl is supposed to be Lily McNulty of Kincardine, Ont.

Awarded $1,000 Damages.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Henry Corby, 13 Temperance street, was awarded $1,000 in the non-jury assizes yesterday against George Bryan, 16 Temperance street, in a fight over a joist between properties which Corby claimed overcrowded on his land. Bryan has the option of paying the thousand or removing the objectionable portion of the joist.

Grandstand Fell, One Killed.

Madrid, Sept. 22.—One person is known to have been killed and 23 seriously injured yesterday in the collapse of a grandstand during a bull fight at Mejorandа. A number of persons are missing, and it is feared they will be found dead in the ruins.

MAGISTRATE CURED OF PILES & ECZEMA

One of the latest prominent gentlemen to speak highly in Zam-Buk's favour is Mr. C. E. Sanford of Weston, King's Co., N.S. Mr. Sanford is a Justice of the Peace for the County, and a member of the Board of School Commissioners. He is also Deacon of the Baptist Church in Berwick. Indeed it would be difficult to find a man more widely known and more highly respected. Here is his opinion of Zam-Buk. He says:—

"I never used anything that gave me such satisfaction as Zam-Buk. I had a patch of Eczema on my ankle which had been there for over 20 years. Sometimes also the disease would break out on my shoulders. I had applied various ointments and tried all sorts of things to obtain a cure, but in vain. Zam-Buk, unlike everything else I had tried, proved highly satisfactory and cured the ailment.

"I have also used Zam-Buk for itching piles, and it has cured them completely also. I take comfort in helping my brother men, and if the publication of my opinion of the healing value of Zam-Buk will lead other sufferers to try it, I should be glad. For the relief of suffering caused by Piles or Skin Disease I know of nothing to equal Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk cures ulcers, abscesses, blood-poison, ring-worm, festering or running sores, bad leg, varicose ulcers, salt rheum, prairie itch, cuts, burns, bruises, baby's sores, etc. Purely herbal, 50c box, druggists and stores. Refuse imitations.

CANADIAN NEWS FLASHED BY WIRE.

Fifteen Witnesses Called For The Inquest Into the Death of Mrs. Deline.

YOUNG GIRL SUICIDES.

Body of B. W. Yates Who Killed Himself In Cleveland Police Station After Shooting Woman Will be Buried In Brantford.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)
PETERBORO, Ont., Sept. 23.—Fifteen witnesses were called for the inquest in the case of Mrs. Deline, found dead at Havelock. Her husband, charged with the murder, is also present. Portions of his clothing have been sent to Toronto, where an examination is to be made of the stains thereon.

NEW AIRSHIP.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)
MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 23. — A street car conductor, a Belgian named Hansenns, has invented a new type of airship with fair success, and a Canadian company will be formed to manufacture them.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)
CHATHAM, Ont., Sept. 23.—Frank Jackson, brought back from Toledo to stand trial here for murder, pleaded not guilty in the police court this morning, and was remanded till Wednesday. His plea is that he shot in self defence.

THE KINGSTON SEE.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)
KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 23.—It is understood here that in selecting the Archbishop to succeed to the See of Kingston, nominations will be sent forward by Bishops to Rome for endorsation.

ATTEMPTED KIDNAPPING.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)
SHERBROOKE, Que., Sept. 23.—Four men, armed with revolvers, in an automobile, drove up to the homestead of Mrs. Egg near here yesterday, seized her young daughter and attempted to get away with her, but the screams of the woman attracted attention, and the men went away without the girl. The whole countryside is very much alarmed. The kidnapping had been well planned, the rural telephone wires to the house having been cut. One of the men threatened to shoot.

GIRL SUICIDES.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)
HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 23.—From the same revetment wall where two girls had already plunged to suicide in Hamilton Bay, another girl aged about twenty-three, thought to be from London, Ont., took her own life at midnight. She appeared at the steamer Turbinia's wharf saying she wanted to go to Toronto after a runaway husband. She found that no boat left till morning. Then she made for the wall and jumped over in the darkness. Her body was found this morning.

LATE B. W. YATES.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)
BRANTFORD, Ont., Sept. 23.—The body of B. W. Yates, the well-to-do Detroit publisher, who hanged himself in a Cleveland police station after shooting a woman he was with, is expected here to-day. Yates was born and raised here. His aged mother is critically ill here at present, and his brother Herbert is living a retired life here. Dr. Harry Yates, of Montreal, is another brother. Yates' wife was formerly a waitress. She lives in Detroit and there are a couple of children. The funeral will likely be held here Saturday. The mother knows of her son's death, but not of the fearful details.

(See Page 6 for particulars.)

Hearst to Gaynor.

New York, Sept. 23.—William R. Hearst has sent a letter to Mayor Gaynor assailing him as a veiled candidate for governor, and regretting his recent experience "did not abate his lying tongue."

Diamond Robber Gets One Year.

Saskatoon, Sept. 23.—Herbert Faulkner was yesterday sentenced to one year at hard labor in the common jail at Prince Albert, for the theft of $1,000 worth of diamonds.

Tokio Is Alarmed.

Tokio, Sept. 23.—The intention of the U. S. Government to fortify the Panama Canal arouses widespread comment here. High officials declare it is dangerous to allow a great waterway to be fortified exclusively by the United States.

Body Found Beside Track.

Belleville, Sept. 23.—Yesterday morning, near Marysville, on the G.T.R., about six miles east of this city, a body of a man, unknown, was terribly mutilated.

G. T. P. To Take Over Part of The N .T. R.

Laurier, Graham, Pugsley, Hays, and Others Hold Conference And Arrive at Basis of Terms.

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—Arrangements have been practically completed for the immediate use by the Grand Trunk Pacific of the new line of the National Transcontinental between Winnipeg and Superior Junction. The branch from Port Arthur is completed, and there is now a through grain route available from Port Arthur to Edmonton and beyond. The Winnipeg-Superior Junction section had not been taken out of the hands of Contractor McArthur, and probably will not be taken over by the National Transcontinental Commission for some months yet.

Yesterday afternoon the terms of a temporary traffic arrangement were discussed at a conference between Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon G P. Graham, Hon. Wm. Pugsley, Mr. C. M. Hays, Mr. Alf. Smithers of London (chairman of the Grand Trunk Board), Mr. McArthur, the contractor, and Hon. S. N. Parent, chairman of the National Transcontinental Commission. The basis of an agreement was arrived at, and this will be completed in Montreal to-day.

Envoy From Canada To Go To Washington

Permanent Resident to be Located in the United States Capital to Conduct Relations With the American Government.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 23.—The next movement of the Government will, it is reported, be establishment of closer diplomatic relations with the United States. This idea has often been suggested and is in line with Sir Wilfrid Laurier's frequent declaration that he wishes Canada to be independent of British diplomacy and to make her own treaties. The subject was brought up in Parliament last session, but Sir Wilfrid postponed the expression of any definite opinion. But it now appears as if the Government intended taking some action. The resident correspondent of the New York Herald wires his paper:

"That Canada will have a representative at Washington to handle the numerous questions of increasing importance constantly arising between the Dominion and the Republic was ascertained here in a quarter that will bear no contradiction. The Herald correspondent was informed that it is premature to determine exactly when this policy will be given effect, what will be the precise status of Canada's representation at Washington, or the personality of the appointee to this post. In fact, the scarcity of timber for such service may be said already to have delayed the establishment of direct relations.

"If Sir Wilfrid Laurier could have put his hand on a man of the requisite ability and personal prestige it is altogether probable that he would long ago have responded to suggestions from Washington that the stationing there of a Canadian representative would be most agreeable to the United States Government. It was then possible to let the matter drift. When perplexing problems accumulated, Secretary Root came to Ottawa and settled them directly through personal conference with Sir Wilfrid Laurier. At present, however, events are giving emphasis to the need of direct relation, instead of the present roundabout system."

NO MOTIVE HAS BEEN DISCLOSED.

Woman Who Took Her Own Life In Montreal Hotel Had Money.

WAS HANDSOME.

Elegantly Dressed When Found and Wore Several Rings — Husband a Commercial Traveller at Present In the West.

MONTREAL, Sept. 23. — Mystery still enshrouds the suicide of Mrs Mary E. Munford in the Corona Hotel, here. It has been established that the woman was heir to property valued at over $3000 and the motive for her act cannot even be guessed at. She is the wife of B. K. Munford, a Boston commercial traveller, at present in the West.

For the last week Mrs. Munford has been staying at the Westminster Hotel, Boston. On Tuesday morning she arrived here from Boston travelling by Pullman. Her luggage had been sent to Battle Creek by the Boston and Maine railroad, for which she had a check. She evidently intended to follow it there. After leaving the station she went to the Windsor Hotel ladies' waiting room, where she wrote the note to Mrs. Gibbs. Then she proceeded to the Corona and made an end of her life.

The late Mrs. Munford was a tall fine looking woman, about 35 years of age. She was very fair, and when found in the hotel, was elegantly dressed, with several rings on her fingers, a bracelet and a chatelaine watch. One of the rings was set with diamonds, evidently a wedding ring and was engraved inside with the letters "J.M.B." which are probably the initials of her maiden name, J. Mary Brown.

No cause has been adduced to account for the suicide. Troubles under which her husband has evidently been laboring may have had something to do with it. It is evidently not financial difficulties, as the attorney's report, states that she has been left a considerable sum of money.

She was perhaps in a state of mental depression which brought on a temporary aberration.

Coroner McMahon stated this morning that the case was one of deliberate suicide, and that the inquest would be postponed until he received an answer from Mrs. Gibbs, of Battle Creek, with whom he was communicating.

The deceased appears to have no friends in the city.

WINDSORS PROJECT TO EXPORT POWER

Scheme is Supported By Representatives of Municipalities Interested.

PROFIT ON SERVICE.

Claim It Should Be Shared By the Entire Partnership — Supply to Be Directly Under Control of the Commission.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—(Special)—About 50 representatives of the municipalities in the Western Power Union under the hydro-electric power commission met here to-day to consider the application from Windsor for 15,000 horse power, and unanimously adopted the following resolution, on the motion of Controller Spence, Toronto, seconded by Mayor Guest, St. Thomas:

"That this meeting records its desire that the City of Windsor should be granted a supply of electric energy by the H. E. P. commission, at whatever rate the power can be equitably supplied, in view of the other service given by the transmission line serving Windsor, and that it be affirmed as a principle that any Niagara power which the commission supplies to be used outside this province should be applied only on condition that such service should be terminable on reasonable notice, and that all profits on such service should be appropriated so as to be equitably advantageous to all Ontario municipalities supplied by the commission with Niagara Falls transmission system, and such supply to be entirely under the control of the commission."

There were present: Representing the commission, Hon. Adam Beck, chairman; P. W. Sothman, chief engineer; E. C. Bettell, secretary; and as delegates, Mayor Geary and Controller Spence, Toronto; Mayor Beatty and Ald. Chapman, Eckert, Brock, Wyatt, Underwood, Fitzgerald, Tancock, London; Mayor Hahn and Ald. Uttley of Berlin; Mayor Hanna and Ald. Sheppard, Keogh, McKay, Clinton of Windsor; Mayor Armstrong of Paris; Mayor Graybill of Waterloo; Reeve Jackson of Port Stanley; Mayor Guest and City Solicitor Doherty of St. Thomas;

ROWLEY IS HEAD OF THE C. M. A.

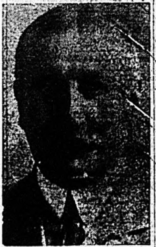
Hull, Quebec, Man, Elected President Of The Canadian Manufacturers.

TINDALL VICE-PRESIDENT.

Convention of 1910 Draws to a Close After Passing A Resolution on the Companies Act Demanding More Uniform System.

Vancouver, Sept. 23.—The following officers were elected at yesterday's session of the Manufacturers' convention: President, W. H. Rowley, Hull, Que.; vice-president, Nathaniel Curry, Montreal; Ontario vice-president, W. B. Tindall, Toronto; Quebec vice-president, J. S. N. Dougall, Montreal; British Columbia vice-president, B. T. Rogers, Vancouver; Nova Scotia vice-president, J. T. Edwards, Londonderry; Manitoba vice-president, T. R. Deacon, Winnipeg; New Brunswick vice-president, T. S. Simms, St. John; Prince Edward Island vice-president, Hon. S. L. Haszard, Charlottetown; Alberta and Saskatchewan vice-president, W. G. Clark, Edmonton; treasurer, George Booth, Toronto.

Chairman of standing committees: Parliamentary, Atwell Fleming, Toronto; commercial intelligence, S. L. Chapman, Toronto; reception and membership, J. A. McMahon, Hamilton; technical education, George A. Howell, Toronto; industrial Canada, R. J. Young, Montreal; tariff, T. A. Russell, Toronto; railway transportation, Harry Bertram, Dundas; representative Eastern and Central Canada Manufacturers' Mutual Insurance Co., G. A. Murray, Toronto; auditor, Wilton G. Eddie. Chairman of insurance committee to be appointed.



W. H. ROWLEY.

The 1910 convention of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association concluded yesterday with but one session, the annual banquet last night, the delegates go to Victoria, where, during Friday and Saturday they will be the guests of the Provincial Government.

The text of the resolution on the important companies act as as follows:

"Whereas there appears to be uncertainty as to whether charters for manufacturing companies should be issued by the Federal Government at Ottawa, or the Provincial Governments of the various provinces.

"Also, that uncertainty exists as to the extent of the powers granted by the provinces and the Dominion respectively to such companies.

"And that various vexations restrictions and conditions are at present imposed upon the exercise of the powers of companies under charters both Dominion and provincial.

"Resolved, that the attention of the Federal and the Provincial Governments be drawn to the unsatisfactory state of the present law, and that a recommendation be made that steps should be taken to place the administration of the law governing the incorporation and control of companies throughout the whole Dominion upon a more uniform and reasonable basis."

Among the resolutions adopted yesterday was one declaring for a more uniform and reasonable basis throughout the Dominion for the incorporation and control of companies. Another pressed for a final decision on the question of the legality of the insurance associations. A third went strongly for reciprocal preferential trade within the Empire. Little discussion followed the reception of the resolutions.

Contrary to general expectations, there was no specific declaration on the Canadian tariff question and reciprocity with the U. S. This issue, however, was covered by the resolution on imperial preference, which, after mentioning reciprocal preferential trade within the Empire, closed with believing that thereby the bonds of union will be strengthened, and, the British Empire freed from dependence on foreign countries for food and other supplies.

Expecting probable changes in the Australian tariff, the meeting passed a resolution asking that the Dominion Government arrange for an interchange of commodities between Canada and Australia on a preferential basis of custom duties.

LONDON'S OIL FAKE.

Petroleum So Universally Evident Had Not Come From Ground.

There is still surviving in London, Ont., a gentleman who recalls a great oil fake that carried the western city by storm many years ago. He is Mr. James Egan, a prominent citizen, who is eighty-two years old.

"It was one of the most curious experiences that London ever had," says Mr. Egan. "The report went out that oil had been discovered nearly opposite Woodland cemetery. It seemed as if the whole of London was down there the first Sunday afternoon after the story got out. In holes in the ground there seemed to be no doubt that there was oil. People soaked their handkerchiefs in it and took them home that way as souvenirs. Champagne suppers and other celebrations helped the enthusiasm, and then the whole thing was shown up as a straight fake. It was a swindle, though it didn't get far enough for anybody to be seriously bitten. Some Yankees had come over, bored holes, loaded them with petroleum and waited for results. Happily for London, the results didn't materialize as they had hoped for. One result, however, was extensive boring for oil, the outcome of which was to strike some sulphur wells, including the wells at the foot of Dundas street, and others on Adelaide street and in Petersville, now West London. The big swindle, however, was most elaborate in its plans. Geologists were brought here to lecture who declared that London was situated over a regular basin of oil and that boring almost anywhere would reach it. Fakes were not so common then, as nowadays, and that will explain the degree to which the thing was carried before expere— came. I remember well the first time I ever saw petroleum used for lighting. It had been candle exclusively before that. At first people were afraid of the new kind of illuminating and, of course, it was not as safe as at present. One good result of the oil fever, however, was the opening up of the refineries here, an industry which developed rapidly and for a good many years meant much to London. It is a great pity that those oil refineries ever left here."

Sir Wilfrid Not a Verse Writer.

It is not often that The New York Evening Post makes a flagrant error, but it is overstepping the mark when it proclaims Sir Wilfrid Laurier as a writer of occasional verse. In reviewing the life of Sir Randall Cremer, the famous English advocate of international peace, it speaks of one of the conferences held to further his aims which was held at Rome in the early nineties, and adds: "On this occasion Sir Wilfrid Laurier sent a check, together with his regrets at being unable to attend:

My dear Mr. Cremer,
You excellent schemer,
Your note says you are shortish of tin
As I don't go to Rome,
But am staying at home,
It's but right I should pay for my sin.

Next year if we live
Should an impetus give
To the cause of true peace with each nation.
So good luck to your notion,
In spite of old Goschen
In favor of sound arbitration."

It is obvious that not Sir Wilfrid Laurier, but the late Sir Wilfrid Lawson, the brilliant advocate of temperance, peace, and many good causes, is meant.

CURRENT EVENTS.

We hear that a number of parties along the Front of Sidney are standing out for very large sums for their land; much larger than the C. N. R will pay, with the result that the Company have decided to commence arbitration proceedings. This is unfortunate as it will postpone the completion of the Railway and injure the general public. We do not advocate the acceptance of a price less than the value but we know that many property owners stood in their own light in years gone by when the G. T R. was coming through, by asking too high a price. In some instances prices were then asked, a quarter of which was never realized.

The sunken pavement still remains in front of the Bank of Commerce. Perhaps the public works department are awaiting another accident and suit against the city, before raising the walk to its proper level.

Eczema Is Curable.

IN EVERY CASE WHERE OUR REMEDY FAILS IT IS SUPPLIED FREE OF ALL COST.

In making this statement we back it up with our promise that if our remedy does not substantiate our claim in every particular, we will without question or quibble return every cent you paid us for it. We take all the risk—you take none.

We strongly recommend Rexall Eczema Ointment, which possesses remarkable cleansing, antiseptic, germicidal, soothing and healing qualities. It is a grayish white emolient, with a pleasant odor, and very cleanly for use. The first application produces a refreshing sense of relief, and it quickly subsides and overcomes the inflammation, irritation and discharge when present.

It is intended to be applied with a piece of muslin or linen, or it may be applied and allowed to dry in. It affords very prompt relief for pimples, blotches, discolorations, ringworm, acne, tetter, barbers' itch, ulcers, insect bites, nettle rash, hives, sores and wounds.

Rexall Eczema Ointment relieves itching and irritation of the feet. It is ideal for the treatment of children who are tormented with itching, burning and disfiguring skin diseases. Try a box at our risk. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Remember it is only sold at our store—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown.

To save expense the Ogdensburg people put the cob and pony classes together allowing the 14.2 cobs to come in with the ponies. Paul Sorg, of New York, captured first prize with his celebrated cab Vanity Fair for which he paid $15,000 in England. Berth, of Bowmanville, took second prize and Wilmot's Warwick Shrimp captured third prize and Gold Cup fourth.

LIQUOR SEIZED.

Stirling village is supposed to be a dry place as it is under the bans of local option, but judging from the quantity of whiskey which was confiscated on Tuesday it was intended to make it a wet place. The Intelligencer is informed that the proper authorities were advised by some means that liquor was brought into the village to be used during the fair. On Tuesday afternoon a building in rear of the Kirby House was raided and some 30 bottles of whiskey were seized. Some trouble, it is said, ensued between the parties making the seizure and others who were about the premises. The matter will no doubt be ventilated in the court. It is alleged that two horsemen who refused to grant the officer permission to search their stalls were arrested yesterday.

Victim of Hotel Fire Will Die.

Port Arthur, Sept. 23.—Miss Moore, burned in the Schreiber fire Wednesday, and now in St. Joseph Hospital here, has little chance of recovery. Miss Gauder, though severely injured by jumping from the third story is likely to recover.

Stabbed by Nightwatchman.

Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Sept. 23.—In a quarrel over a cup of coffee, Gilbert Sanborn, chief inspector of the New York Aqueduct, Ashocken division, was stabbed to death by James McGinley, a night watchman. McGinley used a pocketknife.

Gaynor for Governor?

New York, Sept. 23.—Gaynor sentiment took form and assumed direction in Democratic circles here yesterday more rapidly than at any other time since his name came to the front as a possible candidate for governor. State Chairman John A. Dix had brought word of how large the figure of the mayor bulked from a distance, but until yesterday New York had been reticent. Partly, they were distrained by the continued silence of the mayor himself, and partly by hesitation as to how they would fare with Mayor Gaynor at Albany and John Purrey Mitchell, now acting mayor, in his chair.

But yesterday there were two developments of interest. In the first place, there was much open talk for Gaynor among district leaders who gathered at Tammany Hall, and those who heard it could only account for it on the supposition that it had warrant from those higher in the councils of the society. In the second place, Charles F. Murphy, the taciturn leader of Tammany, publicly admitted the strength of the movement toward Gaynor, while carefully reserving any declaration of his attitude.

From Allentown to Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Sept. 23.—J. A. D. McCurdy, the daring aviator from Toronto, will to-day essay the most hazardous flight ever attempted in America. He has been substituted for the noted aviator, Glenn H. Curtiss, and will endeavor to make the round trip from Allentown to Philadelphia.

While the actual distance covered will be but 130 miles, McCurdy will have to rise to an altitude of 3,000 feet to surmount some of the low mountains he will be forced to pass in his journey.

A flight was tried yesterday to test the machine in which McCurdy will endeavor to make the trip. The crucial test will take place this morning, if weather conditions are favorable.

A Naughty Artist.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—It was reported here to-day that civil arrest and excommunication from the Roman Catholic Church will overtake A. E. Bourbee, an artist, whose name appeared upon nude posters displayed in the east end of the city during the Roman Catholic Eucharistic Congress. There posters depicted Archbishop Bruchesi, in very slight attire, bearing a mitre. The greatest indignation was felt over similar pictures depicting nuns in abbreviated raiment. It is alleged that the original intention was to have the pictures printed upon post cards.

Praise for Q.O.R.

London, Sept. 23.—The Queen's Own Rifles have not as yet participated in the fighting manoeuvres, but their marching is earning unstinted admiration. The Associated Chambers of Commerce have passed a resolution in favor of compulsory service for the youth of the empire.

Checked the Epidemic.

Winnipeg, Sept. 23.—The effects of the city's war against the outbreak of scarlet fever are clearly shown in the fact that there were no fresh cases reported yesterday. The health authorities believe they have succeeded in checking the epidemic.

Carried Money Bylaw.

Fort William, Sept. 23.—All the bylaws submitted carried by substantial majorities except those who proposed giving a gas franchise to a private concern and for improving the city hall. The expenditure of $188,000 was authorized.

Postpons Increased Taxes.

Berlin, Sept. 23.—The Government is still struggling with the problems of revenue which failed of solution through the fiscal explanation of 1909. It has been rumored for some months that the Government intended to introduce at the next session of the Reichstag a bill providing for additional taxation.

Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg, however, has recently had a conference with the Cabinet, at which a decision was reached to postpone action in the matter until after the elections to the Reichstag, which it is expected will be held in the autumn of 1911. The conclusion generally accepted is that the Government is unwilling to risk the political effect of new fiscal legislation prior to the election.

Accordin gto the figures for the first five months, it appears probable that the revenue for the present fiscal year from new taxes will fall $10,750,000 short of the budget estimates, which placed the expenditure at about 30 per cent. less than they proved to be.

Gauthier Goes to Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—Archbishop Gauthier of Kingston is officially Archbishop of Ottawa in succession to the late Archbishop Duhamel.

That announcement was made at Rome Wednesday and was communicated to Monsignor Gauthier by cable yesterday. His grace at once cabled his acceptance.

Along with the appointment of Archbishop Gauthier there will be an important change in the boundaries of the archdiocese of Ottawa. The archbishopric of Kingston and the bishopric of Peterboro will be included in the archdiocese of Ottawa, and the boundary on the northeast will be the Ottawa River. Kingston will therefore be reduced to a bishopric. Hull will be cut off from the Ottawa diocese and created a diocese, under the care of a French-Canadian bishop, and within the archdiocese of Montreal.

TITLED SHOPKEEPERS.

The Duchess of Sutherland, who recently opened a new shop in Bond street, West End of London, where she sells neddlework, is but one of many titled persons who run business establishments, many of which are disguised by fancy names.

Pseudonyms are often adopted in order to evade the Lord Chamberlain's regulation that no person who is in the retail trade can be admitted to Court, or be presented to the Sovereign.

Lady Auckland recently opened a shop in Baker street as a furniture dealer and decorator.

The dressmaking business of 'Lucille' belongs to Lady Duff-Gordon.

Lady Essex runs a laundry.

The Duchess of Abercorn owns a creamery.

Lady Algernon Gordon-Lennox has a fruit-bottling establishment.

Lord Strafford's daughter, Lady Rachel Byng, presides over an artistic needlework shop.

Viscountess Molesworth has just established a jam-making business, which is proving highly successful.

Lady Winborne sells Church of England literature at 8 Dover street, under the title of the "Church of England Book Store."

THE SEASON'S NEW COLORS.

The greens bid fair to assume importance in the season's color scheme. The color is not insisted upon in the first showing of materials, but at the Paris openings it was distinctly emphasized, and the importers all seem to be bringing over numerous models in green. Just what tone of green will be most popular remains to be seen, but lovely shades of the color are many.

There are particularly lovely models and fabrics in the soft blues too, blues somewhat less vivid than the tones most prevalent in the spring, though the brilliant blues are seen too. There is a certain medium blue that is not Alice nor Gobelin nor Limoges nor any tone whose name we know but is delightful, soft and warm, and it has been much used in connection with black velvet. Among the most beautiful of the new materials this hue is seen in the softest and most lustrous of crepes, with a narrow border design in black velvet on the blue ground.

Some beautiful model frocks in soft greys are built up of silk and velvet materials, and the dash of vivid purple which relieves some of the most effective grey models must be noted. This rich and soft purple as a relieving color in frocks threatens to occupy the place eeeeeetttttt tttt les erdh emfw vbg emf held by the vivid king's blue last season though how successful it will be remains to be seen.

FOES TO BEAUTY.

When it is acknowledged that certain personal characteristics are enemies to beauty, how great is the need to battle with faulty instincts, even where just our appearance is concerned.

Jealous or envious folks, for instance, rarely have fresh complexions. The unwholesome feelings within affect their outward looks. Vanity is not so mischievous in its effects as envy, but it gives an intensely vacuous expression to the face.

The eyes, in women who do not conquer their instincts for deceit or suspicion become narrow and colorless, and lose the lustre that should linger even though girlhood is left behind. To indulge in irritable moods is to encourage the puckered brow, to set lines about the mouth, and induce a crop of wrinkles.

Double chins and ample waists, where disease does not bring the twofold trouble, lie in wait for the indolent woman, indolent, be it noted, in its fullest comprehension. Inactive minds, as well as inactive bodies, invariably mean superfluous fat, vivacious, intelligent women being rarely troubled with that foe to feminine grace.—Bristol "Times and Mirror."

For each person in the United States one-third of a pound of tea and a dozen paper napkins are imported from Japan each year.

The wife of the new viceroy of India, Lady Hardinge, is one of the most popular women in England. She was the Hon. Winifred Sturt, daughter of the first Lord Allington, who was popularly known by the nickname of "Bunny." Lady Hardinge has not inherited her father's peculiar rabbit-like features, but is a very charming and pretty woman, also wonderfully gifted. Lady Hardinge is probably the finest amateur violinist in England, and she owns a fine Stradivarius. Her musical talents have gone far to strengthen the high favor in which she has been held ever since her childhood by Alexandra, the dowager queen, who is passionately fond of music and who, though she does not play the violin herself, prefers it to all other instruments.

Ever since Lady Hardinge's marriage she has been a lady in waiting to Queen Alexandra and from girlhood has been the most intimate friend of the queen's daughters. Sir Charles and Lady Hardinge have two boys, the eldest just eighteen, and a girl of ten, who rejoices in the Christian name of Diamond. This singular name was given the child in honor of the late King Edward's horse Diamond, which won the Derby in the diamond jubilee year a few days before the birth of the little girl who bears the name.

USE HOME MARKETS.

This is Admonition of Hon. Mr. Cochrane to Algoma Farmers.

Sault Ste. Marie, Sept. 23.—Before a crowd of 12,000 people, the Central Algoma Fair was opened yesterday afternoon by Hon. Frank Cochrane. He was entertained at luncheon by the ladies of the district. One hundred citizens of city and surrounding country were present, including A. C. Boyce, M.P.; W. H. Hearst, M.P.P.; T. J. Drummond, president Lake Superior Corporation; W. C. Franz, J. Taylor, Mayor T. E. Simpson, W. R. Smith, M.P., Judges Johnston and O'Connor, and members of bar, Moses McFadden, crown attorney, and others.

T. J. Drummond believed that it was about time farmers and manufacturers got together and worked out a systematic plan for the country's good. He admonished farmers to patronize the home town, saying that a home market was better than a district one.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane fell in line with the suggestion that a permanent agriculturist be sent to the Soo, who would remain there during the entire season. The agricultural college at Guelph was doing much, but the men sent out were too widely distributed to be effective. He was glad to tell the people that arrangements had been made with the Dominion Government for early completion of the Soo-Sudbury trunk road.

He then addressed 3,000 school children who had marched to the grounds.

Throwing Stones

Women are complex and contradictory mortals. They openly despise the weaknesses of their sex. When one does wrong she is most severely condemned by the others of her sex. "Horrible!" they shout in unison. Then, later on, some of those who have been loudest in their condemnation find themselves in a similar position to the one they so severely decried, save that, perhaps, they have not been found out. Morality is largely governed by circumstances. Had Ethel Clara Leneve never met Dr. Crippen she would probably be a respectable member of society to-day. Leneve was but an ordinary women whom a passion had transformed into a desperate one. Circumstances threw her in the way of the doctor, and the world knows what happened. The woman is truly to be pitied, yet we read of the spectacle of a mob of men and women jeering and hooting at her as she enters the London court house. There are, doubtless, many more wicked women at heart than this unfortunate Leneve girl walking the streets to-day and breathing God's free air, and perhaps a few worse could have been found among the crowd which clustered about the door of the court and jeered at this pale and trembling girl.

A Man and His Money

Robert Winthrop Chanler, scion of one of New York's oldest and most exclusive families, is very much in the limelight just now. Sheriff Bob, as he is familiarly known, became infatuated with the beautiful Lina Cavalieri, a woman of extremely doubtful antecedents. He forthwith decided that he had at last discovered his soul mate, although he had been married before. But Mme. Cavalieri didn't regard herself as Chanler's affinity, by a long chalk. She had played that game before and found that there was nothing in it. Nevertheless, she was not averse to becoming Mrs. Robert Winthrop Chanler—for a consideration. Sheriff Bob was set on having her, and when his entire fortune was the price at which the fair songstress appraised herself, the ex-sheriff agreed to the terms without a murmur. The prenuptial contract was signed. At the time both Cavalieri and Chanler doubtless thought that they had secured a bargain. The marriage took place. The captivating Cavalieri allowed the amorous Bob a few short months of happiness. Then she began to weary of him. At length he was positively a bore to her. Finally she became ill and went to a hospital, where, it is said, she openly spurned her Robert, who had become by this time stark broke. But she felt that she had fulfilled her part of the bargain. Chanler, as most men do in such straits, turned to his relatives. The prenuptial agreement was disclosed, and now Robert's dear relatives are fighting tooth and nail to prevent Lina Cavalieri from touching a penny of Bob's money. A pretty scrap is imminent, for Cavalieri is a fighter from way back. According to all the rules of the game which Chanler and Cavalieri played, the latter is entitled to the money and the former is a mere "squealer" when he resists her claim. Cavalieri simply did what thousands of women are doing daily, bartering their souls for the almighty dollar. And this woman, who, it is said, will shortly grace or disgrace the grand opera stage in this country, is no better than the commonest courtesan of the street. The marriage ceremony which made Cavalieri the wife of Chanler in the eyes of the world, was a sham and a mockery. It was, in a word, a mere joke, if the misuse of so sacred a thing can be termed a joke. Vows stern and sacred were taken and pledges given by a couple, one of whom, at least, knew them to be as false as false can be. The laws of God and man were utilized but for the purpose of promoting selfish ends. The world called it a marriage, but it was not a marriage in the true sense of the word.

Canada And Argentina

A bye-product of the Laurier policy is the curiously unamiable attitude which some Liberal journals find it necessary to adopt towards other countries. They are busy shouting that the Laurier Government, and the Laurier Government alone, has made Canada great, rich, happy and prosperous. The awkward thing about the argument is that during the period that the Laurier Government has been smiling on Canada, other countries have been prospering too. Has, then, the Laurier Government been working for these outsiders as well as for the children of the kingdom? Or has there been a general world-wide prosperity in which Canada has shared while the Laurier Government sat on top, smiled, and drew salaries? Perish the thought. Those outside countries simply must not be prosperous. And so it happens that it is high treason now even to suggest that other countries are doing well. It is not necessary to show pleasure in their objectionable good fortune; it is sufficient to mention it.

For example, in his speech at Guysborough Mr. Borden noted that Argentina, a country in much the same position as Canada as regards great area, virgin soil, scanty population and adaptability for raising agricultural produce, has got on just about as rapidly as Canada has, though the poor things there have not had the Laurier Government to beam upon them. Forthwith a squall of rage arose from the Laurier press. "Borden is knocking the country." Has he run down Canada? No. He simply has pointed out that another country in a similar position has done just about as well. Treason! Treason!

Alas, facts are facts. During the last dozen years the progress of Argentina has been quite as rapid as that of Canada. Her wheat production is increasing with great rapidity; twenty-five years ago she imported flour for her own consumption; whereas now she exports five or six million tons of flour, besides enormous quantities of wheat. She has an enormous live stock and dead meat trade. Her railways are growing at the rate of about 2,000 miles a year. The immigration into her plains excels that into Canada. Here are a few facts:

In 1895 the cultivated area of Argentina was 12,000,000 acres, and it now is 47,000,000 acres, of which 14,000,000 or 15,000,000 acres are devoted to wheat. Canada last year had about 9,000,000 acres in wheat.

The whole thing amounts to this. The past dozen years have been singularly favorable to countries with large areas of virgin soil, abundant natural resources and scanty population. Argentina and Canada, each in its way, is an example of the type, and each has made wonderful progress. Of the two, the Argentina has gone ahead rather more rapidly. The sensible thing for Canadians is to note their rival's progress, and still more absurd to declare that we must never mention it. The Laurier journals are led into both these absurdities by their fundamental absurdity of arguing that the Laurier Government had made the present prosperity.

RIGHT—NOT COURTESY.

The Haileyburian.

I met a friend of mine who has taken an interest in the Eucharistic congress. He told me that at the banquet, given at the Windsor, Montreal Cardinal Vannutelli opened the toasts by that to the King. This seems just and right, seeing that the King's flag gives him a freedom that he does not enjoy in the country wherein he was born, nor in other countries, the basic principle of which is Roman Catholicism. This is something in favor of the old British "rag," which spells freedom.

Telling Fortunes.

Have you a game of dominoes? If so you can have lots of fun when your friends come to see you. Shuffle the dominoes well and lay them face down on a smooth table. Tell your friends to turn the dominoes, and the following are what the points denote:

Double six denote receipt of money; will be very rich.

Six-five denotes success and pleasure.

Six-four early marriage; happiness.
Six-three affection, constancy.
Six-two industrious, economical.
Six-one twice married.
Six-blank sorrow, trouble.
Five-double very lucky.
Five-four will marry poor.
Five-three eventual wealth.
Five-two love.
Five-one engagement; invitations.

If you know these you can regulate your answers accordingly, no matter what points turn up, and much fun can be had.

Shearing Sheep.

In spring and fall sheep shearing is an important operation, and the shearer is an important individual. In England very frequently his craft runs right through the family—first the father, then the sons and then their sons. When shearing is done there it is done by specialists, but they are not confined to one family. These men take the animals, tie their legs together, throw them on their backs and soon the shears are at work. An adept shearer will take off the fleece in one smooth piece, and these pieces are rolled into neat bundles to facilitate the counting. When an accidental cut is made in the sheep's flesh lime mixed with lard is applied at once to prevent an attack by flies.

Riddles.

When is the best time to get a fresh egg at sea? When the ship lays to.

Why is a thief called a jailbird? Because he's been a robin.

How can a leopard change his spots? By going from one spot to another.

What are the most uncomfortable ships? Hardships.

Why is a watch a difficult thing to steal? Because it must be taken off its guard.

When does a farmer change the color of his horses? When he opens the field gate and turns them in to graze (grays).

The Swimming Pool.

The dim and delightful swimming pool
Is the country boy's retreat
When he's played too long or things go wrong
And he's dusty from head to feet.
It cleanses and soothes and makes him cool,
For a friend in need is the swimming pool.

I like to think of the many boys
Who have frolicked there in their day,
For by nature's rule a swimming pool
Neither changes nor passes away.
It has always been, it will always be,
A place of delight and rest and glee.

Thinking About a New Range?

If you are, it will pay you to drop into our store and have a chat before deciding on what kind it will be.

We would like to tell you a few facts about the facts that you really ought to know about—because this range has not only a reputation of many years' standing to recommend it to your attention --it is improved right up-to-date, and in its latest models embodies features that place it in a class by itself.

HAPPY THOUGHT RANGE

Stomach Blood and Liver Troubles

Much sickness starts with weak stomach, and consequent poor, impoverished blood. Nervous and pale-people lack good, rich, red blood. Their stomachs need invigorating for, after all, a man can be no stronger than his stomach. A remedy that makes the stomach strong and the liver active, makes rich red blood and overcomes and drives out disease-producing bacteria and cures a whole multitude of diseases.

Get rid of your Stomach Weakness and Liver Laziness by taking a course of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery —the great Stomach Restorative, Liver Invigorator and Blood Cleanser.

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

KIDNEY TROUBLES

Are Overcome By

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

The kidneys have a very important work to perform in preserving health. All the blood passes through them over and over again and they filter it, removing all the impurities and worn-out muscle and tissue which the blood gathers up, in microscopic particles, in its flow through the body. These impurities are then expelled through the urinary system.

When the kidneys for any reason fail to perform this function, and the impurities are left in the blood, about the most distressing series of ailments which afflict mankind follow. First there is the aching back and a feeling of weariness, and then, as conditions grow worse, comes Rheumatism, Gravel, Diabetes, Gall Stones, Inflammation of the Bladder or the dreaded Bright's Disease.

The man or woman who allows kidney trouble to develop into any of these diseases is doing himself or herself a grave injustice, particularly when a cure can be had so readily. One of the constituents of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills is a Diuretic, which strengthens and stimulates the kidneys, enabling them to do their work thoroughly and with ease. These Pills also increase the action of the bowels and the pores of the skin, which remove some of the impurities, thus lightening the work of the kidneys.

Mr. Geo. Whitney, of Buffalo, N.Y., says they worked wonders for him. He writes:

> "Your Doctor Morse's Indian Root Pills have worked wonders in my case. I suffered for six years from liver trouble and kidney ailment. If I tried one medicine I tried a dozen, but without good results. Your pills were recommended and they cured me after using four boxes."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills should be taken at the first sign of back-ache, of rheumatism, or of any difficulty in urinating.

The ...Veiled Lady...

will be yours till eternity, if you free me from the cowardly scoundrel who follows my lonely path! He must die!" Adolf caught the desperate woman in his arms in a wild embrace.

"Ah!" she said, "only when he is dead, Adolf!" The suggestive melody of her temptress voice thrilled the inner soul of the guilty lover. "Wait," she said, with her imperial air, "I will now tell you all!"

Before the splendid horses dropped their tired heads at the porte coshere, Adolf Stahrenstein had marked his man down. "Mees Isabel" had told her specious story! The noble was enraged!

"I do not know him, but I have heard of him! Such a man will certainly watch you closely. He dares not intrude here. We will go as usual to the Quartier de la Croix de Marbre,—to the resorts,—to Monaco. Show him to me! Simply indicate him! He, a man of the world, will frequent the Casino, and the balls. I cannot quarrel with him without a cause. I cannot involve you in a public scandal. If we meet him at any of these places, I will give him a chance to accost you! He may do so! If he does, —he dies! Be ruled by me, and I will rid you of this low brute! And then, then, Isabel,—you shall reign forever at Stahrenstein!"

The guilty pair separated quietly. Adolf paused before the door where Max struggled with the freezing tide of death rising close to his gallant heart. "It is working now," the Hussar grimly thought, as low moans proved the great Count's tossing agony.

Three days later Baron Adolf Stahrenstein was seated alone in the library. The house was quiet. "Mees Isabel" was seated in her queenly apartment, watching a dancing white sail rising on the far horizon.

"Oh, happy ship, to rise and dip,
With the blue crystal at your lip!"

she thought, as she gazed! Her sombre eyes lightened. "No! Not at Stahrenstein! I will seek the calm tranquil of eastern skies, where the morning star swings in heaven, an eternal lamp of love! Not in those gloomy Noric wilds! Never! There would be memories, awful memories which I could not face! We will go far away into the land where the eastern morning breaks in a splendor over the storied eastern world!" As she mused, a card was handed to the Baron, her voluntary assassin, now partner of another guilty secret) by the grave-faced Swiss. Adolf twirled it doubtfully in his hands.

MR. ALFRED BRAYTON.

"For me, Julius?" he said.

"No! Herr Baron; for the Herr Graf!"

"Inform the gentleman that Graf Max is gravely ill, and can see no one! This is positive'" said Adolf in a ringing voice. "With regrets! No one can see him for any reason whatever."

Adolf Stahrenstein gazed on the stranger striding away with springing step—the lithe, practised stride of a Virginian light infantry man. He could only see the back of the retreating visitor.

A sudden chill seized him. "Is that the man I am going to kill? This may be a stratagem! Donnerwetter! This room is cold! My teeth are chattering!" He touched the foot bell. "Bring me a Cognac, Julius; I have taken cold!"

Below Beatrice Seaton's window, screened only by a veil of gracefully falling branches, Beverly Seaton walked away, grinding his teeth. Baffled! Was it a trick? No! for a few peasants, toiling at the stone arches and copings of the great park walls, told him that the mighty lordling was going through the narrow gate, where clown and conqueror finally jostle each other, pale forgotten shades!

"By God! Even vengeance is denied me!" the heartbroken wanderer cried. "Is she hidden there?" He turned and gazed on the gloomy "Castle Dangerous." "It would be madness to force my way in! But it is his life or mine!"

At the Hotel Chauvain, he listened to the story of Horace Jenks. "I have been staying with some old friends of mine at Monaco!" Seaton easily divined that they were "Knights of the Green Cloth." Jenks told his story: "I don't know who was with her! Some German sprig of nobility, I suppose! Some convenient friend of the great Stahrenstein!" Seaton writhed, but kept his temper. "I have had them traced to the villa!" Jenks continued. "They are impregnable there! I do not care to make a public outcry here!"

"Why?" said Seaton, sharply, "does the Paris scandal follow you here?" Horace Jenks dropped his eyes. "They have shut up the club. Baptiste writes me from St. Helier's! He is safe! I shall go to Corsica in a few days. I have my baggage at Mentone, and am free there from any French pursuit. Mr. Brayton," said he, "I wish you would return me those matters I gave you in this case!" His voice trembled slightly; it was a turning point!

"I think I will keep them for the present, Mr. Jenks!" said the supposed Brayton. "I may have to act at once! You may have to fly to avoid punishment! I am free!"

"I have a right to these articles!" Jenks hotly said.

"Well! I will leave it to Inspector Walling, and the United States Ambassador! See here, Jenks!" said Brayton," you cannot face publicity now, and you know it! That will do. I will co-operate with you, but I will take the entire charge of the quest now!"

"If I can get face to face with that woman, there may be more publicity than you dream of!" said Horace Jenks, as he turned on his heel and went out into the night. "If you want me, send for me to this address!" snarled the gambler as he departed.

"I must get Orton up from Villefranche to shadow the whole affair! I cannot lose Jenks from sight; but Orton must not run against him! Pshaw! I don't fear Jenks now! The great problem is, what shall I do?" Some mystic voice in his heart whispered, "Wait!" The Fates were spinning their threads.

Horace Jenks, plunging into the vortex of the Monte Carlo games, dissipated his fierce excitement in winning and losing heaps of gold. It quieted his mind. "I have already money enough! I do not care to lose; I hardly need to win! When I am done, I will settle down in London, with a Prince Albert frock, an irreproachable umbrella, and a forty-shilling hat. I think I would make a good English club man! Single handed I can 'do up' the heavy-eyed Cockneys! Oh! If I had Baptiste there! Too dangerous!" he mused.

"Hello, old man!" said a convive, a free-lance friend, as Jenks moodily gathered up his napoleons and prepared to leave the Salle de jeu, "going to the Masked Ball?"

"Where? When?" listlessly said Jenks.

"To-morrow night, at the Casino! All the visiting nobility will be there! The gilded Paphian goddesses; and even the hoi polloi dames, who can raise a hundred francs, robe themselves decently, and behave themselves for three hours! This is Bohemia sur la mer!"

"I think I will go with you," slowly said Jenks. "I may meet 'Mees Isabel' there, and her cavalier," he thought. "It's a good idea! Any one can speak to a woman at a Masked Ball, especially here!" He sneered as he thought of the ephemeral local nobility en voyage. Alleged Russian Countesses,—Prussian Baronesses,—French Marquises, and languishing Italian "Ladies of the Court" ogled the crowd of polyglot swains on the "Lovers' Walk," while bold-eyed English beauties, graduates of the Argyle Rooms, sneered from their gaudy equipages, (with natural spite,) at the fetching miscellaneous American adventuresses, (high-voiced and over-dressed,) who were the prettiest Adamless Eves of this Paradise of Frou-Frous! At eleven o'clock, while the ball was beginning to change from a cautious promenade to a crescendo a la Bacchanale, Jenks, concealed behind the clustering palms of the corridor, scanned the arrivals of note. From his coign of vantage he noted at last the splendid equipage of Stahrenstein.

"It is the Veiled Lady!" he said, as he caught his breath, for now he knew De Brissac's story, from Baptiste. There, beneath the sombre domino, were the sweeping folds of the long white Austrian cloak. "Mees Isabel" had lost the scruples of the woman who clung in fear to Max Stahrenstein at the Paris pandemonium of pleasure. She was lancee now!

The tall, exquisitely graceful form swept by. He caught a flash of two gleaming eyes. Her burly companion, muffled in a black domino, hurried her along. He was a dark and menacing spectre.

"There is my enemy now!" the Veiled Lady hissed, under her black velvet visor. Adolf Stahrenstein turned and gazed steadily at the watchful gambler. Jenks was not in mask, and his quiet elegance did not betray the sporting man. Even "Californian" gamblers become raffine in Paris!

"Ah! Excellent!" Adolf murmured. "Now let him only dare to follow you up! It is well! I shall leave you for a little while, but I will linger within close hearing. If he will only but fall into the trap!" The lovely wanton whispered burning words to the young officer. Their hidden promise set his heart aflame.

"It is a life for a life; I am then yours forever!" And Adolf Stahrenstein staked his heritage on a worthless woman's ever-changing whim.

Beverly Seaton and the watchful Orton were not ten yards away, gazing steadfastly at the cat-like Jenks, who slowly entered the ball-room. There was a look on his face such as the leader of a "forlorn hope" might wear.

"Cornered at last!" muttered Jenks. "I will see the face behind that mask to-night!"

"Keep reasonably near me! Do not lose Jenks from sight! Don't approach me unless I raise my hand to my brow, thus!" said Seaton. His heart was beating quickly. "It is a close night! This domino is stifling! It seems as if the air was laden with poison! It is a fit night for murder!" thought Seaton, as he parted from Orton.

Higher swelled the music. Louder grew the reckless laughter. In bower and anteroom, in little nooks and dim corners, the popping of corks indicated the height of the merry war.

As Seaton marked the astonished crowd dividing, right and left, before a vision of audaciously undraped loveliness, the cool, white-fanged Tartar Prince Demidoff, just landed from his graceful yacht, the restless Aphrodite, bit his lip till it bled.

"Tiens! C'est bien la Venus masquee, et avec Adolf Stahrenstein! Vraiment, decidement,—elle doit venir en Russie! Poor old Max! He takes a long time to die! I fancy they are both impatient!" Demidoff gnashed his teeth, as he thought that they included Adolf and the recreant "Lady."

"I will watch them; while they laugh and drink and dance and make love, poor old Max lies dying alone; I must go and see him!" It was a far-away memory of the "houses of hair," for the strange Tartar chieftain had a remembrance of "broken bread and tasted salt." "It's a hard, hard world," (thought the Muscovite,) "even a millionaire Prince may lack a cup of water in his last agony!"—

To be continued.

Because the practice of conducting the exhaust steam from locomotive air pumps through the stack creates a draft that burns an unnecessary amount of coal when locomotives are not running several railroads are providing a separate exhaust for it.

CATTLE MARKETS.

United States Exchanges Generally Steady, With Trading Slow.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—London and Liverpool cables quote American cattle easy, at 13c to 15c per pound, dressed weight; refrigerator beef lower, at 10½c to 10¾c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Sept. 22.—The railways reported 190 carloads of live stock for Wednesday and Thursday, consisting of 2426 cattle, 3483 hogs, 4822 sheep and lambs, 220 calves and 8 horses.

Fat Cattle.

The bulk of the best butchers on sale sold from $5 to $5.60; 3 choice cattle of export weights brought $6.25 and four or five more were reported as selling at $6; common cattle sold from $4.25 to $5; cows, $3 to $4.75, with a few choice at $5 to $5.25; canners, $1.75 to $2.50.

Stockers and Feeders.

Trade was steady for good quality, but lightweight common quality steers were 20c to 30c per cwt. lower. Best steers, 900 to 1100 lbs., sold at $5.25 to $5.60 and $5.70; steers, 500 to 800 lbs., at $4.25 up to $5 per cwt.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a strong market all week for milkers and springers of good quality. Prices were firm at $40 to $75 each Thursday. There were three Montreal and Quebec buyers of milkers and springers, which caused the trade to be good.

Veal Calves.

Receipts moderate; prices firm at $3.50 to $7.50, with a very few new milk fed going at $8 to $8.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were heavy, especially the latter. There were 4322 sheep and lambs reported for the two days, which caused a slight break of 15c to 20c per cwt. for lambs, and had it not been for the farmers present to buy feeding lambs, prices would have gone still lower. Lambs sold during the two days at $5.90 to $6.30, and at about an average of $6 per cwt. Ewes sold at $4.50 to $4.80; rams, $3 to $3.50 per cwt.

Will Investigate Drowning.

Cobalt. Sept. 23.—The provincial police have been asked to investigate the circumstances surrounding the death of two Finlanders by drowning in Porcupine Lake last Sunday. It appears that a blacksmith named Johns, employed at the Timmins Mine, and his helper, whose name is not known, were out canoeing with two companions when a wrangle ensued. All had been drinking freely. The canoe was overturned and Johns and one of the others lost their lives.

Amazed at Our Peaches.

London, Sept. 23.—The Ontario Government's window display of peaches is the chief topic of interest on the street here, passersby having been heard to express their doubts that peaches of such size had been grown in Canada. The retailers are asking and getting for small ones 12 cents each, and for the larger ones 16 cents apiece.

Victims of Forged Checks.

St. Thomas, Sept. 23.—Several bankers and business men have been victimized during the past few days by reason of forged checks. Several arrests were made, and yesterday Harry Gaskin was committed for trial and Marshall McMillan of Aylmer, was honorably acquitted.

FRANKFORD FAIR A SUCCESS.

The Frankford Fair which was brought to a close on Friday was one of the best exhibitions ever held under the auspices of the Frankford Associations. In all departments the number of entries were far in excess of former years.

The display of horses was exceptionally fine, and prominent among the exhibitors were Messrs. H. H. Boyce, Thos. A. Mahoney, J. Hess, Thos. Mills, J. Hawkins, J. Armstrong, I. Rose, A. C. Dafoe and W. F. Melbourne.

The show of cattle was large, consisting of Holstein, Jerseys, Ayrshires, Durhams, and Herefords. Mr. F. Mallory of Sidney, showed 12 fine specimens of Holstein. Other exhibitors were R. O. Morrow and Son, E. W. Brooks, and H. K. Denyes. There was a goodly number of sheep and hogs some of them being fine specimens. Messrs. R. J. and I. R. Garbutt, Thurlow, R. O. Morrow and Sons, W. Nelson and J. Curtis, were prominent exhibitors in these classes.

The show of fruit, grain and ladies handiwork was varied and exceptionally fine.

CENTENARY.

Mr. W. H. Gordanier has returned home after a lengthy visit to friends in Detroit and Flint, Mich., also Exeter and Sarnia, Ont.

Mrs. Charles Priory and Mrs. Manley Farley spent a few days at the Toronto Exhibition.

Miss May Priory and her friend, Mr. Fred Radford, spent Friday at Frankford Fair.

Centenary Ladies' Aid will be held at the home of Mrs. George Sinfield on Wednesday, the 21st.

Threshing is about over and filling silos is now the order of the day.

Mrs. Fred Wickett and litle sons, Gordon and Arthur, have returned home after a lengthy visit with her sister and friends at Bayside.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Priory and Mr. and Mrs. Woodley, of Belleville, made a flying visit in Mr. Woodley's auto to friends in Campbellford on Sunday last.

OLD SPANISH FRAUD TRIED.

"Prisoner in Spain" Tries to "Work" A Well Known Montreal Man.

WRITES FOR AID.

"Procure Modest Fortune For Yourself and Love My Darling Daughter," Says the Writer, in Letter.

[redacted]

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—Once again an attempt is being made to work the "Spanish Prison Fraud" on Montrealers. While the game is an old one—that of writing to implore aid on behalf of some one represented as suffering in the depths of some dungeon in Spain—and while the fraud has been practiced quitely recently in other parts of Canada, it is some time since residents in this city have been selected as possible victims.

Yesterday, however, Mr. Charles M. Henderson, of 15 Shuter street, was surprised to receive the following letter, which bore a foreign postage stamp, the letter itself being written in a peculiar foreign style of handwriting.

The writer, as will be seen, claims to be a St. Petersburg banker, arrested in London, and sent to Spain to answer a charge of manslaughter. His letter is as follows:—

Madrid, 7— 9— 910.

'Dear Sir.

"Although I know you only from good references of your honesty, my sad situation compels me to reveal to you an important affair in which you can procure a modest fortune, saving at the same time that of my daughter.

"Before being imprisoned here I was established as a banker in Russia, as you will see by the enclosed article about me of many English newspapers which have published my arrest in London.

"I beseech you to help me to obtain a sum of $480,000 I have in America, and to come here to save the seizure of my baggage, paying to the registrar of the court the expense of my trial and recover my portmanteau containing a secret pocket in which I have hidden the document indispensable to recover the said sum.

"As a reward, I will give up to you the third part, viz., 160,000 dollars.

"I cannot receive your answer in the prison, but you must send a cablegram to a person of my confidence who will deliver it to me.

"Awaiting your cable to instruct you in all my secret, I am, sir,

Yours tru'y,
DEMIDOFF.

"First of all answer by cable, not by letter, as follows:

L. Escudero,
Luna g cuatdo dericha,
Madrid.
Received, Henderson.

Enclosed in the letter, as the writer stated, was a clipping alleged to be from a London newspaper reporting the arrest of a St. Petersburg banker charged with fraud in Russia and with manslaughter in Spain. He had absconded leaving a deficit of over five million roubles. It was agreed in London that the prisoner should be sent to Spain to stand his trial for manslaughter.

This forwarding of a newspaper clipping reporting the arrest of the so called prisoner is one of the usual elements of the "Spanish Prison Frauds," it being easily explained by the fact that those working the scheme have a printing press of their own and turn out what at first sight looks like genuine newspaper reports to suit the terms of their letter.

It is not likely, however, that the fraud will meet with much success in Montreal.

In the case of Mr. Charles M. Henderson, of 5 Shuter street, who was thus promised "all the secret" of the "poor prisoner," and the prospect of saving the "darling daughter," he promptly turned the letter over to The Montreal Star to be a warning lest some should actually be deceived.

WHISTLER TALES.

Some Amusing Peculiarities of the Eccentric Artist.

BARRING OUT BILL BEARERS.

He Knew the Knock of Each Collector and the Amount It Represented. London Cabbies Had Good Reason to Fight Shy of the Erratic Genius.

There was a steady stream of creditors at the King street studio in those days, says a writer in the Century. Whistler made no effort to conceal the fact that he was deeply in debt. One day as we were busily and silently working there came a loud businesslike rap at the door. Whistler listened attentively.

"Psst!" said he. "That's one and ten."

Within half an hour there was another rap, not quite so loud.

"Two and six," said Whistler. "Psst!"

"What on earth do you mean?" I asked after a time.

"One pound ten shillings; two pounds six shillings. Vulgar tradesmen with their bills, colonel. They want payment. Ah, well!" he sighed with an exaggerated air of sadness and returned to his canvas.

Then came another knock, a most gentle, insinuating rap.

"Dear me," said Whistler, "that must be all of twenty! Poor fellow, I really must do something for him! So sorry I'm not in."

I could not take the situation so placidly and seized eagerly the first opportunity of financial aid that presented itself. A rich American, sojourning in London, asked me what he could purchase and take back with him in the way of art.

"By all means get a set of Whistler's etchings. Unquestionably he will make for you a selection. I'll speak to him." I told him, and hurried back with the good news.

Whistler was delighted, and for a day worked busily, overhauling and sorting his proofs. The selection was a splendid one and called for a substantial payment. It was arranged that Whistler should meet the purchaser at a bank in Queen street the following morning and receive his check.

Most men under the circumstances would have thought of little else, but by the next morning Whistler had wholly forgotten his engagement. He had begun a new canvas, and was completely absorbed in it. For a while I expostulated in vain.

"Come, Whistler," I said finally, "you have been away from America so long that you don't appreciate the value of time to the traveler, particularly the American traveler. You must not keep the man waiting."

"Very well," said he, laying down his brush, with a sigh. "Now we'll go."

"Why we?" I replied. "I don't want to go," I protested firmly. To tell the truth, I was looking forward with a great deal of comfort to a morning all to myself.

"Oh, but you must," he said calmly, bringing my coat and hat, and presently we stood in front of the house signaling a cab.

One came up readily enough, but, after one scrutinizing look upon the cabby's part, drove swiftly by; another went through the same strange proceedings. I looked questioningly at Whistler—this odd circumstance had happened before we were together—but Whistler was calmly signaling. At length a cabby took us in.

Whistler always carried as a walking stick a long, slender wand, a sort of a mahlstick, nearly three-quarters of his own height. We were no sooner seated than he began poking his stick at the horse. The animal reared, plunged wildly and started down the street at a breakneck gallop, while the astonished cabby swore freely and tugged desperately at the reins. Whistler looked calmly ahead and kept poking.

Butcher boys and grocer boys made wild leaps for safety; outraged cabbies whipped their horses out of the way just in time; burly draymen bawled curses after us, and still we went merrily on. Little wonder, thought I, in the midst of my amazement and resentment, that Whistler never gets the same cab twice.

Suddenly he began waving his cane and shouting "Whoa!" He took the astonished cabby severely to task for driving so fast upon the public highway and ordered him back to a corner we had just passed.

Here a greengrocer's shop, with its orderly and colorful array of fruits and vegetables, had caught Whistler's eye as we whirled by. He surveyed it critically now from two different positions, the cabby merely obeying his orders, under the belief, I presume, that it was policy to humor a lunatic.

"Isn't it beautiful!" exclaimed Whistler. He pointed his long cane at one corner. "I believe I'll have that crate of oranges moved over there—against that background of green. Yes, that's better," he added contentedly.

We drove on to the bank, where we found the American pacing up and down in no pleasant frame of mind; but Whistler soon had him pacified, and we left him waving and smiling adieus at us.

The incident at the greengrocer's shop reads like an arrant affectation. It was not, however. Whistler, as usual, was merely most natural. The following morning he posted his easel at the corner and painted the shop that pleased him.

A Hermit's Cave.

Close to the city of Sydney, New South Wales, with a tram terminus almost at its door, yet hidden away on the rocky shore of one of the bays of the farfamed harbor, is a cave dwelling. Here for ten years or more a man of retiring and literary disposition has made his home in a cave. In the center is a draped bed with mosquito curtains. Photographs and colored prints adorn the walls and table. Visitors, of whom there are rather too many, since the recent advent of the trams, to please the hermit, are always struck with the scrupulous cleanliness of everything in this unique dwelling place.—Strand Magazine.

Sior, Mair and Iorwerth.

Of what realm should you guess King Sior, Queen Mair and Prince Iorwerth are the rulers present and to be? No, not Abyssinia, nor Cambodia, nor yet one of the Balkan states. Their chief palaces are Buckingham and Windsor, and in certain parts of their dominions they are known as King George, Queen Mary and Prince Edward. But to their loyal Welsh subjects they are Sior and Mair and Iorwerth.—Youth's Companion.

A Discarded Lover's Revenge.

Here's a brand new, made in Switzerland form of revenge for discarded lovers. A young couple at Davos were to have been married, but the girl jilted her lover because he shaved off his little beard. The jilted man during the night pasted all the love letters he had received from his fiancee on the walls of her home. "Heartless girl, I return you your letters," was inscribed in large type above the correspondence.

UNFROCKED, HE RECLAIMS WIFE.

Alphonse Consolazio Said to Have Failed to Get Audience At Vatican.

WRITES HIS WIFE.

Professes His Love for Young Woman and Beseeches Her to Return to Him—Wife Seeks Annulment of Marriage.

[redacted]

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 22.—It was learned to-day upon good authority that Alphonse M. Consolazio, the young Italian priest who gave up his calling to marry Miss Katherine Johann, and who later left his young bride to go to Italy to appear before the Pope and take whatever punishment awaited him, has now sent a letter to his young wife asking her to return to him. It appears that the unfrocked priest was not successful in his attempt to gain an audience with the Pope. He then wrote his young wife, professing his love for her and beseeching her to return.

In his letter he offers a barrel of wine and some statuary to the girl's father.

Mr. Franz Johann, the girl's father, intimated that young Consolazio would receive a reception, but not the kind he desired, should be try to see his wife. "I'll kick him out of town if he comes," said Mr. Johann. Mrs. Consolazio has appealed to the Chancery Court for an annulment of the marriage.

Alphonse Consolazio met Miss Johann in Italy two years ago. On May 24 they were married in Atlantic City. The priest subsequently was unfrocked. From the first meeting young Consolazio fell a victim to his love for the beautiful young girl, but he fought against this as best he could on account of the obligations thrust upon him when he was ordained a priest.

The young priest was sent to America to study the conditions of the Italians here and was attached to the Trenton diocese, where he again met the young woman who later became his wife. Miss Johann at this time was an active worker in St. Mary's Cathedral parish.

HE PRODUCED MILLIONS.

Alexander Gibson of Marysville, N.B., Father of Many Industries.

The most interesting figure in the industrial life of New Brunswick is Alexander Gibson, who has just attained his ninetieth birthday, and is still able to walk about the streets of the town of Marysville, of which he was the founder.

Many years ago, Mr. Gibson, after having arisen from the position of a young day laborer in a sawmill to that of the owner of a mill, disposed of the latter property and removed to the site of the present town of Marysville, on the Nashwaak River. The Nashwaak is a tributary of the St. John, which it enters near Fredericton. There was an abandoned mill on the property when Mr. Gibson began operation.s He bought a large area of timber land, cleared the stream and constructed driving dams, built a new mill and brick tenement houses for workmen; built a large church and presented it to the Methodist denomination; and, in short, established a thriving town on the site of the old abandoned sawmill. He also operated a sawmill at Blackville, on the Miramichi, assisted in building a line of railway to Woodstock in one direction, and to Cratham in another, and became a railway magnate as well as "the lumber king" of New Brunswick.

Mr. Gibson himself took no part in public life, but one of his sons was for a term a member of the Parliament of Canada.

In Mr. Gibson's later years he met with business reverses, and the immense property went into the hands of a company in which he had a large interest. Recently he retired, and the property of the company, which became involved in legal difficulties, will be sold to satisfy the claims of creditors in Canada and England. The cotton mill has already been purchased by the Canadian Colored Cotton Co. Both sawmills and cotton mills continue to be operated, and Marysville is still a thriving town—a monument to the foresight and energy of a man who was compelled to earn his own living from his boyhood days, and who produced a property that is to-day worth some millions of dollars.

History of the Queen's Own.

The Queen's Own, now at Aldershot, dates back to April, 1860, when an order was issued uniting a rifle company at Barrie, another at Whitby and four in Toronto into one battalion. During the stirring days of the Trent affair, the outside companies were dropped, and the organization became a purely city regiment of ten companies. Its first active service was in 1864; its second, in 1866, when it took part in the battle of Limeridge in the Niagara Peninsula. Some of its members served in the composite regiment under Col. (now Lord) Wolseley with the Red River Expedition of 1870. It also was present, under Col. Otter, in the Western trouble of 1885, notably at Cut Knife Creek. It has also been called upon for active service in connection with several provincial industrial disturbances. Lord Roberts is its honorary colonel, and Gen. Otter was once its commanding officer. Many of the past and present officers of the militia have graduated from its ranks.

One of the most unique features of the regiment is the fact that every officer, past or present, has risen from the ranks. Every private is therefore a potential colonel, and it has often occurred that a private in the ranks had in civilian life a higher social status than his captain or other superior officer. This explains why so many prominent officers of the militia saw their first service in this unique corps. It also explains why the regiment is able to take expensive trips abroad without assistance from the Government. One trip to New York, lasting three or four days, cost the regiment over ten thousand dollars. The expenses of the present trip to Aldershot, which will require seven weeks, will be borne mainly by Sir Henry Pellatt himself.

The Unblessed Meek.

Bishop Farthing of Montreal is a man of striking and aggressive personality. In the old days, when he was rector of a church in the diocese of Huron, he showed on more than one occasion that he was not one of those clergymen who believe in letting sleeping dogs lie. He never took a passive attitude for the sake of peace when he felt that he ought to take action in any matter, and on more than one occasion he displayed his disapproval of men who were inclined to be perfectly satisfied so long as Sunday came round once every seven days and thus gave them a chance to air their eloquence.

Several years ago, Canon Farthing was visiting in Toronto during the meeting of the Synod, and on that occasion he took the opportunity to express his disapproval of the passive type of man. He described how they gave the whole church a reputation which did not fit with its claim to being militant, and told a story to illustrate his point.

He said a certain Anglican rector discovered that the district in which he labored contained a man who deserved to be brought to book for a series of offences against the community. He was a bold bully in the locality, because there had been no one to bring him to book, so the clergyman started things moving. When the man went to his lawyer, the legal gentleman asked how the prosecutions were started, and the man told him.

"I am surprised to hear that," said the lawyer, "I always had a great respect for Anglican clergymen, as I thought they never took the trouble to interfere with anything."

Canada on the Water.

Retaining its position of tenth place in the aggregate of the world's shipping, the Dominion of Canada had on its register books at the end of last year, 7,768 vessels measuring 718,333 tons, an increase of 166 vessels and 16,229 tons as compared with the corresponding year. The number of steamers on the register books on the same date was 3,229, with a gross tonnage of 513,962. Assuming the average value to be $30 per the aggregate value of net registered tonnage would be $21,556,590.

The number of new vessels built and registered during the year was 327, measuring 25,306 tons net. Estimating the value of new tonnage at $45 per ton gives a total of $1,138,770 for new vessels. During the year 246 vessels were removed from the register books.

It is estimated that 36,430 men and boys were employed on ships registered in Canada during the year.

Ontario leads in the number of vessels, with Nova Scotia a close second. The former has 2,061 with tonnage of 208,563 and the latter 2,058 with 160,286 tonnage.

Make a Nickel Anyway.

In a drug store not a thousand miles from here the apprentice was filling his first prescription, and when he had handed it to the lady he told her it was a dollar and ten cents. She paid the dollar and ten, and after she had gone he informed the proprietor that the dollar was counterfeit. The proprietor turned in his chair and said: "Well, how about the ten cents—is that good money?" The young man answered in the affirmative. "Oh, well," the proprietor replied, "that's not so bad—we still make a nickel."—Hepworth Progress.

Valuable Old Wreck Located.

The wreck of the vessel Brunswick, which is said to contain $400,000 worth of walnut and oak lumber in a good state of preservation, has been located in Lake Erie some distance from Wheatley, Ont. The Brunswick was lost about 50 years ago in a storm on the lake when the captain and three of his crew made their escape by swimming to shore.

Millionaire Detroit Man Shot Girl, Hanged Himself

B. W. Yates, Said to Be an Old Brantford Boy, With Toronto and Montreal Relatives, Suicides in Cleveland--Brother Says It Could Not Be He--Had Many Interests.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 23.—A man who has been almost positively identified as B. W. Yates, a prosperous business man of Detroit, hanged himself in the "bull pen" of the County Jail to-day within two hours after shooting his companion, Mrs. Fred Singer, of Cleveland, during a quarrel in White's roadhouse, near the western outskirts of the city.

The clothes worn by the suicide were made by J. Kirschbaum, a Detroit tailor, who described them so accurately over the long distance telephone that the police believe there is no longer any doubt as to his identity

Mrs. Singer, who recently separated from her husband, is in a critical condition at Lakewood Hospital. The woman was shot once through the back and twice in the legs.

The fatal quarrel marked the end of an all-night "joy ride." About three o'clock this morning the couple drove up to Silverthorn's roadhouse in Lakewood. An hour later Officer Timmerman saw the woman run across the street, followed by Yates, who seemed desperate in his efforts to overtake her. The woman had hardly reached the telephone booth in White's tavern, when Yates dragged her to the middle of the floor and demanded that she return to Silverthorn's. Hot words followed, and Eddie Schneider, the waiter, dropped under the table as Yates drew a revolver. Five shots were fired, and when Officer Timmerman entered the woman was crawling across the floor, leaving a trail of blood. Yates was calmly ejecting the shells from his revolver.

An automobile was summoned and the woman carried to the hospital, while Yates was taken to the county jail, and while a cell was being prepared he was placed in the "bull pen." When the officers returned Yates' body was found hanging by a linen handkerchief attached to a rod near the ceiling.

The initials "B. W. Y." on his haberdashery and the trademark of the tailor gave the first clue to his identity. He was about fifty-five years of age.

According to Attorney Frank Billman, who was called to Mrs. Singer's bedside, the woman had been visiting in Detroit since her separation from her husband, until about three weeks ago. Yates, it is said, followed her here three days ago.

"Out of the City.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 22.— At the home of B. W. Yates, chairman of the Business Men's Publishing Company, in the fashionable Alexandrine Avenue section, this afternoon, it was stated that "Mr. Yates was out of the city."

Yates was about 48 years of age, and very wealthy. He was one of the principal stockholders and chairman of the Board of the Business Men's Publishing Company, and owner and manager of the Point Aux Barques Hotel. He has lived at the Hotel during the summer. He was born in Brantford, Ont.

To Trusting Heart He Owes His Misfortune

Mme Cavalieri Determined to Fight All Court Actions That May Be Taken By Robert Winthrop Chanler's First Wife.

HIS DREAM SHATTERED.

"Bob thought he had realized the dream of his life when he married Lina Cavalieri," said Mr. Wm. Astor Chanler, a brother of Robert Winthrop Chanler. "There was not a happier man on earth; but his happiness did not last long. Bob was always of a romantic, dreaming nature. He never had to struggle for a living and he did not appreciate the fact that Cavalieri was essentially a woman of the world—one who grew wealthy through her own beauty. His dream was shattered, but my brother is so much a man of his word that he would make no effort himself to have the marriage contract annulled."

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—That Lina Cavalieri will have a bitter legal fight to secure absolute possession of the fortune signed over to her by Robert Winthrop Chanler upon the eve of their marriage was made evident today when the law firm of Alexander, Watriss & Polk began preparations to secure an injunction restraining the song-bird wife of Chanler from securing any part of the Astor-Chanler wealth until the legality of the famous ante-nuptial contract is tested.

According to the preparations made by counsel for the first Mrs. Chanler, a receiver will be asked in addition to a writ of injunction.

This follows the filing of the suit late yesterday in the case of Mrs. Julia Chanler, in which it is alleged that "Bob" Chanler signed the famous pre-nuptial agreement when "in a suggestive frame of mind," and that his fortune was taken away from him by fraud and false pretences.

The fight upon the marriage contract promises to be remarkable for many unique features. Mme. Cavalieri-Chanler has instructed her New York attorneys, King and Osbern, to contest every step of the first Mrs. Chanlers suit. Unless a compromise is made, which has looked very doubtful all along, the romantic marriage of Chanler to the singer will result in a queer international legal complication, bringing up unique points of law.

Mrs. Chanler asks the court to enjoin Cavalieri from disposing of any of the properties given by her husband, and petitions a receiver to take charge of the chattels in question until the suit is terminated. Mrs. Chanler's alimony and the annuities of her two children out of the Chanler fortune are not secured, and she alleges in her petition that the pre-nuptial agreement compromised these funds.

The first Mrs. Chanler was married to Robert Winthrop Chanler in London on April 12, 1893. They were divorced in the civil court of the first instance of the Department of the Seine in Paris in 1907. Two children were born, Dorothy, aged five, and Julia, aged 12. Chanler agreed to pay his wife $10,000 a year alimony and $5,000 apiece to each of his children. The purpose of the first wife's entry into the case is to hold him to these obligations.

WHAT OF TOMORROW?

Toronto Mail and Empire.

The tragedy near Havelock which resulted in the death of Mrs. Delaine and the arrest of her husband on a charge of murder should again press home the duty of a people to the future generations.

The police are in possession of certain unmentionable information that will be made public at the inquest on Friday, and which will have an important bearing on clearing up the story of the death of Mrs. Delaine.

What the public do know is that Delaine and his wife were not mentally robust. The prisoner has been described locally as "a little queer."

Yet, this unfortunate pair have given to the care of this generation two innocent children, and it will be a marvel of nature if they do not inherit the characteristics of their parents.

For the sake of the normal children who in the years to come must protect themselves against criminal degeneracy and insanity. Governments should render impossible marriage between people who are mentally and physically unfit. Many of the evils from which society suffers it brings upon its own head. To-day the officers of the law are dealing with Delaine. What does experience show they will be dealing with to-morrow?

The London Teachers' Association, with a membership of 16,500, arranged for a trip to Canada during the summer vacation this year. The party visited Quebec, Montreal, MacDonald College, St. Anne de Bellevue, Ottawa, Algonquin National Park, Muskoka Lakes, Toronto, Niagara Falls, and returned through the Thousand Islands and St. Lawrence Rapids to Montreal. In the September number of the "London Teacher" an account of the trip is given. The originator, Mr. Thos. Gautrey, has written to the European Traffic Manager of the Grand Trunk System, through whom the trip was arranged, expressing gratification at the admirable way in which all the arrangements were carried out, and intimating that the party was most enthusiastic, and that the trip, which covered the most attractive portions of Quebec and Ontario, will certainly be repeated next year.

A Record Breaker.

Guelph, Sept. 23.—The Guelph Central Fair, with a list of prizes amounting to nearly $5,000, and with over 7,000 exhibits, closed last night. Never in the 39 years' existence of the Guelph and Centre Wellington Agricultural Society has the fair been such a decided success. In all the departments the exhibits were so crowded that the management will not attempt to hold the fair another year unless the city assists them in the erection of a complete new set of buildings and stables about twice the size of the present ones.

The outstanding feature of the show was the poultry department, which contained about 1,500 entries. Some from Quebec were amongst the many exhibitors.

Cause of His Delay.

John J. Vertrees, who defended the secretary of the interior in the congressional investigation of the Ballinger-Pinchot row, was at one time chairman of the state Democratic committee of Tennessee. During his incumbency of this office, the report came to him one election day that a ballot box in a certain precinct was being stuffed in an open and disgraceful manner. Mr. Vertrees immediately called in one of his lieutenants.

"Dick," he said, "the ballot box in blank precinct is being stuffed, according to reports I have just received. We want no such scandal in our party. Go and investigate the situation."

Dick, who was an ardent Democrat, just as Vertrees was, remained away for three hours. So long and inexplainable was his absence that his superior sent for him.

"What's the matter, Dick?" asked Vertrees. "What kept you so long?"

"Well, Mr. Vertrees," said Dick triumphantly, "is was so easy I had to stick in twenty-six myself."—Popular Magazine.

"Discharged."—Houston Post.

Sale of Gem Fruit Jars

Increased sale of the Schram Automatic Sealer has materially lessened the sale of the old style Gem Jar.

We do not believe in cutting prices, on a staple article, simply to be the cheapest place in town, thereby covering the standard and value for that article, making it an unprofitable line for any merchant to handle.

To secure trade some have taken this means of winning it. Our prices on Jars have remained the same as advertised at the beginning of the season. We do not care however to carry these Jars over until next season, which will be the result, if we continue to ask the regular prices, while others are selling them at cut rate prices.

We have decided therefor to clear Gem Jars at the following prices:

Pints 55c doz. Qts. 65c doz. Half Gal. 75c doz.

Tin top jellie tumblers 25c doz

Large size screw tops, 40c doz.

The Manifestations Of Eye-Strain

Continued.

Nausea and vomiting have already been mentioned in connection with ocular headache; they may exist without headache and apart from diplopia and vertigo, and may be due to eye-strain. Their presence is explained by the intimate association of the fifth with the vagus.

Nerve Waste; Nerve Exhaustion; Neurasthenia.

Brain-Fag.—This is a manifestation of eye-strain that is as common as it is subtle. Subtle it must be, as every possible cause has been cited as the origin of the various groups of symptoms which are exhibited, except the eyes. It has not been sufficiently recognized that in a large majority of these cases called neurasthenia, the real trouble is a constant "nerve-leakage" or nerve waste, and in a large number of cases eye-strain is the cause.

Marysville Victim Was Deaf and Dumb.

Remains of Man Found Dead Beside Track Brought To This City--Papers Found on Body Indicate That Victim Was a Mute--Had Travelled Extensively in Western Canada.

The remains of the man which were found yesterday morning beside the Grand Trunk Railway Track near Marysville were last evening brought to this city to be prepared for burial. From papers found upon the body it is thought that his name was A. V. Royce, but it is difficult to ascertain where his home is, if indeed he really had any particular abiding place. He evidently travelled through British Columbia, Manitoba and Ontario. It was also apparent that he was either a mute or was posing as one to obtain a livelihood. A number of small blank pads of paper were found in the pockets, also slips of papers containing notes he had written and replies he had received from those he had in this manner conversed with. Upon one of the sheets of paper was the following:

> A MUTE'S APPEAL.
> Could you kindly help me by giving me some thing toward paying for a peddlers outfit with which I can earn a living. Anything you may feel inclined to give me will be greatly appreciated.
> Kindly write on the pad as I can not hear or speak.

That the man had been in several places was ascertained by notes he had written bearing the names of such places as Victoria, B. C., Winnipeg Man., Langdon, Alta., and Sudbury, Ont. Upon a card was written the following:

"My compliments to the C. P. R. thanking them for a free ride from Winnipeg to Sudbury. I. O. U. ...
A. V. ROYCE

A receipt was found for 40c. for articles purchased from a firm named Marshall and Harper of Langdon, Alta. The man had also been at Port Arthur and other places in the northern part of Ontario.

It is not known exactly how the unfortunate man came to his death but it is thought that he was walking upon the track during the night and was not aware of an approaching train. He was evidently instantly killed, his head being crushed in. Judging from appearances the man was about 35 years of age.

Dr. Moore, coroner of Shannonville, viewed the remains and after hearing the statements of those who found the body deemed an inquest unnecessary.

ORGANIZING BOY SCOUTS.

The meeting called for last night to deal with the Boy Scout movement was very well attended. Quite a few of the boys were there and also several gentlemen who are interested in the welfare of boys. It was expected that a man from the Toronto Scout Council would be present to speak but this was impossible just at this time. Mr. Sovereign, the Y. M. C. A. Physical Director, took charge of the meeting and explained the movement and what it meant to the boy, the city and the community.

During the evening, Rev. Mr. Hubly gave a little talk on a Boys' Club he had been instrumental in starting in Moncton about twenty years ago, and in closing said that although it would not be so easy now, as it was then on account of more temptations, etc still he would look forward and with each boy helping the cause would be sure to go ahead.

The following men were elected to form a local committee: Mr. Marsh Mr. A. Steele, Mr. Ketcheson, Mr Hutchinson, Rev. Mr. Hubly, Mr Hess, Mr. Snead, Col. Ponton, Mr Sovereign, Chief Newton, Mr. Barragar.

It was moved by Mr. Steel, seconded by Mr. Ketcheson, that Mr. Hutchinson be appointed Secretary.

Carried.

Moved by Mr. Marsh, seconded by Mr. Steel, that Rev. Mr. Hubly be appointed Chaplain.

Carried.

The following will organize patrols Bridge St. Church Sunday School Class, The Anti Cigarette Club, Y. M C. A. There was also some correspondence from Canifton and a patrol will likely be formed at that point.

Any other clubs wishing to form a patrol are requested to write the Secretary. The meeting was brought to a close by prayer.

RAY TOOK PARIS GREEN.

At the village of Tweed yesterday before Dr. Farrell, coroner, an inquest was held into the death of John Ray, whose body was found in a manger of a stable at Tweed on Sunday last. From the evidence adduced at inquest it was learned that the body was quite warm when found and could not possibly have been in that place over an hour as parties had been searching there shortly before Diligent search had been made for the victim in the thickets not far from his home but he had been successful in keeping out of sight of any one.

During the search it had been found that some paris green had been taken from where it had been kept and it was feared that Ray would use it to end his life. Doctors Tuttle and Mather who made a post mortem examination testified that paris green was found in the stomach.

The jury returned a verdict that death resulted from his own hand whilst in a state of mental aberration

Mr. Anderson, County Attorney, was present at the inquest on behalf of the Crown.

ALBERTA'S GREAT NORTHLAND RICH.

Encouraging Reports Sent Down as to Fruitfulness of Peace River District.

GOOD CROPS THERE.

Mr. A. W. Ponton, Formerly of Belleville, Returns From Sojourn in North Country and Speaks Enthusiastically About it.

(Medicine Hat News.)

Grourd, Alta., Sept. 10. — Mr. P. Tomkins, Dominion Land Agent, gives the number of homestead entries for the Grand Prairie District for the month of August as 33 homestead entries and 13 scrips. Since the 15th of last month 30 families and heads of families have passed through the place en route to Grand Prairie and Upper Peace River points with a view to settlement. Harvesting throughout this district is about completed, notwithstanding the broken weather of the past two weeks. A conservative estimate of the yield is given as 40,000 bushels of oats; other grains including wheat, 20,000 bushels; mostly all grain being a good sample. The frosts of last month not having done much damage as all grains were well advanced before the advent of the frost. Mr. A. W. Ponton, D.L.S., who has been engaged during the past two seasons extending the fifth meridian northwards towards Peace River arrived here from Fort Vermillion on the lower Peace en route for Edmonton. Speaking of the crops in the Vermillion districts Mr. Ponton said the frost of last month did some considerable damage and therefore the yield of grain will not be up to expectations of the Government experimental farms. Mr. Ponton said that the crops of fall samples are magnificent. He ascribes this to up-to-date farming methods and seeding as compared with the older methods used generally by the native farmers of the district. Mr. Ponton's party left Vermillion to come across country to Athabasca Landing about the 15th August. Speaking of the country between Athabasca Landing and Vermilion, Mr. Ponton said that there are thousands of acres of good land throughout that scope of country and that the greater portion of what has been termed muskeg is not muskeg by any means but simply a mossy growth formed on top of the natural drainage of the country by beaver work. Mr. Ponton further stated that little difficluty would be experienced in a winter road through from Athabasca Landing to Vermillion, which would mean that the trip could be made between these points in from 12 to 13 days. It is Mr. Ponton's intention, should he resume work on the Peace River next season, to move in his supplies by this cross country route this winter. (Mr. Ponton is a former Belleville boy.

LACROSSE.

The fight against Pat Powers again occupying the president's chair of the Eastern League seems to be waxing more serious than at any time before, but his disappointment at being ousted, if he be, should be somewhat assuaged by the fact that it is the intention to have him inaugurated as the new Father of Lacrosse.

It is unofficially announced that some of the committee appointed to revise the constitution of the National Lacrosse Union have decided to have the Eastern League baseball rules, which are mostly Mr. Powers' own work, adapted to lacrosse as much as possible, and present them to the lacrosse convention as an entirely original set of rules for lacrosse—a thing which could be easily done, as lacrosse followers are not very familiar with any but the playing rules of baseball.

The Montreal Star some time ago, referring to the possibility of lacrosse affairs, through the neglect and carelessness of those in charge, drifting to a situation like the one in which Canada's national game now finds itself, jokingly suggested that as a last resort a leaf might be taken out of Mr. Powers' baseball book of rules. That this suggestion has been taken up in all seriousness shows how perilous the lacrosse situation has become, and how weak and helpless those in charge of it feel in regard to coping with it on national lines.

Mr. Powers' adapted baseball rules are to be submitted officially to a committee, consisting of Messrs. W. E. Findlay, president of Montreal; Jakey McPhee, president of Cornwall; E. C. St. Pere, of Ottawa; and Fred Thompson, secretary of the Toronto club, on Saturday, October 8th.

THE RING

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22.—The atmosphere is clearing and we are beginning to get an inkling as to who is likely to be Jack Johnson's next opponent. That is, if he is going to indulge in the luxury of a next opponent.

The "novice" and "unknown" agitation has subsided, as it was sure to do when the hysteria which followed the downfall of the "hope of the white race" passed away.

The chances are we will never hear of Myles McLeod or other embryo world beaters again; the Australian invasion, as represented by one Bill Lang, has proved a worse fizzle than the Spanish Armada of old, and as possible opponents for Johnson. Al Kaufman and Sam Langford stand forth in all their nakedness.

Each of these men has added to his reputation since the affair at Reno.

Kaufman has shouldered Australian Lang out of the running for the championship stakes and Langford has killed two birds with one stone. He has disposed of his rival Joe Jeanette and has silenced Jack Johnson, whose monotonous croak for a year, "go and lick Joe Jeanette, Mr. Sam Langford, and then I'll attend to you."

The way Langford went for Jeanette is testimony in a measure that Sam has fooled valuable time away in another short route bout.

In this instance he was impelled by a double motive. He had to work out of the bog in which his recent fiasco with Kaufman left him, and he had to squelch both Jeanette and Johnson at one fell swoop. He did nobly.

Langford is in a good position now to plague Johnson for a championship match. There being no Mr. Jeanette, Johnson may say, "Go and lick Kaufman, and then I'll meet you."

I'll be bound Sam will not be averse to a tussle with big Al, and at the same time I disclaim all intention of throwing out a hint to the effect that I think Langford will beat Kaufman.

All this talk of Langford being afraid of Kaufman is bosh. I do not know the real cause of the collapse of the Langford-Kaulman bout in Philadelphia, and for that reason I don't believe the real reason will ever see the light of newspaper publication. Woodman keeps saying that there is something yet untold to be divulged later, but the chances are one in a thousand that Langford's manager will ever unbosom himself. It will be a safer way to make Langford extend himself fully for a while, and thus divert the attention of the public from that Philadelphia incident.

As to why I think Langford is not afraid of Kaufman when all other things are equal: The pair were matched to box in San Francisco last June, and there was no question at that time as to both men having paid strict attention to training. Kaufman was out in Johnson's camp at Seal Rock, and Langford was in his old quarters at Millett's.

Johnson and Langford were slangwhanging each other at that time and Johnson gave out in an interview that he would back Kaufman in the fight that was to be for a couple of thousand dollars. Directly the proposition appeared in print, Woodman made tracks for the Examiner office with $2,000 of Langford's money in his pockets. He let it be known through the sporting columns of the daily papers that he was ready at any time to meet Johnson and make the bet.

"Mind, you, too," said Woodman, "every dollar of this money belongs to Sam Langford.

Johnson didn't put in an appearance and gave no indication that his faith in Kaufman's fighting abilities were as strong as he wished to have it appear.

The Kaufman-Langford fight was prevented by the authorities, opposition to it having arisen when Governor Gillett declaring that the Johnson-Jeffries bout couldn't take place in California. June isn't very far back, however, and I relate the incident simply to show that Langford is not afraid of the consequences of a go with Al Kaufman. If he were he would not be so ready to bet $2,000 of his own money on himself.

As matters stand, it almost looks as though Kaufman and Langford should fight it out for the privilege of boxing Johnson. Unless Langford takes a firm stand in the case he is likely to be snowed under, as the writing on the wall plainly indicates that the way is being paved for an affair between Kaufman and Johnson. Not the least significant circumstance is that Jack Johnson is continually ringing Kaufman's praises as a long distance fighter. Judging by the way Jack praises Kaufman and belittles Langford, one might think that Langford is the man Johnson would prefer to meet.

But don't you believe it.

ATHLETICS.

The fact that the N.Y.A.C. hold their annual handicaps on the same day will mean that several famous athletes will not be present at the Canadian championship meet at the M.A.A.A. grounds at Montreal on Saturday. The programme will be a good one, however, and will show the most representative gathering of track athletes ever assembled in Canada.

The peace which now reigns has enabled the best men in every district to enter their names, and many towns which have never before sent representatives to a championship meet will contribute their best.

The hundred yards is the best filled event, no less than 18 entries having been received. Rosenberger and Cloughen will run for the Irish-Americans, who are sending a strong team. Bobby Kerr, the Hamilton sprinter and Olympic man, is entered also; while Frank Lukeman will be among the Montreal representatives.

The other events are all well filled, except the walking event, in which Gals, of Montreal, will be the only man to oppose Geo. Goulding, of Toronto, the Canadian champion, who recently defeated Webb, the British title holder. Bill Happenny and Archibald, of Toronto, should put up a good contest in the pole vault, and in the weight events, Flanagan, of the Irish A. C., should come out a winner, although there is a strong field against him.

RUNNING.

Now that Fred Cameron, the grand little Nova Scotian runner, has decided to make the plunge into professionalism the usual crop of weird and wonderful stories concerning his abilities are coming to the front. The New York World springs the most recent in telling how Cameron cleaned up Perkins, of Toronto, in a ten-mile affair, Perkins quitting in the fourth mile. "Cameron," says the World, "was completing the race at his leisure, being paced occasionally by local runners. George Blanche, one of the fastest sprinters in the Maritime Provinces, undertook to run the last lap with Cameron. Blanche is at his best in the 100 yard dash. Cameron put on such a burst of speed that even at Blanche's favorite distance Cameron defeated him and that after he had already travelled ten miles, while Blanche was entirely fresh."

The World's little yarn has a rather starry flavor and conjures up visions of that "ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE" 8 2-5 for 100 yards on snowshoes. Blanche—who isn't one of the fastest sprinters in the Maritime Provinces, but only an eleven second man in the hundred at his best, could probably lick Cameron any time in the race at that distance, before or after a ten mile jaunt. The runners who better eleven seconds for the last hundred yards of a ten-mile race are considerably scarcer than that rara avis, a hen's eye-tooth.

And speaking of Cameron's departure from the amateur ranks, it seems a bit ill-timed. Just after he had captured the Boston Marathon grind, defeating the top-notch runners of the continent, Cameron might have made a pile of easy money by joining the pros while he was in the public eye. But with the professional running game fever abating just as rapidly as it sprang into public favor, it looks as if he had chosen a very poor time, from the monetary standpoint if no other, in deserting the amateur ranks. And with Cameron among the professionals, Canada loses one big chance of sending across another winner in the Marathon at the next Olympic games, to win which was once on a time the height of the Bluenose runner's ambition. But the call of the lucre was too strong for Cameron.

Perhaps he caught the professional fever while on one of those barnstorming trips with the simon pures of Toronto, Boston, etc.

With Freddie Cameron in the professional ranks, to all intents and purposes, salaried ball players and pro. nines figuring largely on the diamond, and professional hockey occupying a big place in athletic discussions that have been aroused by the first touch of frosty weather, it looks as if the Maritime Provinces were deserting the good old amateurism which waged so merrily down east the last few years. As a matter of principle, if nothing else, it is better so, for the spectacle of the old days, when the travelling hockey players freely offered their services to the highest bidders, played under assumed names, jumped from one league to another, toured the country on barn-storming trips, and all under the guise of amateurism, was a farcical exhibition of the first water. Just how long professionalism will prove a paying business in the Lower Provinces is another question. The limited population of the Lower Canadian cities will render it difficult for the various managements to land sufficient gate receipts to reimburse the players, and the path of the promoters during the coming winter may be strewn with anything but roses.

Abbie Woods, Montreal's famous runner, arrived in Amherst yesterday, and he and Fred Cameron will run a ten-mile race on the Ramblers' grounds on Saturday afternoon at 3.45 o'clock. Much interest is being taken in this race over the whole Maritime Provinces and excursion trains will be run to Amherst from St. John, Halifax and other outside points. Outside of the professional race between Holmer and Wood in Halifax a year ago, this is the first professional race ever held in the Maritime Provinces. Cameron's backers are convinced that he will defeat Wood in a fairly easy manner, although on a ten-mile track Cameron's achievements have not yet measured up to the records established by his Montreal opponent.

BASEBALL

A Washington fan is anxious to reward Walter Johnson, the Idaho speed marvel of the Senators, with a purse of $500 for his exceptional feat of breaking the world's strike-out record, which he is bound to do unless he breaks his mighty pitching arm before the season's end. The enthusiast will contribute half of the purse if any individual or group of individuals will contribute a like sum.

From present indications the Athletics will have more money wagered on their chances against the Cubs in the world's series than did the Tigers in any of their three attempts to win the coveted title. Sentiment, however, will figure a great deal in the wagers made on the Philadelphians. Superstitious betters contend that the National League might win three times in a row, but they cannot wrench a fourth consecutive victory from the Americans on the "law" of superstition.

Charley Ebbets is the centre of another baseball muddle. He refuses to accept Harry Smith, the former Dove catcher, at the waiver price—or at any price, for that matter. The Doves recently asked for waivers on Smith, and Manager Dahlen refused to waive. When Smith was finally turned over to him Dahlen decided that he did not want him. President Lynch says that the Brooklyn magnate must accept Smith. Mr. Lynch's ruling seems incorrect. Philadelphia did the same thing as Brooklyn has done in the case of Harry Lumley. The Quakers claimed Lumley, and then refused to take him. Lumley was still the property of the Dodgers until yesterday, when he was released to the Rochester Eastern League club.

Connie Mack is said to have a weak catching staff.

Tim Jordan will manage the Louisville Colonials in 1911.

Vaiquette may play quarter for the Ottawa Seconds.

Jimmy Howard of Chicago has challenged Stanley Ketchel.

Russell Ford, the premier pitcher in the American, is a Canadian.

Backers of Philadelphia Athletics demand 5—3 odds on the world's series.

Joe Wright is still camping on the trail of Jack Newton and Ben Simpson.

"Tex" Ramsdell may desert Penney and run under the colors of Michigan.

Jim Delehanty of the Detroit Tigers is out for the season with a sprained ankle.

Bobby Kerr will not compete in the A. A. U. championships at Montreal Saturday.

Vancouver will also take part in the exhibition lacrosse tournament at the Pacific Coast.

"King" Cole, this year's pitching sensation of the National League, is but 24 years of age.

All the American football coaches want lightning fast teams. This means the pensioning of many of the big stars of former years.

Fame has its little unpleasantries all right. Now they say that Ty Cobb is "faking" injured eyes in order to secure his release from Detroit.

Rube Waddell is out of the game The Rube tried to corner the market in Jersey Skeeters, and then almost ruined his beauty by applying poisonous medicine.

The Mann interests are being extensively developed and very rich ore bodies have been opened up on several of their bonded properties. This practically assures us that many of their obligations respecting bonds on mining properties will be taken up.

Offered to Sell the Prints.

Detroit, Sept. 23.—A new precedent in automobile law was made when Judge Donovan fined Julius Haltzenberger $2,000 for offering to sell to the Jules Motor Co. of Toronto, prints of the King car.

The judge laid particular stress on the effect of such conduct on Detroit's leading industry. Haltzenberger, made copies of the designs jointly produced by King and himself, told Attorney Atkinson that he owned them and he was advised that he had the right to sell them.

Judge McGibbon Appointed.

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—It is announced by the Labor Department that Judge McGibbon of Brampton has been appointed chairman of the board of conciliation which will deal with differences between the Canadian Pacific, Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific and the maintenance of way employes. The railways will be represented by F. H. McGuigan, and the men by W. T. Lee of Toronto. The board will deal with each railway separately.

Wireless Was Interrupted.

Buffalo, Sept. 23.—When the big passenger steamer Western States arrived in port last night, 15 hours behind her schedule. Capt. F. G. Stewart was mad clean through because over fifty wireless messages which he sent after his boat became disabled off Long Point, in Lake Erie, had been interrupted.

Bled to Death.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 23.—To bleed to death far from human habitation was the fate of John the trapper a few days ago. John Sims for the past seven years has lived in a small hut near Lepreaux and existed by hunting and trapping. He is said to have a wife and daughter at Liverpool, but he shunned company, and no one knew anything of his antecedents. On Wednesday a boy who sometimes took him provisions went to the hut to find him sitting bolt upright with both feet shot off and quite dead, with his long rifle across his knees. He had bled to death.

Let Prisoner Escape.

St. Catharines, Sept. 23.—County Constable Jay Book of Grimsby must appear before Judge Carman on Oct. 6, to explain his conduct at Grimsby Beach last month, when he is said to have let a prisoner who had been placed in his care escape from his custody.

Ferry Boat Burned.

Port Arthur, Sept. 23.—The steamer Kaministiqua, used as a ferry and owned by the Lake Coast Trading Co., was totally destroyed by fire at her dock, four of the crew having only time to escape with a few personal belongings. The loss is $7,000.

Rich Gold Discovery.

Nelson, B.C., Sept. 23.—Cresten is wildly excited by the reported discovery of placer gold in Goat River by Ira Bean, an old-time prospector. A rush then occurred in the vicinity of the find, up to the present eighteen claims having been staked. A meeting of claim holders will be held this week for the purpose of forming a syndicate to carry out necessary flumming and tunneling to enable the gold to be taken from the bed of the stream to bed rock.

Buried by Cave-In.

Hagersville, Sept. 23.—A fatal accident occurred yesterday morning at the gravel pit adjoining the Hagersville Cemetery, when George Ward and Alfred Smith were buried by a cave-in. Ward was immediately crushed and smothered to death. Mr. Smith was severely bruised, being covered to his neck, but he is considered likely to recover.

Rejects Civic Insurance.

Winnipeg, Sept. 23.—The project for municipal insurance of civic property here is not making very good headway. The committee met yesterday and practically reached the conclusion that no change should be made in the present system of outside insurance, except to increase it and to secure, if possible, a readjustment of rates.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

B. W. Yates, formerly of Brantford, hanged himself in a Cleveland jail.

Lady de Rothschild, widow of Sir Anthony de Rothschild, is dead, aged ninety.

Bishop Sellen of the Free Methodist Church in the United States says Protestantism is dying out.

Mrs. G. M. Hayman, said to be the original of Charles Dickens' "Little Dorrit," is dead at Southsea, England.

Word has been received of the drowning at Miskoto, Mich., of Thos. Turcott, aged 24, a former citizen of Peterboro.

The King Edward Hotel at Schreiber was burned. A Finnish girl was burned to death, and several of the guests had narrow escapes.

Bishop Fallon of London, Ont., has issued a denial of the report that he opposes the teaching of French in the schools of his diocese.

The 12-year-old son of E. Seyers of Cavan is in a Peterboro hospital, as the result of being accidentally shot while playing with a 32-calibre rifle.

Judge Bazin dismissed thirty informations laid against Montreal hotelkeepers for violation of the license law, as the witnesses failed to appear.

A committee of the Montreal City Council censured Mayor Guerin for placing the French flag behind the Irish ensign during the Eucharistic congress.

Gin Pills Guard Both

Think of being stricken down by illness at a lonely ranch—or all alone, in the great north woods! Many times, this has happened to those hardy pioneers who "blazed the trail" to new fields.

Mr. James is one of these brave men who is making a name and a fortune for himself in the far West. Unfortunately, Mr. James overtaxed his strength and for a time, it looked as if he would have to give up his claims and his work.

Monro, B. C.

"I have much pleasure in testifying to what Gin Pills have done for me. I divide the year about equally, working on the ranch and on various logging claims, being consequently entirely dependent on bodily fitness for a living. At times, I have suffered like many others in this country from Backache and Weak Kidneys, sometimes to the extent of being laid off for weeks altogether.

Having tried many remedies, I have pleasure in stating that your Gin Pills are the only remedy from which I have received any permanent benefit. I had been using Gin Pills only a short time when the pain and trouble left me and have not returned since.

I take care to always have Gin Pills by me, though my present condition does not require medicine.

I have recommended Gin Pills to other men with similar results."

J. EDWARD JAMES

Gin Pills have proved a friend in need to thousands of those suffering from Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Lame Back and Rheumatism, and the Constipation and Biliousness that usually accompany these diseases.

So great is our confidence in the merits of Gin Pills that we let you try them before buying the regular 50c. boxes at your dealer's. Write the National Drug & Chem. Co. Limited Dept. B. Toronto, and you will receive a sample box, absolutely free, by return mail. 30

A CAPTAIN IN TROUBLE.

Report of Appointment of Canadian Attache at Washington Denied — C. P. R. Liner Montcalm Collides With Coaling Vessel.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 24.—The following extract from a letter written home by a Toronto young man who has just entered his first year at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph speaks for itself:

"This morning at three o'clock all the Freshmen were turned out of their beds, painted from head to foot, marched to the Macdonald Hall, the girls' residence, in our nightshirts and compelled to give a song and dance outside their building."

INSTANTLY KILLED.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

QUEBEC, Que., Sept. 24.—Narcisse Fortin, aged 65, was instantly killed by an Intercolonial train at St. Joseph Delevis, this morning.

Irishmen here will invite Tay Pay O'Connor, who arrives here October 7th, to lecture in this city.

CAPTAIN IN TROUBLE.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

QUEBEC, Que., Sept. 24.—Six warrants are here awaiting the arrival of the captain of the Prinze Adalbert, who is charged by the Immigration Department with neglecting to declare six contagious diseases on the steamer on her last trip. He is liable to a fine of six hundred dollars.

STORY DENIED.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 24.—The story sent over the Associated Press to-day to the effect that one George H. Gall was appointed Canadian attache at Washington is emphatically denied again by the Government, this morning. Mr. Gall is publicity agent for a syndicate of western cities promoting immigration from the States.

COLLISION IN GULF.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

QUEBEC, Que., Sept. 24.—The Canadian Pacific liner Montcalm was in collision with a coaling vessel in bad weather in the Gulf of St. Lawrence this morning.

Cat With Human Disease.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—There's a case of infantile paralysis at Dr. Morphy's dog and cat hospital on VanKoughnet avenue. The patient is an infant, but not human—a kitten.

The kitten, owned in Toronto, was taken to the hospital with one hind leg paralyzed. Then the other hind leg became affected. The paralysis crept up the body, and to-day a front leg and the muscles of the neck are showing symptoms of the disease.

Dr. Morphy has diagnosed the case as one of infantile paralysis, and it's a "beautiful case" from a medical standpoint. According to Dr. Morphy, this kitten's case is almost identical with infantile paralysis in children. To Dr. Morphy, this is an important fact.

Joseph Moir Killed.

Wingham, Sept. 24.—A serious runaway accident occurred near here yesterday, resulting in the death of Mr. Joseph Moir, ex-reeve of the township of Culross. Mr. Moir, who lived about five miles out in the country, was driving into town, when his horse took fright at an automobile some little distance ahead. The horse turned suddenly in the road, throwing Mr. Moir from the buggy. When picked up Mr. Moir was found to be very seriously injured, and was removed to the hospital here, where he died shortly after his arrival. He leaves a family of several sons and daughters. Coroner Dr. Kennedy opened an inquest, a jury being sworn in and a post-mortem held.

Mackenize And Mann May Build New Road

Railway Contractors Hold Discussion On The Subject With The Ministers of Railways at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 24.—An important conference was held this afternoon between Hon. G. P. Graham, Minister of Railways, and Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann. Little could be learned as to the details of the interview. Mr. Mackenzie admitted that the Hudson Bay Railway was under discussion, and there is reason to believe that a formal proposition was submitted covering the construction and operation of the Hudson Bay Railway. At the close of the interview Mr. Graham stated that no conclusion had been reached.

Hon. Walter Scott, Premier of Saskatchewan, was here, but took no part in the conference. He left for Toronto to-night.

Robert Leach Will Dare The Whirlpool

Adventurer To Take Desperate Chance At Niagara This Afternoon--To Toss Way Through Rapids In Steel Bound Barrel.

Niagara, Falls, Ont., Sept. 24.—Robert Leach, proprietor of a small restaurant on Bridge street, this city, intends to brave the whirlpool rapids in a steel-bound barrel this afternoon at four o'clock, making the start from the old Maid of the Mist landing just above Swift Drift, the head of the whirlpool rapids.

For several days past "Bobby" has been making an active canvass of friends and acquaintances, and has received sufficient funds to pay him for the risk, although he says there isn't any if his barrel is picked up at the whirlpool in time to save him from suffocation.

Leach has made so many declarations of this kind that he was not taken seriously until yesterday afternoon. He has a barrel having made two previous trips through the rapids he claims, and yesterday painters began giving it a new coat of paint which was accepted as evidence of Bobby's intention to make good this time. He says now that he will make two trips, to-day and another on Sunday.

PLUNGED THROUGH AN OPEN BRIDGE.

Terrible Wreck on the Rock Island Railroad In Kansas.

AT LEAST SIXTEEN KILLED.

Sudden Rainfall Filled Dry Creek Bed With Wild Torrent and Bridge Was Carried Away—Nine of Dead Identified.

CLAYTON, Kan., Sept. 23.—Sixteen known to be dead, probably others killed and their bodies washed away, and eleven injured, is the result of a terrible railroad wreck which occurred on the Rock Island Railroad two miles east of this place at an early hour Friday morning, when a fast train on the Rock Island ran through an open bridge into twenty feet of raging water. Nine of the dead have been identified. Yet others may have been washed away by the torrent. The stream which wrought the destruction is at ordinary times simply a dry arroyo with no water, but with its bed thirty feet below the level of the railroad bridge. Early last night a tremendous rain fell and the dry bed was soon filled to the brim with a wild torrent. The bridge itself was quickly broken up and carried away.

To Re-Bury the Remains.

Niagara Falls, Sept. 24.—A joint meeting of the officers of the Lundy's Lane Historical Society and the Buffalo Land Marks Association is being arranged to make plans for the re-interment of the remains of the nine American soldiers which were found some time ago. The societies will work in co-operation in the suitable re-interment of the heroes who bled at the battle of Lundy's Lane.

Special "Cop" Arrested.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—Wanted in Ireland, suspected in Toronto, Abraham Wishart, a C.P.R. special constable, was arrested through the agency of the provincial police at six o'clock yesterday morning in West Toronto. Wishart is charged with embezzlement, fraud, and falsification of books in Dublin, where he was formerly a sergeant of the Royal Irish Constabulary.

THEY DEMAND A FRENCHMAN.

Appointment of Archbishop Gauthier To See. of Ottawa Criticized.

SBARRETTI BLAMED.

Le Temps of Ottawa Asserts that He Never Was in Sympathy With The Aspirations of the French — New Man Respected.

OTTAWA, Sept. 24.—A considerable section of the French-Canadians of Ottawa are showing some resentment at the appointment of Archbishop Gauthier to the Diocese of Ottawa, on the score that he is not of purely French-Canadian origin, and, consequently will not be so likely to be in full sympathy with their racial predilections and aspirations.

Le Temps, the local French-Canadian daily, voices this feeling in an editorial this afternoon, as follows:—

"Rev. Father Gauthier, Archbishop of Kingston, yesterday became the new head of the Diocese of Ottawa. We regret this. We regret it, moreover, considering the immense majority of Catholics in this part of the country who are of French-Canadian origin, and who speak no other language. They had reason, it seems to us, to expect that one from amongst themselves would have been named as the successor to the late Mgr. Duhamel.

"This has not been so, however, and in expressing our regret we feel bound also to express our great surprise.

"There is no doubt that Mgr. Sbarretti is alone responsible for what has happened. We had often reason to believe that the prelate was absolutely opposed to the development of the French language, not only in Ontario, but in the Western provinces, and that he did not sympathize with our position in the slightest. Recent events would seem to justify this conclusion, as they justified the beliefs expressed at the time of his departure for Rome.

For the new Archbishop personally we have the profoundest respect, but we have the preservation of our language at heart. A heritage that we received as a legacy from our ancestors, a heritage won by them at the price of the greatest sacrifices."

New Bridge Company.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—The Canada Gazette contains notice of the incorporation of "The British Empire Bridge Co." of Montreal, with a capital stock of five million dollars.

This is a combination of the British Consolidated Co. of Darlington, and the Railway Carriage Co. of Birmingham, which is securing Canadian incorporation, it is said, with the object of establishing works at Lachine. The company will tender for the superstructure of the Quebec bridge.

EVIDENCE POINTS TO THE HUSBAND.

Verdict at Inquest on The Death of Dummer Woman Rendered.

MAN SLEPT WELL.

Witnesses Swear Hugh Deline Told Them He Expected to See His Wife Die Suddenly — Woman Was Very Unhappy.

Havelock, Sept. 24.—After twenty minutes' deliberation the jury enquiring into the cause of the death of Mrs. Hugh Deline, concluded that she came to her death by foul play, and added:

"We consider that the evidence points strongly towards her husband, Hugh Deline, having committed the foul play, and warrants him to be sent up for trial for having been the cause of her death."

Coroner Kindred of Havelock presided and Crown Attorney Wood of Peterboro conducted the examination, while G. N. Gordon of Peterboro appeared in Deline's behalf.

Mrs. Samuel Newell, the first witness in her evidence indicated a possible motive for the assault, which had ended in death. She lives about half a mile from the Deline home. Deline came to her house on Thursday night last after they had retired at 9.40. He told her that his wife was dead. She visited the Deline home with Mr. and Mrs. M. Lytle, and saw Mrs. Deline lying on the floor in the back woodshed. Mrs. Deline had told her recently that she did not want to have any more children. After he had alarmed the neighbors Deline had gone to bed and slept. Deline had not examined the body up till Friday evening, although he was asked to look at it.

Mrs. Lytle said they did not examine the body, but thought from appearances that the woman was dead. Deline went to bed about midnight and had to be awakened at daylight. Mrs. McMullin said that Deline made no explanation of how his wife came to her death. She had heard Deline say she had severe pains in her head.

Dr. Holdcroft, who, with Dr. Ford of Norwood, performed the postmortem, said the body was well nourished. There were marks about the wrist and a bruise on the shoulder, several abrasions on the face and a cut on the right ear. Death came from shock.

Mrs. Parks, mother of the deceased, said that her daughter, on a visit last fall, had said: "Oh, mother, you don't know the life I lead." She had not wanted her daughter to marry Deline. She knew nothing of pains in her daughter's head.

Samuel Buchanan said Deline had worked for his father the day of the tragedy. He had left his place about dark. It was about a mile to Deline's home. On Monday morning Deline had said, "I don't know what to think about my wife. She has a pain in her head, and I would not be surprised to go home any time and find her dead."

Wm. Doughty had heard Deline say the same, and that she had doctored with three doctors, but it did not do her any good. Robt. Buchanan had heard Deline make the same statement. Ethel Buchanan had seen Mrs. Deline between 5 and 8 o'clock on the day before the tragedy. Mrs. Deline had said she had had pains in her head at times, and that she was taking medicine.

Wm. McMillan was notified in the night of Mrs. Deline's death. He went over and Deline sent him in to get a pair of trousers, saying he had torn his pants getting over the fence. Deline rolled the old trousers up and placed them in the cellar window.

Constable Williams had secured both Mr. and Mrs. Deline's clothes and sent them to the Dominion analyst. Deline's trousers had stains on them. When he had asked Deline on Monday what clothes he had on the night of the tragedy, he had said the same ones he had then, only a different shirt, but on further questioning had admitted changing the trousers.

Deline was remanded to appear at the court house, Peterboro, in a week.

Austen Chamberlain's Told-You-So.

London, Sept. 4.—Austen Chamberlain, speaking at Birmingham, declared that what he prophesied had happened with the Canadian Government, and that none could blame or criticize them. They had negotiated and were still negotiating those commercial treaties with foreign countries which they would have made with Great Britain if she had been ready to grasp the outstretched hand.

Meeting Was a Private One.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—A deputation from Oxford County asking for the appointment of a commission to investigate charges of alleged graft in the building of roads in the county, waited upon Hon. J. J. Foy yesterday afternoon.

The meeting was a private one, and nothing was given out as to what transpired.

The Bristol Cruisers.

London, Sept. 24.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Gerard Fiennes, in a criticism of the Canadian naval plans, says that Bristol cruisers are not effective for commerce protection. Canada, he says, is too anxious to stand alone, and has failed to realize that the safety of each part of the Empire can only be secured by the combined force of the whole nation.

$3.50 RECIPE CURES WEAK KIDNEYS

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, etc.—Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say good-bye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back, the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels, swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps, unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency? I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K 1793 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power. It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

CURRENT EVENTS.

At this season, it's the gun fool who takes the place of the rock-the boat fool.

Have you noticed the extra lighting of Bridge street, between John and Ann streets? It's back to coal oil lantern—twelve red lights on twelve dumps from excavations help to brighten up this poorly lighted residential street.

Why not make Front and Bridge streets the "Great White Way" of this City? The cost of plenty of light would not be so very excessive.

Kingston is awakening. They talk of holding an annual fair in the Lime Stone City.

THE LATE MRS. FRED LINK.

Following are resolutions on the death of Mrs. Fred Link (sister of Mrs. J. A. Goodsell) and former resident of Belleville.

Whereas An all Wise Providence has removed from our midst a faithful and efficient member. Mrs. Link of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, we deem it a privilege to express in words of love and esteem for her, who was ever ready and willing to give of her means to save Souls and who was ever true to all demands of her Church. Therefore be it resolved:.

1st—That in the death of our friend we bow with sorrowing hearts and humble submission to His Divine Will.

2nd—That we feel grateful for her short life spent among us and as a body lament her untimely death.

3rd—That we sympathize with her bereaved husband, Father and Mother in these hours of sore affliction.

4th—That a copy of these resolutions be furnished her Husband, one to her Father and Mother. A copy sent to the "Southern Christian Advocate" for publication and one inscribed in the Rec. Sec. book of the Missionary Society.

Two hundred barrels of whiskey were shipped from here yesterday via the water route to Winnipeg.

VICTORIA VS. REXALL.

Yesterday afternoon a baseball match took place between the Victoria and Rexall teams, composed of boys. The Victoria defeated their opponents by a score of 9 to 2. The battery for the victors was S. Mimms and S. Nurse and for the Rexalls, W. Green and E Schoener. W. Vance umpired the game.

AN ALTERCATION.

Yesterday afternoon an altercation took place in an up town restaurant between two men. The police were called but the men made themselves scarce before the officer arrived. A police court case wil lin all probability follow.

THE MARKET.

Owin to inclement weather and the fact that the Shannonville Fair is in progress the attendance upon the market this morning was somewhat limited. In consequence prices were rather high for all prouuce offered for sale. Butter sold at 28 cts, per pound and eggs realized 24 cts. per dozen.

CASE SETTLED.

The case against Louis and Joseph Clement two young men who were charged with assaulting Mr. W. F. Ockerman of Canifton, was this morning settled without a trial. The accuse had to pay all costs in the matter amounting to nearly $40 and give a bond to keep the peace. Mr. Anderson for Crown, and Mr. Carnew, private prosecutor, and Messrs. Morden and Shorey, for the accused.

FORMER RESIDENT DEAD.

A telegram was received in the city last evening announcing the death of Mrs. Keith, widow of the late Alex Keith, of Belleville, which took place at her late residence, Calgary, Alberta. Until about a year ago, Mrs. Keith spent the greater part of her life in Belleville and has many friends here. She leaves to mourn her loss two daughters, Mrs. (Dr.) Gibson, and Minnie, both of Calgary.

SPLENDID CONCERT.

Before a large and appreciative audience the Southern Jubilee Company last evening gave an excellent concert in the City Hall. It was under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. which organization is doing good work and materially assisting in procuring the new Association building. The programme presented by the talented singers was of such a nature as to test the singing qualities of each member of the organization which is composed of four ladies and four gentlemen. All are possessed of excellent voices. The soprano soloist, Miss D. Underwood, possesses a marvellously rich voice which was heard to good effect in the solo entitled "Swallows," Miss Annie Smith also possesses an excellent soprano voice and was heard to good advantage. Miss Hester Brown's violin solo was rendered in such a manner as to please all. Mrs. L. Board as a cornet soloist was certainly fine, and her number was heartily received and encored. Mr. E. Thomas Manger has a deep bass voice which blends well with the other voices. Mr. Charles Green is the tenor soloist and Mr. L Board, the baritone. Mr. J. A. Porter is the musical director.

THE STIRLING FAIR.

The Stirling Fair which was brought to a close yesterday was a great success in every particular. The exhibits in the various classes were far in excess of former years, and were exceptionally good. Yesterday's attendance at the grounds was a record one. During the afternoon two speed events took place namely, a free-for-all and green race. The results were as follows:

Free-for-all.

It's a mighty good thing for the women of Canada that Parisian Sage can now be obtained in every town of consequence.

No preparation for the hair has done so much to stop falling hair and eradicate dandruff and make women's hair beautiful as Parisian Sage.

Parisian Sage is the only certain destroyer of the dandruff microbe which is the cause of 90 per cent. of hair trouble.

These pernicious, persistent and destructive little devils thrive on the ordinary hair tonics.

Parisian Sage is such an extraordinary and quick acting rejuvenator that J. V. Doyle, who is the agent in Belleville, guarantees it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

Parisian Sage is most daintily perfumed, it is an ideal preparation, not sticky or greasy.

It is a magnificent dressing for women who desire luxuriant, lustrous hair that compels admiration.

And a large bottle of Parisian Sage costs only 50 cents at J. V. Doyle's and The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package. Made in Canada by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., who fill mail orders, all charges prepaid.

A Good Policy.

Where would Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Fielding and the balance of that galaxy of Bytown stars be to-day had they fulfilled the pre-election promises made by the Liberal party in 1896? Where, we repeat, would these masters of statecraft be to-day had they carried out the policy of the Liberal party of the days when its followers fretted and fumed in the cool shades of the Opposition benches? Pause! Reflect! Consider! Where would they be? Where they ought to be, but where they are not, back amid the galling atmosphere of the minority.

But the Laurier administration had sense enough to see that the party which it purported to represent had fooled the country with a policy which spelled disaster; it had sense enough to forsake its ruinous principles and, above all, it had sense enough to adopt in its stead the policy of the Liberal Conservative party and to stick to it like glue. Consequently the National Policy has been put to the test of actual use almost uninterruptedly for thirty years. And Canada has prospered. It has developed on a magnificent scale. Industries have expanded from small shops to mammoth plants. Others have been established until today Canada may boast of several of the most thriving manufacturing towns on the continent. Many American industrial concerns have been compelled to establish branches in Canada. Others will be compelled to follow suit if the policy of protecting the Canadian market is continued. Anyone with half an eye can see that the National Policy is the true fiscal policy for Canada, and whether the Conservative party is in power or whether it is out, there is some satisfaction in realizing that the policy of which it is the author is the one which is being carried out.

The Welland Telegraph, in a recent article, tells of the great benefits brought to that place by the National Policy.

Among other things, it says:

"The National Policy never had a more splendid vindication than in this town of Welland.

"There has come to us in these last few years American industry after American industry, forced by a protective duty to spend American millions in Canada, forced to employ Canadian labor, forced to better the market of the Canadian producer.

"We have a young city here and the National Policy built it as surely as the sun shines this September day.

"A few miles from us you can stand on Drummond Hill and see a large industry on the American side floating the Stars and Stripes.

"On the Canadian side is a duplicate flying the Union Jack.

"American capital built them both.

"Without protection never a brick would have been laid for the Canadian plant, never a dollar would have been spent with the Canadian wheat producer, never an hour's work would have been given Canadian labor."

That is what may be called "real evidence" of one of the great benefits of the Conservative National Policy.

The Telegraph, continuing, gives a further statement of facts that should set Free Traders everywhere thinking a little, and revising their views in agreement with the facts of actual life:

"A little story may be told here without violation of confidence.

"An English workman came to Welland seven years ago with just enough money to get him here with his wife and family of three.

"Those seven years he spent industriously, but he lived well and missed nothing of the enjoyments that a good wage can bring.

"Late last year he took his wife and children on a four months trip to the Old Land.

"He found his brother working just as he had been seven years ago, for sixty cents a day, and not a pound ahead of him.

"In fact, he found that his fellow workmen of seven years ago almost without exception had made not the slightest advance in the septette of years, many of them, indeed, being worse off in the end than in the beginning.

"He found carpenters by the hundred walking the streets in idleness, and American doors being hung in English buildings at eighty cents each.

"The man came from England a Free Trader, and he went home a Protectionist.

"He attended many Liberal meetings in the campaign and he never failed to tell the story of protection."

Vice in Large Cities

Police Commissioner Baker, of New York, is to be decapitated because, it is alleged, he permits gambling and disorderly houses to flourish. If New York is able to obtain a man as Police Commissioner who will succeed in suppressing gambling and disorderly houses in that city the quicker it gets rid of Baker the better. But anyone imbued with the idea that one, or both, of these moral pestilences can be eradicated in New York has something radically wrong with his think-tank. Much as we should like to see it done, we realize the almost utter impossibility of rooting out vice in a city of the size and character of New York. When much smaller cities are unable to suppress vice, it seems hardly likely that such a thing can be accomplished in New York. It seems reasonable to suppose, however, that vice can be curbed, even in the largest city in America. And we are inclined to believe that there is no excuse for the existence in large numbers of gambling places and disorderly women under one's very nose after dark in the very heart of the city. And such a condition has existed in New York. It is only a few months ago that Miss Louise Dresser, the actress, was compelled to complain to the Mayor of New York of young men emerging from a notorious resort situated a few doors from the theatre where she was playing and annoying young girls from the chorus as they left the playhouse by the stage exit. And this theatre was situated just around the corner from Broadway. The evil wasn't remedied, either. Moreover, there were a dozen resorts similar to the one complained of within a stone's throw.

After Half a Century.

It is forty-nine years since the outbreak of the Civil War, which, in four years, deluged a hundred battlefields with the blood of the best and bravest of the young men of the United States, observes an exchange. In half a century much new light has been thrown on the causes which made the arbitrament of war inevitable and men and things are coming to assume more nearly the proportions which belong to them. If regret survives, rancour has perished;, the judgments of history are already beginning to replace the prejudiced and impassioned conceptions of men and the boys and girls throughout the United States who are to-day reading the story of that terrible struggle are in a position to see the beauty as well as the sorrow of its heroism better than even the generation which grew up before them.

As a very real evidence of the healing of old wounds and the forgetting of old prejudices is the proposal, made by the head of the great organization of veteran soldiers who fought for the Union, that next year the survivors of the armies of the North and of the South unite in a joint tribute to the memories of their heroic dead. Heretofore, the dwindling hosts have paid separate tributes on shrines separated not alone by distance, but by tradition. The thought that, with fifty years separating the beginning of the war from the conditions of the present day, it should not be difficult for the white-haired survivors of both armies to join annually in a single tribute to what their common ideals typify, is one which has a dignity and a nobility to raise it above ordinary things.

SYMPATHY!

(Guelph Herald.)

The Herald sincerely trusts that the dark days which have overwhelmed the Galt Reporter, causing it to cease publication for the present, will only be of a very temporary nature, and be succeeded by skies of a brighter hue Liquidation proceedings have apparently been found necessary in order to clear up a partnership difficulty but after these are settled the Reporter will, no doubt, continue its creditable career, which has been marked of late by material improvement both editorially and mechanically.

CIGARETTES!

(Brockville Times.)

The other day the Department at Ottawa issued a bewildering statement about the number of cigarettes made the Galt Reformer, causing it to cease and smoked in Canada last year. Out of the tangle of figures emerges the fact that there has been a frightful increase in the burning of the insidious cigaroot. Whether this means an increase in population, a decrease in brains, or a flood of prosperity, we are not informed. It will, however afford the Laurier Government another opportunity to appoint a Royal Commission to enquire into the matter and incidentally pick up a few dollars for themselves. While they are at it the Commissioners might give their opinion as to which smells the worst: cigarette smoke, or habitant tobacco.

An Object of Pity

That part of our nature which we call the emotional is much more highly developed in women than in men. They are more sensitive, more tender, more sympathetic, more pronounced in their likes and dislikes, more susceptible to the extremes of pleasure and pain; and these refined mental qualities, no less than beauty of form and feature, make up the atmosphere of attractiveness and charm which always surrounds true womanliness.

The continued existence of these winning, engaging womanly characteristics depends to a very large extent on the regularity of the womanly functions and the condition of the womanly organs; and when these functions and organs become disordered or diseased the same mental qualities which are the glory of a well woman become the source of suffering and torture almost indescribable. Her cheery hopefulness is changed to a feeling of despondency, almost of despair, and she is haunted with forebodings of worse evils to come. Instead of being entertaining and companionable, she becomes moody and irritable, being unable to keep her mind from dwelling on her troubles. She becomes morbidly sensitive, imagining that she is being slighted or foresaken by her relatives and friends and she has a most humiliating sense of her miserable condition and of her loss of her womanly attributes. If she is religiously inclined she is very liable to be oppressed with doubts and fears in regard to her spiritual condition, or to think that she is eternally lost. In addition to this, she has also to endure the most distressing aches and pains.

What makes the case still more pitiable, especially with married women, is the fact that few men understand or appreciate the extent of their suffering, or the seriousness of the troubles causing it. Many doctors even speak of these disorders as subjects for ridicule, and the poor sufferer often gets a reputation for being a crank or a scold when she more nearly approaches being a martyr.

As these disorders are due to a disordered condition of the womanly organs, it is evident that to effect a cure these organs must be restored to normal condition; or, in other words, the circulation, which has become congested and stagnant in these parts, must be improved so that the waste matter will be expelled, and the nourishment so badly needed be brought to these suffering organs. It is the waste matter, or broken down tissue, which is held in the stagnant blood vessels in these parts, that causes most of the suffering by oppressing the nerves located in these parts.

The remedy known as ORANGE LILY will positively relieve this congestion and restore normal circulation in the disordered organs. It is an applied or local treatment, and acts wholly on these parts. It is absorbed into the blood vessels in these organs, and as it has powerful antiseptic properties, it immediately acts on the waste matter held there, and causes it to be discharged. As this dead matter is discharged the nerves are relieved, the pains and mental troubles become less, and the nerves and blood vessels become stronger. ORANGE LILY thus proves its merit by actual, visible results. It acts as certainly and as positively on all female troubles as anti-toxin does on diphtheria.

Winnipeg, April 28th, 1909.

Dear Mrs. Currah,—I am very grateful to ORANGE LILY for the change it has made in my life. When I commenced its use eight months ago I felt I would be surely insane before the year was ended. The pain I suffered often made me wish for death, and besides I would have such fits of depression and nervous twitching that I would have to scream. I had doctored with three different doctors for over two years, and had also used both the Pierce and Pinkham medicines, but none of them seemed to reach my case. I felt some improvement after the first month's use of ORANGE LILY and have kept gaining ever since. I do not feel that I am entirely cured yet, but I am so much better than I was that I am sure I will soon be entirely well. I sleep well, and feel cheerful and happy, except that I am occasionally somewhat depressed, but these spells are getting fewer and milder. I have also noticeably improved in appearance. Enclosed find $3 for which please send me two boxes of ORANGE LILY and one of Cerate Massage. I might add that the matter which used to be freely discharged, and which looked like a chicken's gizzard, is becoming very scant, and I imagine that the circulation is pretty well restored. Am I not right in this? Your sincere friend, MRS. L. E. A.

Free to all Sufferers

In order to enable every woman suffering from any form of female disorders to test the merits of ORANGE LILY, I will send to everyone who will send me her address, or the address of any suffering friend enough of the remedy for ten days' treatment, absolutely free. As this is worth 35c. it is only because I know that it must give relief that I make this free trial offer. Further, if any woman wishes expert medical advice, and will write me a full description of her case, I will submit same to the staff of the Coonley Medical Institute, Detroit, Mich., and they will write her direct without expense to her. INCLOSE THREE 2-CENT STAMPS and address MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, WINDSOR, ONT. 3

The ...Veiled Lady...

In an hour, flushed and tired, with her heart throbbing with an unsated thirst for vengeance, her pulses beating with the madness of wine, the Veiled Venus sat in a curtained alcove. Her imperial head reclined insolently on the silken cushions of her chair, and the long clinging white cloak gave proof of the glowing perfections, over which men were madly raving. She was "Venus Victrix' now.

"Fear not! I am near!" said the truculent Austrian. "If he comes ever, it will be to-night!" He retired to an anteroom passage, whence he could see the rear of this Paphian bower.

In five minutes a firm hand parted the curtains. The Veiled Lady could hear her heart beat like the thrilling tick of a clock in a lonely house. She stood on the verge of some one's grave. Whose?

"Good evening! Miss Irene Hope!" said the intruder. The woman sprang up. "Hold! One moment! For your life!" said Jenks. His wrinkled brow and flaming eye proved that for once "the invisible spirit of wine" had buoyed up a yet unshaken courage.

"Coward! what do you hound me down for?" cried the woman, springing to her feet. On the other side of the curtain Demidoff, the Russian Prince? meditated, (in his second-nature French), "They speak a language I know not,—but I am sure a quarrel comes! Is this my day of bonnes fortunes?"

Walking up and down, five paces away, arm-in-arm, Beverly Seaton said: "Orton! she is in there! Jenks is reckless and has intruded! Watch me now! Are you armed?"

Orton smiled, his thin lips parting like a panther's. "It is second nature to me," he calmly said; "and you, Brayton?" Orton's voice rang with a realy anxiety.

"I am prepared," said Beverly Seaton, and his voice sounded like the sentinel's stern call, as the click of the lock follows the last challenge: "Who goes there?"

"Be calm, for God's sake, Brayton! Don't entangle yourself! This game will break our way! Let them wrangle."

A rustling silken fold gave out the bullying accent of Horace Jenks' voice, as he replied to the woman's sudden demand.

"I want to know when you saw Egbert Neill last! I will see the face behind that mask!" His hand was lifted.

"My God! Adolf!" the cloaked Venus shrieked. It mingled with the frantic laughter of the dancers, and the swell of the orchestra. But there was a crash!

Demidoff dropped his cigarette and tore the curtain aside. There, prone on the floor lay Jenks, his eyes twitching. Over him towered a burly form in a funereal domino!—The Veiled Lady had fled into the corridor.

"A la bonne heure! mon brave!" cried the still muffled assailant. "Gardez Madame! J'y serai tout de suite." And Adolf Stahrenstein faced Seaton and Orton as Jenks struggled to his feet. They grasped the infuriated gambler.

"Your card! Who are you?" hissed Jenks, as Seaton and Orton restrained him.

"Heavens! Orton! You here?" Jenks gasped.

"I have just arrived," sharply said Orton. "Be silent!"

The sneering domino drew forth a card-case and gazing to see if Demidoff had finished his task of placing "Madame" in a place of safety, he waited, his eyes burning ominously through his mask. The spring step of Demidoff faintly broke the silence, as he returned.

"Madame est dans la voiture avec Josef. Je suis a vos ordres!"

"Tres bien!" said the masked Hussar. "La danse va commencer! attendons!"

For the swelling music drowned all interior noises; and every box and alcove was filled with loudly chattering members of Vanity Fair. The three Americans conferred quickly.

"Let me attend to this, Jenks!' said Seaton. "I suppose you wish to fight at once!"

"Any way! any weapons! anywhere," said the gambler, "and instantly! I only want five minutes to talk to you!"

"Good!" said Seaton. "Give me you card case."

Prince Demidoff advanced with consummate courtesy. He exchanged a few words in a low voice with Seaton, whose manner was calmly expectant. The exchange of their own cards was a polite preliminary! "Mr. Alfred Brayton" stood face to face with the proud Tartar.

"And, as this is immediate, a blow has been given—will your friend unmask and give me his name?" Seaton calmly requested.

"You are right, Sir!" said Demidoff; "I crave your pardon!" He retired for a moment, and holding the card of Horace Jenks in his hand, conversed earnestly with the still masked assailant.

Jenks, clutching Orton's hands, was raving in the far corner of the box. Seaton, his gray eye lit with an ominous expectancy, waited the action of Demidoff.

"I am sorry," said the Russian, gazing earnestly in Seaton's eyes, "that we are in a singular position! I am a stranger to all here but my friend!" He was impressed by the air of breeding in Seaton's face, and his quiet manner. "My friend says that your principal is a professional gambler, and disgraced already! No gentleman," said Demidol, softly, "can go out with a man who is a criminal fugitive! Is he Mr. Horace Jenks, of the Cercle des Etrangers a Paris?"

"Will you permit me," said Seaton calmly, "to again remind you that your friend is still masked and that I have not yet his name?"

Demidoff handed Seaton a card, silently. "You are again right, Sir! My friend shall unmask, but I will not let him fight this man, who may be an unpunished criminal! Let him retire; then my friend will conclude this matter." Jenks stepped outside.

"Suit yourself," said Seaton quietly; "but only a coward will not unmask! When a man strikes a man he must fight! It is too late then to talk of character!"

"Then I shall have to assume the responsibility." said Demidoff, bowing gravely.

"I shall do the same for the party assailed!" replier Seaton; "but first your man unmasks." As he spoke, he turned, the card clutched in his nervous hand. His eye rested on the word "Stahrenstein."

With the bound of a tiger, Seaton sprang forward and tore the mask from the face of the sullen giant.

"(This quarrel is mine! Coward!" he hissed, as he planted his flat open hand smartly on the cheek of the unveiled Adolf. The Austrian was astounded at a new enemy.

Orton, revolver in hand, was at Seaton's side in a moment.

"Now!" said he. "Let me act!" As Demidoff frantically raved, Seaton quietly said to Orton: "I will fight the prinlipal first; the second afterwards!" He seated himself and gazed upon the enemy. Orton conferred with the fierce Russian.

"See here! Seaton," said Orton. "This is serious! But we are the challenged party now! What do you wish? There is a shooting gallery near here, with a basement for le tir. What shall it be? This second is a game man!"

"Pistols,—and as near as you can get!" quietly replied the Virginian. "And Jenks must withdraw! It is only fair!"

In twenty words Orton had closed his mission. "The only thing is distance and the fire!"

Tone Is Always First

Tone is the most important feature of a piano—because, on the quality and permanency of tone, depends the value of the piano.

The magnificent, singing tone of

New Scale Williams Piano

unapproachable in sweetness, mellowness and majesty—is possible because the New Scale Williams Piano not only is more heavily strung on its massive plate and scale, than other Pianos, but also because of the Harmonic Tone Prolonging Bridge which prevents the introduction of faulty and imperfect tones.

If your home needs a piano to complete its coziness, perhaps our plan of buying a New Scale Williams on easy payments, will interest you. Write for full particulars and copies of our illustrated booklets.

"I FEEL IT MY DUTY

To Give You a Statement
In Regard To 'Fruit-a-tives'"

HARDWICKE, MIRAMICHI, N.B., Jan. 17th, 1910.

"I feel it my duty to give to you and the world an unsolicited statement in respect to the wonderful cure I received by taking 'Fruit-a-tives.' Chronic Constipation was the complaint I suffered with for years. My general health was miserable as a result of this disease, and I became depressed and alarmed. I was treated by physicians without the slightest permanent benefit, and I tried all kinds of pills and tablets but nothing did me any good.

I saw the strong testimonial in favor of 'Fruit-a-tives' by New Brunswick's 'Grand Old Man', the Hon. John Costigan, and I knew that anything he stated was honest and true and given only to help his fellow-men. I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and the effects were most marvellous, and now I am entirely well from all my Chronic Constipation that I suffered from for so many years. My general health is once more excellent and I cannot say too much to express my thanks for the great benefits derived from taking 'Fruit-a-tives.'"

A. G. WILLISTON.

"Fruit-a-tives" is not gotten up by druggists or expert chemists—who know nothing about disease and the needs of the human body—but is the scientific discovery of a well known physician, and is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices.

Two Minute Talks About

PANDORA RANGE

for Coal or Wood

Its Long Life

THE Pandora Range is for those who desire to make a permanent investment. The high quality of the materials and the superior method of construction assure long life.

The Body of the Pandora is very heavy. The Rods and Bolts are on the outside where they cannot burn or rust out. The Expansion Rings of the cooking section provide ample allowance for extreme expansion and contraction and eliminate the possibility of the metal cracking.

The Cooking Top is Burnished which toughens the surface of the metal and increases its strength. McClary Oil Cement is used between the joints. Unlike cheap, ordinary cement, it will not dry out and need replacing. The Nickelling will not tarnish and is many times more durable than the single coat of nickel on ordinary ranges.

The Semi-Steel Fire Box Linings are twenty per cent. heavier than cast or gray iron linings. Sulphur fumes, so destructive to cast iron, cannot penetrate the hard, smooth as glass surface of Semi-Steel. The Grates have Three Faces, which allows the wear to be distributed on three sides, insuring triple durability.

If you want a range of guaranteed quality get the Pandora. It's built to give you lasting service.

CROOKS OPERATNIG ACROSS CONTINENT

Said to be Pick of the Cleverest Criminal Ring on the Continent.

VICTIMIZED MANY.

Railway Travellers and Guests at Many Canadian Hotels Believed to Have Lost Heavily of Late.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 23.—That one of the cleverest and boldest gangs of train and hotel thieves ever gathered together has been operating at great profit to themselves and loss to the travelling public during the past two months between Ashcroft, B. C., and Montreal, was the statement made to-day by a man whose business it is to watch the doings of the members of the underworld. He further said that during the tourist season, now drawing to a close, guests at Canadian hotels at different points across the Dominion and travellers on transcontinental railways have been robbed of upwards of $100,000 in cash and valuables by this same gang of crooks, who are estimated to be the choice pickings of the cleverest criminal ring on the American continent.

While there has been some indication of their work west of Ashcroft, bigger jobs appear to have been pulled off east of that point and at almost any place between there and Montreal. It seems to have been established by detectives, who have been working tooth and nail to break up the gang, but so far without much success, that the western headquarters of the crowd is at Ashcroft, at which point a great many moneyed men leave the trains for the Cariboo.

Several travellers who landed at the mouth of the upper country are said to have been neatly robbed and relieved of practically everything they carried, while the robbers left behind them no trace of who they were or where they had gone. In other instances men who had at first intended stopping at Ashcroft and who later decided to come on to the coast are stated to have been touched the night after leaving that place in just as mysterious a manner.

The gang of thieves which evidently is strong in numbers, appears to stop at no sort of game, and large and small piles of booty come equally welcome to their maw.

In the Countess of Antrim robbery case at Winnipeg, a new trail has been struck, the strongest yet, and as a result the Thiel detective who has the matter in hand arrived in Vancouver to-day, firmly convinced that the swag from the Antrim robbery has come west. Just where his suspicions centre he will not say, but he is now working at the case on the presumption that the diamonds from the titled house of the north of Ireland are reposing in British Columbia, close to the coast.

HAS BEEN SUSPENDED.

OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—Mr. J. Bowell, Deputy Controller of Chinese Immigration at Vancouver, B.C., was this morning suspended by the Minister of Trade and Commerce, as the result of the investigations which have been conducted for some weeks past by Constable Foster, of the Dominion Police, under instructions from the Department.

There have been suspicions for some time that a conspiracy existed, by which Chinese were enabled to enter Canada under false certificates. The constable was sent west to investigate and he reported that it would be advisable to set a trap for the Chinese who were coming in on the C. P. R. steamer Empress of China, due at Vancouver on Saturday last. He asked that the regular interpreter On Yippon be replaced and it was expected that the Chinese would confide to the man supposed to be Yippon the stories of how they hoped to evade the payment of the $500 head tax.

Yippon was accordingly suspended, and a substitute was engaged, but on Friday last Mr. Bowell re-instated Yippon, and so the trap was laid in vain.

It is for this interference with the orders of the Department that he has been suspended.

It is probable that in future the Department of Trade and Commerce will insist that every out-going Chinaman attach his photograph to his certificate, and may even go so far as to adopt the Bertillon system of finger print identification.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

Kills the Dandruff germ
Stops Falling Hair

"THE HERPICIDE GIRL KNOWS"

No matter how attractive she may be in other ways, poor, thin, wispy hair will spoil the looks of any woman. It is so easy to have beautiful hair and a girl with nice hair is always good to look at.

That wicked little parasite, the dandruff germ, causes all your trouble. Get rid of the dandruff, keep the scalp clean and your hair will grow long and fluffy.

Herpicide will kill this germ, clean the scalp, stop the hair from falling and is the only thing that will do it. Genuine Herpicide makes beautiful hair. There are lots of imitations, lots of preparations they will tell you are just as good, but don't believe it. There isn't anything better, there isn't anything just as good. Herpicide is the first and only remedy that has ever been discovered which is satisfactory. Insist on having real Herpicide.

I wish every girl whose hair is scraggy and stingy, dead and dull, could realize what a sight she is and how much better a regular use of Herpicide would make her look. Just to see, buy a one dollar bottle at your druggist,s and use it as directed. The Herpicide Company guarantee, it and if you are not satisfied you can have your money back. They are so sure that Herpicide will do everything claimed that they are willing to stand behind it with this offer.

You ought to get the book "The Hair and Its Care" published by the manufacturers of Herpicide. There are lots of good things to know in it and it is sent upon request.

You can also get a nice sample of Herpicide with the book by sending ten cents in postage to The Herpicide Company, Dept. 30B., Detroit, Michigan,

DRAMA OF LOVE ENDS AT STATION

Baker Wreaks His Vengeance on Faithless Wife and Her Lover In Paris Station.

MAN SHOT DOWN.

Man and Wife Lived in Glasgow Where Lover Came to Board With Them—Husband Trails Couple to Paris.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—An extraordinary drama of love and murder was enacted at the Northern Station here on Monday afternoon.

The affair was the tragic sequel to a wife's visit to Paris, an Italian named Victor Facenda fatally shooting his wife's lover, and inflicting injury on his wife.

The victim is Phillippo Bocta, also an Italian, and all three have been living in Glasgow, where Facenda carried on a confectionery business. Before going to Glasgow Facenda is said to have lived at Brighton.

Bocta is a journeyman confectioner, aged twenty-one, and had not long been in Glasgow. When he arrived there he made the acquaintance of Mr. and Mrs. Facenda, at whose house he became a frequent visitor. He is said to have paid marked attention to Mrs. Facenda, who was much younger than her husband.

The husband had spoken to her many times about Bocta, and there had been scenes between them, but she had assured her husband that the friendship was quite devoid of all harm.

Three weeks ago the wife left her husband's roof, whether intending to remain away permanently or not is uncertain. She announced her intention of going to Paris, and of visiting her parents in Italy. Arriving in Paris she took lodgings near the Northern Station.

A week after her departure young Bocta took it into his head to visit the continent, and one morning he disappeared from Glasgow. The husband heard of his departure soon afterwards and that Bocta and Mrs. Facenda had been seen together in Paris.

The husband, infuriated with Bocta, and suspecting his wife, at once set out for Paris in search of them. For four days he searched in vain. He suspected that the couple, either singly or together, would soon return to England, and so for a couple of days he hung about the Northern Station keeping a sharp eye on the passengers travelling by the boat trains.

At two o'clock on Monday afternoon his hunt was successful. He arrived at the station fifteen minutes before the departure of a boat train for Boulogne. After a glance at the people on the platform he went to a waiting-room and on putting his head inside he was just in time to see his wife and Bocta leaving by another door and making for the waiting train.

Following them hurriedly he drew a revolver, and, as he afterwards explained, feeling that it would be an act of cowardice to attack his rival from behind, he swung Bocto round with his left hand and at once shot him with the revolver he held in the other.

Bocta, grievously wounded in the chest, ran shrieking to the station-master's office, and hid behind a desk. He ran out on the platform after a few seconds, and dashed towards Facenda, but his strength was gone, and he dropped dead on the platform.

Facenda, meanwhile, had turned upon his wife, and had fired at her. The bullet, however, struck her stays, and glanced off, inflicting only a surface wound.

Police seized him at once and bore him away. He behaved with remarkable coolness and only expressed regret when he heard that, after all, his wife was not dead. He made no resistance.

When examined by a magistrate he frankly admitted the crime. "Do what you will," he said, "there is only one thing I am sorry for, and it is that the woman is not dead."

MUST HAVE CARS.

Or Head of Rat Portage Lumber Co. Says He Will Have to Close.

Winnipeg, Sept. 24.—The feature of the Railway Commission sitting yesterday was the outspoken charge made by D. C. Cameron, president of the Rat Portage Lumber Co., that Mackenzie and Mann were engaged in a deliberate attempt to put his company and himself out of business by their manipulations of traffic on the Canadian Northern Railway.

He stated that he could easily double his plant here, but he is dependent on the Canadian Northern for a supply of cars to carry his logs, and the plant is unable to run more than 125 days in a year now owing to the cold-blooded refusal, he says, of the railway to furnish him with sufficient cars.

He had complained many times to both Mackenzie and Mann. The former had tried to put him off with promises, while the latter had bluntly informed him that he could not have any better service than he had had in the past six years.

He appealed strongly to the Railway Commission for relief, and said if it were not given he would be forced out of business. The statement came out in his application for lower rates on the C.N.R. between Western Ontario points and Winnipeg.

Intermediate rates, it seems, are higher than through rates from Rainy River, and Chairman Mabee expressed himself as antagonistic to such discrimination

Man Awoke Lady Passenger When Trying to Render Her Insensible.

BRAKEMAN ACCUSED.

W. P. Lynn on Trial at Regina For the Offence — Victim of Alleged Offence the Wife of an Official of The British Navy.

REGINA, Sask., Sept. 23.—Charged with attempting to chloroform a lady passenger on a C.P.R. eastbound train, No. 2, on August 8th last, William Patrick Lynn, a C.P.R. brakeman, was to-day committed to stand his trial by Magistrate Hefferan at the barracks of the mounted police.

The victim of the alleged offence, Mrs. Blanchflower, was travelling with her husband, Assistant Paymaster Blanchflower, of the British navy, from Vancouver to Montreal, and, according to the prosecution, was occupying a berth by herself when the attempt to chloroform her was made somewhere between Medicine Hat and Swift Current.

Giving evidence to-day, Mrs. Blanchflower stated that she woke with a choking sensation, just in time to see an arm withdrawn from the curtains. She caught sight of a trainman's lantern and a uniform, such as trainmen on the C.P.R. wear. The smell of the chloroform was around her, and arousing her husband in the birth opposite she informed him of what had happened. Calling his friend, the husband handed him the pillow for examination. The opinion passed was that a portion of the pillow had been saturated with chloroform.

Complaint was made to the conductor, and as a result steps were taken by the Canadian Pacific Railway officials.

Lynn was to-day charged with having unlawfully and with evil intent tried to use chloroform or an otherwise stupefying operating drug on Mrs. Blanchflower.

SLEUTH ROGERS HIGHLY PRAISED.

Social Reform Board in Session in Toronto Commends Ontario Policing.

MARKED IMPROVEMENT.

Again Gets After Hon. A.B. Aylesworth on Obscene Literature Cases — Indians Come Under Examination—Other Matters.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—The interdenominational general board of moral and social reform had its annual meeting here yesterday, Rev. Dr. Carman presiding. Several matters of public interest received attention, and Supt. Rogers of the provincial police department was honored with the praise and support of the board, which was "delighted to be able to say" that law enforcement in New Ontario was considerably better under the new police system, and that the superintendent had "shown a determination to have these laws thoroughly enforced, and to insist upon incorruptibility and competency on the part of the members of his force." The resolution continues: "Your executive regrets to have to report an exception to this satisfactory condition of things in law enforcement in Ontario in the case of the City of Windsor and adjacent communities. The Lord's Day Act has been enforced so as to prevent the importation, sale, and distribution of American Sunday papers on Sunday, the Attorney-General having formally refused consent when application was made by the Lord's Day Alliance for the enforcement of the act against this glaring infraction. And we regret to observe that prominent citizens of Windsor are at present taking action which, if effective, must inevitably result in weakening the discipline of the provincial force.

"Your executive would, therefore, recommend the council to take such action as it deems wise to support the Government in maintaining thorough discipline in this force, and a thorough enforcement of the laws in which we have special interest."

The King-Skill release was the subject of a memorial to the Prime Minister "in the hope that he will take such action as will avert as far as possible serious evils likely to result from the public utterances of the minister of justice in regard to the matter reported upon."

Dr. A. D. Watson suggested an application of the "recall" system in relation to certain public offices out of sympathy with popular sentiment. He mentioned license inspector, crown attorney, attorney-general or even occasionally to a minister of the crown.

The executive made a number of recommendations in regard to the Indians, among which was a clause condemning the exploiting of Indians at exhibitions, and one asking for an investigation into the conditions of Indian marriage. The executive recommendation also made references to the lands of the Indians. Hon. George E. Foster, however, claimed that this matter was outside the jurisdiction of the council.

"The law at present is a farce," said Rev. Mr. Burke of Kingston, in stating that most of the boats running down the St. Lawrence had open bars, and at the end of the season were fined $150, which simply amounted to purchasing a license.

The executive of the council were requested to prepare a new course in social science. It was stated that several of the books being used at the present time by the different denominations were opposed to prohibition, and the Presbyterian book was submitted as an example. Dr. Shearer, however, considered that the ministers should be able to read up both sides.

The following officers were elected: Hon. president, Most Rev. S. P. Matheson, B.D., LLD., primate of the Church of England in Canada; president of the Trades and Labor Congress; secretary, Rev. J. D. Shearer; treasurer, Rev. Dr. W. T. Graham;

Take Off the Fat Where it Shows.

Most women suffer much humiliation because of great quantities of fat, so located that, no matter how they dress, everybody sees that they are abnormal. This is the day of the slender figure, and fat women are simply not tolerated either in business or social affairs. Women may not know it, but men when they see a fat woman pass them on the street or in public places make all manner of sympathetic remarks about her. They do not mean to be unkind or to seem unmanly, but it is natural for a man to dislike fat on a woman. Where fat shows the most there is where it must be removed, and as quickly as possible. This season's dresses seem to be made for the fat woman's misery and the slender woman's delight. They expose all the charms of woman and her ugliness as well. Exercise and diet will not remove fat. This has been proved. The famous Marmola prescription which has met with such phenomenal success and has so many of our society women as its sponsors, is now being sold in tablet form to meet the demand of the public for this style of treatment. These little tablets go into your system just like food. They stop the stomach and digestive apparatus from producing fat and reduce the fat upon the body at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day. They are harmless and can be carried in your purse and taken even after you have indulged in a hearty meal away from home. They are sold at all drug stores at 75 cents a case, or if you prefer you may write the Marmola Company, 1181 Farmer Building, Detroit, Mich.

Sale of Gem Fruit Jars

Increased sale of the Schram Automatic Sealer has materially lessened the sale of the old style Gem Jar.

We do not believe in cutting prices; on a staple article, simply to be the cheapest place in town, thereby lowering the standard of value for that article, making it an unprofitable line for any merchant to handle.

To secure trade some have taken this means of winning it. Our prices on Jars have remained the same as advertised at the beginning of the season. We do not care however to carry these Jars over until next season, which will be the result, if we continue to ask the regular prices, while others are selling them at cut rate prices.

We have decided therefor to clear Gem Jars at the following prices:

The Manifestations Of Eye-Strain

Continued.

Nausea and vomiting have already been mentioned in connection with ocular headache; they may exist without headache and apart from diplopia and vertigo, and may be due to eye-strain. Their presence is explained by the intimate association of the fifth with the vagus.

Nerve Waste; Nerve Exhaustion; Neurasthenia.

Brain-Fag.—This is a manifestation of eye-strain that is as common as it is subtle. Subtle it must be, as every possible cause has been cited as the origin of the various groups of symptoms which are exhibited, except the eyes. It has not been sufficiently recognized that in a large majority of these cases called neurasthenia, the real trouble is a constant "nerve-leakage" or nerve waste, and in a large numb.. ef cases eye-strain is the cause.

Why Not Begin to Save Money For The City?

Writer Puts a Pertinent Question up to the City Council--Installation of Motor Driven Pumps Mean Big Saving Why Delay In Procuring Them?

Belleville, Ont., Sept. 23, 1910

To the Editor of the Intelligencer:

Sir,—A great many of your readers would like to ask the City Council through the medium of your paper the reason for the delay in installing the Motor Driven Pumps for the Belleville Water Works. The writer is informed that over a year ago to-day a proposition was submitted to the Council, by the Trenton Electric and Water Company, Limited, for the supply of power, and that the proposition also showed a great saving to be made by using electric power instead of steam, as a prime mover.

We read in your paper, from week to week, and month to month, how the City Fathers discussed this proposition and, if the writer recollects correctly a deputation of aldermen and the City Engineer ,examined a motor driven pumping equipment at Lindsay, and favorably reported on same to the Council. We also learned through your paper, that a contract was closed, early in July, with the Trenton Electric and Water Co., Limited, for power ,and that tenders for the new pumping equipment were called for about the middle of July. Up to this point the whole proposition appears to have been handled in the usual happy-go-lucky style of the Belleville City Council but from the time the tenders were caled for up to the present time it is the opinion of a good many citizens in Belleville (and prominent citizens at that, Mr Editor) that for as in the dilatoriness and grandmothers' methods, the Water Works Committee, or Special Committee, or whoever had this pumping contract in hand—takes the cake.

After destroying any market there may have been for our old, played-out pumps, and after scaring the people half to death by advertising the danger we were in with our present pumping equipment, and after neglecting to make any satisfactory arrangements with the underwriters by reason of the installation of new and large pumps, and after spending money on deputations, and after closing a contract with a Company calling for delivery of power within a reasonable time, and after finally, by resolution of the Council, awarding a contract a little after the middle of July for the supply and installation of Pumps, the writer is creditably informed that this effective Council of 1910 has not yet executed the contract with the Company whose tender was accepted for this installation.

The chief reasons, apparently, for the delay in executing this contract are that the City Solicitor, while taking two weeks holidays in Belleville had not time to look the contract over and the Local Expert (?) retained by the City as Advisory Engineer, appears to have been trying to rewrite the specifications, the contract with the Supply Company and to advise them how to build and install their equipment. This from a local expert mark you.

In looking over some old copies of The Intelligencer the writer finds that the Electric Company offered to install this plant—or at least offered to operate it at a guaranteed saving to the City of three thousand dollars (3,000.) per year. If this is the case the City is losing practically ten dollars a day for every day the electric pumps are not installed, while the peope are wondering what will happen now that winter is coming on, if there should be no water supply. The Electric Company, is compelled, under the terms of the contract, to build a special line from their sub station to the Pump House, and the writer was informed at their office to-day, that after putting the matter off for several days putting the matter off for several weeks they now have this work in hand and they expect the City to take the power when they are ready to deliver it, according to the terms of their contract. However, this may be it seems to the writer, that the City is taking a pretty big chance, when they delay closing up this deal, of having to pay the Electric Co., for power, which they are not ready to use.

The last reason given for delay appears to be that while some of the Aldermen are away on a holiday jaunt looking for permanent pavements the the doughty Chairman having this business in hand, is afraid to wind the matter up.

Friends of Yates Says He Must Have Lost Reason

Detroit Man Lived Irreproachably Till He Started Drinking Lately--Brantford Much Upset By Tragedy--Silent Partner in Many Concerns--To Be Buried in Ontario.

DETROIT, Sept. 23.—The Detroit friends of Burton Wynn Yates can think or talk of but little else to-day than of his death in Cleveland yesterday. This morning a press representative called on half a dozen of the men well known and highly respected in the social and commercial life of Detroit, and in every case met only a puzzled shake of the head and expressions of the most profound grief and amazement.

Amazement is the correct word. Man after man repeated and insisted that Yates was the last man in the whole big city to be expected to come to a suicide's end after a night of dissipation and the shooting of a female companion. The old theory of a double life does not apply here.

Mrs. Singer is recovering in Lakewood Hospital, Cleveland. She was estranged from her husband, a Cleveland salesman, and being repulsed several times in efforts at reconciliation, tried to end her life here two weeks ago. She came from Detroit three weeks ago.

Yates met her in the Euclid Hotel, where she had rooms. He took her on an auto ride. They were in Silver Thornes road house, opposite White's, when the woman ran into White's and called a taxi-cab. Yates followed and argued with her.

She called out "You are a liar," and five shots were fired. Two hit her. The other three, Yates said before he died, he fired at himself.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The quarrel between Hal Chase, captain of the New York American League baseball team, and George T. Stallings, manager, was aired to-day before Frank J. Farrell, president of the club. Stallings was in conference with Farrell and took the opportunity of making grave charges. He accused Chase of withholding his best services on the field and quitting when he was most needed.

President Farrell thought the charges so grave that he took the first train for Cleveland, where the club now is, to make a complete investigation. Stallings wanted to accompany him, but was refused permission. In a statement before his departure, Mr. Farrell said that if the charges are sustained there will be no place for Chase on the Highlanders or, in his opinion, on any other team. If they fail, he reserves the right to deal with Stallings as he thinks fit. He absolutely denied that Chase had been appointed manager of the club.

Hal Chase will be the manager of the New York (American League) baseball club next season, says the Chicago Tribune. His contract as leader already has been signed and approved and is in the hands of President Frank Farrell.

Chase gave out this news himself. It was not exactly news at that, for the events of the last week or two all pointed to just such a conclusion. But it was the first time a positive announcement of any kind had been made. Hal probably would have maintained silence if Manager Stallings had remained here, but the latter was on his way to New York to confer with Farrell.

The present manager's contract does not expire until the end of this season, but there is a possibility that he will be paid off to-day and given a permanent vacation. In that event, Chase will continue the job of managing, which he started yesterday.

Chase has known for some time that he was to succeed Stallings evidently from his actions of late, but the news that there was to be a change has leaked out prematurely, because Chase could not put up longer with the treatment he was getting at the hands of the manager. Yesterday, after the news was published of the trouble between Stallings and Chase, Owner Farrell got into communication with Stallings and Secretary Tom Davis, and it is expected that the magnate will arrive here to-morrow to settle the trouble one way or the other.

The finish of Stallings is much the same as that of Clarke Griffith. Griff ended his connection with the New York club after a talk with Farrell over the long-distance 'phone, and Stallings has told some of his friends here that his career may end to-night if Farrell comes to talk the matter over.

The cunning hand of Ban Johnson is seen through all the trouble, and there are many who are wise that say that Johnson has been after the scalp of Stallings ever since he was placed in charge two years ago. The signal topping scandal last year started Johnson after Stallings again, and it has only been a matter of time for him to accomplish the end.

Yesterday Johnson visited the Lexington Hotel, where the New York team is stopping, and had a long talk with Hal Chase. Just what the conference with Chase was about was not learned, but the fact that the league president was keeping so close a watch of the affairs of the team was evidence enough that he had been wise to everything that was going on for some time.

THE RING

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 23.—Jack Johnson to-night declared his willingness to accept a cabled offer of a $30,000 purse for a championship battle with Sam Langford in London.

"McIntosh is willing to give us either a $25,000 or a $30,000 purse," said Jack, "and I am ready to accept that offer and go across the pond and settle this matter with Langford. But the purse must be posted here in America. That much I will exact now, so that McIntosh and Mr. Langford know where they are at before I do any business. McIntosh is O.K., but some of those Englishmen do not come up to my idea of sportsmen. I can get the money on the other side just as well as I can get it here. McIntosh is absolutely honest and will make good anything he promises.

"My reason for insisting on the posting of the coin in this country is due more to the fact that I want to put aside all chances of temptation for certain Englishmen. That purse is enticing, you know, and there is no telling what may happen over there if it were left where it could be easily reached If I win the bout I can get it here on my return. And I know that Langford will not have any trouble securing possession of it if he is victorious."

(Buffalo Express.)

Abe Attell, the featherweight champion of the world, would like to box some good man in Buffalo, they say, and, incidentally, the following from the Chicago Journal will be found of interest:

"I never felt better in my life," said Abe Attell. "And do you know why?" continued the great little fighting machine. "Well, in the first place I never drank, chewed nor smoked in my life. That's the whole answer.

"Some people have often wondered how I accomplished it. The fact that I fight on an average of once a week, I figure, helps keep me in condition more than anything else. Another reason to which I attribute my continued success is being a married man.

"I have now related my best points. Many people will come to you and say "Attell is a great gambler and he will be the next one to follow in the trail of poor old Joe Gans and the others who have passed the great divide.' Well, I do not want to do any extended bragging, but just say now for me that Attell to-day at 37 years is as wise a man as any in the ring to-day about taking care of himself. It sounds pretty funny to blow your own horn that hard, but I really and truly believe in myself and that's half the battle."

Attell also related that he is just back from Canada, where he captured the Dominion championship. He said he had told his wife she had good reason to be proud of him with his titles.

"American girls are going over to England and other countries every day to get husbands with titles, I said, and she could be proud of me because I now have a foreign title myself."

Wolgast is foremost in Attel's mind. He said he feared Ad was the victim of poor advice for his own financial good.

THE TURF

Anybody who thinks that Sam Hildreth is not determined to annex that $7,250 first money of the $10,000 Dominion handicap, to be run over the mile and a quarter, on the first day of the autumn meeting at Fort Erie, October 4th, is losing out in his calculations. Further evidence that this astute trainer-owner is set on annexing this greatest of the year's prizes in Canada is furnished in his purchase from Mrs. James McLaughlin of the three-year-old colt, Fauntleroy, by Little Saint-Flickmaroo. Hildreth announces, with the news of the purchase, that he will add this colt to the starters in the Dominion. Fauntleroy is in at 97 pounds, and even if Mr. Hildreth does not place dependence on him to win the event, he may prove a very valuable pacemaker. This makes four eligibles Hildreth has for the 'cross-the-river stake, Fitzherbert, Joe Madden and King James, and the quartette makes a pretty good hand to draw to, say the turf sharps.

THE NEW TURBAN.

Some of the new turbans slant over the face; some over the back hair to the neck. Others are tipped rakishly and often a bit wickedly to one side. The same turban may often be worn in half a dozen different ways with equal success, and it all depends on the angle to which it is adjusted whether it is becoming or not. Almost any one can make a modish turban this fall. All one has to do is to puff or stretch a piece of fabric over one of the big turban shapes, which may be picked up for a trifle at the millinery counter, put a band of folded velvet around the edge of the brim and arrange a big bow at the back, a couple of pompoms back of one ear or a smart feather ornament at one side of the front.

The very smartest turban shapes are a little elongated from front to back and, of course, all the modish turbans settle far down over the ears in what must be a most comfortably fashion for cold weather, one is sure—if only the fad will last until cold weather gets here.

TACT.

By Polly Paget.

If a woman is blessed with tact she has the supreme gift. It will bring her all the things she needs. To her it is a much more valuable asset than beauty, or even genius. Tact is certainly the greatest of all gifts to a woman.

The girls' school in some far distant Utopia is going to include a course in tact to correlate with its curriculum from the primary grades on through the post graduate work. For, when the day of enlightment does come, the sensible mother and the astute father will realize that a working knowledge of how to get along with people is more to be desired than much wisdom in so-called higher branches. Tact is more important than trigonometry. It stands a girl in place of beauty; it takes her further than talent; it brings the world to her feet to do her homage.

Tact! Speed the day when we shall appreciate the importance of this unconsidered trifle. Help us to realize that with it woman can wheedle the world out of anything it has to give, but with her feeble strength she can't wrestle with it and get anything.

Chevelier Chavez Crosses The Alps

Feat Nearly Costs Him His Life--Suffers From Severe Bruises While His Machine is Wrecked,

Domodossola, Italy, Sept. 24.—To George Chavez, the Peruvian aviator belongs the honor of being the first to fly across the Alps.

The daring feat was accomplished yesterday in an attempt to win the prize of $20,000 offered by the Italian Aviation Society, Milan, for a flight from Brig, Switzerland, to Milan.

Chavez, however, was unable to complete the trip, having sustained painful injuries when he alighted here. His machine was overturned and he was buried in the wreckage, both legs were broken and the left thigh fractured. Other parts of the body have bad contusions. The general condition of the airman, however, is not considered to be grave.

The cheering crowd had caught sight of the monoplane when it appeared as a mere speck in the sky far up the valley, and watched it with thrilling interest as it grew larger and larger, approaching at a tremendous speed.

When he was within about three-quarters of a mile of the aerodrome, Chavez cut the ignition, and was gliding earthwards when suddenly, as he was preparing to alight, a wing of the machine lifted as if caught by a gust of wind and the monoplane tumbled to the ground.

Henry Weyman, the American eviator, set out twice to follow Chavez. The first flight lasted four minutes, and on his second attempt he failed to reach the summit of the pass and turned back.

Chavez determined at noon to make his attempt and rose to a height estimated at nearly 7,000 feet. It was known that it would be necessary for him to attain nearly this altitude to clear the Simplon Pass, the summit of which rises 6,592 feet. He maintained apparently this altitude for at least a half hour, and followed over the road built by Napoleon in 1900 over the Simplon Pass. He accomplished the eight miles that brought him over the top of Simplon Pass and then sailed gracefully over the 18 miles down to Domodossola.

Arriving there, he had left the hardest part of his journey behind him, having escaped the high peaks and the jumble of rocky gorges on this side of the summit. The remaining distance to this city offers less difficulty but takes the aviator over Lake Maggiore, and a succession of plains to the goal.

The distance from Brig, Switzerland, to Milan, is 75 miles, and the prize was for the aviator who should make the first flight, starting from a table land 900 feet above sea level at the head of the Rhone Valley near Brig, Switzerland. In addition to reaching a height that would bring him over the Simplon summit, and in doing which he must suffer severely from the cold, the aviator was required to guide his frail craft over wide chasms, notably the Gorge of Ysette, where a safe descent would be quite impossible and an accident must mean almost certain death. Strong winds are the rule along the entire route.

Aviation experts had predicted freely that the only alternative to a successful flight across the Alps was the death of the aviator. Signal fires along the Napoleon road marked the way as far as Domodossola, and the rest of the course was indicated by flags and buoys anchored on Lake Maggiore. The summit of the pass at Moscera was illuminated with oxhydrique lights, and a captive balloon showed the finish line at the aerodrome here.

Chavez's most notable feat up to yesterday was in establishing a new altitude record. On September 3 he rose to a height of 8,271 feet.

Power For Falls.

Niagara Falls, Sept. 24.—Gen. F. V. Greene, president of the Ontario Power Co., met the City Council yesterday and the aldermen wanted the power company president to fix the price of power to the city after an agreement, which has about thirty months to run, expires. Under the terms of the agreement the power company enjoys exemption from taxation, and the city buys power at $10 It is understood that negotiotions will at once be opened between the hydro-electric commission and the city for power supply after the expiration of the agreement.

Story Is Not Correct.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—The story of a Canadian representative at Washington is not correct.

The Government has no intention of appointing anyone in the immediate future, although, as stated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier last session, the time will probably come when such an appointment will be made. The question is not now before the Government.

New Electric Railway.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—The Niagara, Welland and Lake Erie Railway Co. will apply to Parliament next session for power to construct and operate an electric railway from Niagara Falls, N.Y., by way of Welland, Port Colborne and Port Dover.

Victim at the Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 24.—Infantile paralysis has broken out in this city. Hazel, the little daughter of George Manley, is the first victim. Her condition is serious.

Illinois Republicans.

Springfield, Ills., Sept. 24.—The Republican state convention yesterday adopted a platform approving the administrations of President Taft and Governor Deneen.

Tumblers that have contained milk should be washed in cold water, as washing in hot tends to cloud the glass permanently.

HER PHYSICIAN ADVISED

Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Columbus, Ohio.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during change of life. My doctor told me it was good, and since taking it I feel so much better that I can do all my work again. I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fine remedy for all woman's troubles, and I never forget to tell my friends what it has done for me."—Mrs. E. Hanson, 304 East Long St., Columbus, Ohio.

Another Woman Helped.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health and strength, and proved worth mountains of gold to me. For the sake of other suffering women I am willing you should publish my letter."—Mrs. Charles Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

One of the unfortunate things about advertising is the fact that too frequently an ability to write smart, clever ads is mistaken for good, honest advertising service.

FIREMAN KILLED.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

HERBERT, Sask., Sept. 26.—John Richardson, a Canadian Pacific fireman, was killed when the engine blew up near Artimus this morning.

FEARFUL REVENGE.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

REVELSTOCKE, B. C., Sept. 26.—A fearful revenge of Italians was uncovered here Sunday when search parties discovered the remains of French Julien, a pioneer settler, with his head severed and bloody axes in a bush. It appears Julien prosecuted the Italians recently for assaulting relatives. Tuesday they visited the homestead and lured him to the bush where he was found dead.

FROST IN THE WEST.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 26.—The first killing frost of the season throughout all the prairie Provinces was noticeable to-day, but little damage was done, as all the crops are in.

GODERICH AROUSED.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

GODERICH, Ont., Sept. 26.—Provincial Inspector William Greer arrived here this afternoon to investigate the brutal murder of Lizzie Anderson, whose partially nude body, with throat cut, was found in a cellar near her father's house, after being missing four days. All Italians in the neighborhood have been closely questioned by the local police, but no clue has been obtained. The countryside is in an uproar and there are threats of driving out or lynching foreigners.

ITALIAN FINED.

(Intelligencer Special)

BRIDGEBURG, Ont., Sept. 26.—An Italian from Toronto named Sebastino paid a fine and costs aggregating $25 for attempting to smuggle his brother from Philadelphia without necessary immigration examination.

BISHOP FALLON EXPLAINS.

Intelligencer Special.

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 26.—Six hundred French Canadians gathered yesterday, following the call after Bishop Fallon's remarks regarding bilingualism in schools. After hearing the letter of explanation from Bishop Fallon, however, those with reproving resolutions stuck them back into their pockets. Then the crowd listened to a speech and dispersed.

Stopped In Front of Train.

St. Catharines, Sept. 26.—Mrs. Ross, an elderly lady from Cypress River, Manitoba, met a very sad death in front of the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway station at Merriton, shortly after seven o'clock on Saturday night. She had lately been visiting at the home of her brother-in-law, and left in the evening to go to the station to board the Niagara Falls trolley leaving this city at seven o'clock. When she arrived at the crossing, a freight train, attached to an electric motor, approached. The woman must have seen it, for she stopped for a moment. Then, evidently thinking she could pass in front without injury, made somewhat of a jump, but landed directly in front of the motor. Her body was frightfully mangled, death being practically instantaneous.

Typist Was Buried In a Vacant Field

Body of Pretty Eva Swane Found Wrapped in a Sheet Sprinkled With Acid--Medical Man and Nurse Locked up

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 25.—The body of Miss Eva Swane, 26 years old, a stenographer, formerly a school teacher of Passo Robles, Cal., was found last night buried in a lot in the rear of a vacant house on Eureka street. The girl had been missing since April. From information which came to the police to-day it is thought that she met her death shortly after that time in the office of a doctor. Dr. James Grant is in the city prison today and the police are looking for William Sachs, his assistant. Miss Mary Masseramith, a nurse employed by Dr. Grant, is also detained. Neither will make any statement.

Three days ago Frank Gordon, Dr. Grant's new assistant, informed the police that a body was buried in the yard of the Eureka street house. Detectives last night discovered the body of Miss Swane wrapped in a sheet sprinkled with acid, buried under a cement flooring near a sewer.

The police have sent for a Passo Robles ranchman, who is said to hav called for the girl on the day she disappeared.

Young Girl Brutally Killed At Goderich

Body of Elizabeth Anderson, Aged 16, Is Found In Cellar of Deserted House--Was Seen In Company Of Italian Who Has Disappeared.

Goderich, Sept. 26.—On Tuesday last, Elibabeth Anderson, a 16-year-old girl, disappeared from her home. Yesterday afternoon her mutilated body was found in the cellar of a deserted house on the outskirts of the town. Wesley Anderson, her father, was one of the party who discovered the body. They have been searching for her continuously since her disappearance.

Just who is the perpetrator of the dastardly deed is a mystery, the only clue being that it is remembered that on the day of her disappearance, she was seen in conversation with a strange man.

It was a gruesome sight which meeted the party of searchers, when they entered the open door of the cellar of the deserted house. In one corner lay the nude body of the girl, with the exception of shoes and stockings and one glove. Hat and clothing were scattered about the floor. The body was a terrible sight to look at. The throat was cut from ear to ear, the wound having the appearance of being done with an axe or similar instrument.

The provincial police have been notified and will help the local police in an effort to locate the murderer. They consider the chances of bringing the guilty person to justice very slim.

One story states that she was last seen in company with an Italian that works on the Ontario West Shore Railway. Her father lives in the old Lasham Hotel at Saltford, and a number of Italians occupy part of the hotel as a boarding house.

An inquest will be held to-day.

EAST SEEKING CHANGE IN ACT.

Maritime Provinces Want Modification of the B.. N.. A. Act.

TO SEE GOVERNMENT.

United Action to be Taken By Lower Provinces to Prevent a Further Diminuition of The Federal Representation.

Montreal, Sept. 26.—It looks very much as if the three maritime provinces were about to approach the federal authorities with a view to secure a modification of the British North America Act at the hands of the Imperial Government.

This, in fact, was intimated yesterday at the Windsor by Hon. W. H. C. Grimer, surveyor general of New Brunswick, who stated that although he was not a participant in the recent conference in St. John between Attorney-General Maclean of Nova Scotia, Premier Hazen of New Brunswick, and Premier Haszard of Prince Edward Island, he believed that a common basis would be reached by which united action would be taken by the local authorities of the three lower provinces to ensure against a further diminution of the Federal representation in the House of Commons from the lower provinces. If something, he said, is not done in this direction, the representation following the census of Nova Scotia, will be cut down to 13, that of New Brunswick to 11, and Prince Edward Island to two or three.

Being asked if a modification of the B.N.A. Act in such a sense as he had indicated would not open the door to a like demand on the part of Quebec, the surveyor general of New Brunswick admitted that it would. He said, in fact, that it was a very serious problem, and would have to be handled with very great prudence and care by the local and Federal statesmen.

Draped the Statues.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 26.—In a letter from Paris, George Gray Barnard, the sculptor, who made the marble groups for the front of the capitol, says that the male statues will be so draped with marble as to give no offence.

The state meeting of the Ancient Order of Hibernians some time ago protested against the placing of the Barnard groups because of their nudity, and other organizations were about to follow suit.

Barnard says these groups will arrive here some time in October. He is particularly anxious to impress upon the people the fact that the statues will be draped.

WIRELESS AGAIN TO THE RESCUE

Saves Nineteen Lives on the Last Trip of the Koenigen Luise.

CREW ON DERELICT.

The Marconi Machine on Board Liner Gets Message From An Unknown Steamer That the Ship Harvest Queen in Sinking.

New York, Sept. 26.—Wireless saved nineteen more lives on the last trip of the Koenigen Luise of the North German Lloyd Line to the Mediterranean and back, being those of the crew of an old-fashioned, full-rigged ship, the Harvest Queen, built a score of years before wireless communication was used, which, leaking, half sunk with water, drifting five days helplessly in the sunny seas 1,000 miles off the nearest land—the Azores—with three flags of distress hoisted on the mizzenmast, was surprised when these signals had carried beyond the horizons and brought succor.

One steamer, an unknown Italian, described the signals and made them out "Ship full of water, in instant need of help, high danger," and then flashed over the surrounding seas by her wireless apparatus: "Ship 1,000 miles due south Azores sinking; we are too far away to assist in time."

That message, cast upon the air about the waters caught at the wireless instruments on board the steamship Koenigen Luise at about two o'clock in the morning of Aug. 24 The captain gave orders to change the course to the point indicated. So well was it calculated that in four hours, when day had nearly broken, the disabled old ship was sighted.

She was "swimming," as the sailors put it. A few steadying sails were spread, but she rolled in the swell like a log in a swift river. There were the flags crying for aid. Lumber was scattered over the face of the sea—her deckload of timber could see her going lower and lower into the water.

According to the maritime register the Harvest Queen was of 2,544 tons. She had been captained by E. A. Forsyth for twenty years and was owned by him and his wife. Other records aboard the Koenigen Luise showed that she had sailed from Windsor, Nova Scotia, for Buenos Ayres with a cargo of cut lumber.

Wallpaper that has been soiled by a smoky fire or lamp may be cleansed by using a hard, dry sponge; the stiffer and harder the better. Rub the wall briskly with it.

INQUIRY COMES TO ABRUPT END.

Telegraph Investigation is to be Resumed at Toronto. Now.

THE PEOPLE'S CASE.

C. N. Bell of Winnipeg Makes a Vigorous Statement — Matter Will Have to Be Gone Into Exhaustively.

Winnipeg, Sept. 26.—The investigation in Winnipeg into the question of telegraph tolls in and out of the city came to an abrupt conclusion on Saturday afternoon. Isaac Pitblado, who was acting for the Board of Trade and the Grain Exchange in the matter, concluded his examination of S. B. McMichael, assistant to the general manager of the G.N.W., and Judge Mabee then stated that he thought the time opportune for a consideration of the question of the general scope of the investigation, and the circumstances under which it was to be continued. He did not think it possible to complete the investigation in Winnipeg even if the commission were to sit all next week. He was of the opinion, that the investigation might be confined to one of the telegraph companies, say the G.N.W., and that the sitting might be held in Toronto.

Mr. Pitblado then intimated that he had been advised by his clients that they could not be responsible for the costs of maintaining counsel in Toronto, and if the investigation was to be continued there, this part of the country would not be represented. To this Judge Mabee replied that he had always been opposed to the appointment of counsel by the Government to represent the people in these cases. His brother commissioners had, however, strongly favored this course, and, under the circumstances, he would withdraw his opposition and would advise the Minister of Justice to name counsel to represent the people in the investigation, which would be continued in Toronto.

C. N. Bell of the Board of Trade made a very vigorous statement during the afternoon of the situation as it is viewed by the men whom he specially represents. W. J. Camp, the expert of C.P.R. telegraphs, had stated that it would take 50 clerks three years to secure one item of information for which the Winnipeg Board of Trade had asked. If this were true, said Mr. Bell, what hope was there that any single patron of the telegraph company, or such organization as the Winnipeg Board of Trade, could ever hope to obtain such information as would convince the board that the rates of the telegraph companies were too high. The time had passed when the people of Canada were willing to accept without question the slight concessions which the telegraph companies were willing to grant. There ought to be some authority in the Dominion which would intervene and determine what rates were equitable. It appeared to the Board of Trade that this was the function of the Railway Commission, and the appeal had therefore been made to it.

S. B. McMichael, assistant to the general manager of the G.N.W., who had urged in the forenoon that the rates of the company were so low that it had paid no dividends in 23 years, explained in the afternoon to Mr. Pitblado that the G.N.W. was the result of an amalgamation of the old Montreal and the Dominion companies, and that the shareholders of the Montreal had been paid eight per cent. and the shareholders of the Dominion had been paid six per cent. He also stated that if there were deficits in the operation of the G. N. W., the money due to the shareholders of the old Montreal and Dominion companies was paid by the Western Union, showing that the G.N.W. was but another name for the Western Union.

Judge Mabee expressed the conviction that in the investigation of telegraph rates the commission was going to be involved in as great an undertaking as in the matter of the express rates.

C. N. Bell of the Board of Trade maintained that the matter of telegraph rates would prove much less complex, as the number of schedules was very much less.

May Use Finger Print.

Vancouver, Sept. 26.—The difficulties in connection with the regulation of Chinese immigration into Canada via Vancouver, as evidenced by the holding of 38 immigrants who came on the Empress of China last Saturday, on the charge that they were using fraudulent passports, are not nearing solution. It has been proposed that by the introduction of the finger print system of identification the problem of identifying immigrants and the persons for whom the passports were originally issued in China, will be made easy.

Blew Open Postoffice Safe.

Regina, Sept. 26.—The blowing up of the safe in the postoffice store at Balgonie at an early hour yesterday morning and the theft of $60 in cash, indicates that the band of yegmen who have been a source of worry to citizens and police of western Canada for some months, are drawing nearer to Regina. The men have worked backwards and forward on the main line of the C.P.R. for some weeks, but for a short time have been quiet.

A Warning.

A word with regard to black stockings. Refuse absolutely to wear those that crock. In this enlightened day there is no excuse for buying them, as every store has on hand a large stock of black hosiery the dye of which is warranted not to rub off on the feet or shoe lining. One woman, not knowing this and being of a cleanly disposition, used to scrub the black dye from her feet every night with ammonia and refined sand soap. After several weeks of abusing the skin by this process and rubbing the poisonous dye into the sensitive surface in the daytime the poor soul, going, like Agag, "exceeding delicately," forswore everything but white balbriggan stockings and will tolerate nothing else. Children should never put on any except fast color hose, as the tender cuticle will certainly absorb the injurious dye. Good black will not wash gray and will leave no more stain on the foot than will a pure white stocking.

Pots and Pans.

That most disagreeable of tasks, "a wrestle with the pots and pans," can be easily avoided by putting hot water and washing soda in them as soon as the food has been removed and allowing them to stand on the back part of the stove. They can then be washed as easily as any dish. If there has been anything scorched, by using the water in the pot or pan and allowing to come to a slow boil it will all come out like magic. No need of any scraping. This is a great saving of labor.

To Explore Labrador.

The unknown regions west of Lake Temascamie in southwest Labrador will be explored by a party of Middlebury college professors which has just started on its long trip. The party, which is known as the McFarland expedition, consists of Professors Raymond McFarland, Thomas C. Brown and Phelps Nash Sweet. The first stage of the journey by rail via Montreal to Roberval, Lake St. John, in northern Quebec. There two canoes, guides and food supplies for six weeks will be obtained. Entering the canoes the party will proceed northward by the Chamouchuan River 225 miles to Lake Mistassini, thence northeast about 150 miles to Lake Temascamie. A full scientific equipment was taken along, and the hitherto unexplored regions will be examined carefully. When this work is completed the return to Lake St. John will be attempted by the Peribonka River, which is about 350 miles in length from its source to the lake.

The Canadian Loon.

The wildest bird in all the desolate marsh regions of Canada is the loon. Perhaps it is on account of his shyness and the inability of man to get sufficiently close to him to study him that he is the least understood of all the diving waterfowl. The loon is not a popular bird. His long, wavering cry, that is half a wail, is anything but conducive to the peace of mind of the lonely trapper, returning home across the darkened waters of the bay. "He one crazy bird, dat feller," the French trapper will tell you, and the Indian say he is in league with the evil spirits.

CURRENT EVENTS.

Toronto is also finding more room for its school children. Money well spent.

We can afford to forget our little troubles now. The deputation on permanent pavements have returned. Presumably we will have a mudless Front street within the next 18 months.

The Canadian Manufacturers Association did not pass any tariff resolution. These gentlemen know that the Laurier Government will not dare reduce the tariff to any noticeable extent.—It spells defeat.

An Italian duke who has twice chosen a wife in this country says: "An American girl can be her husband's equal in every respect." Cases have been known in which she was a lap and a half ahead.—St. Louis Globe—Democrat.

Too bad! Sir Wilfrid Laurier seems to have mislaid that low tariff policy of his. It must have fallen off the train somewhere between Winnipeg and Port Arthur.

The more sensational the better, is the slogan of the aviators just now. Quit the quest for fame and get down to business.

THE LAND.

I am the land;
The great new land,
That people who are athirst and lean
Gaze out upon with parched desire.
Deep rivers run for countless leagues
Through forests where the red deer roam.
Birds nest within the branches of the trees,
And myriad young arise to pay the toll.
The rivers hold a living wealth
That rapid nor the bar turn back;
From Delta to the fount they upward press;
Their spawn replenish the tithe
Exacted of the higher life.

Broad plains thrust upward to the sun,
The parent body of the grain;
And hold safe nurtured in their breasts
The fattened roots of lowlier food.
Fruits glint, blood-red and green and gold,
All sweet and goodly in the sun.
With lesser splendour ripe the nuts
High-held in stately homes.

• • •

I am the land—
God's heritage to man;
And nourish him with wine of strength.

I hold him to my breast and keep him clean
From all that blacks the soul.
My hills send down their wealth of loam
A lavish gift to toil.
My mountains store the rivers' need;
I cradle in my lap the rain.
Herds wander in my vast domain,
And fatten off my store,
I am the mother, and the land.
The sun smiles upon me and the stars;
Rain slakes my thirst, and o'er me play the winds.
I am the land—
The mother of all that is.

Do You Know the value of OLIVE OIL?

Its action is midly laxative and its being a nutritious food. it should be taken by all who are of a habit constipated to any degree.

No prescribed dosing is required, you are simply to take as much as you care for on your food probably on salads and in meat or fish dressings.

Our French Olive Oil is the kind to use. It is absolutely pure,

TO PRESENT PRIZES.

The cups and prizes won by members of the Canoe Club during the past season in the several aquatic events will be presented at the club house to-morrow evening during the dance.

RECENT DEATHS.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Roblin, of Rossmore, died yesterday after a few days' illness. Mr. and Mrs. Michael Angelo, of this city, on Saturday afternoon lost their infant son, who died after a brief illness.

TRIAL OCTOBER 21ST.

Charles Edward Powley, who was on Saturday last committed for trial on a charge of stealing a quantity of cement, was this morning brought up before the County Judge and elected to be tried by His Honor without a jury. The date of trial was fixed for Friday, October 21st. Powley was admitted out on bail, himself in $400 and two sureties of $200 each.

TRIED TO GRAB PURSE.

About 8.30 o'clock Saturday evening Mrs. Wm. Dennis, who resides on Bleecker Avenue, was walking along Mill Street, near the revetment wall, when, in passing two men, one of them made an effort to snatch her purse from her hand, but did not succeed. The men then bolted, but Mrs. Dennis chased them for some distance and secured a good view of them. The affair was reported to the police, who are endeavoring to locate the parties.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Thomas Wheeler, the nine year old son of Mr. George Wheeler, of Tweed village, was yesterday the victim of a distressing accident. In company with some other boys he was playing about the C.P.R. yard near his home. The boy jumped on a freight car which was being shunted, when he accidentally fell. A car passed over his right leg, severing it between the ankle and knee. Although the boy is in a serious condition, it is thought that he will recover.

WOMEN ON TRIAL.

Mrs. Mary Desislet and daughter, Vina Desislet, of Trenton, were this afternoon placed on trial before Judge Deroche charged with unlawfully disposing of the body of a child. The circumstances of the case, as already published, are that the daughter gave birth to a still born babe in May last, and the body was buried in a yard in the rear of the house. No notice of the child's burial was given. The case was in progress when The Intelligencer went to press. Mr. Anderson for the Crown and Mr. Carnew for the accused.

THE SHANNONVILLE FAIR.

Despite the inclement weather on Saturday the world's fair at Shannonville was held and the attendance was fairly good. In the various classes the exhibits were numerous and were certainly fine. The display of horses cattle, sheep and swine was exceptionally large. During the afternoon two speed events took place which were the chief attraction. In the evening a concert was held in the A.O.U.W. hall and the building was filled to the doors. The programme presented was varied and gave general satisfaction Mr. Thos. Bowie, of this city, gave several dances in Scotch costume, and Miss Ivy Watkins rendered two soles in a most acceptable manner.

DEPUTATION BACK.

The deputation appointed by the City Council to visit western cities for the purpose of inspecting permanent pavements, returned to the city yesterday morning. They visited Detroit, Windsor, London, Guelph and Toronto, and will have an interesting report to present to the Council at its next meeting. The Mayor reports the greatest courtesy having been shown to the deputation at all points, and each municipality they visited was only too glad to supply all the information they required and to show the different kinds of pavements and give them the benefit of their individual experience with these classes of payments. In conversation with a representative of The Intelligencer, His Worship stated that nothing of a definite nature in reference to the deputation's visit to the above places would be given out until a report had been prepared and submitted to the Council.

Owing to the Magistrate being indisposed the case of Fenn and Son charged with an infraction of the grocery By-law was adjourned until Wednesday.

LOST HER RABBITS.

Mrs. Andrews, who resides on Grove street, was the owner of two pet rabbits which to-day she is mourning the loss of. It appears that on Saturday evening two dogs obtained an entrance into a shed where the bunnies were kept and destroyed them. Mrs Andrews would like to know the owners of the canines.

THE RAPID PRINCE.

The steamer Rapid Prince a handsome boat which was launched at Toronto a few days ago arrived in the harbor here last evening en route to Montreal. The steamer was built for the Richilieu Navigation Company and is intended to ply between Prescott and Montreal. It was the steamer's trial trip and those in charge were much pleased with the result. Mr James Conlin, of this city, is the chief engineer. At an early hour this morning the Rapid Prince left for the metropolis.

SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY.

The rally of Holloway St. Church Sunday School yesterday was an unqualified success in every respect, the Sunday School rooms being crowded to the doors. An open session was held, the exercises being mostly of a musical character, in which scholars of the school and the orchestra took part. A reading by Miss G. Martin from one of Charles Sheldon's books was of special merit. The address of Mr. Jno. A. Holgate, of Foxboro, was optimistic and cheering. The offering for the day, which was more than double the usual Rally Day amount, was for the Sunday School extension fund.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

Last night there was an increased attendance at the song service. The favorite of the old fashioned hymns were requested by different ones. With some the Secretary gave interesting reminiscences of how they came into popular use, also incidents of the use of them being a great blessing. To-night Mr. Sovereign will be pleased to meet the business men interested in starting a Business Men's Gym. Class. The October issue of Association Men, published in New York, contains a splendid picture of a number of Belleville fellows as they were busy tearing down the old walls on the building site. The first instalment on the new building will be due next Saturday.

The Island Governor.

The ninth Lieutenant-Governor of Prince Edward Island is Hon. Benjamin Rogers. He is a Liberal—was rather; has been thirty-two years in politics in that tight little island which gave to the geography books of our youth the poetical jingle about "oats, potatoes and hay." The new governor has been Secretary-Treasurer and Commissioner of Agriculture. These portfolios kept him busy; and he has done as much as anybody to get the island province whatever of its dues it has got from Ottawa of late as well as to systematise farming where every fence corner counts. He did not succeed in getting the tunnel. At present his duties are not excessively onerous. If he has an automobile he might make a complete circuit of his kingdom in a day's drive; and he would see more prosperity and contentment than could be found anywhere else in Canada except along the St. Lawrence. His demesne might be flung down on the floor of Alberta and it would look like a blot of ink on a sheet of foolscap.

Holds World's Record.

E. B. Archibald of Toronto is one of the greatest pole-vaulters in the world. At the elimination trials two years ago, he vaulted the extraordinary height of 12 feet 5 inches, and last winter, at Buffalo, succeeded in clearing 12 feet indoors, a distance never before accomplished, and hence a world's record. He is, as can well be imagined, very skillful, and the way he manages to throw his 190 pounds of avoirdupois over such a dizzy height, has always been the surprise of the spectators, as well as the dismay of his opponents. He fully expects to do 13 feet before the season closes, and those who have watched him in his work consider the performance well within his powers.

No Tarriff Reduction

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier was out West he was a great free trader. He was anxious to see the tariff lowered. The revision was to be downward. All this was pleasing to the low tariff sentiments of the prairies. With the Premier was Mr. E. M. Macdonald, M.P. for Pictou, who duly made speeches backing up his leader. When the tour was over Mr. Macdonald went east to Pictou, was given a reception there, and lost no time in assuring the people of Nova Scotia that the talk of tariff reduction was all moonshine. The Halifax Chronicle, the leading Liberal journal of the province, reported this part of his speech as follows:

"Mr. Macdonald clearly enunciated the policy of the Liberal party as affecting the tariff question. They had the same policy in the West as in the East. The people of the West did not want free trade any more than those of the East, and they ascertained that the only shouting for free trade in the West came from the Tory camp. He believed that the future of Nova Scotia was wrapped up in its manufactures, and there would be no tariff changes to disturb them.

"The motto of our neighbors to the south had been to look out for number one, and previous to fourteen years ago it had been almost the annual custom of the Conservatives to send delegates on tariff missions to Washington. Now the order was changed and the missions were from Washington to Ottawa, and Canada through Sir Wilfrid intended to look out for number one. Some rough spots in the tariff would be smoothed out; but no change will be made that would interfere with the British preference or with the vested interests of men who had put their money in the East. The policy, he declared, was that the tariff would be maintained, as it is only remedying where it unduly presses."

There you have the Liberal policy. Promise revision downwards in Saskatchewan. Promise maintenance of the tariff and full protection for manufactures in Nova Scotia.

The Promise Breakers.

Canadain electors should always bear in mind that the Liberal party has broken practically every promise that it made when in opposition and has gone back on every profession of principle. For instance:—

It stood for purity of election.

In office it has stolen London, purchased Bonaventure, corrupted other constituencies by public works, and threatened constituencies that if they voted Conservative they would not get necessary public works. At Lethbridge in the presence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier Mr. E. M. Macdonald told the people that though they cruelly needed a post office and were absolutely entitled to it, they could not expect it as long as they voted Tory.

It demanded the reform or abolition of the Senate.

In office Sir Wilfrid Laurier maintains the Upper Chamber on the old basis. It is still the haven of partisans.

It preached economy.

In office the liberals have trebled the annual disbursements. No previous Administration began to be as reckless in the waste of public money as the Laurier Ministry. According to an exceptionally competent authority, it wastes ten millions a year in graft.

It denounced patronage.

In office it elevated the patronage system to a science. A few of the visible results were the nest of scandals in the Marine and Fisheries Department, the Printing Bureau thefts, the everlasting purchase of supplies from party heelers at exorbitant prices, and the brazen awarding of contracts to politicians who were useful at election times.

It stood for true Federalism and defended Provincial rights.

The new Western provinces have been robbed of their rights. They have been deliberately set up as inferior provinces. The older provinces find it necessary to be constantly on their guard at Ottawa to withstand the constant, insidious and increasing encroachments on their rights; they have, as a matter of fact, to rely on the Conservative Opposition to secure fair treatment.

The foregoing are only a few examples; the list could be prolonged. Electors may choose to support the Laurier Government for one cause and another; but they should clearly realize that that is the record of the Government which they support.

The Wealthy Murderer.

Alienists who examined Porter Charlton reported that he should be taken to a hospital for the insane and there kept indefinitely. They added that he was likely at any time to be a menace to society. Customs are changing. Once upon a time all convicted murderers were hanged. It mattered not whether they had a plethoric pocketbook or an empty one. Now, it seems, that if a murderer has wealth and influence, he escapes the hangman's noose or electric chair by being declared insane by so-called alienists and is forthwith committed to an asylum, while the poor man who commits murder inevitably pays the full penalty for his crime, provided, of course, he is found out. In a country which is not supposed to recognize class distinction the principle of hanging the poor man and committing the rich one to an asylum is one which doesn't appeal to us. If capital punishment is too severe for the wealthy, it is too severe for the poor. The United States, perhaps more than any other nation, should have a uniform law.

A Useless Assurance.

The Rev. Anna Howard Shaw very thoughtfully informs us that if women obtain the right to vote they will not forget how to dress. Dr. Shaw's assurance is quite unnecessary, and she needn't hope to win men over to her way of thinking on the suffrage question because of it. For he must be a poor fool, indeed, who could fear that woman would ever forget how to dress so long as competition among modistes continues and there is a single man on earth. Most women dress to please men. The styles in vogue at the present day are an indication of this. From time immemorial woman's aim has been to delight the male eye. Never has she succeeded better than she has to-day, judging from all reports. And without Dr. Shaw's assurance we are firmly convinced that few women would allow votes or politics, or anything of a kindred nature, to interfere with the time she bestows upon her clothes.

German Detected Making Sketches Promptly Nabbed

Sensational Arrest of a Spy at Portsmouth--Plans And Sketches In His Possession--Girl's Remarkable Story of a Puzzling Case

London, Sept. 23.—A great sensation was caused by the arrest near Portsmouth of Lieut. Siegfried Helm of the 21st Nassau Pioneers(while making notes and sketches of the fortifications.

The War Office has taken a most serious view of the situation, and a magisterial warrant under the Official Secrets Act was on Wednesday issued on the application of the Public Prosecutor. Lieut. Helm was immediately taken before a magistrate and remanded for eight days to Winchester Gaol

In the exposure of this German lieutenant's fortification studies on British soil a woman cuts quite a dramatic figure.

The story of the arrest is briefly that "from information received" Capt. H. de Courcy Martelli and Lieut. Salmond kept watch on the hillside overlooking Fort Widley, Cosham, Portsmouth. Through their field-glasses they saw a slim young man apparently sketching or writing. The officers despatched a non-commissioned officer and a couple of men to bring him into the fort.

The stranger, it is alleged, thereupon began to run away, but, after a protracted chase, was captured and taken into the fort, whereupon he was interrogated by Capt. H. de Martelli, in command, and Lieut. Salmond. He gave his name as Helm, but so unsatisfactory were his answers in broken English, and so reluctant was he to give up the papers in his possession, that Capt. Martelli decided to detain and search him.

This search established the fact that the stranger was a German officer, a lieutenant in a Pioneer regiment equivalent to our Engineers, while the drawings and papers in his possession included not only a drawing of the obsolete Fort Widley, but an Ordnance Survey map of Portsmouth Harbor and the town, into which had been cleverly and accurately sketched the various Spithead forts, including No Man's Land, Spit, and Horse Forts together with other fortified positions

In addition to this, a pocket-book was found upon him which contained drawings of two of the forts on the out-lying Portsdown Hill, together with numerous notes written in German caligraphy.

Capt. Bonham-Carter, after looking through the drawings and papers found on Lieut. Helm, decided personally to submit them to the War Office and with this object went up to London.

The decision arrived at in London was to hand over Lieutenant Helm to the country police without delay. Fort Widley is in the police sub-district of Havant, but in view of the importance of the case the civil proceedings were removed to Fareham, the divisional headquarters.

Inspector Able, the chief of police at Havant, visited Fort Purbrook, where Lieutenant Helm was detained early on Wednesday morning. He was there acquainted with the information gathered by the military.

At noon, Captain Martelli, who is in charge of the forts, and Inspector Able travelled nine miles to Fareham and were met there by Harold Pearce of the Public Prosecutor's office.

Captain Martelli and Mr. Pearce attended before Mr. John Sandy, a county magistrate, and laid an information.

A warrant for the arrest of Lieutenant Helm was issued about three o'clock, and Inspector Able immediately started for Fort Purbrook in a four-wheeled vehicle, known as the "county cart," to take the German officer into custody. The journey, up-hill most of the way, occupied an hour On arriving at the fort, Inspector Able produced his warrant and requested admittance on His Majesty's service The great gate was thrown open, and the inspector was conducted to the officers' mess, where Lieutenant Helm was sitting.

Lieutenant In Court.

The German officer was then formally taken into custody. Although the inspector had brought the "county cart" to convey his prisoner to Fareham, Lieut. Salmond suggested that he should drive him personally in his own dog cart, and Lieut. Salmond following suit, took the reins and drove to Fareham.

The police vehicle conveying the inspector followed about fifty yards behind all the way. The little procession reached Fareham Poice Court shortly after five o'clock, and Lieut Helm, who appeared puzzled by the involved proceedings, was admitted by a side door.

Inside the court he was searched by Police Sergeant Wyatt, and then placed in the dock, the charge against him being

That on Sept. 5 he did unlawfully for the purpose of wrongfully obtaining information when outside a certain fortress belonging to His Majesty the King, to wit, Fort Widley, attempt to take without authority given by and on behalf of His Majesty, a plan of the said fortress contrary to the statute.

The statute mentioned is "52 and 53 Vic., cap. 52, section 1.

Capt. Martelli, who had visited at Fareham, also entered the dock and stood by Lieut. Helms side.

Capt. Martelli talked kindly to the prisoner throughout the proceedings which he explained to him from time to time.

There was physically a striking contrast between the two officers. Capt Martelli is broad-shouldered, bronzed and tall, while the German lieutenant is a fair, slim young man, about 5 ft 7 in., with bright, sharp eyes, rather deepy set, and a slight fair moustache He wore a dark check lounge suit with square-cut coat, a German high collar slightly turned at the ends and a mauve tie:

He is described as an officer of the 21st Nassau Pioneer Battalion of the German Army.

As soon as Mr. Pearce rose to state the case the Magistrate waved to Lieut Helm to sit down. He did not understand until Capt. Martelli nudged him, and then they sat down together and remained so throughout the hearing.

"The prisoner, an Engineer Officer in the German Army,' Mr. Pearce said, "is charged under the Official Secrets Act, and he has only just been arrested. In order that he may have the opportunity of communicating with his friends and that the prosecution may have time to lay the case properly before the court. I ask that evidence of arrest may be taken and the prisoner remanded until Thursday week, Sept. 15.

As Lieut. Helm was obviously at a loss to follow Mr. Pearce's remarks Capt. Martelli repeated to him the effect of them very slowly in English.

"Oh, yes, I have friends," he began but he was advised not to make a statement at this stage.

Inspector Able then told the story of ing cautioned. "I was there; the ing cautioned. "I was there ;the sketches I took were for my information. I am not a spy."

"Have you anything to say why you should not be remanded?" asked Mr Sandy, the magistrate.

"If you please not to speak so fast." replied Lieut. Helm. "I do not understand you."

Mr. Sandy spoke more slowly, and then Lieut. Helm said in English:

"Oh, yes, I can be there Thursday week."

"But," said the magistrate, "you will be kept in custody. You will be sent to Winchester."

Still the lieutenant could not make out the meaning of the magistrate's words, and it required the joint efforts of Capt. Martelli and the police inspector to make him comprehend that he would be kept in custody at Winchester."

"Ah!" he said at last.

You will be treated all right there you know," the magistrate added though Lieut. Helm did not appear to find comfort in the assurance. Within an hour Lieut. Helm was on his way to Winchester, an officer of the fort accompanying his as an act of courtesy.

A telegram from Berlin on Wednesday night said: Lieut. Helm has been attached to the Military Technical Academy at Charlottenburg since October, 1909. He left there on Aug. 1 on six weeks' leave of absence, granted to him "for the purpose of studying the English language."

Arrival in Portsmouth.

It has been ascertained that Lieut Helm arrived in Portsmouth on Sept 3, and obtained a room with a Mrs. Miller, at Glenwood, Goldsmith Avenue, Fratton. The land-lady is unable to give any information concerning him, beyond the fact that the room was engaged for him by a young lady.

The young lady referred to was subsequently traced, and says, the "Daily Telegraph," she stated:

"Some time ago I was travelling in Germany, and for a time I was at the town of Coblentz. While there I met a Lieut.——(I am asked by my informant not to give this gentleman's name, but he is a young German officer in one of the crack regiments), with whom I became very friendly in a social way. The liking was mutual and as a result our conversation was often of a spirited and frivolous nature such as often occurs between young people. Perhap I twitted him about liking English girls. Anyhow, he mentioned to me on one occasion that he had been over in England, and when I asked him the object of his visit he replied that he had been sent over by his Government. More than that he would not tell me about his visit In fact, he appeared to be sorry immediately afetrwards that he had said as much, because when I wanted to question him further about why his Government had sent him over he deprecated my curiosity with a laugh, saying, "It was nothing—nothing to us, at least.'.

"I had almost forgotten about my German lieutenant when I received a letter from Lieut. Helm saying that he had received aSHRDLU CMFWYP he had arrived in England, and would be glad to meet me if I would do him the honour, as he was a friend of the gentleman I had met at Coblentz. I wrote back suggesting that he should come down to Portsmouth for the week-end. He replied thanking me, and asking me, if the house where I was staying was far from Portsmouth as he would like to see that great harbor and the ships, etc.

The Man's Admissions.

"Well, he arrived on Saturday, and as I could not, of course, provide him with accommodation I obtained a room for him a few doors away. Afterwards he came in here to have a chat with me, and as he was inclined to pay me compliments, and as I told him that I should naturally respect a friend of Lieut. —— at Coblentz. we at once became friends. So we got on to talk about Portsmouth, and what he thought about it, and in the course of our talk he showed me a large plan of Portsmouth Harbor, and pointing to some pencil marks upon it said that those were 'his work.'

"Of course, I was interested, and asked him what they were, etc., although I knew. He said they were the forts and fortifications. With that I taunted him upon his bad draughtmanship. But he declared that they were good enough. After about two hours, however, I returned to the subject, and he drew a pocket-book from his jacket, and showed me two drawings of two more forts, which were inside it, together with a large number of German hieroglyphics. Although I can speak German fairly well I don't understand German writing.

"After Lieut. Helm went that evening I mentioned what had occurred to a young officer at Eastney Barracks, and he did not like the look of affairs and said he would report to his senior officer. However, he said we must be cautious. Next day (Sunday) Lieut. Helm called upon me, and when I asked him where he had been he replied "I have been round the harbor. First I walked round, then I went around by boat, and then I slept on the strand for a time."

"Nothing more concerning this matter was mentioned, but when I asked him about his return he said that he must get back to London as he was going to meet a brother officer in London. who was returning from Scotland, where he had some business The next thing I heard was that Lieut. Helm had been arrested.

STORY OF FORT NELSON.

Proposed Terminal of H. B. Railway Is 224 Years Old.

Since Fort Nelson has been almost decided on as the seaport and terminal of the Hudson Bay Railway, it becomes interesting as a matter of history to go back 224 years to the time when this fort was established. Though the Hudson Bay Co. was incorporated in 1670, it was in the year 1686 before actual trading posts or forts were established on Hudson Bay. Fort Nelson was the first of these forts, and as soon as the French, who had begun to monopolize Eastern Canada, heard of it, Denonville looked upon it as an intrusion of French rights and sent a party of eighty men under Troyes of Montreal to wipe out Fort Nelson and other forts which had been established in the north. I. Verville was one of this party and to their credit be it said, that they traveled up the Ottawa River to Lake Temiscaming, up the Montreal River, and by portages into one of those large rivers running north into James Bay, a trip, which even in the present day would be considered a great feat. The Montreal River was one of the earliest inhabited parts of Ontario, and tourists going to Elk City to-day all note Graveyard Point at Mountain Lake, where some of the earliest settlers in Canada are buried. These Frenchmen wiped out all the posts and drove the Hudson Bay factors and their associates out. A year or two later Fort Hudson was reoccupied by the Hudson Bay Co. and a few muzzle loading cannon of small dimensions put up. I. Verville went up by sea in 1697 in the Pelican with three other ships and about a hundred men. In the straits, the Pelican got separated from the other vessels and sailed on to Fort Nelson. Nearing the fort, three vessels were sighted, which I. Verville thought were his own, but on approaching them he found he was mistaken. They were British merchantmen armed with small cannon. The Hampshire, the largest of the British vessels, fought until riddled with shot so that she and all on board went down. The Hudson Bay, a smaller vessel, was captured, and "The Daring," which belied her name, fled. Iberville's vessel, the Pelican, had received a quid pro quo from the Hampshire before she went down and was riddled so that after she anchored, she split amidships and was lost. Nearly a hundred men were stranded, but they waited until the Palmier and the two other vessels arrived before laying siege to the fort. Three days the factor and his men held out before surrendering, and the effect of Iberville's work was felt until the treaty of Utrecht in 1715, when England secured undisputed right to the Hudson Bay territory as well as Newfoundland and Acadia. Fort Nelson then is associated with the first petty quarrels between the French and English in the new world, and is memorable in the history of Canada, as witnessing the first naval battle in Canadian waters. Subsequent events show the prestige and power of the Hudson Bay Co., how a handful of men stamped their nationality upon this new land by erecting trading posts and defending their commerce with arms. By this, the west was held British until colonized under British sovereignty. From the day Henry Hudson first discovered this inland sea until to-day, Britain has held to the discovery he made, but Fort Nelson will ever be memorable because of the part it played in the early history of Canada, over two hundred years ago.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Preserving the Buffalo.

Down to forty years ago a buffalo stampede was one of the things counted as a hazard by travelers in prairie schooners across the plains. Those who can recall Capt. Mayne Reid will remember his description of the ominous cloud of dust on the far horizon which anon became a living mass, beneath whose bounding weight the face of the earth trembled and became transformed.

Within little less than a generation from the time the "great hunt" began, the buffalo had vanished from his wonted haunts. Only by his departure in twos and fours into the fastnesses of the desert was he able to save himself from extinction. He had been pursued and shot down relentlessly, and while the fever of the hunt was on, it was all he could do to save his species from annihilation.

Only a few were left, and these were scattered. Little by little they were picked up at length by the white man, now become repentent, and for thirty years an honest effort has been put forth, by private individuals and by the Government, to conserve the

New Kind of Greek Fire.

A new kind of so called Greek fire has been invented by a German officer. It differs from the old Greek fire in that it is not employed in the incendiary shells by which ships were once upon a time destroyed, but is poured out on the water and directed against hostile vessels. The fluid which occasions this fire, and the composition of which will not be disclosed, is of such a kind that it floats on the water and it is impossible to extinguish the flames.

KEEPING DOWN THE COST.

But What is the Distracted Housewife to Do?

Until the lawmakers and the professors of political science and the rest of the wise ones have succeeded in settling this little matter of the cost of living to their entire and complete satisfaction, it behooves the housewives to go right on solving it for themselves, just as they have been trying to do for the last dozen years or so.

Of course it gives one a comfortable, reassured feeling to know that the men are bestirring themselves in the matter, but in the meantime the women must plod right on and make a bold attempt to make both ends meet, with milk that isn't entirely skimmed at 10 cents a quart and eggs at 5 cents or 6 cents apiece.

The argument advanced that the original package, with its paper or cardboard wrappings, adds to the expense of the food bought is true enough. In the old days when we bought cereals in bulk as well as dried fruits, tapioca, raisins and in fact almost every other edible that now comes put up in packages, we doubtless paid less for them. Somebody, of course, must pay for the wrappings, and that somebody is very naturally the consumer.

But what is the distracted housekeeper to do? It is cold comfort to tell her how much she pays for cardboard boxes, when she has just finished reading a touching appeal in some magazine urging her to use these packages on account of their cleanliness. "Avoid the common cracker barrel, the open meal sack; in fact, all unprotected foods in which germ laden dust may find residence," is the cry. And so the thing goes around in a circle, and the only way out of it is a fresh resolve to watch the little leaks a little closer.

One cooking authority, thinking that she was making an illuminating suggestion in the matter, writes complacently, "Instead of expensive steaks and chops, substitute omelets or poached eggs whenever possible."

That's highly entertaining, now, isn't it, and helpful to the frugal housewife? She would have done better to have reversed her advice and said: "Instead of the tasty omelet as a breakfast dish, substitute a good, thick porterhouse steak. It will be cheaper these days."

But happily there are other things besides eggs and meat which will make a good meal, and it is the business of the housewife to find them.

It often happens that the easy things that can be quickly prepared are more expensive than some of those dishes which take a little more time and thought to make palatable. A piece of meat to fry is much less trouble than something which is cooked in a casserole with vegetables to add flavor and variety. But the difference in cost is worth while.

A Few Cures.

As this is the time for sunburns, mosquito bites, ivy poison, here are some cures:

To prevent sunburns before being exposed put a little cold cream on the exposed parts and dust with talcum powder.

To cure sunburn put one ounce of epsom salts in one pint of cold water, wet a cloth in the solution and put on the burns. If badly swollen wet cloths every twenty minutes until better.

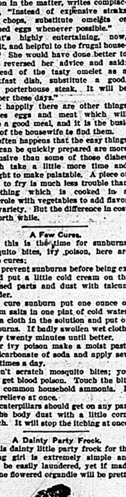
For ivy poison make a moist paste of bicarbonate of soda and apply several times a day.

Don't scratch mosquito bites; you may get blood poison. Touch the bite with common household ammonia. It will relieve at once.

If caterpillars should get on any part of the body dust with a little cornstarch. It will stop the itching at once.

A Dainty Party Frock.

This dainty little party frock for the young girl is extremely simple and may be easily laundered, yet if made of fine flowered organdie will be pretty enough for the most dressy occasion. The frock from which the design was drawn is of white organdie sprinkled over with a tiny yellow flower, the frill about the neck and sleeves being of white Paris muslin, hand embroidered and plaited. A beading in which black velvet has been run finishes the neck and sleeves, while the girdle is of black tan velvet.



OF FLOWERED ORGANDIE.

Four adjoining governments of European Russia, of a combined area about 17 times the state of Ohio, are almost completely covered with timber, the greatest portion of which has never been explored by civilized man

Milady's Mirror

Instead of wasting time weeping in front of your mirror, my lady ugly duckling, try the beauty cure from within.

Learn how to smile, how to have a happy disposition. You have no idea how it will transform your face, how it will wipe out all the dull, stupid, sagging lines.

Watch the women singing at a concert and understand the principle of it. One may have a lovely voice and sing very difficult music in a charming manner, but her solemn bearing and the lack of animation in her face will hopelessly repel you.

Another singer may not have half as cultivated a voice, but her charmingly smiling face and her sparkling eyes will attract twice the applause the other gets.

And it is so in life. Train the lines of your face to curve upward, not downward, and you can only do this by keeping smiling thoughts in your mind. Don't allow yourself to think blue, ugly thoughts, and your smile will be bright, spontaneous and ever present.

A cheerful disposition makes the eyes bright. It makes the skin smooth. It rejuvenates a woman as nothing else will.

Massage is fine for the complexion—keep it up—but be sure to massage your disposition as well.

Care of Hands.

Undoubtedly warm weather brings strong temptation to go barehanded, and the girl who does will not have white hands. For the skin will freckle, if it does not brown, and either will make it course. Gloves must be worn. One might as well accept this, however uncomfortable covering the hands may be, if the flesh is to be kept fine.

In point of fact, gloves are not half as uncomfortable as many girls fancy. To begin with, all gloves worn in summer should be at least half a size larger than those for winter. This additional space permits circulation of air, so the fingers do not become warm. Of the kinds of gloves chamois are more than protective. They are refining to the skin, softening and whitening it. As they wash easily, simply by squeezing them in soapy water and rinsing afterward, they are not to be considered extravagant.

A girl who is much out of doors, yet whose hands are white and fine, wears chamois all winter, and when she knows she will not remove her gloves before returning home she puts on a certain pair which she always wears when she has previously treated her hands with cream. This treatment consists of rubbing the backs of her hands and the fingers lightly with sweet almond oil, then dusting them thickly with powdered chalk. After that the gloves are drawn on. The chalk prevents the grease from going through the leather, and the skin is under treatment all the time the gloves are on. Such a method should be followed always by a girl who plays tennis or is out of doors much in warm weather.

If gloves seem to interfere with holding golf sticks or tennis bats cut off the finger tips; then the fingers will be free while the skin is protected. Gloves once cut do not wear as long as when whole, but those worn for recreation may be taken from the stock which is too old to wear when visiting or shopping.

If the backs of the hands burn or tan easily a mixture of lemon and sweet almond oil will act as a bleach. Lemon juice and powdered magnesia should be mixed into a thick mass; then enough almond oil must be added to reduce it to a paste. A drop of bitter almond oil to a tablespoonful of the paste improves its bleaching qualities. This mixture must be spread over the skin before gloves are drawn on and may be used during the day or at night.

To Walk Gracefully.

Nearly every woman walks far too rapidly for anything like grace to enter into her movements.

Tall women for some reason walk more slowly than little ones. Their elbows, shoulders and hips move from side to side with every movement of their feet.

If you want to be graceful don't look at your feet, but hold your head well up in the air. Don't shuffle. A little thoughtfulness and practice in high stepping will soon break you of this ugly habit.

Don't bend your back at the waist under the impression that you are thereby walking erect. It throws the stomach forward and is almost as inimical to grace as round shoulders.

Use a Medicine Ball.

A medicine ball is a good possession for any one shut up in an office all day. A few minutes spent in throwing it will send the blood coursing through the veins. Fencing and bowling are both admirable sports for those who need exercise, and every office worker should seek out some opportunity of practicing them. And in any case she ought to do all the outdoor walking she can get into the day without overwearying herself.

An automatic burglar-proof lock has been patented for freight trains.

A pneumatic bed-bathtub, which permits a sick person to be bathed without removal, has been invented by a Tennessee doctor.

Points For Mothers

There is more than one reason for letting the children blow soap bubbles. It's good, harmless fun, for one thing, and keeps them out of worse mischief. It can result in nothing worse than a little soap in the eyes and a little soapsuds on the clothes, both of which are comparatively harmless.

But it is more than good fun. It is beneficial to the lungs. There are doctors who recommend it as an excellent way of exercising the lungs, and hence greatly strengthening to them.

Deep breathing exercises are freely recommended, but who could think of anything stupider than pulling in and puffing out great gulps of fresh air. How much more fun to see who can blow the biggest bubble!

Bubble blowing is better for children than some of the lung developers that are sold. The soapsuds will rarely hold long enough to do harm to the lungs by overextending them or by too long effort.

To blow very big bubbles try putting a piece of rubber tubing about seven inches long on the narrow end of a funnel. Invert the mouth of the funnel in the soapsuds as you would the bowl of a pipe, then blow as hard as you can through the tube and note how you expand your lungs as well as make wonderful soap bubbles.

The Fashionable Mother.

The mother who gives over her child entirely to the care of an attendant after school hours is typical of the times, for this the up to date parent manages somehow, even on limited means. What is the result? Lax table manners, a curt "yes" or "no" when answering elders, and with relations no manners at all; taking what is wanted without permission from any room, and raging at correction from any source. Of course the mother resents any criticism of her method and will endeavor to explain away the tantrums as nervousness.

She wants her child—when grown up at least—to have the manners of her class, but she does not seem to realize that these will probably not be acquired from hired attendants, nor will years of struggling entirely obliterate the effect of early influence. That every small girl should at least have luncheon with her mother and occasionally be her companion for driving or calling, seems a not unreasonable demand, but many fashionable mothers are unwilling to make even this small sacrifice, if that can be called a sacrifice which ought to be the highest privilege.

Christening the New Baby.

The time chosen for a christening is usually when the child is about six weeks old, though when there is difficulty in deciding upon a name it is deferred.

The first step in this ceremony is the choice of sponsors. Parents should request only those relatives and near friends who are likely to have the time and disposition to keep their promises they are called upon to make. Two women and one man usually are sponsors for a girl, and two men and one woman for a boy, though one godfather and one godmother suffice for a child of either sex.

Usually the mother writes to ask the service of the friends or relatives decided upon to take the vows in behalf of her baby, but there is no reason why the request should not be made verbally.

Aside from the sponsors and near relatives, only a few intimate friends of the husband and wife are asked to be present at the christening, and the wife issues brief notes of invitation to them.

Danger From Small Toys.

Your children should never be allowed tiny playthings, for the instinct of most young children is to put everything they come across into their mouths.

One of the quickest and most effective ways of removing anything from the windpipe is to place the first and second fingers down the throat and try to seize the swallowed object and bring it up.

Should a fairly small object be swallowed, let the little one eat a hasty pudding or a basin of bread and milk, with more bread than milk, in order to form a poultice around the object and prevent it from doing harm. Consult a doctor as speedily as possible.

Tell a Child the Truth.

Tell a child always the truth about everything, no matter how trivial or unimportant it may be, and it will soon come to have perfect confidence in everything you say. A little one declines to go into a dark room to bring out its doll that was left there because some one has told it of a great bogy man that lurks in dark apartments ready to spring upon little children. Nurses should be trained to tell the truth regarding the most unimportant happenings and affairs. Parents should consider well before putting into words hasty or ill advised speech, for little minds are quick to grasp the meaning, and memories are wonderfully retentive.

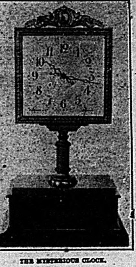
A BOUDOIR TIMEPIECE.

Something New and Odd In Clocks.



THE MYSTERIOUS CLOCK.

There is a perfect fad among smart women for boudoir novelties. The very latest device of this sort is the mysterious clock, which is designed especially for milady's dressing room or sitting room.

This clock has no visible connection between its hands and its works, for the dial is of clear glass and the hands and numbers are of gilt.

A Triumph For Women.

The election recently of Mrs. Ella Flagg Young to the presidency of the National Educational association is one of the most notable victories that have come to women in recent years.

This, together with the fact that the presidency of the national conference of charities and corrections was awarded to Jane Addams last year, would seem to justify the oft repeated utterance that this is the woman's age.

And yet after all there is nothing remarkable about the fact that a woman should be made president of this great educational association. Almost more remarkable is the fact that this honor has come so tardily to a woman.

Broadly speaking, the teachers of the country are women. Teaching is generally recognized as a woman's profession.

This is true in every branch save the university and collegiate departments. The total number of representatives from those departments is so much smaller than from the primary and secondary schools that the large majority of men in the advanced branches has little effect upon the total percentage of men and women.

But the principal reason for satisfaction at this election is not the fact that the president is a woman, but that a woman who was in every way qualified by her past service to the cause of education to hold this position of honor should be eligible to the presidency and, being eligible, should have been elected.

For once it is possible to witness the spectacle of the opposing candidates going down to ignominious defeat without a pang of remorse.

There were six of them—six brawny men—all fighting against one woman, and the woman won. One admits a grim sort of satisfaction at the spectacle.

Parasol Days.

Parasols this season have been lovely; every woman will concede this sartorial point. Perhaps the most fashionable shape has been the square sunshade trimmed with deep drooping fringe that is a fascinating peekaboo screen for coquettish eyes. Indeed, a pretty girl can do a lot of damage with such a parapulle.

IN THE MODISH SQUARE SHAPE.

Raffia, too, has been a favorite material for the summer sunshade, and the model pictured is of tan raffia with a fringe of beautifully blended colorings of the kindergarten material. A girl who is familiar with the use of raffia could easily construct a parasol for herself at small cost.

It Saves Time.

Pillowcase tubing is used by one mother for petticoats for the little children of the family. All that is needed is a hem and a band, with any trimming that may be wanted, and the skirt is done.

Sneeze Superstitions.

Sneeze on Monday, sneeze for danger;
Sneeze on Tuesday, kiss a stranger;
Sneeze on Wednesday, have a letter;
Sneeze on Thursday, something better;
Sneeze on Friday, expect sorrow;
Sneeze on Saturday, gay tomorrow;
Sneeze on Sunday, on Monday borrow;
Sneeze on Sunday morning fasting,
Your love will love you everlasting.

AS CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

Bayberry Candles Tied In Bunches With Holly Ribbon.

A young woman whose doctor prescribed for her a three months' outing in the country was dismayed by the prospect, for beyond the necessary money for the expenses of her trip she had absolutely not a cent. "And not even the strength to hold a needle," she whimsically remarked to the kind woman with whom she was to board on a farm, says the Designer.

But after a few days of rambling in the woods, sailing on the lake and other delightful outings she began to feel new life coming to her and longed to be doing something worth while. She made the remark to her landlady's daughter that she did wish she could utilize some of her time in making Christmas gifts of something she could procure from outdoors. "Why, make bayberry candles," was the answer. "They will be lovely for Christmas gifts, and those you do not use for this purpose will bring you in extra money. I know, for I make a nice little penny myself that way."

The mornings henceforth were spent together in picking the fragrant bayberries in the pasture lots, and on returning to the house they were placed in the kettle to boil for four hours, then set back on the fire, where they simmered for another hour. The contents of the kettle were allowed to cool off gradually. In the morning a cake of clear green wax had formed. It was skimmed off and reheated by placing in a pan tightly covered and held over steaming water. An ounce of paraffin was added, both wax and paraffin were melted and blended well, then the liquid wax was run through a fine strainer into the candle molds. When cold and firm they were handsome candles of a light green tint.

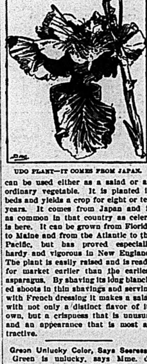
As Christmas gifts the candles were tied in bunches of two, four or more and tied with holly ribbon, with a spray of holly run through the bow. A card of greeting was also attached with a suitable sentiment written on it.

If used only on special occasions these bayberry candles will last a long time. The flame is more steady and brilliant than that of any other variety, and even when in use in hot weather or in burning low they do not give an offensive odor, but, on the contrary, yield an agreeable fragrance.

A New Vegetable.

Uncle Sam is literally ransacking every corner of the globe for dainty and novel foods with which to tempt the appetite of the epicure and also the person of more moderate means, says the Good Housekeeping Magazine. The bureau of plant industry is sending agricultural experts to the uttermost ends of the earth to bring to us foods which the people of other countries find excellent and of which we are ignorant. And, too, plants growing wild in other lands are brought and trained by breeding with others in cultivation, thus helping Mother Nature to create fruits and vegetables that the world has never seen before.

One of these foods is the udo, a plant that is grown like celery and can be used either as a salad or an ordinary vegetable. It is planted in beds and yields a crop for eight or ten years. It comes from Japan and is as common in that country as celery is here. It can be grown from Florida to Maine and from the Atlantic to the Pacific, but has proved especially hardy and vigorous in New England. The plant is easily raised and is ready for market earlier than the earliest asparagus. By shaving its long blanched shoots in thin shavings and serving with French dressing it makes a salad with not only a distinct flavor of its own, but a crispness that is unusual and an appearance that is most attractive.



UDO PLANT—IT COMES FROM JAPAN.

Green Unlucky Color, Says Seeress.

Green is unlucky, says Mme. de Thebes, a "prophetess" in Paris, who is consulted frequently by wealthy and society folk of that city. "Beware of green," she says. "My meaning is simple. Happiness and success depend on the quantity of rays one sends forth. Happiness depends on light and brightness. That is why the ancients chose white as their mourning color. Women should wear white as much as possible. When the world was shaped the trees were given their green color to save men from the sun, so green stands for darkness and is ill starred. I have gone deeply into the question of the influence of colors, precious stones and flowers on human destinies. One of my latest successes is to destroy the influence of the pig as a luck bringer. Not the unclean pig, but the sacred elephant is the real mascot, and I am selling to my clients numbers of elephant charms in virgin white onyx and solid silver.

THE BABY STATES.

When Their Stars Will Be Displayed In Old Glory.

Although the act providing for statehood for Arizona and New Mexico is only a few months old, a flag has already made its appearance in New York, bearing the stars which represented the baby states. It was displayed in a downtown office and was proudly pointed out by the owner as the work of his wife, who lived in Arizona long before it aspired to statehood. The largest flag concern in New York, when asked if it would place the forty-eight star flag on sale, said that the present stock having forty-six stars would have to do. "We have really no right to make the forty-eight star flag," it was said, "until we receive word of the change from the war department. When this reaches us the flag will stay unchanged for some time probably, because, with the exception of Alaska, there will be no more territories to add. If precedent is followed the forty-eight star flag order will not go into effect until July 4, 1911."—New York Tribune.

MANOUVRES AN AWFUL FAILURE

Sensational Story Cabled Saturday Afternoon to the New York Evening Post.

ATTACHES DISGUSTED.

A Cable Through American Sources Makes Some Remarkable Statements Reflecting on he British Army—Contempt for British Generalship.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A special cable to the Evening Post here to-day says:

London, Sept. 24.—The British army manoeuvres, it is claimed by newspapers of all shades of opinion, ended in a frightful fiasco.

The Express calls it a gigantic muddle. There was hopeless confusion Some battalions fired on their own allies in the fearful and wonderful tangle.

The foreign attaches openly expressed their contempt for the British generalship.

The aeroplanes, which were to do the scouting, couldn't fly.

MAYOR GAYNOR FOR GOVERNOR

Tammany Favors Him as First Choice of the Democrats in New York.

ALL TO HAVE FAIR CHANCE.

There is, However, Considerable Doubt as to Who Will Get the Gubernatorial Nomination —Sulzer Said to be Second Choice.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.— Tammany will do everything in its power to see that the Democratic State convention otbe held at Rochester this week as an open one with a fair representation given to every candidate.

This was the announcement made today from Tammany Hall, accompanied by the details of the plans made by the Tiger braves to attend the convention.

The announcement followed that of Chas. F. Murphy, in which he said that while Tammany favored Mayor Gaynor for Governor as first choice and Congressman Sulzer of New York as second choice, nevertheless the organization stood ready to bow to the majority.

Shot Rapids in Barrel To Win 2 Dollar Bet.

Reckless Navigator Dares Currents of Niagara River Between Whirlpool and Lewiston,

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Sept. 25.—To win a two-dollar bet, William Hill to-night shot the lower, or "Devil's Hole" Rapids between the whirlpool and Lewiston in a steel barrel. Hill made the trip successfully, but was severely bruised. The barrel was the same in which Robert Leach yesterday navigated the Whirlpool Rapids. Hill had been engaged by Leach to secure his barrel and tow it around the whirlpool so that it might be brought back up the river for another trip. Leach was to have gone through again this afternoon but his barrel was not secured till 6 o'clock to-night, and he postponed the trip till Friday.

As Hill was tying the barrel to a tree on the river bank at the lower corner of the whirlpool a bystander said, "Bill, I'll bet you two bones that you can't go through the lower rapids to Lewiston in that barrel to-night."

Youn're on," said Hill.

Hill got into the barrel, which is made airtight by a cover two feet long and a foot wide on the side, and announced that he was ready to be shoved off. So anxious was he to complete the trip before dark that he did not wait to have the covering securely fastened. He was still busy making the lid fast when the first wave of the lower rapids was struck. Consiedrable water came through the small crack left open, and the intrepid navigator was drenched. He was not strapped to the canvas hammock within the barrel and was tossed about a great deal. His face and hands were bleeding when he was taken from the barrel at Lewiston.

Aviation Tutor Broke His Back

Aeroplane Caught By Eddy Fell Like a Stone—Nineteenth Victim of Aviation,

Paris, Sept. 26.—After making five successful flights with pupils at the Aviation School at Chatres this morning, Edmond Polliot was landing on his sixth flight from a height of 150 feet, when his aeroplane fell like a stone from a height of sixty feet. Apparently it had been struck by a sudden wind eddy. Polliot's back bone was broken and he died in twenty minutes without regaining consciousness. The pupil who was with him was only slightly injured. The apparatus was a Savary two-propeller biplane used for tuition. Polliot is the nineteenth victim of aviation. He was 26 years old, an amateur boxer, a newspaper reporter, an automobile driver, and then a professional flying teacher.

The Municipal Council offered a prize of $5,000 for a flight with a passenger from Paris to Brussels, a distance of 175 miles, as the crow flies, if made today, Monday or Tuesday, on which days the councillors will be visiting the International Exhibition at Brussels. Loridan and Mahleu started this morning to make the flight, both using Farman biplanes.

No One In Canada Wants Recriprocity

Except a Certain Section of The Farming Community In The West--Sir Mackenize Bowell Interviewed.

EDMONTON, Sept. 24.—Sir Mackenzie Bowell to-day had some strong words to say in regard to the western agitation for free trade.

"Who is it in Canada that wants reciprocity?" he asked. "The manufacturers certainly don't; the Conservative party does not. I believe that a a majority of the Liberal party is averse to any such policy. It is wanted purely and simply by a certain section of the farming community, who believe that they will secure farming implements and machinery cheaper than those that can be obtained at present. And it was wanted by President Taft and the United States politicians, who are, naturally enough, interested in the prosperity of their own country.

"Canada is big enough broad enough prosperous enough, to stand on her own feet in the matter of trade arrangements. She does not need to give other countries advantages unless equalizing advantages will accrue to her. I look upon reciprocity as the first step towards free trade. Canada has progressed and is progressing under protection. Why should she change that policy? That policy has made her great; trade is expanding in every direction,

THE PUMPING PLANT

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—A correspondent signing himself "Ratepayer" in Saturday's Intelligencer, after pitching into the Council about the delay for a year in purchasing a pumping plant says that apparently the chief reason fo the delay in executing the contract are that the Solicitor, while taking two weeks holidays in Belleville had not time to look over the contract, and the Loca Expert trying to rewrite the Specifications.

The Tender for the pumping plant was accepted by the Council Aug. 5th and the Company's agents, who were at the meeting, were then notified The draft contract came to my office from the Company August 18th and I sent it the same day to the Consulting Engineer appointed by the Council, (although I was supposed to be enjoying my holidays) because there were several important matters of a technical character to be considered and as soon as I received it from the Engineer I communicated with the Company. Differences arose. When in Toronto at my own expense. I stayed over to see the Company in reference to the differences. At the last meeting of the Water Works Committee the points in difference between the Company and the City were practically settled except two suggestions from the Trenton Electric and Water Co. which the Committee considered good and correspondence is now in progress which will likely end in a settlement of these by the next meeting of the Council. I was told by an officer of the Company over telephone some time ago that they were getting the electric pumping plant ready for the City on faith that the points in difference would be amicably settled so that negotiations as to the terms of the contract will not likely occasion any considerable delay.

OPERA HOUSE.

An individual act, which for size and merit has never been duplicated in Belleville, is the feature offering of the bill at Griffin's Opera House for to-night, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The "Fuller Minstrels," comprised of six people, present an act which for catchiness and novelty has never been surpassed.

This strong bill is further augmented by the appearance of Johnson, the "Caruso of Whistling," in Song and Imitation

Fatal Delay.

Sir William Crookes, the eminent scientist, who has been appointed a member of the Order of Merit, was one of the earliest amateur photographers. He experimented with the camera as far back as 1855, and was always saying to his wife, "Sit." She used to reply, "It sounds like a hen." Sir William is rather fond of telling the following story as illustrating the "instantaneous" knowledge needed in the profession of medicine. The professor of a certain medical college cited a hypothetical case on one occasion, and asked a student how much of a certain medicine should be administered to the sufferer. "A tablespoonful," answered the young man. In about a minute, however, he raised his hand and said, "Professor, I would like to change my answer to that question." The doctor took out his watch. "My young friend," he remarked, "your patient has been dead 40 seconds."

Weather Forecast.

"I do not think," says Edmund Yates in his book, "Recollections and Experiences," "I never met a man more hopelessly deaf than Charles Kemble at seventy. Some of us were sitting one afternoon at the Garrick Club when a tremendous thunderstorm broke over the house.

"It raged with extraordinary fury, one clap exploding with terrific noise immediately above us like a volley of artillery.

"We looked round at each other almost in horror, when Charles Kemble, who was calmly reading, lifted his eyes from the book and said in his trumpet tone, 'I think we are going to have some thunder; I feel it in my knees'."

SUSPENSION OF MR. BOWELL.

OTTAWA, Sept. 24.—F. C. T. O'Hara, deputy minister of trade and commerce, stated this morning that the suspension of Yippon, the official Chinese interpreter at Vancouver, stands until the matter of Chinese frauds has been fully enquired into. Yippon has not actually been dismissed, and final action in respect to him is not likely to be taken for several days. Mr. O'Hara explains that the suspension of Mr. Bowell is due entirely to the fact that he disregarded the orders of the department in regard to the suspension of Yippon.

Tenders for Supplies 1910-11.

ADVICE TO SUMMER GIRLS.

She was pretty as a picture, with her cheeks of russet tan,
And her bathing suit was something good to see,
So she took a swimming lesson from a handsome college man—
Such a very handsome college man was he.
Round her head her hair was matted in the fashionable way,
And she wore a bun to elevate the crown,
And she wore a lot of curls, as all maidens do today,
The most expensive curls that come in brown.

In the water they went splashing just as gayly as could be,
And the spinsters on the porches wore a frown,
For they never thought they'd ever live such awful sights to see—
That young man should be driven out of town.
But alas for that young maiden, and alas for that young man,
A saucy wave came dashing o'er the foam,
And it swept away her tresses as a wave of water can,
Swept away her hairpins also and her comb.

The lake was strewn with ringlets; to the west there sailed her bun.
Here and there a switch was bobbing up and down.
In the distance you could see her store curls dancing in the sun,
Those most expensive curls that come in brown.
And a sadder little maiden never hurried to the shore
When she realized her wealth of hair was gone,
The moral of this story—must I really tell it o'er?—
Is not to go in swimming with your phonies on.

An Equal Amount.

"And how," asked the fond father when his son had returned home after his first year in college, "do you like the president of the institution?"

"I've never seen him."

"What! You have never seen him? That's strange. I shall have to look into this matter. I sent you to that college because I had faith in the president of it—because he has the reputation of being one of the ablest educators in this country. I shall insist on knowing why you have never seen him."

"The whole matter is easily explained. He's been so busy raising equal amounts that he couldn't devote any time to the running of the college."

"Raising equal amounts?"

"Yes. Every few days some millionaire offers to give the institution several hundred thousand dollars if an equal amount can be raised from others. You haven't any idea how busy a man is likely to be kept raising the equal amounts."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Sale of Gem Fruit Jars

Increased sale of the Schram Automatic Sealer has materially lessened the sale of the old style Gem Jar.

We do not believe in cutting prices, on a staple article, simply to be the cheapest place in town, thereby lowering the standard of value for that article, making it an unprofitable line for any merchant to handle.

To secure trade some have taken this means of winning it. Our prices on Jars have remained the same as advertised at the beginning of the season. We do not care however to carry these Jars over until next season, which will be the result, if we continue to ask the regular prices, while others are selling them at cut rate prices.

We have decided therefor to clear Gem Jars at the following prices:

Pints 55c doz. Qts. 65c doz. Half Gal. 75c doz.

Tin top jellie tumblers 25c doz' large size screw tops, 40c doz.

The Manifestations Of Eye-Strain

Continued.

This nerve waste may exist in a person of robust nervous temperament without much, if any, harm, but in one whose nervous conditions are unstable it must, in time, show itself.

A person with a low degree of astigmatism, or with anisometropia, (a difference of vision in the two eyes), or want of balance of the ocular muscles, during all his waking hours is sending down impulses to the eye to correct the defect, and, when he starts on near work he starts with a big deficit, and further strain results. This must mean great nervewaste.

Writers on neurasthenia agree that the ages when the disease is most liable to show itself are between twenty and forty-nine, and these are exactly the ages when this form of eye-strain is most manifest.

Again, those most affected are almost invariably people who are engaged in constant near work, such as engine fitters, post office and bank clerks, teachers and journalists.

First of Harvest Festival Services

Christ Church Thronged Yesterday For Annual Thanksgiving Services--Rev Canon Tucker of Toronto Delivers Inspiring Sermons.

Harvest festival services were held, afternoon and evening, in Christ Church yesterday and both services were largely attended, especially the one in the evening, when the sacred edifice was filled to the doors. Grain, fruit, vegetables and flowers were arranged in a most attractive manner.

The preacher of the day was Rev. Canon Tucker, of Toronto, and his discourses were not only in keeping with the service, but were inspiring and helpful. A large choir assisted in the services.

In the evening the Rev. Canon Tucker's discourse was based on a portion of the 6th verse of the 9th chapter of Acts: "Lord what wilt Thou have me to do?"

For his opening remarks the preacher said these words were ancient and full of meaning. Abraham asked them and the Apostle St. Paul asked them. In latter days they had been asked by many who were desirous of doing the Master's service. There was to-day need of asking the question implied in the text. There were various ways of doing service for God and the church. God had not given us the many blessings we enjoy simply for ourselves, but to use them for His service. We look out upon the field, which is the world at large, and the souls of men are the sheaves. We are advised by God to gather in these sheaves into His garner.

In these days God is preparing a larger and wider field for church work, such as opening up countries where heathenism prevailed. The missionary agency was to-day doing a grand work. Japan, China and India, which some years ago were virtually closed to missionaries, but were to-day opening wide their doors for missionary work, and thousands were being brought into the fold of the christian church. These great empires are now being honeycombed with missions. The missionaries, with their influence, are bringing millions under the influence of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is only a few years ago that Livingstone entered darkest Africa. Now that nation is being civilized. Thank God the great missionary problem is being solved, and what an illustration it is of God's love for mankind. It is a monument of divine grace. The earth will yet be filled with the glory of God as the waters cover the deep.

Whilst the offertory was being taken the choir rendered very acceptably an anthem of praise and thanksgiving. The Rector, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, and Rev. Mr. Fraser assisted in the service.

THE LATE R. P. HAMILTON.

The funeral of the late Mr. R. P. Hamilton, who died at Hampton, N. B., took place here this morning from his late residence, Bridge Street west. That the deceased was highly esteemed was evidenced by the large concourse of citizens of all classes who attended the obsequies and the magnificent display of floral tributes. The funeral was under the auspices of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, in which society the deceased took an active interest. There was a large turnout of the members of the Order. The I. O.O.F. Band headed the cortege, playing the Dead March in Saul. The funeral proceeded to Christ Church, where the impressive burial service of the Anglican Church was conducted by the Rector, Rev. R. C. Blagrave. The edifice was filled during the service. At the Belleville Cemetery the interment took place. Rev. A. L. Geen, Chaplain of Belleville Lodge I.O. O.F., conducted services on behalf of the Order, and Rev. R. C. Blagrave the church service.

The remains of a good citizen were then laid at rest. The bearers were Oddfellows, namely: Bros. Chief Newton, Jas. R. Brown, L. Terwilliger, J. W. Walker, G. S. Sharpe and A. D. Ostrom.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

(Edmonton Journal.)

Geo. H. Pope, right-of-way agent of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, who is in the city to-day, celebrated his 73rd birthday the other day. He is just one year and one month older than Jas. J. Hill, the great railway builder, and is fully as active. Mr Pope was born away back in the days of the Mackenzie rebellion of 1837, and he is as active to-day as many other men years younger. He is still in active control of the right-of-way department of the Grand Trunk Pacific and travels hundreds of miles every month over the rough country through which the new transcontinental is building, in the pursuit of his duties in buying up the right-of-way for the line. His hair is scarcely grey, and he thinks nothing of a hundred mile drive through the country and a tramp over some rough land, in the course of his work. Mr. Pope has bought practically all the right-of-way for the Grand Trunk Pacific that there was to be bought from Winnipeg through to Prince Rupert. He makes periodical trips to the Pacific terminal. He is now engaged in details in connection with the purchase of right-of-way for the branch line from Tofield to Calgary.

IN LIGHTER VEIN.

HELPED HIS OPPONENT.

Mr. Gladstone was once making one of his great speeches in the house when Lord Beaconsfield (then Mr Disraeli) was leader of the Opposition. Gladstone had worked himself up into a great state and referred to "the right honorable gentleman and his 'satellites.'" On this there were cries of "Order, Order," "Question," etc., which so disconcerted the right honorable gentleman that he lost the thread of his discourse. He threw back his head and in vain tried to remember where he left off, when Mr. Disraeli leaned across the table and said quietly, "The last word was 'satellites.'"

Then perhaps I shall get some solicitors' fees."

A man's voice, husky with anxiety called up police headquarters the other night at about 2.30 a.m. It was a distraught husband begging the police to help him find his wife, who had been missing since eight o'clock in the evening.

"What's her description?" asked the official at the 'phone. "Her height? Weight?

"Er—er—about average, I guess," stammered the husband.

"Color of eyes."

A confused burring sound came back over the wire.

"Blue or brown?" prompted the official.

"I—I don't know."

"How was she dressed?"

"I guess she wore her coat and hat—she took the dog with her.

"What kind of a dog?"

"Brindle bull terrier, weight 14 1-2 pounds four dark blotches on his body shading from grey into white; a round blackish spot over the left eye; white stub of a tail, three white legs, and the right front leg nicely brindled all but the toes; a small nick in his molar, gold filling in his upper right molar, silver link collar with—

"That'll do!" gasped the official "We'll advertise for the dog."

R. E. Walker, the Olympic sprint champion, has decided to go over to the professional ranks. He has challenged J. Donaldson for a match over a distance of 100 yards for 100 pounds a side, to take place in South Africa at about Christmastide. Provided Walker will deposit 100 pounds with the editor of the Rand Daily Mail at Johannesburg, Donaldson will accept this challenge.

GOLF

By her defeat of Miss Henry-Anderson, of the Royal, Montreal, Friday at the Toronto links in the finals of the Ladies' Championship, Miss D. Campbell, of Hamilton, has now added to her many honors the title of lady champion of Canada. It was a great game, and in Miss Henry Anderson the Hamilton player found a foeman worthy of her steel. Every hole was contested to the utmost, and the game will go down in Canadian golf history as probably the keenest which has ever been fought out for the ladies' championship. That the better player won was evident to every one of the four hundred enthusiasts who followed the two contestants, but Miss Henry-Anderson put up a great fight. On two occasions, when she won the sixteenth and nearly succeeded in winning the next, it looked as though the match might be prolonged beyond the eighteenth hole. But Miss Campbell, though for a moment she seemed to have lost some of her old-time cunning of direction and force of arm, made a marvellous recovery, halving the penultimate hole, which gave her the victory by 2 up when it looked a certainty for her opponent.

THE RING

Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette, the colored fighters, are matched to fight another battle at the Armory A. A. of Boston on the night of October 11. They recently boxed a fifteen-round contest at the same club and as the bout was one of the hardest fought contests between big men seen in that city for years, Matchmaker Billy Pierce decided to bring them together again. Jeannette claims he was not in the best of shape when he fought Langford, but says he will be fit this time and expects to get the decision. Charley White will in all probability be selected to referee the contest.

Lightweight Champion Ad. Wolgast and Abe Attell have been matched to fight in November before the club offering the best purse. Bids will be received and will be opened on November 1. It was agreed that both fighters weight 133 pounds ringside, but the division of the purse has not yet been decided upon.

BASEBALL

D. A. Fletcher, promoter of the all-star series of games between National and American League clubs to be played after the world's series, has arranged to play the games, despite the National Commission's action prohibiting them. Fletcher says he has letters from practically all the players, including one from Manager McGraw, of the New York Giants, saying they will report and carry out their part of the contract. Only one of the 34 certified checks sent out by Fletcher with the contracts has been returned. Johnny Evers and Artie Hofman, of the Cubs; Eddie Collins, of the Athletics; Mullin, Crawford, Stanage and Bush, of the Detroit Tigers; Walter Johnson, of the Washington club, and other players have assured Fletcher they will make the trip.

It was early in 1906 that some remarkable pitching attracted attention to a youngster up in Maine, and half a dozen managers tried to sign him. Some thought they had him, but there was heartourning one day when Connie Mack told a group of reporters:

"We'll have a new man to-morrow. His name is John Coombs, of Colby College, Maine." One of the reporters nearly fainted. He was an official of the Phillies, and thought Hugh Duffy, then manager, had Coombs as good as signed. It later developed that Mack had signed the youngster almost a year before.

The average collegian fails to deliver in the big leagues, but Coombs was different. Big and strong with great speed, but not the best of control, a good head and ability to bat, he wrote his name high in baseball chronicles by pitching a 24-inning victory over Boston, Sept. 1, 1906.

Coombs won that game, but the strain weakened him, and the next season his pitching arm broke down. The Athletics' trainer worked hard on the arm, and in a few weeks Coombs had more speed than ever, but no control. His batting caused Mack to play him in the outfield part of 1908, and he was kept on the pay roll during 1909, although his pitching was unimpressive. Last spring Coombs' hard work told. One afternoon he pitched a few innings without issuing a pass, and folks who had asked why Mack kept him knew the answer. From that day Coombs has been a sensation and his performance of fanning fourteen Browns proves his class. Among the feats credited to Coombs is a sixteen-inning run'ess game against the White Sox, with Ed Walsh opposing him.

Coombs is an out-of-doors man. He was a farmer's boy, and sports have been his hobby. He played on the Colby College eleven, and took part in other sports. He spends the fall in the Maine woods. He is a good golf player. Whenever he can get away for a couple of days he spends his time fishing off the Jersey coast.

Coombs has played in 40 games so far this season, winning 28 and losing seven.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 24.—Arthur Irwin, scout of the New York Highlanders, may be chosen to succeed George Stallings as manager of the team as a result of the quarrel between Stallings and Hal Chase. This was a persistent rumor about the hotel where the club is staying, after Frank Farrell, the owner, arrived from New York. In the absence of President Ban Johnson, of the American League, C. W. Summers, vice-president, went into conference with Farrell this morning to straighten out the tangle. Farrell also called every player on his team except Chase into his rooms at the hotel and asked each one for his version of the story that Hal Chase has been "laying down."

"I expect to do something definite before returning to New York," said Farrell. "I have not made up my mind what it will be yet."

In The Wide World Of Woman.

LESSONS FROM SUMMER.

A man writing on the subject of holidays for women advances the theory that so many women receive little benefit from their holidays because they spend too much time dressing up. A man off on a holiday, except in a most fashionable hotel, is dressed for the day once he is dressed. On the other hand, a woman dresses for breakfast, then she often changes to go on the golf links, after that she must change for luncheon and, of course, she must change again for dinner and the evening, making in all four complete toilets where a man makes but one. And to make things still worse it is highly probable that in three cases out of four she must be hooked up the back, which means a long, tiresome stand, while a slow maid, or husband who is all thumbs, is toiling over invisible hooks and eyes or tiny buttons. Frocks that fasten behind should be prohibited by law. Many a woman who is perfectly amiable otherwise loses her temper when her husband has to fasten her up behind and, if he is not slower than a taxi by the hour, does it all wrong from top to bottom.

There is much truth in this accusation of over-dressing during the summer. The holidays should be a time for rest, not for toil, and clothes should be chosen with that end in view. It is too late to be wise this year, but we can all make plans for next year. When all is said and done there is nothing the equal of a smart blouse,—the term shirt-waist has quite gone out—and a well-cut skirt. A serge skirt and a tailor-made blouse for mornings, a white skirt and a dressy blouse for afternoons. This summer the ultra smart wrap has been the new blanket coat, which is fast doing away with the sweater. There is nothing more serviceable than such a coat cut on mannish lines of light-weight, warm woolly material. Next year we shall all be wearing them.

A CHAT ON CLOTHES.

By this time it is pretty well known what will be worn this late autumn and coming winter. The shops in the large cities are showing advance models of street, house and evening frocks, also the newest ideas in suits. The latter—first of all to be considered—are of many kinds. Paris favors much shorter coats, but on this side of the water the longer ones will be clung to as being both prettier and more sensible than the short ones. In a cold climate such as ours the longer coat is more practical. But by long the extreme length is not meant. Coats almost to the bottom of the skirt, such as were worn a year or so ago will be quite out. Suits can either be severely tailored or have their severity broken by little feminine touches such as chous of satin, ties of figured silk, fancy braidings and buttons and similar devices. Sleeves remain quite plain with little fullness on the shoulder.

The vexed question of skirts is not yet definitely settled. The extreme tight skirt has not and will not be worn by exclusive women. At the same time the fashionable skirt is and promises to remain quite narrow. Canadians and Americans cling to the pleated skirt, but the pleats must not be too numerous, nor too full. The narrow effect must be obtained whether the skirt is pleated or not. We, as a nation, do not study the silhouette sufficiently. The fashionable silhouette is straight up and down. Stand so that your figure will cast a shadow, and if your shadow flares around the feet the silhouette is not the fashionable one.

For house and evening frocks the empire style is creeping in again. Some of the new imported models show the raised waist-line. Tunics are extremely fashionable, especially of chiffon or some transparent material. Trimming put on in the shape of the old-fashioned stomacher is much in vogue and makes a pretty novelty. The new hats are of all sorts. We have been told that bigger hats than ever are to be worn, but the models for autumn and winter shown by the best shops do not bear this out. On the contrary toques and small hats seem to be the prime favorites. These are trimmed jauntily with smart bows and often with wings. Some of the dressier hats have the popular willow plume, which has been rather overdone. The trimming seems to grow scantier and scantier, the smartness of the hat lying in the shape and curves and the way it is worn. At the fashionable autumn resorts where the wealthier class congregates at this season girls and women are wearing black beavers, bent into divers shapes, absolutely devoid of trimming.

EVENING CLOAKS.

Paisley shawl materials are to play an important part for evening cloaks and they will in many cases have deep, soft fur collars and be lined with amber mousseline. Black satin, which has been so much used for coats and skirts, will also be in favor for long coats, with no trimming but a handsome fastening of silk cords set low down in the skirt of the coat.

SHORT JACKETS.

If prophecies come true we are entering an era of another period of short jackets and boleros. A snappy little suit just home from the tailor's is made with the simulated bolero, with the skirt of the coat so cleverly fitted to the lower part of the bolero that it has the appearance of being worn under it. Another style shows the jacket effect made of braid and finished at the lower edge with pipings of cerise satin. The same treatment is repeated on the neck and sleeves. So many of the new skirts worn with the hip-length coats are so narrow that the wearer often has difficulty in taking a natural step, but there is no doubt that all this will be changed by the time winter fashions are crystallised. However, the narrow skirt has a certain chic that wider ones lack, and there is a possibility that the majority of the fashionable set will cling to the extremely narrow skirt throughout the winter.

HOW TO UTILIZE BACON GREASE

Bacon grease is the best available medium for frying. It is the most toothsome and the purest. Contrast the clean lines and flavor of bacon grease with the insipid, ghastly-looking product known as lard, made from who knows what. Pure leaf lard is rare, and even at its best the rich, tempting savor of bacon is vastly preferable.

Bacon, properly prepared by those who do not engage in heavy manual labor and therefore do not need much of the rich, heat-producing fat, should be fried to a crisp until it is to all intents entirely lean. Then it is a dish fit for the gods, and for mortals who know what is good. Then there is left the grease, golden brown and delicious. Now the usefulness of bacon only begins.

Hear this! From one pound of breakfast bacon you get one pint of precious bacon grease.

What to do with it? Thats easy.

Fry eggs in it. You will never again use lard. Even butter is inferior to it.

Season boil string beans with it. It is a substitute for cooking bacon with them. Two or three tablespoonsful will give the proper flavor. Use the bacon fat in place of butter or lard.

GREEN CORN AU GRATIN IN RAMEKINS.

Cook one slice of onion and a slice of green pepper, chopped fine, in one or two tablespoonsful of butter, until softened and yellowed; add two tablespoonsful of flour and half a teaspoonful of salt and cook until frothy; and stir until boiling, then stir in add two cups of thin cream and cook sweet corn, cut from the cob, to make quite a consistent mixture. One or two beaten eggs may be added, if desired. Turn into buttered ramekins and cover with two-thirds a cup of cracker crumbs mixed with melted butter; let cook in the oven until the crumbs are browned. Serve as an entree at dinner or luncheon, or as the chief dish at supper or luncheon.

HOWITT IS NOMINATED.

Young Lawyer Is Conservative Candidate for Downey's Seat.

Guelph, Sept. 26.—Mr. J. Ransom Howitt, a young lawyer of this city, was given the Conservative nomination to contest the seat vacated in South Wellington by the retirement of Mr. J. P. Downey, by a plurality of 58 votes over the other nominees, Mr. J. J. Drew, K.C., and Mr. H. C. Scholfield, retired banker.

Mr. Drew felt the blow keenly, saying that after his work in the cause for years he felt the iron of ingratitude thrust deeply into his heart, but there it would remain, for he would never address another Conservative gathering.

The only promise of the successful candidate, who is a son of Dr. Henry Howitt, and thirty-two years of age, was that he would endeavor to get more stringent assignment laws, so that the workingmen would not have to wait until affairs were wholly wound up, referring especially to two local factories, Morlock's and Clemens'.

On Wednesday next the Liberals will hold their nomination meeting.

Point Grey Is Chosen.

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 26.—The report of the university commission appointed during the summer to select a site for the British Columbia University was made public Saturday, having, although dated June 28 last, been received only last Monday. The commission have decided upon Point Grey, a seaside suburb of Vancouver, as the site.

The university site commission are strongly of the opinion that the university should not be placed on the site which may in time be completely surrounded by the city. They suggest that not less than 250 acres be set apart for a university campus, and 700 acres for experimental purposes in agriculture and forestry. This is exclusive of the forest reserve for forestry operations on a large scale. Already two million acres have been set aside by the Provincial Government as an endowment fund for the university.

An Important Post.

Montreal, Sept. 26.—Hon. Senator Dandurand, who is out in favor of dividing the Ottawa from the Quebec agency in Paris; says that a good man, socially and financially, should be appointed in the capital of the richest and one of the greatest loaning countries in the world. He says that the sincerity of the entente cordiale in France was manifested plainly at the unveiling of the monument to Champlain at Beauvert, where the founder of Quebec was born. The Minister of Foreign Affairs, presiding, proposed the health of the King of England, when everyone present, and there were no Englishmen, except a few Canadians, rose and cheered, while Sir Wilfrid's health was also splendidly received.

Countess Wachtmeister Dead.

Los Angeles, Sept. 26.—Countess Constance Wachtmeister, a writer and lecturer on psychical subjects, and for many years closely associated with the late Mme. Blavatsky, died here Saturday night, aged 73. She had been ill about three weeks. Her son, Count Axel Raoul Wachtmeister, arrived in New York Saturday on the steamer Corona.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Lord Pentland is to be the next Governor-General of Australia.

The Italian Aviation Society will present Chavez, who crossed the Alps, with $10,000.

The steamers Montcalm and Crown Prince Olaf were in collision a short distance below Quebec, and both were damaged.

G. H. Gall will represent Western Canada interests at Washington, in efforts to counteract the "Don't Go to Canada" agitation.

The cottage women of England are sending a petition to the Queen, asking that automobiles be forced to go slowly through villages.

Vigorous preparations are being made in New York State for the Republican and Democratic conventions at Saratoga and Rochester this week.

Premier Scott of Saskatchewan on Saturday denied that he was in conference with the C.N.R., as to the Hudson Bay line. He believes in Government ownership.

Blown Out to Sea.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 26.—Sam Hogarth and W. V. Van Sycle, mining prospectors, returning Saturday from the district 50 miles north of Michipicoten, relate a terrible experience. Leaving Red Sucker Cove in a flat-bottomed boat Saturday night, intending to coast to Michipicoten River, they were caught in a 60-mile gale and blown out to sea. The boat overturned, and for five hours they clung to their craft, as it was tossed about Lake Superior.

Just as the sun rose Sunday morning they were washed by the waves upon the sands of Michipicoten Island, where they lay for an hour, unable to move, and where they were found by inhabitants, utterly exhausted. The men lost their personal property to the amount of $200, and all of the mineral specimens secured from a three months' prospecting trip.

An International Cement Company.

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 26.—The International Portland Cement Co., Ltd., with a stated capitalization of $3,000,000, half of which is in preferred stock, has been incorporated under the laws of the State of Washington, to erect an extensive plant near Spokane. The company has options on two mill sites east of here, where raw materials are abundant, and it is officially announced that a duplicate of the Irvin works at Ottawa, Ont., will be built there.

J. S. Irvin of Ottawa is to be president of the new corporation and among its permanent directors will be Rudolph Forget, M.P., C. A. Barnard, K.C., and W. Grant Morden of Montreal; John P. Hartman of Seattle, C. A. Irvin, secretary, Ottawa; D. P. McKinnon, Calgary, Alta.; S. G. Near of Toronto, and H. D. McKinnon of Spokane.

Smuggling by Aeroplane.

Paris, Sept. 26.—The first case of smuggling by aeroplane was recorded on Thursday when Nieuport won a cross-country race at the Maubeuge flying meet near the Belgian frontier. He landed at Grandzeng and returned with flowers and cigars with which he had been presented by young Belgian women.

The aviator distributed the cigars among the notables present, who included a French customs officer from the head office. The latter automobiled to Maubeuge later in order to satisfy himself that Nieuport's aeroplane was not prepared for contraband work.

Lieutenant Governor Fraser of Nova Scotia Dies At His Home In Guysboro.

HAD LONG BEEN ILL.

Bridge Builders Discover A Vein of Coal Near Edmonton—A Policeman Drowned While Out Duck Shooting.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 27—Lieutenant Governor Fraser died this morning at his summer home in Guysboro. Yesterday he took suddenly ill and his condition rapidly became critical. His son, Alister Fraser, was summoned from Halifax, and arrived at Guysboro' last night. The late Governor Fraser had been in poor health since June, and since he went to Guysboro' had been confined most of the time to his couch. He was, however, in good spirits and his friends who visited him found him bright and cheerful. Hon. W. S. Fielding spent a day with him last week. It was expected that the Governor would return to Halifax and take up his residence at Government House about the end of the month.

Duncan Cameron Fraser, barrister and legislator was the son of Alexander Fraser by his wife Ann Chisholm. He was born in New Glasgow, N. S. October 1st, 1845, He was educated at Dalhousie University, and was called to the bar in 1873. He practised in New Glasgow, of which place he has been elected Mayor on two occasions. He was called to the legislative Council of Nova Scotia, February, 1878, and he at the same time entered the Nova Scotia government, but resigned in the same year to become a candidate for the assembly. He was again called to the legislature and executive Council in February, 1888, becoming leader of the government in the former body. He continued to hold these positions up to the Dominion general elections in 1891 when he was returned for Guysboro to the House of Commons. He sat through the Parliament and was re-elected in the general election in 1896 and the two succeeding elections. Mr. Fraser was elected Grand Master of the Freemason of Nova Scotia in 1892. He had been President of the Alumni Association, of Dalhousie University and Commissioners of Schools of Picton County. In religion he was an adherent of the Presbyterian Church and in politics a Liberal and in full accord with the Laurier Government. He was appointed Judge of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia but resigned in 1908 to become Governor. He married in October, 1878, Bessie G., daughter of Wm. Graham, of New Glasgow, N. S.

SHE WORRIED HIM.

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—George Stuart Richards, of Winnipeg, came all the way here to meet his affianced wife, pretty Ethel Gertrude Thomas of London, Eng., but when she stepped off the Sardinian the other day she calmly informed him she was going to marry Victor Turner, a young journalist, whom she got acquainted with on the boat. But Richards enlisted the assistance of an immigration officer and they detained her, threatening deportation and she married Richards this morning.

Preference Needed Says Commission

Royal Commission Favors Canada--West Indies Treaty--Favorable Duties Granted To Island By Canada Has Been of Great Profit to the Former.

London, Sept. 27.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The report of the royal commission on trade relations of Canada and the West Indies, issued yesterday, signed by Lord Balfour of Burleigh, Hon. Wm. Fielding, Hon. Wm. Paterson, Lord Islington and Sir Daniel Morris, comprises sixty pages, besides voluminous appendices. The commissioners strongly represent that the preference granted the West Indies by Canada for some years, has been of great value in furnishing a favorable market for West Indies' sugar, just as the United States, through the development of their own colonial policy have ceased to require West Indies sugar as largely as formerly.

The West Indies are strongly urged to make reciprocal concessions to Canada, so that the advantage already obtained may be continued. Considerable attention is paid to the controversy between West India shippers and Canadian refiners, as to the existence of a West Indian combination to obtain excessive prices and the special concessions made to refiners a year ago, respecting the importation of a limited quantity of foreign raw sugar at preferential rates.

It is recommended in any scheme for the betterment of trade relations that may be proposed, the special concession to refiners be withdrawn. inasmuch as the West Indies would regard that step as essential, but that the percentage of the preference allowed by Canada be reduced and made definite and unqualified.

The West India colonies in general report in favor of reciprocal arrangements with Canada, except Jamaica, which was influenced by the fear, which the commission think not justified, though by making such arrangements they would provoke retaliatory tariff legislation by the United States.

The Standard thinks the results of the commission are fair and equitable, and the whole report appears to be a recognition of the fact that closer political relations can only result from more intimate commercial arrangements.

The Morning Post says commonsense has been vindicated without any inconsistency on the part of the Government's free trade representatives and hopes the same arrangements with Canada, on the lines of the report, can be effected without delay.

The Times says the report is of high value and in consequence the recommendation of a uniform preference by the West Indies testifies eloquently to the breadth of mind wherewith the free traders, Balfour and Islington, approached the task.

Goderich Murder Mystery Unsolved

Police Follow Various Clues--Toronto Man'sName Mentioned In Connection With The Affair --Frank Smith Was Down Town on Night Girl Disappeared.

Goderich, Sept. 27.—No clue has yet been found to aid in solving the mystery of the brutal murder of 16-year-old Lizzie Anderson, whose nude body, with throat cut was found in the basement of a vacant house last Sunday morning.

Because Frank Smith, a painter, formerly of Toronto, was seen down town the night the girl disappeared, and his not being seen since, his name has been connected with the tragedy. Inspector Greer of the provincial department, who reached here yesterday, found blood in the cellar 12 feet from where the body was found, and is confident the murder took place in the basement.

Coroner Holmes opened an inquest last night. No evidence was taken, and an adjournment was taken until Tuesday next.

Wesley Anderson, father of the girl says she had shown her brother fifteen cents, which she said one Fred Jardine had given her. She also told the boy that Jardine told her to meet him on the street afterwards. Mr. Anderson says he went to the Jardine home at midnight that night, becoming alarmed when his daughter had not come home. He could not rouse anybody, but on going back again at 6 o'clock next morning Jardine's mother told him that her son had not come home yet and Anderson would likely find him at the fair grounds, where he was working.

Mamo Spatoro, an Hoban foreman, who boards at the house, and had the girl out driving several times, was home about 10 p.m. the night of the tragedy.

Smith had been working at the organ factory here and seemed despondent.

Salvatore Pesario May Be Murderer.

Foreman of Gang Last June and Two of His Men Get Into Fight, and, While Acting as Peacemaker, One Is Killed.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—When Samuel Salvatore, alias Figliuzzi, alias Salvatore Pesano, is handed to Inspector Boyd of the provincial police, at Buffalo, N.Y., or Clearwater, Pa., by the United States authorities, the Department believe they have secured the capture of a man closely connected with the tragedy in which Raphael Domensala lost his life in Muskoka in June last. Domensala was shot while trying to act as a peacemaker in a quarrel, and Joseph Pesano, now in custody, is to stand trial on a charge of murder.

Salvatore was the foreman of a wood-cutting gang, to which Domensala and Pesano belonged. On June 15 last Salvatore approached Pesano with a "black hand" proposition. He forced the matter with such intensity that Pesano was finally thrown to the ground, and Salvatore, drawing the edge of an axe across the smaller man's throat, swore that unless Pesano agreed he would cut his throat. Pesano consented, only to withdraw his promise as soon as he regained his feet, and attempted to run away. Quickly Salvatore caught up a loaded gun, fired and wounded Pesano in the [illegible]. Pesano ran to his shack and secured his own gun. Then Domensala intervened as peacemaker. Salvatore was advancing and Pesano was threatening to shoot as Domensala stepped between the two, he fired and Domensala was shot through the heart.

Pesano and Salvatore took to the woods. Provincial Constable S. McElwain of Bala traced Pesano to the line of the C.N.R. McElwain telegraphed ahead, and when the train pulled into the Union Station here Pesano was arrested.

It was not until Salvatore had some days start that the true facts began to leak out from those whom he had previously terrorized. A close watch was kept on all persons who had been in any way intimate with him, and finally a letter was secured in his handwriting, in which it was intimated that he was working near Pittsburg. When he was located and arrested by the United States authorities it was only on the direct request of Rogers that Salvatore was held until Inspector Greer, together with a Mr. Thorne, who knew Salvatore well, went down and identified him.

MURDER VERDICT AGAINST CRIPPEN.

Coroner's Jury Returned One Against Doctor This Afternoon.

FAVORABLE SUMMING UP.

The Coroner Dwelt on all the Points Favorable to the Accused — Nothing to Indicate Doctor's Guilt.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The coroner's jury which has been investigating the alleged murder of Belle Elmore, the actress, to-day returned a verdict declaring that Mrs. Crippen came to her death at the hands of her husband, Dr. H. H. Crippen, the American doctor-dentist.

The jury fixed the degree of the crime as murder.

The jury, which retired at 4.40, reached its verdict, despite a summing up by Coroner Schroeder that was unusually favorable to the accused. Schroeder reminded the jury that the evidence as to the identity and sex of the body supposed to be of Mrs. Crippen, was not at all conclusive, and that no satisfactory evidence had been given to show even the cause of death.

He reviewed Dr. Pepper's testimony that he was unable to determine the sex of the body, and that of Dr. Willcox, who declared he found hyoscin in the body.

"It does not follow," Schroeder said, "that because Crippen lied regarding his wife's death and fled to Canada, that he killed her. Nor must we consider Miss Leneve's connection with the case after her flight."

The action of the jury occasioned no surprise.

No evidence beyond that given at the Bow Street Police Court was produced at the resumed inquiry to-day. The police made the announcement that they had nothing further to submit.

William Long, who was formerly connected with the accused, and who purchased the boy's suit which Miss Leneve wore when arrested on board the steamer Montrose, off Quebec, was asked by the Coroner whether he had ever bought lime. He answered in the negative.

The chemist from whom Dr. Crippen purchased hyoscin, traces of which compound Dr. William H. Willcox, the scientific analyst of the Home Office, previously testified he had found in the buried mass of flesh, said that the order for the medicine was given several days before the drug was taken away. He also declared that Crippen never previously had purchased hyoscin at his pharmacy.

For the death of Belle Elmore Crippen, Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve had already been bound over to the Central Criminal Court for trial in October.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The Kingston Standard certainly knows its town. Listen to its tale of woe:

"And so we cannot afford proper school accommodation? And we cannot afford permanent pavements? But we can afford it seems, to proclaim ourselves to the world as unprogressive and backward. And yet we wonder that Kingston has not grown as it should grow and as its natural advantages entitle it to grow.

A poultry journal ridicules the idea that hens need to be specially coddled during the season of moulting. "It is no more of a strain on a hen to change her coat of plumage," it says, "than it is to produce eggs. Will our gallinaceous contemporary seriously contend that it is no strain on the part of a conscientious high minded hen to produce a good, marketable egg?.—Chicago Tribune.

The following appears in the Toronto Telegram, an Independent Journal: Every Canadian farmer would do well to paste it in his hat:

Reciprocity is described to Americans as sure to DECREASE THE PRICE of all the farm products the United States consumers have to buy.

Reciprocity is described to Canadians as sure to INCREASE THE PRICE of everything the Canadian producer has to sell.

If Reciprocity decreases the cost of living on the American side of the line, Reciprocity will be no good to the Canadian farmer.

If Reciprocity increases the cost of products on the Canadian side of the line, Reciprocity will be no good to the American consumer.

Reciprocity is either a snare in its promise of higher prices to the Canadian farmer or a delusion in its promise of cheaper living to the United States consumer.

The Granary of the World.

We have so long been accustomed to call the northwestern States the "granary of the world" that it comes as a surprise to be told that that title is soon to pass to the wheat-raising fields of Canada. Such is the confident assertion of many prominent Canadians, and if figures afford any proof they have ample reason for so saying. Canada has 25,000,000 acres upon which wheat may be grown, or five times the wheat land now cultivated in the United States; her crop amounts to 20 bushels and upward per acre, far in advance of our average, 13 bushels; our growing population will eventually consume all the wheat we can raise, and it is not unlikely that we shall have to call on Canada for supplies.

Its action is midly laxative and its being a nutritious food. it should be taken by all who are of a habit constipated to any degree.

No prescribed dosing is required, you are simply to take as much as you care for on your food probably on salads and in meat or fish dressings.

ON FISHING TRIP.

The steamer Niagara arrived in the harbor here last evening, having on board a party from Clayton, N.Y. The party is contemplating spending a few days in this vicinity fishing for bass and maskinonge.

HE PAID UP.

Daniel Murphy, by occupation a seaman, was arrested last evening for being intoxicated. This morning he admitted the offence charged against him and contributed $2 to the city treasury.

THE GHOST WALKS.

The hearts of the members of the Fifteenth Regiment were last night made to rejoice by the arrival of the pay for this season's drill. The money, a considerable sum, was later in the evening distributed among those entitled to it.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

A joint meeting of the City Council, Board of Trade and Board of Education will be held this evening in the Council Chamber. The object of the meeting is to make arrangements for the Technical Education Commissioners, who visit the city on Saturday next.

GOT BACK THE BOOZE.

A tramp, who gave his name as Anthony Bardell, last evening sought protection at the police station. Anthony, while having no means, was supplied with liquor, as a large bottle of whiskey was taken from him. This morning, when he departed for another day's tramp, the liquor was returned to him.

A LITTLE WANDERER.

David Rosie, a boy five years of age was found wandering about the streets last evening by a policeman who took him to his home on Bettes street. The lad appears to have a mania for straying away from home as only a few days ago he was found about a mile from his parental roof.

DIED SUDDENLY AT TRENTON.

Mr. Harrison Meyers died suddenly at Trenton on Sunday morning. Deceased, after arising, was about the barn and, upon returning to the house, made a remark that he did not feel well and would not partake of any breakfast. He then lay down upon a couch and almost immediately expired. Mr. Meyers was well known in this city, where for some time he purchased grain for Mr. G. D. McCauley. Of late he had been acting as a bridge tender at Trenton. Heart failure was the cause of death.

INDOOR SPORTS AT ARMORIES.

On Wednesday evening teams representing the right and left halves of the regiment, will play indoor baseball. There will also be a tug-of-war contest between members of the various companies representing the right and left of the regiment. During the evening the regimental band will render several selections from the balcony. The Signalling Corps will also have a short practice. All games are open to the members of the regiment and all are invited to be present. Spectators are admitted to the galleries. Young men wishing to join the regiment can make application to any of the recruiting sergeants on these nights.

TEST OF COWS.

Mr. B. E. Hagerman of Minto, recently tested two of his pure Bred Holstein Cows for the Advanced Registry, with the results that Flora Korndyke Pietertje, C. H. F. H. B., No. 11314, under two years old gave 305 lbs. of milk containing 12.29 lbs. fat in 7 days; while Lily DeKol Pietertje, C. H. F. H. B., No. 5916, gave 462 1-4 lbs milk containing 20.64 lbs. fat in 7 days. This latter cow is past 5 years of age. The showing is very creditable considering the unfavorable season for making such a test, says Mr. McIntosh, the District representative from Stirling, who conducted the test.

NAVIGATION.

The Steamer Belleville of the R. & O. Line is still in commission between Toronto and Montreal, calling at Belleville on her way to Montreal, and also calling here on the return trip. She will probably make at least one through trip after the first of October, calling at this port. The Steamer Kingston which broke her main shaft near Kingston about 10 days ago has been towed to Toronto and laid up, it being thought advisable to try and get the boat into commission again for the tail end of the season, when the heavy traffic was already on the decline. In case of such a thing happening in the middle of the season the Rochester would be put on to the regular work along the route of the Kingston and Toronto, that being one idea the company had in mind when the new steamer was built and placed on Lake Ontario.

DEATH OF JAS. JOHNSON.

Mr. James Johnson, a well-known and highly respected yeoman of Hungerford Township, passed away yesterday. Deceased, who was in his 89th year, was born in Fermagh County, Ireland. For upwards of half a century Mr. Johnson had resided in this country. Deceased was a member of the Anglican Church, and in politics was a Conservative. An aged widow and a family of three sons and six daughters survive. The sons are John, at home; William, of Thurlow, and Wesley, of Windsor. The daughters are Mrs. M. McGuire, of Cripple Creek, Colo.; Mrs. R. Love, of Deloriane, Man.; Mrs. Chas. Phillips, of Kingston; Mrs. Lonsborough, of Essex County; Mrs. Hillman, of Windsor, and Mrs. Lucas, of Deseronto.

The Minister's Cat.

This game is very similar to that of "I love my love." Each of the players must describe the minister's cat, going right through the alphabet to do so. "The minister's cat is an angry cat," says one; "an anxious cat," says another, and so on until every one has used an adjective beginning with "A." Then they take the "B's." "The minister's cat is a big cat," and so on.

The leader of the game must see that no one hesitates for a word. If any one should take longer than a half minute he must pay a forfeit.

They Didn't Fit.

Father—Why were you kept in after school to-day, John? Didn't you know your lessons?

John—Yes, I knew 'em well enough, but I just couldn't make the answers fit the questions.

Music Lessons.

Sometimes I walk with mother when the evening has begun.
We listen to the good night songs the birds sing to the sun;
We hear the tinkle of the brook that hurries down the hill
To join the long, dark river winding by the old stone mill.
A song runs through the tall pine-trees,
and tree toads loudly peep,
And thud-thud sound the little feet of all the running sheep.
My mother calls it music lessons. Why,
I cannot see,
For there's no dreary counting—no one says, "Now, one, two, three!"
Oh, how I wish when practicing the little notes I strike
Would make the outdoor music and the bird songs that I like!
If C sharp sounded like the laughing waterfall
Or B flat rang out like the whippoorwill's sweet call
I wouldn't mind my lessons, for practicing for me
Would be just like a concert while I count my "One, two, three."

Ye Olden Bootjack.

The old oaken bootjack, the nail studded bootjack,
The bootjack that hung under grandfather's bed!
How well we remember the tramp cats it would crack,
The tramp cats that wailed to the moon
overhead!
The stray dog that howled and the cocks
on the haystack
Broke grandfather's slumber and filled
him with rage,
And he hurled the old bootjack, the nail
studded bootjack;
But, alas, it has passed like the boots of his age!

An Old Volcano Waking Up.

According to a Seville report, a curious seismic phenomenon was recently observed near Cantillana, at a place called Mesa Redonda. From 10 in the morning until noon stones lying on the ground at certain spots within a circumference of over 500 yards were torn from the ground and hurled into the air, and at the same time subterranean noises were heard. Traces of an extinct volcano are visible at the spot, and it is believed that a new crater is being formed.

Wives Watch Men Fight Death Battle.

PELHAM, Ga., Sept. 26.—With their wives as the only witnesses to a duel, two prominent men early to-day engaged in a pistol fight that was not ended until each participant had fired his last shot and inflicted mortal wounds on his adversary.

J. L. Merchant, of Colquit county, and C. H. Tate, of Mitchell county, brothers-in-law, the two principals in the deadly fight, have been enemies on account of the latter having married Merchant's widowed sister-in-law some months ago.

Tate was on his way for a load of sand when he met Merchant, who was in company with his wife, coming in the opposite direction. A few words passed between the two men and both began firing their weapons at each other. Merchant threw himself in front of his wife, who was seated by his side in the wagon, saving her from meeting his own fate. Every shot fired by Tate took effect.

Tate's wife was standing a short distance from the scene of the duel and witnessed the affair without being able to offer any resistance. The firing was at short distance, and neither stopped until both revolvers were emptied.

When the terror-stricken women regained their senses after witnessing the pistol fight between their husbands they found that both were dead, each riddled with bullets.

Mail Carrier and Woman Murdered.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 27.—Mrs. Martha H. Distel, 42, and Paul Mueller, 35, a mail carrier, were found murdered to-day in her bedroom.

Police were called by Lawrence Distel, the woman's husband, who is a special officer at the Society for Savings Banks.

Distel and his son, Irving, aged 20, and his daughter, Genevieve, aged 18, were sleeping in other rooms on the same floor. They all say they heard the shots.

The police found Mrs. Distel and Mueller lying side by side on the floor. Each had been shot through the heart. A 32-calibre revolver was found in a corner of the room with all of its chambers empty.

The police this afternoon abandoned the theory of murder for that of murder and suicide. Despite Coroner Buesger's declaration that the location of the wounds almost positively sets at naught the theory of murder and suicide, the police adhere to the theory that Mrs. Distel shot Mueller and then committed suicide, throwing the revolver into a far corner of the room.

LONDON PHYSICIANS ARE TRYING SYSTEM OF INOCULATION.

Special Cable Service.

London, Sept. 25.—Several big London hospitals recently began to practice a system of inoculation against colds. It consists in injecting hypodermically a few million dead bacilli. The first step is to find to what particular group of germs the patient is most susceptible. In the lungs of one person pneumonia cocci must be the cause; in another the bacillus of catarrh, and in a third, streptococci.

"We," said one of the doctors, "manufacture the serum from some of the patient's own germs; specimens are obtained and carefully insulated and grow into the required numbers. They are then killed by heat and millions of them injected. If the person is in perfectly good health we try to obtain samples of the germs most likely to attack him by taking cultures from the throat and nose. Cold microbes often lurk in the nasal passages and about the tonsils for months after the original attack, only waiting until a chill or physical strain temporarily lowers immunity so that they suddenly multiply and cause fresh colds. By being inoculated with the preventative serum, the patient may often be rendered immune to colds throughout the winter."

The thumb print system is to be used by the city treasurer of Milwaukee in paying off municipal employees.

WOODBINE RESULTS.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—The weather was ideal for the second day of the O.J.C. fall races at Woodbine Park. No trace of last week's rain was apparent. The attendance was the same as on the worst Saturday afternoon, about 5,000. Three favorites, one second and two third choices and First Peep, at 8 to 1, were the winners.

First race, six furlongs, purse $500, for three-year-olds and up—Jack Atkin, 1; Lady Irma, 2; Elfin Beau, 3. Time 1.12 4-5.

Second race, six furlongs, pure $500, for two-year-olds—Tripping, 1; Solid Comfort, 2; Melton Street, 3. Time, 1.14 4-5.

Third race, one mile, purse $500, for all ages—Starbottle, 1; J. H. Houghton, 2; Compton, 3. Time, 1.40 4-5.

Fourth race, seven furlongs, purse $500, for two-year-olds, selling—Rash, 1; Jim L., 2; Huctamo, 3. Time, 1.20 3-5.

Fifth race, Roysterer Steeplechase, two miles, purse $700, for four-year-olds and up, selling—Osage, 1; Brendan, 2; John Dillon, 3. Time, 4.00 2-5.

Sixth race, Seagram Cup, heavyweight handicap, 1 1-16 miles, purse $1,000, for three-year-olds and up, Canadian owned—Ta-Nun-Da, 1; Michael Angelo, 2; Rio Grande, 3. Time, 1.47 3-5.

Seventh race, 1 1-8 miles, purse $500, for four-year-olds and up, selling—First Peep, 1; Rifleman, 2; Lad of Langdon, 3. Time, 1.50 2-5.

More Doctors Pass.

Kingston, Sept. 27.—As a result of the supplemental examinations in medicine at Queen's, the following have secured the degree of M.D., C.M.: J. G. Bailey, Rosemonton; J. M. Carnduff, Carnduff, Sask.; G. L. Cooke, Kingston; G. M. Gibson, Douglas, Ont.; E. R. Graham, Kingston.

Daily Intelligencer.

No Insurgency Among Liberals.

Some Liberal newspapers have been decrying insurgency in the Conservative party because there has been a frank discussion in Conservative newspapers on the tariff issue. Liberal newspapers have contained diametrically opposite statements on the tariff, as when we see protection upheld in Nova Scotia and denounced further west. Why is not this insurgency? Is it because the Liberals know that when it comes down to a question of business all will come into line?

A remark by Mr. Roosevelt throws a good deal of light upon questions of graft and insurgency. Graft prevails because there is not enough insurgency in parties which are in power. Men are unwilling to apply the same judgment to their own political party that they do to the party of their opponents. Mr. Roosevelt said in his speech at Buffalo:—

> "I believe in party government, but the moment a question of honesty is involved I recognize no party distinction. If I make any distinction, it is that it is a little more my business to hunt out of public life a crook who claims to belong to my party than if he claims to belong to another."

It is perfectly known that there has been abundance of graft on the part of the Laurier Government. But where has there been the insurgency on the part of the Liberals in resentment?

Colored Criticism

A press cable on Saturday informed us that the army manoeuvres in England had proven a wretched fiasco and that the foreign military attaches regarded British generalship with contempt. This rather disquieting bit of news, however, happened to have been filtered through American channels, and a few of us, at least, know what that means. As a matter of fact, we shouldn't be surprised to see the English papers proclaim the manoeuvres a brilliant success. It suits some Americans down to the ground to belittle England's fighting forces. Happily, however, many Americans are not so anti-British, and if they were reliably informed that the army of John Bull showed evidences of incompetency and inferiority, would be genuinely sorry. The preservation of peace in the days to come will be largely in the hands of the Anglo-Saxon race, provided a high standard of efficiency is maintained in the fighting forces of that race. Therefore, any attempt to belittle the efforts of the defenders of a country of Anglo-Saxons is to be deplored.

Sir Alfred Mond.

Sir Alfred Mond, who is now visiting us, attacks Sir James Whitney for expressing his views on tariff reform and preferential trade while in London, said the Mail and Empire Sir Alfred thinks Sir James ought not to have been guilty of this breach of etiquette. Then Sir Alfred Mond proceeds to serve up an interview in which he pronounces for free trade and warns us against the preferential policy. Sir Alfred, of course, has the right to speak. But his condemnation of Sir James for doing what he is himself doing, namely, expressing his own views, in a part of the Empire in which he does not happen to reside, is odd. It illustrates, however, the intolerance of the average free trader and the fear gentlemen of this school have of public discussion.

ECCLES—HANNA.

At 7.30 p.m. Wednesday evening at 874 Palmerston avenue, Toronto, the residence of the bride's parents, the marriage took place of Miss Minnie Richmond Hanna, to Mr. Harold Eccles eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Eccles, Arthur street, Toronto. The ceremony was performed by the Rev Dr. Turnbull. The bride who was unattended was given away by her father, and wore a gown of soft liberty satin with crystal trimming, and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. After the ceremony Mr and Mrs. Eccles left for Detroit. On their return will reside at 710 Shaw street. The parents of the bride formerly resided in the Front of Sidney

WAGING KEEN FIGHT TO-DAY.

Roosevelt and Sherman Forces In Battle Array at Saratoga To-day.

THE MAIN ISSUE.

Selection of Candidate For Governor Is Subordinate to the Fight For the Chairmanship — Gaynor Out of It.

GAYNOR OUT OF IT.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Mayor Gaynor has written to Chairman Dixon of the State Committee that he will not run for Governor on the Democratic ticket.

SARATOGA, Sept. 26.—The morning opened calm enough with the arrival of Vice-President Sherman. He registered at the United States Hotel and strolled over to the cottage occupied by the Oneida delegation. As he passed through the front of the great hall, there was hand clapping. From that time on until late in the afternoon the Vice-President was in consultation with his friends. He had talks with Timothy Woodruff, Wm. L. Ward, National Commissioner for the State, and a group of delegates, all interested in sustaining Vice-President Sherman's selection by the State Commission to be temporary chairman of the convention.

At this time President Griscom, of the New York County Committee, Representative Herbert Parsons, Representative Lont Fasset, Representative John Dwight and others who believe that Vice-President Sherman should be supplanted by Col. Roosevelt, were bustling about seeing to it that there was no break in their ranks.

Any thought of candidates for Governor or any other place in the State ticket was subordinated to the struggle of present Sherman men to overcome losses of delegates and on the present Roosevelt-Griscom people to prevent desertions. The latter still claim 574 delegates, while the anti-Roosevelt men claim 475 delegates.

Of course, there was more or less talk in the interval over the platform. The platform in the possession of the Roosevelt people gives a general endorsement to the Taft Administration, rescinds to a great extent the attack of Col. Roosevelt upon the Secretary of the United States, and has little or nothing to say about the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Bill. The Barnes platform lauds the Taft Administration, sustains the Secretary of the United States and speaks out boldly for the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Bill.

All of these platforms are being gone over to-night and revised to suit the situation.

During the morning and noon hours there were many conferences with delegates for the friendly and unfriendly to Col. Roosevelt and not a few of these delegates said they had been surprised by President Taft's attitude toward Vice-President Sherman after the latter had been selected as temporary chairman of the convention. They declared if Vice-President Sherman is beaten tomorrow it will be due almost entirely to the letter of Taft which he sent to Mr. Griscom.

There are many delegations here who are virulently opposed to direct nominations in any form whatsoever. They claim that the system of direct nominations is a rich man's scheme.

There is a matter here which has been quietly discussed by many of the anti-Roosevelt leaders as well as many of the Roosevelt leaders. Most of these people believe that the Republican party of the State has become weakened in recent years by the constant election of certain men to office, the selection of certain men as delegates to Assembly, Senate, Congress, County and State conventions.

Violence Not Shown.

Hamilton, Sept. 27.—An inquest was held last night into the death of the baby which was found in a valise at the home of William Batstone, 80 North John street, last week. The verdict of the jury was to the effect that there was nothing to show that the child had come to its death through violence, or that it had ever lived.

Detective Sayer testified that Miss Jessie Sweet, the girl arrested in connection with the case, told him that the child was hers, and that it was born at the Batstone home eleven months ago. Mrs. Batstone, however, denied the latter statement. Drs. McNichol and Edgar, who conducted the postmortem examination, said the little body was so dried up that it looked like a mummy, a condition that was unusual. They did not think there had ever been life in the body, but, owing to the condition in which they found it, it was pretty hard to tell whether there had been or not.

Coroner Dickson had charge of the inquest. Crown Attorney Washington conducted the examination of the witnesses, and George Kerr, K.C., was present in the interests of Miss Sweet. She was not asked to give evidence.

Denies Profits by Bonds.

Edmonton, Sept. 27.—The defence of the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway and the Canada West Construction Co., in the suit for one-sixth interest in company, or for a cash settlement of $250,000, entered by Alfred Hawes of Toronto, former shareholder in the Athabasca Railway Co., was filed in the Supreme Court here yesterday. It contains the first denial ever made directly or indirectly by W. R. Clarke, president of the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway, of charges that he secured $740,000 out of the sale of Government guaranteed bonds of the waterways company.

OUR GREAT INLAND SEA.

Hudson Bay Is the Only Sea Which Is Bordered By But One Country.

Winnipeg Town Topics, a week-end paper, says:

Hudson Bay is destined to figure in world politics, in addition to figuring in Canadian politics.

The United States Government proposes to question the right of Canada to territorial jurisdiction over that body of salt water.

It has been evident for some time that this matter would come up for consideration.

The position of Hudson Bay is unique.

It is the only large sea having connection with the ocean that is surrounded on all sides by land under the same flag.

The entrance to the bay being more than sixty miles wide, in the narrowest part, it cannot be said that this connection is by way of waters that are territorial, as the term is generally understood.

The Baltic Sea is a large body of water with a narrow entrance, but its shores belong to three nations.

The Mediterranean has a narrow entrance from the ocean, but its shores are owned by several countries.

Behring Sea is in a way enclosed by land, but its entrance from the ocean is wide, and the shores are owned by two countries.

The Sea of Japan is nearly all enclosed by land, although there are several entrances from the ocean, but its shores are owned by two nations.

The Red Sea has a narrow entrance, but its shores also belong to two nations.

The same is true of the Black Sea.

Hudson Bay is landlocked all but at the entrance, which is 60 miles wide, and no question has ever been raised that the land all along its shore line, which must measure 3,000 miles, belongs to Canada.

The question is one which, if raised, will probably go to The Hague Tribunal for settlement.

It is highly important that the jurisdiction of Canada over these waters should be maintained, if it can be under the principles of international law and the interpretations of treaties.

Repairing Sheets and Towels.

Sheets as they begin to wear should be turned sides to middle. Sew the selveges neatly, not drawing the thread too tight, or there will be a hard seam. In this way the middle part, which has had all the wear, will come to the sides. Where economy is studied it is advisable to treat towels in the same way.

NEW ORDER OF MATRIMONY.

How a Ceremony Was Very Nearly Pulled Off.

The piece opens with a couple of young people of considerable color and their bridal party coming to the preacher to get married. The preacher tells the happy couple to take their corners and then says to the happy bridegroom: "Do you, with all your wealthy goods, your bride endow, and at least $7.50 in real money?"

"I does," said the bridegroom.

"And," continues the preacher impressively, "will you cleave only unto her even when the Cubs are fighting out the tie game of the series with the Pirates?"

"I decline to answer," says the bridegroom, "under advice of counsel."

"And," says the make believe preacher, "will you stick to her even if she spends your whole week's pay for a chanticleer bonnet?"

"I'll stick," says the bridegroom.

"You're stuck," says the parson.

Then, turning to the make believe bride, the parson says, "Do you take this lemon for a husband?"

"Absolutely," says the bride firmly.

"Are you doing this on a bet?" asks the parson, "or can't you see through that veil what you're marrying?"

"Listen," says the bride, "I think he's a burglar, but he never smoked a cigarette in his life."

"Well and good," says the parson. "On your mark. Are you ready? Who gives this bridegroom away?"

"I do," says one of the bridal party. "But the money wasn't a bribe, it was merely a reward."

"Sit down," says the parson. "This is not a legislative investigation. Who is the bridegroom here anyway?"

"I am," declares the bridegroom.

"Do you know any of the lawyers in this case?"

"I do not," says the bridegroom.

"Well, it's no use anyhow," declares the parson. "The governor has ordered out the militia and stopped the match. You'll have to go to Reno to get married, but you needn't mind. While you are out there you can hang around until you get the divorce. On your way."—Southern Review.

The ...Veiled Lady...

"Make it five paces, and both fire at the word! Toss up for the word! For all I care,—make it three paces! I do not wish to live,—and by God! he shall not!"

As the combatants filed out of the corridor the orchestra broke into the merry, floating, love-provoking "Beautiful Blue Danube."

"I will be with you in half an hour, darling!" said Adolf Stahrenstein, as he neared the carriage of his Cleopatra. He seized Irene's hand and covered it with kisses. "Demidoff will come to you with the news." She shuddered and was silent,—a trembling Venus now! The carriage moved up and down the alley of trees in the moonlight; and Irene waited with her heart aflame.

Face to face, at five paces, Beverly Seaton and Adolf Stahrenstein soon stood pistols in hand! Jenks cowered outside the door, as not a party of the final conflict. He could not go away. "Not fit to be killed, even in a chance quarrel!" was the professional gambler's gloomy realization of his status!

Seaton said quietly to Orton: "The note I have pencilled to Inspector Walling will close all my business. I have your pledge of honor, all my Paris deposits and belongings go to him sealed! Now let me be quiet!"

With a gravity, (beyond his youth) Demidoff laid down a white handkerchief to mark each man's foot. It was frightfully near.

"For the word," said the Prince, who was "on parade," "let us trust to chance, Sir! Give me a coin! I will toss."

"You have it!" remarked Orton.

Seaton, whose eye had never left the now glowering enemy, quietly took his place. "Thank God! This seals the past! One of us two must die! Let it be me!" But it was of his lost sister he spoke. For as he threw his slender form "on line," there was a steely glitter in the steady eye showing the unshaken nerve which carried Pickett's Virginia Light Infantry into Hancock's works at bloody Gettysburg, and, (with a fine minutes' panic,) might have carried them on to rule imperial New York.

"Demidoff! my friend! This is the wrong man!" muttered Adolf. "I want the other!" For he had not yet earned his reward!

"Too late, mon cher!" said the inflexible Russian. "You can explain to her to-morrow, on my yacht!" A moment's silence. The Prince, with one last manly warning glance to both, gave the word.

As Beverly Seaton spun around from the heavy blow of a ball on his broadest rib, the coming Lord of Stahrenstein fell flat on his face, as the old forest oak crashes down, clutching the pistol tightly in the last convulsion of his unshrinking heart. Seaton gazed blankly at his fallen enemy.

"Too late, gentlemen!" said the thick-voiced surgeon, whose rambling words were suggestive of absinthe and Monte Carlo.

"Monsieur! va-t'en! Ill est mort!" Demidoff called Orton, and covering Adolf Stahrenstein's face, said, "Je vous salue, Monsieur! We part forever! It was a fair duel!"

His sober words fell unheeded on Orton's ear, for Beverly Seaton's flesh wound brought him to his knees.

Demidoff gave final directions to two or three habitues and departed. The doctor was now bending over the devoted brother of the woman who waited vainly for the dead Adolf, wrapped in her rich robes under the rustling lindens on the square.

Horace Jenks (with blanched face) aided Orton in his efforts to prepare the fainting Seaton for the already waiting carriage.

"Let him alone; you have killed him, you fool!" sternly said Orton.

"And the other?" Jenks' eyes fell on the shapeless mass, covered now with a billiard cloth. Some fatal fascination nerved him to gaze, as the handkerchief of the vanquished Prince fell from the now waxy face.

Seaton groaned and opened his eyes, as the bearers softly raised him to bear him to the carriage.

"My God!' cried Jenks, "You have killed a stranger! This is not Max Stahrenstein! This man is innocent! He did not take her away!"

"Who is he?" whispered Seaton.

The anxious proprietor said: "The young Baron Adolf; Stahrenstein's only brother!"

Seaton fell into a senseless slumber, as Jenks, slinking out muttered: "I am off to Mentone, and a fishing boat will land me in Corsica in twelve hours. This is cold murder! That devil woman's work!" And Orton saw him no more.

Springing lightly into the carriage, Demidoff cried to the coachman hoarsely, "Allez!" Isabel's heart beat madly!

The Veiled Lady grasped his hands, —"And Adolf?"

Demidoff pressed his hands on his eyes. "Killed at the first fire!" The woman dropped her head as if a thunderbolt had struck her down.

"See here, Josef," cried Demidoff. when the town limits were passed: "stop and come in here!" The frightened valet entered the body of the carriage. "I will drive to the landing and take this lady on board the Aphrodite. Go to the villa and tell only the Doctor what has happened. Let him attend to the funeral of Baron Adolf. Do not let Count Max know! Pack all Madame's goods! Get them quietly out! Come to Spezzia by rail! The yacht will wait there! Do not waste a single instant! Tell the Maitre d'Hotel, also! He knows me! Bring the maid, and meet me at Spezzia!" Thrusting a bank note in Josef's hand he said: "Here's an empty carriage take it! Be quick and faithful; if you succeed your future is assured!"

As Demidoff raced down to the landing, Josef drove up his fiacre before the villa. The windows were open. The lights were streaming forth everywhere.

"Count Max?" he gasped, as the Maitre d'Hotel opened the door.

"Died, ten minutes ago, calling for Baron Adolf; where is he?"

Josef drew the Doctor aside. "My God! Two at once!" cried the frightened Italian. "Horrible! Horrible!"

As the Aphrodite skimmed into Spezzia Harbor, the Venus,—no longer masked,—said with a shudder: "Do with me as you will! Take me away,—far away! I have no heart! It broke when Adolf Stahrenstein died!"

"The old Count died just before his brother's body was brought home."

"Balked by Fate! My God!" muttered the Virginian. He turned his white face to the wall.

"Where is this infernal woman; the Veiled Lady?" Beverly resumed in a hollow voice. His excitement weakened him.

"She is gone; she never returned to the villa! There is but one clue. Josef (the valet of the late Count,) attended with the party at the Ball. He, too, is gone, alone, by rail to Italy. The rest of the establishment left in five days for Furstenfeld; and, that same night, Prince Demidoff (the Baron's second) left on his yacht for an eastern cruise." Orton paused. He began to wonder at Seaton's quest. "Could this reckless woman be his runaway wife? Was it a husband's vengeance?" stein. It was very foolish of poor Adolf! He must have neglected the shooting gallery! And ce diable de Brayton! who would have thought the quiet little fellow was a fire eater? I must renew my own pistol practice."

De Brissac did not know that Seaton's marksmanship had been perfected on fields like Spottsylvania where brothers fired, point blank, all long summer days into each other's faces.

In ten days, Beverly Seaton turned wearily to the watchful Orton. "What

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 26.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market offerings to-day consisted of 1625 cattle, 2080 sheep and lambs, 825 hogs and 280 calves. Cattle supplies consisted chiefly of northwest ranch stock, but a good clearance was made. Choice Ontario steers sold at 6c; good at 5½c to 5¾c; fairly good at 5c to 5¼c; fair at 4½c to 4¾c, and common at 4c to 4¼c per lb. Sales of full carloads of northwest ranch steers and heifers were made at 5¼c to 5½c and 5¾c per lb.; domestic cows brought from 3c to 4½c, and bulls for canning purposes 3c to 3¾c per lb. Hog prices showed an advance of 5c to 10c per cwt., attributed to smaller receipts and increased demand from packers. Trade was active at $9.30 to $9.50. Supplies of sheep and lambs were large, but demand was good, and sales of sheep were made at 4c and lambs at 5½c, 5¾c and 6c per lb. Calves met with a good demand at from $3 to $12 each.

GREENLEAF & SON

No. 1286

One does not buy a bedstead. For buying means to incur expense; and a bedstead is an investment—a lifelong one. So the bed good enough for your home should be all a bed can be. It is, when this trademark is on its footrail.

THE IDEAL GUARANTEED LINE

Made in 98 different styles.

Look for that trademark. You may need to pay a trifle more to have it on the bed you buy. But it is worth that little more when it is "Ideal" quality.

Worth more, because the snow-white enamel remains white (does not turn dingy gray, or yellowish.) Worth more, because that "Ideal" trademark guarantees the buyer a metal bed that will not rattle; nor become wobbly; nor ever look cheap. Worth far more than the little extra price — perhaps forty cents—for forty technical reasons.

We who make and guarantee "Ideal" Metal Beds believe many people think betterness is valuable when it affects sleep.

For those people we have printed a little booklet called "The Philosophy of Sleep." Your copy is to be sent quite free for your name and the name of your dealer if you ask for Booklet No. 109 6

The Message From King.

London, Sept. 27.—The officers of the Queen's Own who are down with typhoid fever are progressing favorably, His Majesty's kind enquiries after them being much appreciated.

Before leaving England, Col. Pellatt received the following telegram from the King:

"To Sir Henry Pellatt, officers and non-commissioned officers and men of the Queen's Own Canadian Rifles:

"The King wishes you all God-speed and a safe return to Canada, and hopes you carry back with you many pleasant recollections and practical experiences from your association with the troops of the Mother Country. His Majesty trusts those who have had the misfortune to be indisposed may soon be restored to health. (Signed) "A. Bigge."

The following was despatched in reply:

"Sir Arthur Bigge, Balmoral Castle.

"Sir Henry Pellatt, officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada humbly thank his gracious Majesty the King for his kind wishes on their safe return to Canada, and assure His Majesty of the deep loyalty at all times. They return to Canada with most pleasant recollections of the visit."

Aldershot, Sept. 27.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Yesterday's bulletin states that Lieuts. Muntz and George are convalescent, and that Capt. George is progressing favorably.

Wanted to Leap Into Niagara.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 27.—Otto Williams, who essayed to slide across the river on a tight wire during the carnival here in June, landed in the Police Court over the river yesterday, because he declared he would leap from the upper bridge into the river, "just to show that I can go Larson and Leach one better." He was fined $5 by Judge Piper, who advised him that his feats might be appreciated more in Toronto, and he had better go back there.

Williams is a former Toronto steeplejack, who spent the latter part of the summer in a Toronto amusement place under the name of Great Houdin. When the police interfered with Williams he was dressed in tights ready for the leap.

In Unknown Labrador.

Middlebury, Vt., Sept. 27.—Far into the wilderness of western Labrador, where no white man is known to have trod before, Prof. Raymond MacFarland of Middlebury College, has traveled in a canoe along rivers and lakes, and on foot through forests and over mountains during the past two months. With Profs. Thos. C. Brown and Phelps N. Sweet, also of Middlebury College, who accompanied him during a portion of his expedition, he returned to Middlebury yesterday. Much valuable geographical and topographical data and many interesting photographs were secured during the 900 mile trip in Quebec and Labrador.

A Million Owing.

Winnipeg, Sept. 27.—Controller McArthur stated yesterday that negligence of the C.P.R. in providing proper stock yard accommodation was sufficient provocation for collection of many thousand dollars in taxes, from which the company has been exempt for thirty years by virtue of this agreement. The controller set the total at $910,836. He said $84,264 was forfeited this year, and it was up to the city to collect the arrears.

Wilful Murder.

London, Sept. 27.—A verdict of wilful murder was returned against Dr. H. H. Crippen by a coroner's jury at the conclusion of the inquest into the death of Belle Elmore Crippen yesterday. The jury was out only a short time. Miss Leneve, charged as accessory after the fact, was not included in the verdict.

Payne-Aldrich Tariff Profitable to Canada.

New York, Sept. 27.—An Ottawa despatch to The Herald says:

Now that the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act has been in force for more than a year, it is possible to show the beneficial affect of the reductions on duty on various Canadian products.

In nearly every instance where the tariff was lowered Canadian exports increased. The most notable instance is cream. The old duty was practically prohibitive, only $8,871 worth of milk and cream being exported to the United States in the year ending July 31, 1909. The exports for the year ending July 31, 1910, were valued at $570,308.

There is a table showing the values for the year ending July 31, 1910, on other commodities on which the tariff was reduced when the Payne-Aldrich Act went into effect, Aug. 5, 1909:

On Trial For Murder.

Barrie, Sept. 27.—The chief cases on the docket of the fall assizes, which opened here yesterday, were the Michael Fraser marriage case and the child murder charge against Mary Nolan and Thomas McNulty of Orillia.

Justice Britton briefly related the facts concerning the murder. The child was born at a house in Toronto on March 10. Soon after Mary Nolan left the city, carrying the child and a valise. She alighted at Hawkestone and started down the track to go to Rugby, as she stated. She was overtaken by Noah Cotton, to whom she told the story of being a married woman. He invited her to his home, where she was given her supper, and then driven to the station by a brother of Cotton. At the station she was seen to be without the baby, but still carrying the valise. It is alleged she had strangled the baby and hidden it in the valise. This she afterwards threw into the river. It was found later in Lake Couchiching.

It is charged against the man, McNulty, that he was an accessory before the fact, having counseled the girl to the action.

There are 43 witnesses for the crown. Mr. Robinette will press for a reduction of the murder charge against the woman to that of manslaughter. She will be tried first and used as the chief crown witness against McNulty, who must fight the murder charge.

The Fraser case is an attempt by relatives of Michael Fraser, aged 80, to quash his marriage to Hannah Robertson, aged 50, under sensational circumstances. Fraser is wealthy.

Asks for Investigation.

Saratoga, N.Y., Sept. 27.—At the meeting of the Republican State committee last night, Chairman Woodruff read a letter from Vice-President Sherman, asking for an investigation by the committee of the charge that his selection for temporary chairman of the state convention was brought about through trickery, and stating that, if such charge were substantiated, he would not care to serve.

F. C. Stevens, superintendent of public works, loomed large yesterday as an available candidate for governor. Some of Mr. Roosevelt's friends pointed out that Mr. Stevens was a Hughes' man, but in the conduct of his office, had many friends among the organization Republicans, who admit that Stevens would make a strong candidate. Efforts were also made during the day to have Representative Bennet of New York withdraw his candidacy to make way for an up-state man. Mr. Bennet, however, was not inclined to be persuaded.

Accused of Embezzlement.

Woodstock, Sept. 27.—A. McNeal, treasurer of the Embro Public School Board, is in custody in that village, his arrest having taken place on Saturday on the charge of misappropriating about $500 of funds belonging to the village board.

McNeal spent Sunday in the village lockup and yesterday afternoon his preliminary hearing was commenced before Justices of the Peace Ross, Cody and Creighton, with Crown Attorney Ball of this city prosecuting, and was adjourned until this afternoon.

It is alleged that the treasurer drew from the treasury in the school board's name more money than there were funds to meet.

A Fatal Joke.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—James Wright, 60 years old, was taken into custody Sunday on a charge of causing the death of his wife. As Mrs. Wright, who is 75 years old, attempted to sit down, her husband, it is alleged, as a "joke," pulled a chair from beneath her and she fell to the floor, injuring her spine. Death followed soon after.

Murphy Personally Investigates.

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—Hon. Charles Murphy, Secretary of State, went to the Printing Bureau yesterday and resumed his personal enquiry into the affairs of that institution. This is the first time Mr. Murphy himself has been there since the disappearance of Gouldthrite, and his visit caused a flutter in the Department.

A Clerical Exodus.

Brantford, Sept. 27.—Three local pastors are leaving Brantford. Rev. J. B. Champion of Calvary Baptist, goes to Philadelphia this week. Rev. G. A. Lowes of Shenstone Baptist, goes to Preston. Rev. T. M. Howard has resigned at St. James' and goes to Forest Anglican Church in November.

THE LOCKJAW GERM.

Its Virulent Poison and the Antitoxin That Conquers It.

The popular belief that a wound from treading on a rusty nail is very likely to cause tetanus is quite correct. This is not because it is a nail or is rusty, but because by lying on the ground it has become infected with the germs of lockjaw. Moreover, as the punctured wound caused by the nail bleeds but little and this blood dries up and excludes the air, the most favorable conditions for the development of tetanus exist, for, as Kitasato, the Japanese bacteriologist, proved, the absence of oxygen is most favorable to the growth of this germ. The germ itself looks very much like a tack. So virulent is it that its toxin in doses of one-two hundred thousandth of a teaspoonful will kill a mouse. It has been found by experiment that the poison it carried up to the spinal cord, not by the absorbents or the blood vessels, as are other poisons, but through the motor nerves themselves. Fortunately an antipoison or antidote has been developed, but so prompt is the action of the poison that in an animal two minutes after the injection of a fatal dose of the poison twice as much of the remedy is required as if it had been administered with the poison. After eight minutes ten times the amount and after ninety minutes forty times the original amount is necessary. This antitoxin is entirely harmless.

As a result of antiseptic methods lockjaw is now almost unknown except after neglected wounds, instead of being terribly frequent, as it formerly was. When it is feared the antitoxin is used as a preventive, and when it has developed as a cure.

In animals, for naturally horses suffer enormously and more frequently than man, the same antitoxin is used. In 163 horses that had operations performed on them, but were protected by the antitoxin, not one developed tetanus, whereas of eight cases unprotected by the antitoxin five developed tetanus. The result of all these experiments has been that what is known as Fourth of July tetanus has been enormously diminished chiefly by the antitoxin used as a preventive.—W. W. Keene, M. D., LL. D., in Harper's Magazine.

Passing of the City Horse.

Yes, the horse is going from the streets of New York city. Day by day his shadow grows less and the form of the automobile takes its place. The horse is becoming the conspicuous object. A careful count made one day last week over the less than a mile of streets between the Grand Central station and Herald square emphasized this fact. Going along Forty-second street, Fifth avenue and Thirty-fifth street, showed thirty-eight automobiles before Fifth avenue was reached, seventy-four more in sight as the corner was turned, then sixty-seven on the way to Thirty-fifth street and forty-five before Herald square was reached—224 in all. In all of that distance the horses numbered only fifty-one—New York Herald.

Census Taking In China.

Two magistrates of Soochow, China, saw trouble recently in the towns to the south of Soochow. The disturbances were caused by the census takers. The country people say that their names are being taken for the building of the new railways; that each crosstie requires that a name be placed beneath it and the person whose name is thus used dies at once. In one town five people are said to have died immediately after their names were taken. The mob forced one unfortunate magistrate to issue a guarantee, stamped with his official seal, that no one in this village would die within ten years. —North China Herald.

Agricultural Alaska.

Alaska has some 20,000,000 acres—as large an area as the total farming land in Ohio—that are considered strictly agricultural land. Grain may be matured, and hay, potatoes and many vegetables succeed in this region. The climate is more favorable for farming than that of Finland, where 3,000,000 people live by that industry, and compares well with the climate of Sweden and Norway, where agriculture thrives. It has been found that berries and small fruits will grow well in nearly all sections south of the arctic circle and that currants, raspberries and gooseberries succeed better than in the eastern states.

Eye as Disease Indicator.

In an address before the international electro-homeopathy congress Dr. W. Anderschon of Norway described how the new system of disease diagnosis by the eye was discovered by Professor Peozely of Poland. In capturing an owl as a boy Professor Peozley broke its right leg and he noticed that a black line at once appeared in its right eye, which faded away as the fracture healed. Many years later he became a professor of medicine and by studying the eyes of hundreds of patients formed the theory of diagnosis of diseases by lines on the iris.

Boating Don'ts.

A few rules might be usefully formulated for the benefit of men who know nothing about the handling of a sail or even an oar. We would suggest these:

1. Don't take more than six women out boating when the water is rough.
2. Don't take six women out when the water isn't rough.
3. Don't take any women out in either case.
4. Don't go yourself.

These four don'ts, carefully followed, will prevent great loss of life.—London Graphic.

PRINCESS LOUISE LOOKED ON AS DOMINION'S OWN.

She Chose George of Argyle as Her Husband by Dancing With Him at a State Ball—She Did the Ironing for a Woman Whose Daughter Was Going to See the Princess—She Is a Very Capable Sculptress.

The announcement that at the expiration of Earl Grey's tenure of office the Duke of Connaught, brother of the late King Edward VII., will be Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada, recalls the time when Princess Louise, with the Marquis of Lorne (the Duke of Argyll) lived in Canada. She was the first and, so far, the only one of the royal line to take up residence in Canada for a time.

Many interesting tales could be told of the life of Princess Louise. She is one of Britain's energetic princesses, and just recently (March 18) celebrated her sixty-second birthday. The Duchess of Argyll's birthday was spent in the quasi-seclusion which marked the court of Queen Victoria succeeding the death of the Prince Consort. After the marriage of her next elder sister (now Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein) Princess Louise became the constant companion of her august mother, Queen Victoria, to whom she admirably devoted herself.

It is well known that a royal princess must broach the subject of marriage if she marries a commoner. Queen Victoria "put the question" to Prince Albert by showing him Windsor with its beauties, and then saying: "All this may be yours." The Queen of Holland sent Prince Henry a twig of white heather. The Duchess of Argyll took the following means of proposing to the Marquis of Lorne: She was about to attend a state ball, and gave out that she would choose as her partner for the first dance the man she intended to honor. She selected the marquis who subsequently became her husband.

In the autumn of 1870 the official announcement was made that Queen Victoria had given her consent to the marriage of her fourth daughter to the eldest son of the Duke of Argyll. The marriage of the Queen's daughter to George of Argyll was very popular. The Duke of Argyll took a great interest in politics, and for ten years was member of the British House of Commons. He was appointed Governor-General of Canada in 1878, but unfortunately a serious sleighing accident to the princess, causing acute suffering and threatening her with protracted deafness, compelled their return to England before the marquis had completed his term of office. Their stay in Canada was marked by great hospitality and many acts of kindness. It was with genuine regret, therefore, that the people of Canada heard of their early return to England.

A pretty story is told of Princess Louise when in Canada: She was sketching one afternoon in the neighborhood of a town where she was to be present with the Governor-General at a great function. The day was hot, and she became thirsty, so she went to a near-by cottage and asked for a drink of water. The mistress of the house was ironing.

"I would gladly give you a drink," she said, "but I have no water in the house, and I haven't time to go and get it, for I'm ironing a dress for my daughter to wear to-day when she goes to see the Queen's daughter."

"Then," said the Queen's daughter, "if you will get me the water I will go on with the ironing."

A story is told of an Ottawa dentist whose work was much appreciated by Princess Louise. The dentist was offered a position in the royal household, but the girl who afterwards became his wife objected to leaving Canada, and he gave up the chance of a royal practice.

Since her return to England the princess has kept herself employed, while the duke has been absorbed in politics, literature and his hobbies, such as the development of East Africa. The duchess, apart from her social duties, devoted herself to art. In the studio attached to the beautiful apartment in Kensington Palace, London, which was granted to her on the death of the Duchess of Inverness, Princess Louise has worked diligently and successfully as a sculptress, and the result of her work and instruction by Sir Edgar Boehm can be seen in many examples of her work, which has attracted public notice and expert approval. Among the chief pieces of her work are the statue of Queen Victoria which occupies a prominent place in Kensington, and the beautiful memorial to the 6,000 colonials who laid down their lives for the Empire, in St. Paul's Cathedral, London.

Princess Louise is now to have the only English royal residence in France. A charming little chalet has just been erected by the Duke of Argyll in the Hardelot estate in Picardy, France, commanding a beautiful view over far-reaching, undulating pine forests and over the English Channel. Hardelot has an excellent golf course, the most curious feature of which is that the first teeing-ground is situated on the top of one of the towers of old Hardelot chateau. The summer seasons will find the princess and the duke in their French chalet.

Potatoes on the Lawn.

The potato patches that the visitor sees in front of many even handsome homes in the western provinces are a matter of surprise and curiosity until he learns that the rich, clay soil that grows "No. 1 hard" is too stiff, when first borken up, to make a nice lawn. The people therefore have found that it is a capital idea to plant potatoes or some other garden truck for a season or two and the working of the ground necessary for this prepares it splendidly for the grass seed.

A fool is unable to see his own faults. A wise man, seeing his own faults, is able to keep other people from noticing them.—Chicago Record Herald.

IT'S ATHABASCA NOW.

The Landing Is the Latest Town to Have Growing Pains.

A live Board of Trade is that of Athabasca Landing. Its last message has just arrived by mail at this office, says The Canadian Courier, radiating optimism in telling of the industries at the far port of the north. From all accounts the Landing is developing into a whacking big place, taking on a national aspect since the railroads began to project into the wilds. The story of Athabasca starts with the fur; with the bear, the fox and the coyote—and the pelt-hunters dropping into town. Then come the settler trekking up from Southern Alberta, where he had put Parliament Buildings into the fur post at Edmonton, turning it into a capital of a large province. Peace River became known as a farming district. Cattle and horses roamed on the Arctic plains all winter, fanned by the chinook winds. Oats, barley and wheat sprouted; this year the acreage sown bettered last year 100 per cent. Lumbering has of late come into Class A with farming as a "leading industry." If you paddle up the Athabasca from above the town for 100 miles you will see nothing but timber berths, spruce, pine and poplar. Two mills saw wood at Athabasca and there is a portable mill in addition for the chaps who pull their own logs out of the stream. Fishing is good. White fish in Lesser Slave and Lake La Biche have put dollars into the pockets of frontiersmen; nor are they all yet jerked out. Indeed the fisheries of Athabasca have only been tapped. Owing to the lack of rapid transportation, fishermen have had to confine their operations to a short period in the winter. No wail about transportation now. Boats and railroads are the talk of the town for they do say the Landing is to be the Montreal of the north. As yet express trains are not shrieking into Athabasca, but you can almost hear the shouts of the construction gangs from the east and south. Boats are a fact at Athabasca, have been more or less for 25 years. Seventy-five brand new flat boats are annually turned by the citizens. Lately, with the advent of the Northern Transportation Co. have come three liners, the biggest chugging on the Athabasca River, 120 feet long. Building steam boats has been attempted on a small scale. Last year the Northern Navigation Co.'s engineers built a whole steamboat, 40 horse-power boiler, everything except the engines.

Athabasca Landing has one great lack. We quote the Board of Trade: "There is an excellent opening here for a brickyard. The nearest brickyard to Athabasca Landing is 100 miles distant, and as next year promises to be a big building year for Athabasca Landing there will be a heavy demand for bricks, and a local company could without difficulty compete with any outside yards."

Ten years ago Athabasca Landing was the jumping-off place for Yukoners who when they got that far figured they were just about at the end of the earth.

Known In Rowing Circles.

Accompanying the Queen's Own Rifles on their visit to Aldershot, is Maj. Robert K. Barker, who is well known in rowing circles, both in England and the great Dominion. He has frequently accompanied the famous Argonauts of Toronto to Henley regattas as coxswain and manager. During the South African war he commanded "C" Company of the first Canadian contingent—the Royal Canadian Regiment of Infantry. While this regiment lay at Belmont night lights in the surrounding country gave cause for alarm. Peculiar light flashes from Kaffir kraals near Belmont led Capt. Barker and a small party of men to investigate the presumed Boer signals. The phantom lights lured the Canadians to a cluster of straw-covered huts, where, in the deepest darkness, they crept on hands and knees to the spot from which the apparent messages were being sent to the Boers. A sudden dash resulted in a surprise for both the black men and the Britons, for the natives were simply holding a weird funeral service over the body of a very small infant of the tribe.

A Census Estimate.

The census and statistics branch at Ottawa estimates that on March 31, when the fiscal year closed, Canada had a population of 7,489,781, it being estimated that there was a growth of 305,000 over the year previous. In detail the Department estimates the population as follows:

Maritime Provinces, 1,606,878; Quebec, 2,124,834; Ontario, 2,687,861; Manitoba, 496,111; Saskatchewan, 377,590; Alberta, 321,862; British Columbia, 321,733; unorganized territories, 59,050. Immigration not shown by provinces, 10,862.

These calculations indicate that the census, which will be taken June next, will show Canada to have a population of between eight and nine millions.

When Bears Intrude.

"Bear fur has been so low in price the last few years that I have not tried to catch them if they would let my camps alone and keep out of mischief," writes a New Brunswick trapper to The Fur News. "But they quite often break into the camps, and then I have to kill them, whether the fur is good or not. If they do get into a camp butter and coffee seem to be their first choice, but they generally smash everything that will break, and what they don't eat they will destroy, and if they once learn to break into a camp the only way to stop them is the trap or gun."

Makes Copper Into Iron.

L. R. Keogh, of Ottawa Collegiate Institute staff, has made a discovery of great scientific and possibly financial importance.

After years of labor and investigation he has succeeded in transmuting copper into iron. This, he claims, has never before been accomplished, and demonstrates the fact that the transmutation of elements is possible.

Mr. Keogh states that to his knowledge this has never been proven before.

In Nuremburg, Germany, there still are in use more than 1700 houses that were built in the sixteenth century and more than 3500 erected in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

AN INFERNAL MACHINE.

How It Was Prevented From Blowing Up a Ship.

By SALLIE MENDEM.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

A party of travelers was assembled on the upper deck of the ocean liner Eric, four days out from Southampton, England, bound for New York. Walter Ricker had met and traveled with Miss Eugenia Floyd. They had become engaged and were returning to their homes to secure their parents' sanction to their union.

The ocean during the voyage had run smooth, but the course of true love had not. An Englishman who permitted the fact to leak out that he was the eldest son of an earl and was going to America in search of a wife paid considerable attention to Miss Floyd, much to the annoyance of Mr. Ricker. The name under which this scion of British nobility traveled was plain John Mervale. He wore a checkerboard suit with golf cap to match and was the best shuffleboard player on the ship.

Mr. Mervale had settled himself into a steamer chair beside that of Miss Floyd, while Mr. Ricker was chatting or trying to chat with other young ladies of the party. His attention was not given to the young ladies, but to the compliments the Britisher was paying his fiancee and the pleasure with which she received them.

THE CAPTAIN HESITATED.

Now comes a deck steward with a wireless telegram in his hand, which he delivers to Mr. Mervale. The gentleman reads it, starts, and his hand trembles. He rises at once, seeks the captain of the ship and hands him the message, signed by the Southampton superintendent of police:

"One of your pieces of baggage was left on the dock. There is every reason to believe that an infernal machine with your name and address on it was shipped in its stead by anarchists with the intention of blowing up the ship."

The captain turned pale.

"Where is your baggage?" he asked Mr. Mervale.

"Part in the baggage room and part in my stateroom."

"Can this thing be in your stateroom?"

"No."

"Very well. We must get out what you have in the baggage room immediately."

The captain, attended by Mr. Mervale, went down on to the main deck and, entering the baggage room, ordered all the Britisher's luggage pulled out. There was a suspicious looking box about which the latter seemed very uncertain. He said that his mother had done his packing and he was not sure whether this box belonged to him or not. One of the men present put his ear to the box and distinctly heard the ticking of machinery. This was enough. The captain ordered the box thrown overboard.

"One moment," said Mr. Mervale. "I'm not sure but that's a clock in there my mother asked me to take over and give to her sister, my aunt, who is living in America."

"We can't take any risk," said the captain. "Heave the box overboard."

"But, captain," persisted the Englishman, "if that box is really mine it contains several articles of great value. My mother spoke to me about it, but till this moment it had escaped my mind."

"The ship and cargo are worth too much money to take any risk, and the lives of the passengers certainly cannot be jeopardized."

"Nevertheless I protest against my property being jettisoned, and I am not sure but this box is mine and contains family heirlooms of great value sent by my mother to relatives in America. I think it quite probable that some one on the dock heard the ticking of the clock and informed the superintendent of police that the box was an infernal machine, hence the telegram. Suppose we open the box and find out."

"Not on your life!" said the captain. "Very well. I have another plan to propose. Lower one of the lifeboats, place the box in it and tow the boat with a line long enough to be perfectly safe."

As these words were spoken the box was being carried out and in another moment was resting on the rail ready to go overboard. Mr. Mervale made so strong a protest that the captain hesitated. Mr. Mervale declared that if the box contained his property he would hold the captain responsible for its destruction. The captain, influenced by this argument, changed his mind and ordered a boat lowered. The box was put in the bottom of the boat, which was towed at the end of a 200 foot line.

The matter was not permitted to get out among the passengers till after the infernal machine was in tow, and then it was no longer possible to keep it secret. People gathered on the stern clamoring to know why the boat with its contents was being put out, and when it was at a safe distance those who knew admitted that there was a box in the boat which might contain an explosive. Immediately the news spread that anarchists had endeavored to blow up the ship and it had been saved only by a wireless telegram from the chief of the Southampton police.

Mr. Mervale, who had received the telegram and among whose baggage the anarchists had placed the explosive, at once became the most important man aboard, not excepting the captain. Passengers crowded around him to learn every detail. He endeavored to calm them, telling them that he believed a mistake had been made and that the box simply contained a clock and other family heirlooms.

As distinguished men find their value enhanced by always keeping themselves before the public, so Mr. Mervale gained with Miss Floyd by his prominence, even if it were only on account of having had among his baggage that which might blow the ship and passengers sky high. Somehow Ricker, who had seemed to her quite a man when pulling her in a boat on Lake Como, now appeared equally tame in comparison with this earl's son, who had become the center of attraction for the whole ship. The former gradually gave way to the latter, and Miss Floyd, instead of walking the deck or sitting in a steamer chair all day in company with Mr. Ricker, merely began these sociabilities with him and continued them with Mr. Mervale.

Meanwhile the infernal machine bobbed up and down on the waves. Knots of passengers constantly loitering on the stern looked at it and swapped opinions whether in case of an explosion it was far enough from the ship to avert any damage. Then came the approach to port, the handing around of custom house blanks on which to make declarations of dutiable baggage, the filling in of articles purchased abroad and handing them to the purser. Mr. Mervale said that if the box being towed was what he supposed it was the duty on the articles it contained was considerable. The question as to whether it was a box of heirlooms or an infernal machine must be settled by the custom officers. He rather thought they would pass it free of duty.

The evening before reaching port Miss Floyd was sitting with Mr. Mervale on the upper deck, where they were not so liable to interruption as they would be lower down. He was telling her of the family home of his father, the earl, and his mother, the countess. Then he told her how they had sent him to America, where rich wives were to be had by British noblemen for the asking, that he might marry a wealthy American girl and build up the family estates when he came into the title. But he had been captured before his arrival. He had no sooner seen Miss Floyd than he had succumbed to her, rich or poor.

Miss Floyd told him that, as to means, she would have on the death of her father a large inheritance. But a complication had arisen in the matter of Walter Ricker. There was an engagement that had not been approved by her parents and might not be approved by them. She would be pleased to have Mr. Mervale call on her in New York. That was all a young lady who had recently accepted one man could say to another whom she wished to replace the first.

But she said nothing of this to Ricker.

Miss Floyd was taking home a number of valuables that were dutiable. Her father was ready to pay the duty on them, but there is a fascination in "beating" the government on customs that attacks even young girls. Mr. Mervale told her that he had a way of getting goods through the custom house and if she would bring them up to him he would smuggle them into port and send them to her immediately afterward. She brought him up several thousand dollars' worth of goods, then bade him good night, showing by a slight pressure of the hand that he might hope.

Soon after the parting between Mr. Mervale and Miss Floyd Fire island light was sighted, and in the morning the Eric was steaming up New York bay.

But where was the boat containing the infernal machine? And where was Mr. Mervale? The former was not in tow, and the latter was not on the ship.

No one ever found out how the "earl's son" got the box which, besides a clock, contained $100,000 worth of diamonds ashore. He doubtless took Miss Floyd's valuables in the same boat and smuggled them in, as he had promised, but Miss Floyd never saw them or him again.

Woods, a Real Raffles Tells Story of Crimes

How The Gentleman Burglar Robbed Wealthy Montreal Houses With Impunity--Lived In Style The Place Viger Hotel.

According to his own published story, John Woods, who has been arrested for conspiracy in connection with actions against license holders, has been a burglar whose success in that criminal line can be equalled only by the manner in which he boasts of it in his writings. He calculates that some five years ago he robbed about 150 houses and stores in Montreal in the course of six months and according to a tabulated statement of his income from the proceeds of his burglaries, and his expenditure on living and luxurious amusements, he "made" $844 in the month of July, and spent $600.10 within the same period of time.

His method was to watch the personal columns of the newspapers, and note the names and addresses of the families who left the city for the summer. Then he selected those houses which promised him the most "swag," and, entering by means of a master key in broad daylight he would carry off all the valuables that he could gather together.

"I rather enjoyed," he says, "working in those houses which were wired with electric alarms and guarded by special devices. There is more sport in it. It is more of a gambler's chance."

From Mr. Desbarats' house on Durocher street, Woods professes to have taken an old-fashioned tea service which he afterwards disposed of to a receiver of stolen property for $1,000.

Robbed Ex-Mayor Ekers.

One day Woods overheard the daughter of Mr. Ekers, who was then Mayor of the city, speak to a young lady friend of a valuable collection of coins her father had at home, and after the announcement was published that the family had gone to Europe, Woods confesses that he visited the Mayor's house, stole the collection of coins as well as some valuable jewellry, and cleaned out the whole of His Worship's wardrobe.

Subsequently a house on Dorchester street was selected as a place from which this man believed he could enrich himself. But the tenants stayed at home through the summer, and he concluded that he must effect an entry on a Sunday evening while the family were at church. He watched them leave home, and describes his actions then as follows:—

"Dressed up in a frock coat and a silk hat, and swinging a nobby London cane, I strolled past the premises, keeping an eye open for anything and everything that would give me a clue as to how the land lay within. I knew from what I had previously gathered that there was only one maid alone in the house. To get her out was the next question. I dropped into a public pay-station and called up the maid whose name I had learned from the butcher boy. I told her that 'Tom' was speaking and told her to meet me at the corner of St. Catherine and Bleury streets."

The girl went off to keep the appointment and Woods went through the house, but he was disturbed by the speedy return of the maid, who, seeing his shadow on the wall, called for help. The burglar escaped by the back way, and observing someone coming towards him he put up a bluff.

Montreal Easy Pickings.

"Instead of attempting to dodge the man," he writes, "I turned back to the house and peered into the basement window. He came panting up to me and shouted: 'There is a man in the house. What are you doing here?'

"I know there is," I replied. "I am watching for him. You run around to the front and I will wait here."

The man ran, but Woods did not wait. He comments: "Montreal is about as easy pickings for an experienced burglar as any place I know of and when I say this I think my words should bear some weight, for I have worked in all the continental cities of any size, several American towns, and even under the window of the famous Scotland Yard itself."

All this time Woods was staying at the Place Viger Hotel, and he boasts that, living in palatial style, his bills amounted to about $500 a week. He would rob a store one night, and the next morning take what he calls a "devilish delight in walking into the store" to note if the proprietor showed signs of mortification at being robbed. At lunch hour at the hotel he would sit at the table where Sir Lomer Gouin and Judge Choquet were dining, and would order wine which in a week cost him $75.

Montrealers He Robbed.

He studied metallurgical chemistry with a view to bank-safe cracking, but does not claim to have carried his intentions in this direction to a practical success. He states that he carried off a large quantity of stock from A. L. Brault's tailor store on Bleury street, twice robbed Philbin's hardware store on St. Catherine street, also Sloan Brothers' boot store, took a $300 silver tea set from the home of Mr. Claxton, lawyer, and he adds, "business was so prosperous that he soon would have cleaned out the whole city."

However, he decided to give the bewildered policemen a rest, and went off to Ottawa where he says a robbery which he committed at the home of Mr. Cooper, of the Ottawa River Navigation Company, "netted" him $1,300. He stole into Sir Wilfrid Laurier's house while the family was at dinner, but "it was not furnished as he supposed," and again, to quote his own words, "there was little obtainable there that was worth while.

Woods says he then joined a gang of crooks who made dishonest gain by playing different phases of the confidence trick, on transatlantic liners; next he got mixed in some bank-note forgeries, and, according to his own showing, always escaped the police, even when his accomplices were caught. When the continent got too hot for him he harked back to Canada, where he claims to have "manipulated" a fur robbery which he estimated resulted in a loss to the Desjardins store of $50,000. He tells of being concerned in the celebrated fur robbery from the John McKay Company at Kingston, the proceeds of which amounted to $35,000. One of the thieves was caught and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary, and Woods himself was then getting towards the court of justice.

Auto Party of 6 Drowns In Canal

Three Actresses and Their Companions Are Plunged To Death--Tragedy Follows Night of Revelry

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 26.—Beneath a heavy touring car under 15 feet of water in the new basin canal, near here, lie the bodies of a man and two young girls. In a city morgue are the bodies of two men and another girl, removed from the waters of the canal.

The six deaths are the result of a night of merriment and an early morning "joy ride" of a travelling salesman, two men companions, and three chorus girls from "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," playing at the Shubert Theatre here.

The accident occurred at three o'clock this morning when the automobile, flying along the edge of the canal at a whirlwind pace, as the party returned from a West End hotel, suddenly plunged into space and whirled over and over into and under the water of the canal.

The car's six occupants were pinned under the machine and drowned without a fighting chance for life. The bodies already recovered are those of Thomas Boetler, of New Orleans, owner of the machine; John Freeman, travelling representative of La Salle, Daly & Company, perfumery concern, and an unidentified girl about 22 years of age.

The touring car will be raised by a canal dredging boat, it being too heavy to be moved by workmen. The names of the girls will probably not be known until the roll-call at the theatre where the company is playing.

Some Uses For Cornstalks.

Cornstalks, formerly almost a waste product, have been turned to account during recent years, and the farmer is enabled to get quite a profit per ton for them. They are utilized for packing cofferdams and in the manufacture of smokeless powder. Paper pulp can be made from them. They furnish pyroxylene varnish, are useful as a packing material and, together with the leaves and tassels, enter into the composition of various prepared fodders and foodstuffs.—Harper's Weekly.

NO ROOM.

(Ohio State Journal.)

Another thing that makes us glad the men folks don't have to wear anything corresponding to the hobble skirt is that, judging from the pictures we have seen of rear views of that garment, we hardly think it would allow room to carry a lot of old truck around in our hip pockets.

PRAYER OF A MODERN.

(Canadian Magazine.)

O Lord of Strength, I do not ask for power,
To beat down others in the market place.
I pray for poise that I may hour by hour
Meet well my duty with a cheerful face.

O Lord of Grace, let not my aim be rest,
With life so short for what I have to do;
But grant me restfulness—thus to invest
With joy my hours of ease and labor too.

O Lord of Light, whatever I may learn
Of what men in their little knowledge teach,
Or wheresoever my poor mind may turn,
Keep reverence in my heart; I do beseech.

ANXIOUS TO LEARN IT.

(Chicago Record-Herald.)

"I have been an office-holder for twenty-five years, and no man can show where I ever took a dollar dishonestly."

"Gee, old man," replied the grafter "put me wise to your system, will you?"

"Waiter, ask the orchestra to play something different.'

"Any particular selection, sir?"

"Something slower. I can't chew my food properly in waltz time."

OVERESTIMATED FORTUNES.

(Pittsburg Dispatch.)

When Walsh, the Colorado mine owner, died, what were called conservative estimates of his wealth placed it above a hundred millions. The valuation of the estate has since been reported at six millions. Everyone remembers how Harriman's wealth shrank from popular estimates when his estate was appraised. A still more recent reduction affects the hopes of a great university. When an unknown and almost hermit millionaire named Wyman died and left most of his estate to Princeton, the estimates placed the university's probable gain at some ten millions. An inventory just completed reveals the estate to amount to $859,801.

To Oppose Howitt.

Guelph, Sept. 27.—Organizer Inwood of the provincial Liberal party headquarters at Toronto was in the city yesterday conferring with Liberals with respect to the convention Wednesday afternoon. It is understood local Liberals are forced into a contest by orders from Toronto that every riding is to be contested.

William Laidlaw, secretary of the Guelph and South Wellington Agricultural Society; Nicol Jeffery, a prominent Liberal lawyer, and Mayor G. D. Hastings, are among the probable candidates, and Mayor Hastings says that, as his second year's term as mayor was almost concluded, he may accept the nomination, if honored with it.

Swedish Girl's Love Tragedy.

Vancouver, Sept. 27.—The finding yesterday of the body of a woman on Bowen Island, has cleared up the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Esther Johnson. She and Peter Pearson were engaged three years ago in Sweden, and the man came to the Canadian West to prepare a home for her. Here he met another woman, and when Esther arrived she found herself supplanted in Pearson's heart. She asked for a last meeting on the night of Aug. 17. Nothing had been seen nor heard of the broken-hearted girl since.

Entire Cadet Corps Arrested.

West Point, N.Y., Sept. 27.—With the entire cadet corps of the United States Military Academy under close arrest for administering the "silent" affront to Capt. Rufus E. Longan, instructor in tactics, a military board of inquiry is investigating the mystery surrounding the cadets' action.

No report of the finding of the board will be made public until the return to West Point of Major-Gen. Thomas H. Barry, the new superintendent of the academy, who is expected to-day or to-morrow.

Lieut.-Governor Gibson on Coast.

Vancouver, Sept. 27.—"Vancouver enjoys no monopoly of prosperity, for I see vast construction forces at work in the entire region from Lake Superior to the coast, and particularly from Winnipeg to the Rockies," said Hon. J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, who, with his party in the private car of the Ontario Government, arrived here yesterday.

He will be entertained by the Scottish Rite in the Masonic Temple. His honor is sovereign grand commander of Scottish Rite, A. F. and A. M.

Victim of the Black Hand.

Revelstoke, B.C., Sept. 27.—"Better let me help when I can, for they will get me sometime," is a remark frequently made by Frank Julien to the provincial police in cases against Italians. Julien was murdered here on Saturday with an axe by three Italians.

In Rossland, Fernie and Trail, B.C., he had assisted in bringing offending Italians to justice and the police are convinced that he was the victim of the "Black Hand."

Boy Accidentally Shot.

Charlton, Sept. 27.—Carrying his eight-year-old son in his arms, Harvey Palmateer, a farmer, three miles from here, staggered into Dr. Cooper's surgery Sunday evening. An hour earlier the lad had been accidentally shot with an obsolete Swiss arm rifle. A few hours later the lad died. It was the old story of "not knowing it was loaded."

Roosevelt's Railway Bill.

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—John H. Devine, a shareholder in the Pennsylvania Railway, has written the general manager asking what steps have been taken by the company to collect a sum estimated at $100,000 alleged to be due by ex-President Roosevelt for special trains, etc., during his term as President.

The Manifestations Of Eye-Strain

Continued.

Gould, of Philadelphia, shows in a manner that seems beyond criticism in his most fascinating "Biographic Clinics," that there is every probability that some of our greatest thinkers such as Carlyle, Darwin, and Huxley were suffering from eye-strain, and that the so-called "brain-fag," nervous breakdowns, and other forms of ill health from which they suffered were due to errors of refraction or want of balance of the ocular muscles.

Insomnia is a very prominent symptom of eye-strain, and so a vicious circle is started, eye-strain producing among other troubles, insomnia and insomnia in its turn aggravating the patient's condition because the all-important restorative is wanting. The extremely depressing effect of insomnia is a matter of common knowledge.

Women Found Guilty Of Disposing of Body

Mrs Mary Desislet and Daughter Vina Convicted of Unlawfully Burying Still-Born Child--To Be Sentenced Friday.

Mrs. Mary Desislet and her daughter Vina, both of Trenton were yesterday afternoon found guilty in Judge Deroche's court of the charge of unlawfully disposing of the body of an infant. They were also charged with neglecting to provide proper medical attendance, but his Honor gave them the benefit of the doubt, and dismissed that charge. Judge Deroche stated that he would not pronounce sentence until Friday morning as he desired to consider the evidence presented.

Hessie Hewson, a young woman who was an inmate at Desislet's house when the offence was committed testified that in May Vina Desislet gave birth to a child, which was, apparently still born. The body was wrapped up in a cloth and buried in the yard adjoining Desislet's house. She did not think it was a proper thing to do and intimated such to Mrs. Desislet At her (the witness') request the body was taken up and some more material was wrapped about it, when it was again buried. In answer to a question she said she could not tell whether the child was alive or not when it was born.

Vina Desislet narrated her story of shame and sickness. The child was she claimed, prematurely born. She implored her mother to keep the affair as quiet as possible. She had consulted a physician some time previous to child-birth.

Mrs. Desislet, who appeared to be much worried and excited whilst giving her evidence, said that she was not aware of the condition of her daughter. She knew she was unwell and a physician had been called as she (the witness) thought to treat her daughter for an attack of dropsy. The daughter was alone in her room when the little one was born. Vina called her (the witness) to her room and she then had the child in her hand. It was dead and its face was as black as a stove. Witness shortly after attending to her daughter procured some material and the body was wrapped in same and subsequently buried upon the premises. Under the circumstances she did not think that anything wrong was being done.

Dr. Johnson, of Trenton, who was called in rebuttal testified that on the 15th of March he was called to Desislet's house and examined Vina. He ascertained the girl's condition. He was not called in again. Although he had seen the body of the child he was not in a position to say it was born alive.

This concluded the evidence and after a brief argument by Mr. Carnew on behalf of the accused and Mr. Anderson, County Attorney, on behalf of the Crown. His Honor said that under the statutes there was no doubt but that the accused were guilty of the charge of unlawfully disposing of the body. He would reserve sentence until Friday morning. The two accused were then remanded to the County jail.

To Try Aged Man Here For Murder

Parker's Trial Takes Place Here Next Week--Accused of Slaying William Masters, a Farmer of Chapman's Corner.

On Monday next the fall sittings of the High Court will open here, the Hon. Mr. Justice Mulock presiding. Mr. Peter White, K. C., of Pembroke, has been appointed Crown prosecutor.

The only criminal case thus far upon the docket is that of the King vs. Parker, an old man upwards of 76 years of age who is accused of murder and who has been confined in the County jail for some time.

It appears that on Friday, April 8th William Masters, a farmer about 70 years of age, who lived near Chapman's Corners, Hungerford Township, left his house to proceed to a swamp for the purpose of drawing wood. Some time after his team returned home without a driver. Members of the family surmising that something was wrong instituted a search with the result that Master's body was found lying upon the ground. He had been shot. The ball had entered beneath one arm and emerged near the hip on the opposite side. That it was not a case of suicide was certain as the wound could not have been self-inflicted. An inquest was held with the result that Parker was suspected of having committed the deed, and the coroner's jury brought in a verdict to that effect. It seems that some sort of feud had existed between Parker and the dead man.

Parker was then committed for trial on the charge of murder. Mr. E. G. Porter, K. C., of this city, will defend the accused. The Intelligencer is informed that a large number of witnesses for the Crown and also for the defence have been summoned to attend the trial, which will no doubt be of considerable length.

TWO THOUSAND MURDERS IN U.S.

Eight Thousand Persons Took Their Lives During the Year 1909.

AUTO KILLED 632 PEOPLE.

Railways Accounted For Over Six Thousand Deaths — 4,558 Were Drowned — Other Ways of Killing.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—In 1909 there were 2,854 homicides in that portion of the United States covered by death registry laws, and in the same area 3,402 deaths due to suicide. The figures are supplied by the Census Bureau's annual's report on mortality, and cover about 55 per cent. of the population. There is an actual falling off in the number of homicides as compared with 1908, while there is a decrease of the rate of suicides compared with population.

The report also supplies an enumeration of accidental deaths for 1909 as follows:

Railroad accidents, 6,659.
Drownings, 4,558.
Burns, 3,292.
Injuries at birth, 3,508.
Injuries by horse vehicles and horses 2,152.

Automobiles, 632.
Accidents in mines and quarries, 1,927.
Inhalation of poisonous gases, 1,337.
Other accidental poisonings, 1,779.
Accidental gun shot wounds, 944.
Heat and sun stroke, 216.
Cold and freezing, 251.
Lightning, 150.

LAST NIGHT AT GRIFFIN'S.

It is hard to say whether or not a two or three act musical comedy would present in the course of an evening's entertainment more music, catchy songs, dancing and effervescing humor than did the "Fuller Minstrelettes" at the Griffin Opera House last night. There is never a lull or dull moment in their whole act. Latest songs and dances by the girls and a ready flow of jokes from the end men kept a packed house in a pleased attitude for over half an hour.

Mr. Johnson, the "Caruso of Whistling," with his imitations of birds and sounds, completed the bill, and was well received.

HOCKEY

It was stated to-day that it should not be a bit surprising if with a new Hockey organization, the Shamrocks should re-enter professional Hockey and make another trial at it.

The matter has been seriously discussed amongst various members of the organization, and if it should be decided to once more go in for it, the chances are that the management of the club would again hand it over to Mr. Lunny, who retired as secretary of the Shamrock Athletic Association this year, after so many years of successful management.

One of the great drawbacks of the Shamrock position last year was the long and expensive distances they had to travel.

BASEBALL

An official exoneration of Hal Chase, the baseball player, of the charges made against him by Manager George Stallings was issued last night by President Ban Johnson, of the American League, following a conference with Frank Farrell, owner of the New York team.

Johnson said: "Stallings has utterly failed in his accusations against Chase. He tried to besmirch the character of a sterling player. Anybody who knows Hal Chase knows that he is not guilty of the accusations made against him and I am happy to say that the evidence of the New York players given Vice President Somers this morning showed Stallings up."

The official decision will be issued to-day or Sunday by Mr. Farrell.

CHASE'S STORY.

Hal Chase, when told of the complaint made against him by Manager Stallings, said last night that the trouble had been growing for some time.

"The climax came," he said, "in the first game of the series at Chicago which our club lost. With Daniels on second and myself at bat, the signal was given for the hit and run. I swung at the ball and tipped a foul which the catcher caught. Daniels, having started for third base, was easily thrown out.

"That evening I went to the theatre. On my return to the hotel I met one of the New York baseball reporters on the way to the telegraph office. Having asked him what the excitement was, he answered: "I had an interview with Mr. Stallings to the effect that you are laying down on the team.'

"Mr. Stallings later verified the statement and admitted that he was quoted correctly. Of course, such events could not put one in a pleasant frame of mind.

"Stallings always has shown a tendency to go behind a man's back. I feel and know that in this trouble I have the support of every member of the New York team."

"There will be no Sunday game during the world's series unless President Murphy of the Cubs agrees to wind up the schedule for the club before October 15," said President B. B. Johnson of the American League yesterday.

"I understand President Robinson of the St. Louis Nationals, has made a proposition to Mr. Murphy regarding the early completion of the remaining games booked between these clubs, and from all reports the Chicago club alone is holding out.

"Interest in the major club race is bound to slump with the approach of cold weather," continued President Johnson.

Secrecy which was unbroken since his wedding last Tuesday was dispelled at Lynn yesterday, and it became known that Tommy Leach, centre fielder for the Pittsburg Pirates, had taken unto himself a wife. Leach's romance centred around Miss Marie Trask, of Brookline, Mass., who has for some time been known on the stage as Marie Blair.

This was Leach's second marriage, his first wife having died a number of years ago.

With Ed. Barrow a candidate for the Eastern League presidency next season, it means a new manager at Montreal, and already Ed. Holly is being touted as the man. Buffalo will have a new man, as Billy Smith has practically accepted the management of Chattanooga, in the Southern League. George Stallings, now that Farrell has turned him down with the New York Americans, is said to have already some dickerings with the Buffalo people. Jimmy Collins has not been a success in Providence, and neither has Jack Ryan with Jersey City, which means that both will be deposed. Hughey Duffy, so the dope says, will be back with Providence next year, while Billy Murray will take charge of Jersey City.

RUNNING

An ideal day, a good track and about two thousand spectators saw Fred Cameron, winner of so many hard fought races, go down to defeat in a ten-mile race before Abbie Wood, of Montreal, at Amherst Saturday. The race was without sensation unless it was the first sprint, when Wood passed Cameron as if he had been projected from a cannon.

Cameron got away in the lead, which he easily held to the fourteenth lap, when Wood passed him, maintaining the lead until the 27th lap, when Cameron sprinted by him. Wood then followed easily to the last lap to about 300 yards from the finish, when by a burst of speed he went to the front winning in 55 minutes and 42 seconds. Cameron being about 30 yards behind. The first five miles were done in 27 minutes and 18 seconds. This time is slower than Cameron had previously made, and his supporters still have faith that he can either win or make Wood go considerably faster. Cameron says he was beaten fairly, but is trying to arrange a race with Wood at once.

THE RING.

Norman Selby, known in the prize ring and cafe business as Kid McCoy narrowly escaped death from fire explosion, and drowning in the North River, off York, early Monday, when the naphtha launch "Kid McCoy," owned by Ernest Triblehorn, a real estate man, was totally destroyed.

McCoy was saved from death through the prowess of Frank George, who was his only companion on the little vessel when it went down. George swam ashore from the burning boat and rowed back with a boat in time to save McCoy, who was weakening fast.

McCoy, Triblehorn, and George, together with a number of friends, had been on a small sail Sunday. When they anchored off 181st street, McCoy and George were tired and decided to sleep on board.

At 2.30, McCoy attempted to prepare a chafing dish feast. The alcohol lamp exploded, the burning fuel being thrown on the gasoline tank and the boat was soon a mass of flames.

McCoy could not swim. When the flames came close, George leaped overboard and swam for the shore, yelling back to McCoy, "Hold on to the side Kid; I'll get a boat and come back for you."

McCoy did as told and was fast losing strength from the heat and exposure when George drew alongside with a row boat and took him out of the river.

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her.

Toronto, Canada.—"I shall endeavor to describe to you how I felt before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I scarcely knew what it was to be well. I had awful bearing-down pains and usually before my monthly periods I suffered terribly and had to go to bed. I was not able to walk across the floor the pain was so bad. I doctored for a long time, but the doctor's treatment did not do me any good. I gave up all hopes of ever being well again until one day my husband saw the Compound advertised in the paper. He decided to get me a bottle, and I am thankful he did. I had not taken one bottle before I began to feel better, and I kept on taking it until now I am a different woman. It also helped me during maternity and childbirth. I can thoroughly recommend your Vegetable Compound to any woman who is afflicted with female troubles."—Mrs. J. M. TWEEDALE, 138 Nassau St., Toronto, Canada.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

Woman's World

The Secret of the Neat Girl.

We all have among our acquaintances the girl who, without being in the least good looking, always manages to look neat and well dressed.

Perhaps she has only a small dress allowance, and whenever you happen to meet her she looks smart and attractive, while other girls, with twice the money at their command, too often look shabby and dowdy.

What is the neat girl's secret? Nothing more or less than taking care of her clothes. She has a place for everything and everything is kept in its place. Her ribbons, gloves, handkerchiefs, veils, etc., are not all huddled together in one drawer; neither do they lie about on the tables and chairs until they are wanted. Every article of apparel is put away with the most scrupulous care, first being dusted, shaken or mended, as the case may be.

There is a great difference, too, in the way in which girls put on their clothes, and very often a girl dressed in a shirt waist and plain skirt will look twice as neat as one clad in an expensive gown, the reason being simply and solely this—the one has put her dress on anyhow, the other has taken care that all shall be neat and fresh.

It is the duty of all parents to see that their children are taught from their babyhood to take proper care of their wearing apparel, for the child who lets her clothes drop off her and lie in a heap on the floor invariably grows into the careless, untidy woman with whom we are so familiar.

You'll Need It Soon—A Fall Hat.

In a few weeks the summer hat will begin to look passe. Then is the time to purchase one of the natty little black patent leather chapeaux which all summer have done service as outing headgear.

AN OUTING HAT OF BLACK PATENT LEATHER.

The hat seen in the cut is of this material in one of the modish shapes of the season. The sole trimming consists of two black and one white uncut ostrich pompons.

Use For Samples.

Samples of colored silk embroideries and cambric or lawn patterns, as well, make effective covers for buttons, when the embroidery figure is small and complete. These samples are often for sale in the shops. When two or more large buttons are to be used on a suit, these samples are specially useful. They may also be turned to account in making straps to go across a lace vest or cuff, or to finish the line of a vest. Larger pieces will cover a buckle for a hat or dress. The Persian pieces are being picked out by discriminating buyers.

Colors Her Tongue.

Mlle. Polaire, the Parisian actress who has won fame as the homeliest woman in the world, with her wasp waist and big mouth and feet, has such a liking for cosmetics that even her tongue and gums are colored, while her face is made to look as white as possible. With her dark hair and eyes it is a combination curious and fascinating.

BADLY CRIPPLED WITH LAME BACK

Could Not Walk Straight

Very few diseases can cause you as much pain as a Lame Back. Sitting down is torture—getting up pretty nearly kills you—walking is agony. Even when you lie in bed, that nagging pain keeps up its ache, ache, ache—and when you roll over or try to get up again, well, it brings tears to your eyes.

Mr. Mackenzie, an old resident of Elmsdale, Nova Scotia, knows what it is to have a Lame Back—and he knows, too, what to take to cure it and be free of pain and suffering.

"I was badly crippled up with pains across the small of my back. I could not walk straight or lie comfortably in any position that I would place myself.

I was recommended to try Gin Pills, which I did, and I received immediate relief after taking four doses, and by the time the first box of Gin Pills was finished they had made a complete cure.

I can with pleasure recommend Gin Pills to any person troubled as I was."

GEO. M. MACKENZIE.

Gin Pills cure Lame Back because they cure the Kidneys. Lame Back is just another name for Sick Kidneys. Hard work and old age strain and weaken the kidneys. These important organs need help, and the acute pain in the back is a sign that they are being overworked.

Give your kidneys the help they need. Get Gin Pills and take them regularly. In a very short time, you will be free of pain, the kidneys will have gained new strength, and the Bladder be in excellent condition. Dealers everywhere have Gin Pills at 50c. a box—6 for $2.50.

We don't ask you to buy Gin Pills but to try them at our expense and only buy them after they have proved their value.

Singular Custom Still Prevailing Among Indians of the Northwest.

Many striking customs of their past are still preserved by the Indians of the Northwest, and of these none is more interesting than a peculiar practice yet followed by the Sioux. It appears that from time immemorial these Sioux have adhered to an etiquette whereby it is the bounded duty of the host to supply his guest with all the food he may desire, and, as a rule, the apportionment set before the visiting Indian is in excess of the capacity of a single man.

On the other hand, by the same custom, the guest is obliged to eat all that is placed before him, else he grossly insults his entertainer. Now, it was found that this practice would work a hardship, but, instead of dispensing with the custom, the Indian method of reasoning was applied, and what is known as the professional eater was brought to the front.

While the guest is supposed to eat all that is placed before him, it serves the same purpose if his neighbor assists in devouring the bountiful repast, the main object being to have the plate clean when the meal shall be finished.

It is not always practicable to depend upon a neighbor at table to assist in getting away with a large dinner, and in order to insure the final consumption of the allotted portion visiting Indians call upon these professional eaters, whose duty it is to sit beside them through a meal and eat what the guest cannot stow away.

The professional eaters are never looked upon in the light of guests, but more as traveling companions with a particular duty to perform.

These eaters receive from $1 to $2 and even $3 for each meal where they assist. It is stated that one of the professional eaters was known to have disposed of some seven pounds of beef at a sitting.

Clean Within!

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Purify the Blood and Prolong Life

Vigorous health at 70 due to Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

If as much intelligent care were given to keeping the body clean and pure within as well as without we would see more healthy, vigorous old men and women. The daily bath does its part by keeping the pores of the skin open so that they throw off much of the body's impurities, but it is even more important that the bowels and kidneys should be kept regular and active.

If the bowels fail, as they often do late in life, to move regularly at least once a day, the waste matter from the food accumulates, decays, poisons the system and upsets the stomach.

If the kidneys are sluggish the impurities which they should filter from the blood remain and cause rheumatism.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills regulate the bowels, stimulate the kidneys and open up the pores of the skin. The result is a body clean within—pure, red blood—good digestion—and a hale and hearty old age.

Three generations have proved the value of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, and their sale is steadily increasing all over the world.

MAN DETAINED AT LONDON.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

GODERICH, Sept. 28.—While considerable interest was manifested this morning in the story told at the Anderson murder inquest last night, to the effect that bloodstains found on a duster belonging to a rig hired from a local livery and that there were also dark stains on the buggy seat, Crown Attorney Seagar stated this morning that all these had been satisfactorily explained. Word came this morning from London, Ont., that a dark Indian-like man named Horsey was being detained there awaiting identification by the Goderich police. Otherwise there are no further developments in the fearful murder mystery. Seager said this morning that nobody was under suspicion.

McNULTY'S TRIAL.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

BARRIE, Ont., Sept. 28.—There was a pathetic scene in court this morning when Mary Dolan, convicted last night of murdering her infant, took the witness box to testify against Thomas McNulty, former hotelkeeper, also charged with murder. Twice she collapsed while telling her story. McNulty, she said, was the father of her first baby some years ago. He persisted in his attentions to her, even after that, and despite the continued opposition of her mother, who one time turned the dog on him, driving him into a swamp, where he was forced to remain for hours hiding from her and his wife, who had knowledge of his infidelity. When the second baby came she said she had no intention of drowning it until McNulty suggested it. In cross-examination she denied the insinuations of relations with any other man than McNulty.

Committment Was Illegal.

Montreal, Sept. 28.—Mr. Justice St. Pierre has dismissed the case against A. J. Lemieux, who was before the Court of King's Bench for robbing one of the members of the Emancipation Lodge, so Lemieux will go back to the Police Court. The judge said that the committment was illegal, as it had not been signed when given to the grand jury, and he added that if the employe had committed the blunder intentionally, he should at once be dismissed from the service. The supposition is that the irregularity was committed with a view to save Lemieux.

Woman Is Convicted Of Murdering Child

Jury Recommends Mercy In Case Of Mary Dolan—Girl Swears Crime Was Committed at The Instigation of Thomas McNulty, The Former Tavern Keeper.

Barrie, Sept. 28.—Probably never in the history of Canadian courts has a more pitiful story been unfolded than was brought out yesterday during the trial of Mary Dolan, charged with the murder of her infant child. Although the jury returned a verdict of murder against her, it was accompanied by a strong recommendation to mercy, which Justice Britton said would be respected.

In outlining the case to the jury, G. Tate Blackstock, K.C., crown prosecutor, said the girl was more sinned against than sinning. Mary Dolan, 24 years of age, came of respectable family. Some years ago she formed an intimacy with Thomas McNulty, a tavern-keeper at Uptergrove, who was married, with two children. Three years ago a child was born, which Mary Dolan placed in charge of friends. Her intimacy with McNulty was resumed, and in July, 1909, another child was born in Toronto. On March 26 last the woman left Toronto with the child, took a train to Hawkstone, and was seen walking along the track in the direction of Orillia. She stranged her babe with a cord, placed the body in a valise until reaching the Narrows, when she dropped it in the water.

Giving evidence in her own behalf, the young woman said the crime had been done at the instigation of McNulty, by whom she had been kept in the stable loft of the Grand Central Hotel, Orillia, from October until February, except for two weeks, while she was in a delicate state of health. There she lived alone, never going out, and the only food she obtained was carried to her by McNulty. There was no furniture, and no stove in the loft, and it was bitterly cold, snow coming in through the roof. McNulty refused to give her money to board out. Her bed was two horse blankets.

Several times the prisoner broke down, and once she sobbed aloud, "My heart is broken." The painful impression in the court was intensified by the fainting of Constable Wright in the witness-box.

When the jury retired, McNulty was also placed on trial accused of murder.

ROOSEVELT WINS THE FIRST ROUND

Is Elected Temporary Chairman of The Republican State Convention.

ROUTS OLD GUARD.

Former President In Speech Eulogizes Taft — Declares in Favor of Direct Primaries and Roasts The Bosses.

Saratoga, N.Y., Sept. 28.—Theodore Roosevelt rode yesterday on the top wave of victory, defeating Vice-President Sherman for temporary chairman of the Republican State Convention, and bowling over the old guard in the first engagement of a series of conflicts that are to come.

After he had named the members of the three important committees, and the convention had adjourned to meet to-day, he said to the newspaper men: "I said 'frazzled,' you may recall. You may quote me on that."

At Troy Monday the former President said he would beat his opponents to a frazzle.

There were 1,013 votes cast in the convention yesterday, of which Col. Roosevelt received 568 and Sherman 445, a majority of 123 for the former President. There was no motion offered to make the selection unanimous. Woodruff named as the committee to escort Roosevelt to the platform Vice-President Sherman and Cornelius V. Collins of Rensselaer.

When Sherman reached Roosevelt's seat he put out his hand with a grin, both men smiled and then Roosevelt started for the platform with Sherman right behind him, and Collins bringing up the rear. Sherman stepped forward, and in stentorian tones said: "Your selection for chairman, Col. Roosevelt."

Col. Roosevelt spoke feelingly of what President Taft had accomplished in his administration, in his speech as temporary chairman, saying that the laws passed reflect high credit upon all who helped enact them; that they are an earnest forecast of the achievement which is yet to come, and that the beneficience and far-reaching importance of this work measure the credit which is rightly due to the congress and "to our able upright and distinguished President, Wm. Howard Taft."

The spectators and many of the delegates warmly applauded Mr. Roosevelt's declaration for a direct primary plank.

Col. Roosevelt also bitterly assailed the bosses, declaring that "the difference between a boss and a leader is that the leader leads and the boss drives. The difference is that the leader holds his place by firing the conscience and appealing to the reason of his followers, and that the boss holds his place by crooked and underhand manipulation.

Two Men Arrested.

London, Sept. 28.—Two vagrant characters, giving their names as Horsey and Stevens, are held by the police, charged with burglary, but who are also suspected as having possible knowledge of the Lizzie Anderson murder at Goderich.

Horsey, who is about 33 years of age and claims to belong to Baltimore, Md., had an old diary in which was the vague entry: "Good-bye, dear, I killed——." Also, he has some 30 pictures of young girls, not obscene, but just portraits, that would indicate that he is "girl crazy." In view of the suspicion entertained that the murder was committed by two men, the police will make a thorough enquiry. The men admit having been up in the district of late, and say they were in Clinton, which is twelve miles from Goderich.

MORE PAY FOR G. T. R. ENGINEERS

Only Few Minor Details Still Remain To Be Adjusted Now. 'Tis Said.

TO SIGN AGREEMENT.

Every Detail In Rates of Pay and Rules Has Been Under Discussion and a Tentative Agreement For Three Years Has Been Reached.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—The long-drawn-out negotiations between the Grand Trunk management and the locomotive engineers all over that system are approaching a finish, and it is expected that a satisfactory agreement between the two parties will be signed early next month. The agreement under which the engineers had been working expired during the recent strike of conductors and trainmen, and demands for considerable increases in the rates of pay were then made to the Grand Trunk management by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. A deputation of 32 representatives of the men from all over the system waited upon the management in Montreal and began negotiations, which have been going on ever since, a period practically of two months.

Every detail in rates of pay and rules has been under discussion, and a tentative agreement for a period of three years has now been drawn up and is under discussion.

The delegates, therefore, are in an optimistic mood and state that there is little possibility of an unfortunate rupture of friendly relations, such as occurred when negotiations were on between the company and the trainmen. Pending the actual signing of the agreement no details are obtainable as to its terms, but it is admitted that the men will get an increase. This is stated to range from 6 to 8 per cent., affecting about 500 men all over the system. At present the average wage of the engineers ranges, it is stated, from $165 to $170 a month.

Refused the Application.

Port Hope, Sept. 28.—At a meeting of the Board of Railway Commissioners held here yesterday the application of George Nicholas Smith of the Township of Clarke, for an order directing the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway Co. to construct an overhead bridge across the applicant's property, on lot No. 3 concession 4, Township of Clarke, was refused.

Judgment on the questions of protection at the crossing of the Grand Trunk Railway Co. at the base line near Whitby Junction, and of the application of the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway Co. for authority to divert Princess street, in the village of Orono, for leave to construct its railway across the public road, between lots 10 and 11, concession 4, in the Township of Clarke, were reserved pending reports of the engineer of the commission, Mr. Mountain.

Gaynor's Reasons For Staying.

New York, Sept. 28.—If nominated for governor at Rochester, Mayor Gaynor will refuse to accept the nomination. In a letter to James Creelman of this city, written Monday, and made public yesterday, he definitely eliminates himself as a possible candidate in language so plain that he says "every honest man will understand me."

He says in part: "I could not abandon to their fate the splendid men whom I have appointed to office, and who are working so hard for good government, nor could I abandon the people of the city of New York after so short a service."

GODERICH CASE STILL PUZZLES.

Inquiry Being Made Into the Movements of Thos. Anderson on Fatal Night.

EVIDENCE CONTRADICTORY.

Lizzie Anderson Was Seen Alive on The Night of Her Disappearance—Adjournment Made at a Late Hour Until Oct. 5.

Goderich, Sept. 28.—An inquest was opened last night by Coroner Holmes into the death of 16-year-old Lizzie Anderson, whose nude body with throat cut, was found in the basement of an unoccupied house Sunday morning, after she had been missing several days. Nine witnesses were heard, including the parents, brother and sister of the dead girl, Mrs. Jardine and her four sons, Edward, Albert, Charles and Thomas; and Mame Spatore, the Italian who boards at the Anderson home.

The evidence of the Jardine family was contradictory as to Ed's movements on the fatal Tuesday night. His mother insisted that he and his brothers had slept in a tent outside the house that night; the boys said that they had slept in the house; Ed. and Thomas agreed that they at least had also, after arising, gone to the tent for another rest, while Charles said he didn't think they had. Mrs. Jardine and Charles said Ed. had had supper at home that night, while Ed. insisted he had lunched at the fair ground with Charles.

Adjournment was made at a late hour until Oct. 5.

No other headway toward solution of the mystery was made yesterday, beyond it being practically proven, from persons who had seen her at the fair grounds, that she was alive at 10 o'clock the night she disappeared, while Mrs. Donald Buchanan and her mother, Mrs. Milton, who live only a short distance from the scene of the tragedy, state that they heard screams that night between 11 and 12 o'clock. They twice heard screams about five minutes apart.

Wesley Anderson, father of the victim, was the first witness. The last time he saw Lizzie was Tuesday morning. He was at home when the son arrived, about 10 p.m., without her, and went up town to see if she was with her sister at the Colborne Hotel, where the latter worked. When he returned he asked one of the Italian boarders if he had seen her and was told that he had about 8 o'clock, when he asked her what time she was going home, telling her to wait a few minutes and he would go home with her. She had promised to wait, but he could not find her when he returned. Witness did not think his daughter allowed any improper attentions, and did not think the girl would go with strangers. Lizzie was subject to fits, the last being last winter. She used always to fall down when taken with a fit.

He did not think Mame Spatore, the Italian boarder, carried a knife of any kind. Inspector Greer here examined the knife of the witness.

Rubena Anderson, eldest sister, employed at the Colborne Hotel, said that Albert Jardine came Monday to the Anderson home and said he was very sorry about the tragedy. Albert had been there at previous times, and had visited her also at the hotel. Spatore had taken Lizzie and Ethel Devine for a drive once, but Lizzie had never gone for a drive with any other young man.

Willie Anderson said that when he saw his sister last, she was watching the races and said she was going home about 9 o'clock, that Ed. Jardine was going to meet her at the corner near the collegiate institute and take her home. Lizzie had promised to wait for him (witness), and he had watched at the main entrance until all the people had come out, and also looked through the grounds before starting for home without her. He heard the clock strike 10 before he reached home. Her father went up town in search of the girl about 11, returning about midnight, and witness and father and mother went out about one hour later as told in the father's evidence.

Mrs. Jardine said that Ed. had come home about 8 o'clock, and that he and Albert went out to their sleeping tent, but later came in and slept in the house on account of the cold. She admitted having told Inspector Greer and Crown Attorney Seager previously that the boys had spent the night in the tent, and when pressed for the truth, she said that neither of the boys slept in the house that night, that after Ed. came home, he mentioned having seen the girl standing at the fence about 7 o'clock and had given her 15 cents to get her supper, also that he had seen her about 7.30 at the chicken house, standing with a man dressed in a dark brown suit with a fedora hat, in which was a red ticket. When Mr. Anderson called in the morning, asking about Ed., witness had told him he was sleeping in the tent.

Keep patient! There is only to be electric light in the new county building. However, we may expect gas soon.

The foolhardy things attempted at Niagara Falls will not end until some one meets with disaster, accompanied by loss of life.

The G.T.R. engineers have secured their increase in wages without a strike. This is the better way.

The Sultan of Sulu is now in the United States. This man had at one time 12 wives, whom he supported at $1,500 per annum for the lot. This will keep some local husbands guessing, as they know what it costs to keep one.

The Galt Reporter hits it off about right when it says: "Keep it out of the paper,' is the cry which the local newspaper publisher daily hears. To oblige often costs considerable, though the party who makes the request thinks the granting worth saying 'thank you' for. A newspaper is a peculiar thing in the public eye. The news-gatherer is stormed at because he gets hold of one item and is abused because he does not get another. Young men, and often young women, as well as older persons, perform acts which become legitimate items for publication and then rush to the newspaper office and beg the editor not to notice their escapaded. The next day they condemn the same paper for not having published another party doing the same thing they were guilty of, forgetting apparently their late visit to the printing office."

SIRE AND DAM.

We are informed that both the sire and dam of the cow, Lily DeKol Pietertje No. 5916, reported in last night's issue as making 20.64 lbs. fat, equivalent to 25-3-4 lbs. of butter, in 7 days, were bred by Mr. B. Mallory, County Treasurer, and sold by him to Mr. Hagerman.

ASSAULT CASE.

A case of Reid vs. Reid was to have been tried at the police court this morning but it was postponed until Saturday. The parties who are cousins reside in the Township of Rawdon The plaintiff claims that the defendant assaulted him and intended to inflict grevious bodily harm. This the defendant denies.

MARRIED THIS MORNING.

At 10 o'clock this morning a quiet wedding took place at St. Thomas' Church, at which the Rector, Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, officiated. The groom was Mr. Wallace G. Blackmore, of London, Ont., and the bride Miss Evelyn A. Tiller, recently of Lymington, Hampshire, Eng. The couple were unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Blackmore left this afternoon for their future home in London.

TURNER—ELLIOT.

A pretty event was solemnized this afternoon at Port Granby, Ont., when Miss Roma Elliot, of that place, was married to Mr. N. L. Turner, Government Assayist, of this city. Rev. A. S. Kerr, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, here, performed the ceremony. The couple were unattended and only the immediate relatives were present to witness the event. After a three weeks' trip and visit to relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Turner will take up their residence in this city. The happy couple have the best wishes of hosts of friends in Belleville.

LEFT FOR FORMOSA.

Miss Mabel Clazie, daughter of Mr. Wm. Clazie, Front Road, Thurlow, left by the flyer to-day for Toronto, whence she will start to-morrow evening en route to Formosa to take up the work of a foreign missionary in that place. Many friends were at the station here to bid farewell.

A number of her friends of the Melrose and Lonsdale Presbyterian churches called at her home on Monday evening last to bid her Godspeed. They also presented her with two well filled purses on behalf of their respective congregations. Miss Clazie, who taught school, was a resident of Belleville and a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church here, until a little over a year ago.

CASE DISMISSED.

Before Magistrate Masson this morning the case of R. Fenn and Son, who were charged with an infraction of the grocery by-law, by keeping open after 7.30 p.m., was disposed of. Mr Fenn convinced the court that the sale of meat in connection with his grocery business was far in excess of that of groceries sold. Mr. Carnew who appeared on behalf of the firm argued that as meat was the chief product sold this did not come within the scope of the By-law regulating groceries. Magistrate Masson dismissed the case without costs. Mr. Mikel, K. C City Solicitor, appeared on behalf of the city, to defend the By-law.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

A meeting of the Seniors who are interested in basketball will be held to-night in the gymnasium at 9 o'clock immediately after the regular class period. The object of the meeting is the forming of a Y. M. C. A. League. The intermediates will have a similar meeting afetr their class on Thursday. The younger fellows should have a good strong team this season. The Business Men are looking forward to a good season's work and we will be glad to welcome any new Business men or professional men to this class. If you will telephone or write the Physical Director he will be pleased to see you about the benefits of the class.

PICTURE SHOW MEN HAVE SCRAP

The Brockville Recorder tells the following story of a row in a moving picture theatre: "Harry Bristol and Edward Barry, two vaudeville singers, were arrested last night by Sergeant Burns and Constable Champagne, upon warrants issued by Geo. Cook, the former charged with assaulting Cook and the latter with disorderly conduct. This morning when brought before P. M. Deacon, the pair pleaded guilty. Bristol was fined $10 with $5.00 costs or 90 days and Barry $1.00 fine with $5 costs or 10 days. They were unable to raise the money and went up this afternoon. Bristol is well known in Belleville having sung in a picture show here for several months.

FLAGLER—BYRNES WEDDING.

A very pretty wedding took place on Monday, Sept. 26th at the church of L'Arsomption, Eerinsville, when Rev Father Carey united in the hold bonds of marriage, Miss Lizzie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Byrnes to Harold P., son of Alderman P. and Mrs Flagler of this city. The bride looked charming in a suit of pearl grey silk with hat to match. Her sister, Miss Margaret Byrnes, attired in grey broadcloth acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. Stephen Flagler, brother of the groom was best man. After the ceremony the guests repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a sumptuous repast was partaken of and a pleasant day spent. The presents were numerous and costly among them being substantial checks, testifying to the esteem in which the young couple are held. Guests were present from Belleville, Ottawa, Centreville and other places.

To Parents Thinking of The Future of Their Sons And Daughters.

The commercial field offers far greater and surer opportunities for success in life than any profession. The professions are so crowded that many professional men have difficulty in earning a living. In contrast with this condition, the demand by business men and manufacturers in all parts of Canada for well trained, industrious young men and women as bookkeepers and stenographers many of whom, beginning in this way, will by and by become employers themselves, is never fully met, and it is greater now than ever before.

This morning we had three calls for office help, one from a manufacturing company in Deseronto, and two from Belleville firms. Last week we placed two Belleville boys in good positions, one in Ottawa and one in a large local industry. These are examples of what is going on week by week throughout the year at Ontario Business College.

We request parents to call at the College or send for the new catalogue.

Trial of Russian Refugee.

Winnipeg, Sept. 28.—Yesterday the battle for the freedom of the Russian political refugee, Saava Federenko began in real earnest. The trial, which is exciting interest in every Russian colony in America. A number of Russians have come from the States, among whom are several reporters from Russian papers. The fight resolved itself into the question as to whether the crime which Federenko committed in Russia was a political crime or not.

Won't Sit With Roosevelt.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—As a result of the Vatican imbroglio last spring, three prelates of the Roman Catholic Church, one archbishop and two bishops have refused to sit at the table with Theodore Roosevelt when he is a guest of the Knights of Columbus at Peoria, Oct. 12. More than 200 priests of the church also will find it convenient to be absent from the banquet, to which they were invited by their lay brothers, the Knights of Columbus.

Hearst's "Unselfish Devotion."

New York, Sept. 28.—W. R. Mounted Policeman Drowned.

Wilkee, Sask., Sept. 28.—Constable Vincent of the R.N.W.P. was drowned in Snider Lake, nine miles northwest of this town. He was shooting, and had gone to the lake to bring the ducks out.

Presbyterian Missions.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—At a meeting of the executive of the home mission committee of the Presbyterian Church, Dr. Sommerville reported that the expenditure since April 1, including the payment of claims, which alone had aggregated $49,657, amounted to $117,126, and the receipts $28,355, leaving the fund in debt $89,070. The revenue last year was $208,000, an advance on contributions of the previous year of $51,000, of which amount $37,000 was raised by special convass, and, accordingly the increase from ordinary sources amounted only to $14,000. The estimated expenditure for the current year was $214,000. In order to meet its obligations next spring, the committee will require from ordinary sources about $77,000 more than was provided last year. The committee recommended that these facts should be brought to the notice of all congregations.

Daily Intelligencer.

The Wages of Sin.

We are entering the melancholy season with a venegeance. Accounts of sensational murders and suicides and the like stare us in the face every time we pick up a daily newspaper We shouldn't be surprised to see some enterprising yellow journal devoting a page printed in red to the daily grist of stories of homicide and suicide Within a week two or three murders of a startling and puzzling nature have been committed in Ontario alone and goodness knows how many suicides. Crimes of this sort are becoming altogether too frequent. There is a veritable epidemic of them. It seems to us that there ought to be a means of checking an epidemic of this sort. One way, of course of curbing crime is in punishing the criminal. We exterminate the murderer, provided he is of the common people, but the lesson to be derived from his extermination isn't as efficacious as it might be, otherwise there would be few murders instead of many. It seems to us that more powerful lessons may be drawn from the causes which lead to murder and suicide. In most cases crimes of this kind are preceded by deeds and habits which are often criminal themselves and always evil. The man or woman who takes the first false step, no matter in what direction, is running the risk of some day lying in the grave of a murderer or a suicide. This aphoristic utterance may sound offhand as a trifle exaggerated but on analysis it will be found to be pretty near the truth. The other day a man of wealth and affluence who had always led a blameless life, according to his friends, betook himself to a neighboring city. Obedient to the will of some strange but evil impulse he drank somewhat excessively. While in a condition bordering on intoxication he journeyed out into the country in a motor car with a woman of doubtful character. More liquor was imbibed at a road house. A quarrel between the man and woman followed. The world knows the dreadful consequence. The man shot the woman dead, was arrested and later committed suicide within the precincts of his prison Liquor or lust or both made this man a slayer of self and of another. Sin is an insidious thing in any form The man in the grip of a vice or a crime becomes irresponsible. He is no longer his own master. He must go whither his sin leads him. The banker who steals his first thousand often intends, or hopes to put it back He is a thief nevertheless and rarely escapes the punishment meted out to a thief, which in the case of a banker or a man in his station in life is often death by his own hand. The young girl who first goes astray through infatuation for some soft spoken but worthless libertine little realizes the terrible consequence which almost inevitably follow acts such as she commits—consequence which so often render death preferable to life. And the man who, when he starts on his career as a second story worker or a safe cracker, seldom contemplates murder but when cornered in his evil work sometimes kills in order to escape the punishment of his crime. To put it more tersely, a small sin begets a greater one. And there would be few murders and suicides if lesser evils were avoided.

Cured Stomach Trouble.

MR. JAS. P. STANSEL MADE SOUND AND WELL AFTER SEVERAL YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Read what Mr. Stansel says: "I had stomach trouble for several years and began using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. In a short time I was sound and well. I have recommended your medicine to others and know many have used it to great advantage."—Jas. P. Stansel, 105 1-2 N. Market St., Columbus, Miss.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

when taken in medicinal doses, just before a meal, stimulates the mucous surfaces and little glands of the stomach to a healthy action, causing a sufficient flow of the gastric juice to digest the food. If continued it will cure the disease or weakened function by its tonic and stimulating effect. It also excites the flow of saliva for the digestion of starchy food, preventing fermentation in the stomach and bowels.

Sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY by all druggists and liquor merchants, or direct, $1.25 a large bottle. Medical booklet and doctor's advice free.

Sembrich Attacked by Robber.

Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 28.—Mme. Marcella Sembrich narrowly escaped death at her villa here Sunday night, when a man, who had presumably entered for the purpose of robbery, attacked her companion, Fraulein Berta Meilke, known in America as Miss Frieda, in the grounds surrounding the house. The prima donna rushed to her friend's assistance and was herself attacked, but succeeded in driving off her assailant.

The police believe that the man intended to kill Mme. Sembrich. Fraulein Mielke has been Mme. Sembrich's constant companion for twenty years.

Barrier Got Him.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—Walter Higgins, known as "Red Wally," who enjoys distinction in police circles as an expert pickpocket, short-change artist, with varied other accomplishments of similar ilk, was arrested Monday night on the T., H. & B. train at Bridgeburg.

Higgins was on his way here to operate at the Woodbine, but the Canadian officials yesterday deported him as an undesirable.

Sutor Dismissed From the Service.

London, Sept. 28.—Lieut. Sutor of the Royal Artillery, who was recently court-martialed for publishing a pamphlet criticizing the army administration, yesterday was sentenced to dismissal from the service. War-Minister Haldane has addressed the King to reduce the sentence to a severe reprimand.

Artificial Limb for Premier Murray.

Halifax, Sept. 28.—Premier Murray left yesterday for Chicago for the purpose of procuring an artificial limb, which will be set by specialists. The premier has been resting at his home at North Sydney the past three months, and he is in excellent health.

EXCHANGES

THE FITTING FLAG.

(Brantford Expositor.)

The mayor of Montreal has been censured for giving more prominence to the Irish flag than to the tri-color in the city hall decorations during the recent Eucharistic Congress. An easy way to prevent similar flag incidents in the future is to use the Union Jack entirely for decorative purposes. On civic buildings, more particularly there is no reason why this should not be done.

MARTYRS.

(Philadelphia Inquirer.)

"In common things," says Froude "the law of sacrifice takes the form of positive duty,' which accounts in some measure for the self-denying way in which some politicians place their own business interests behind them and run for a good fat office.

BOYS AND BIRDS.

Ottawa Journal.

The number of boys reported killed or injured in Ontario while hunting during the past week seems to indicate that the following descriptive epitaph will be much in requirement this autumn:

A boy, a bird, a loaded gun;
No boy, no bird, Thy will be done.

WELL PRESERVED.

IN LIGHTER VEIN.

We all know the information fiend—the man who, not content with absorbing facts and figures of no account whatever, persists in airing his knowledge on every conceivable occasion.

Jerome K. Jerome, the well-known humorist, came up against one of these torments while crossing the Atlantic. He was leaning over the rail one morning when the information fiend tapped him intimately on the shoulder.

"Sir," he said, with a grandiloquent wave of the hand in the direction of the water, "do you know that if the earth were flattened out the sea would be miles deep all over the world?"

Mr. Jerome looked impressed. "Well," he replied, with the vestige of a smile, "if you catch anyone flattening out the earth, shoot him on the spot. I can't swim."—Tit-Bits.

A Masterly Document.

London, Sept. 28.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A. E. Ashinwall, secretary of the West India committee, says the report of the West Indies' Commission is a masterly document, and generally speaking is decidedly favorable. Indeed, many of the suggestions made have been embodied in a memorandum which the committee has submitted to the royal commission, and has now been adopted.

The Globe hopes its evidence and conclusions will not be quietly pigeon-holed but thoroughly debated and acted upon.

The Westminster Gazette says if at the end of it all the Canadian Government does seriously mean not to continue its preference unless it gets reciprocity on revenue tariff, the report of the commission makes the best of a bad job, and does so with the least possible disturbance of existing system.

Edmonton to Fort William.

Winnipeg, Sept. 28.—On Saturday next the G.T.P. takes over from the National Transcontinental Commissioners the section between Winnipeg and Superior Junction. As the G.T.P. branch from that point to the head of the lakes is completed, the company will commence operating right through from Edmonton to Fort William, 1,200 miles in all. The section west of Winnipeg will at present be used for grain traffic and freight only,

Canoe Club Dance Highly Enjoyable

Many Prizes Presented at Affair Held Last Evening-- Presentation Made to Energetic Secretary--Treasurer Who Is About To Become a Benedict

Under the auspices of the Belleville Canoe Club a most delighful dance was held last evening at the club house, Victoria Park. There was a large attendance of members and friends. An appropriate program of music was furnished by the Robinson orchestra.

During the course of the evening trophies won by members and others in several events held here this season were presented to the successful competitors. Mr. J. W. Johnson, M. P. P and Mr. H. Sneyd, President of the club in a few well chosen remarks made the presentations The prizes won and those receiving same were as follows:

Ritchie Cup—Won by M. Stork, a paddling trophy.

Johnson Cup—Won by A. McGie, on points for dinghey race.

Walker flag—Won by R. Gorman on Labor Day regatta.

President's Cup—Won by H. Rathbun on Labor day on points.

Pair of Paddles presented by Mr. A. H. Kerr, won by M. Stork.

Silver Cup, donated by Club, won by D. Jemmett, Napanee.

Small silver cup, donated by club, won by B. Jemmett, Napanee.

Silver Medal, won by H. Steacy of Napanee.

Club pennants for those who won first prize, D. Jemmett, P. Laidley, H Steacy, B. Jemmett, M. Stork and H Rathbun.

Others receiving prizes were: R. Gorman, M. Waters, H. Rathbun, J. Rathbun, W. J. Archibald, M. T. De Pencier, and C. M. Stork, jr

At the conclusion of the presentation of the prizes the President in a few appropriate words commended the work of Mr N. L. Turner, the energetic Secretary-Treasurer, and referred to the fact that he was about to join the benedict ranks. He thereupon presented Mr. Turner on behalf of the members, with a handsome coffee percolator. Mr. Tturner, although taken by surprise was able to reply and did so in a most appropriate manner.

After the presentations brief addresses of a congratulatory nature were given by the President, Mr. J. W Johnson, M. P. P. and Mr. C. M. Stork.

Do You Feel This Way?

Do you feel all tired out? Do you sometimes think you just can't work away at your profession or trade any longer? Do you have a poor appetite, and lay awake at nights unable to sleep? Are your nerves all gone, and your stomach too? Has ambition to forge ahead in the world left you? If so, you might as well put a stop to your misery. You can do it if you will. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will make you a different individual. It will set your lazy liver to work. It will set things right in your stomach, and your appetite will come back. It will purify your blood. If there is any tendency in your family toward consumption, it will keep that dread destroyer away. Even after consumption has almost gained a foothold in the form of a lingering cough, bronchitis, or bleeding at the lungs, it will bring about a cure in 98 per cent. of all cases. Two Minute Talks About

PANDORA RANGE

for Coal or Wood

Why it's so Easy to Keep Clean

THERE is no fine, fancy, dust-catching carving about the Pandora Range. Instead the Carving is bold and large, and is easy to clean.

Great care is exercised in making, cleaning and polishing the Pandora Castings. That is why they are so very smooth. The Cooking-Top is burnished. It is smooth as glass. Doesn't catch the dust. Requires but little black lead once a week.

You want a range that is easy to clean—that bakes perfectly—that saves fuel—that is guaranteed to satisfy you. The Pandora is that kind of a range. See it at our agent's in your locality.

The ...Veiled Lady...

of Jenks? he whispered.

"I have a scrawl from him at Ajaccio, addressed to me, in your care.—He is safe. He only says: 'I shall keep out of the way! He gave me a sure address at St. Heliers, Jersey, where I suppose is really this fellow Baptiste."

"And the villa. What news from there?" Seaton demanded.

"The brothers are both buried, and the house is shut up. The servants have all returned to Furtenfeld."

"What do you mean?" faltered Seaton, his fever-lit eye flickering wildly.

"All good things come to Russia," murmured Demidoff as he paced the deck. "She shall learn to forget him."

The beautiful fugitive gazed stonily at the varied panorama of sea and shore!

"All hope is lost forever!" she muttered. "Let the demon of Vengeance drive me whither he will! Only the East is safe, now, or—Russia!"

CHAPTER X.

While the swift Aphrodite flitted in and out of the winding channels of the Italian coast, Beverly Seaton tossed on a bed of pain at the Hotel Chauvain. There was a flood of gossip, (a seven days' wonder) pouring through cafe and Casino. The long-expected demise of Count Stahrenstein astonished no one. The remarkable career of the reckless Baron Adolf was accentuated by "the deep damnation of his taking off."

"I always knew that he would one day leave us in such a sudden manner," philosophically remarked De Brissac, who had run down for a dash at the Gibraltar of Monte Carlo. "He was always very quarrelsome. Well! It is a lucky stroke for this poor devil of a second cousin, who takes a jump from the obscurity of an aristocratic pauper,—a mere Sub-Lieutenant of Horse,—to be the great Graf Stahrenstein."

"What is your opinion?" continued the wounded duellist.

"I think Demidoff carried off the veiled beauty! Women of her desperate nature are prompt to seize the first means of escape. Any door swings easily on golden hinges; and the high-bred Muscovite had good reason to take away the most dangerous witness!"

Beverly Seaton was now breathing heavily.

"I must admit, though, that the Prince has acted most handsomely. He has written a formal proces-verbal for the Russian Consul-General at Marseilles, who has already been down here to inquire. He says it was a fair duel, and provoked by no quarrel of yours; save upon Stahrenstein's refusal to unmask, after striking your friend! I have also a signed document as temoin, and the surgeon has done the same. The public prosecutor told me that the Austrian Consul-General is also thoroughly satisfied, although he deplores the loss of his friends."

"I shall go home as soon as I can travel! I will go back! I throw up this blind quest! But I wish you to watch the Italian journals, and the Galignani! The Prince's yacht will be reported! I wish you to go over to Italy and find out if she,—if this missing woman, is on this yacht! I will confer with Inspector Walling at New York, and then go away for a long voyage!" Seaton sighed. "I did not wish to kill this man! It was the other! It is now too late! All is over!"

"Mr. Brayton, I will certainly follow out your wishes, but you have not yet told me all!" the detective firmly replied.

"That is so, Orton!" said the sufferer slowly. "But what you do find out will be buried with me! Of what avail to open the tombs of past years?"

"You are right!" said Orton. "This woman is on her downward path! This glittering halo will soon fade! Hurried on from one scene of vicious deviltry to another, the final plunge will not be long delayed. What is before her now? The prison,—a hospital,—the Morgue! I have seen the last hours of dozens of these anonymas. It would deter even the most featherbrained daughter of Eve from entering on a 'gay life' to watch the grisly shadows of Doom closing relentlessly around these jewelled playthings of man's idle hour.—I am heartily sorry for them.

"First, there is always a primal wrong; some early heart break; a cold treachery; some cowardly advantage taken of a loving woman's ardent feelings, which can never be righted. I have a lingering pity for the poor warm-hearted women (often the most generous of their sex,) who throw themselves blindly into the arms of their lovers, asking nothing but that constancy, which is almost a modern chimera! Less loving, often less lovable, the maid, bien elevee, coldly passes into the fate of matrimony,(often bought and sold,) and sometimes, (with a fouler heart,) sneers at her soiled sister, hovering without the sheltering portals of 'Society!'

"Now try and sleep!—I will take your orders in detail when you are able to go home. I think you are acting prudently. The Stahrensteins were known from Cairo to the Scotch moors and your presence would be heralded everywhere. Your efforts would be balked everywhere, by this quick-witted 'Lady of the Night!'"

Far away, in the crystal glow of eastern skies, the graceful Aphrodite glided, a silver-winged ocean bird, past the storied shores of southern Italy. A folding of her white pinions at Spezzia, enabled Demidoff to take away Josef, the second important witness of the Bal Masque! As the fleet yacht dashed away southward, throwing high in the air the white foam, spurned by her glancing copper-sheathed prow, the World's Waif sat gloomily gazing on the purpling cliffs receding in the dim distance. With tact, the Prince gave his bright-browed guest ample time for her lonely musings.

"Max dead! Adolf in the tomb! I am again a wanderer!" Setting her face resolutely against the fresh breeze rasping over the ruffled waters, Irene, the hunted fugitive, cried: "Onward! On, to the world's ends!" For she dared not look backward. The kisses of her dead Austrain lover burned still yet upon her nerveless hands.—Money, she had still; and the priceless jewels showered upon her by the dead Austrian Prince, whose requiem was now being chanted in the far-off chapel at Furstenfeld, where he lay in all the sombre richness of feudal mortuary splendor. Beside him, silent, gone unshriven to an unknown world, slept in death al lthat was once the mad Baron Adolf!—

This modern Cain, reposed by the side of the silent head of the house,—the brother who died with his murderer's name on his lips! Away, towards the mysterious East, the cold Tartar, Demidoff, bore the insidious beauty, for whom both the headlong Stahrensteins died.

Lying in her splendid cabin, where the splash of the refreshing waves lulled her to sleep, after the sun had dipped far out in the wild Atlantic, beyond the Pillars of Hercules, the Veiled Lady with her heart steeled to face a future, (hideous in its awful promise) stifled the whispering voice of Conscience. No shadow of the past affrighted her; no softened moment touched her! She heard not, in the sigh of the winds, that awful menace, "Vengeance is mine! I will repay saith the Lord!" Driven before the gales of a stormy life, this mad woman dashed onward. Fear behind,—no rosy star of Hope lighting her way,—she dared not ask herself, "Whither do I drift?"

In cautious undertones, Demidoff related the news brought by Josef, who now discreetly avoided the sight of the splendid woman, whose audacious beauty was the curse of the dead brothers The valet lurked in the crew's quarters, and thought only of his own imperilled future. He had enriched himself with sundry self-allotted gifts of price. The secrets of the lonely villa were his alone!—"I will not trust

BOOSTING THE CENTENNIAL.

Hugh Sutherland Gives a Free Lesson Regarding Value of Exposition.

"There is not a right-minded Canadian who does not believe in the International Exposition, or Selkirk Centennial, to be held in Winnipeg in 1914, as the best means of placing Canada's goods before the world," says John Arbuthnotte, in July Canada Monthly. Of course, there are some opposing voices, as there always are in any big movement, but they are rapidly becoming converted. Not long since Mr. Hugh Sutherland, of Winnipeg, met one of the protestants in a smoking-room loudly expressing his opinion that 'the scheme was all right for the West, but for the East—all bally rot.'

"'Ah?' said Mr. Sutherland, blandly. 'May I ask what business you are in?'

"The protestant was a bottle-maker of Ontario, and he didn't see any good any exposition was going to do him.

"'No?' said Mr. Sutherland. 'Well, I am a bottle-buyer. At my mineral-water plant I use so many thousand bottles a week. Yet am I on your order books? Did I ever buy a single bottle from you?'

"'Sutherland?' said the bottle-maker, pricking up his ears. 'Why no, I don't think you ever did. Why don't you try us? Now our bottles—'

"'In the first place, I don't know about your plant. In the second place, I am able to get the kind of bottles I need from only one city. That city is Milwaukee. I ship them across the line, and pay extra on every bottle. I would greatly prefer to buy them in Canada. But you don't make them.'

"'But——' began the bottle-maker, hunting for his catalogue.

"'Now,' continued Mr. Sutherland, 'if at the exposition you had an exhibit of bottles and I had an exhibit of mineral waters, you would find out the kind of bottles I needed, and I would find out that you would make them for me, and if the gates closed without having landed my order, it would be the fault of your salesman. That's one thing the exposition is going to do.'

"'Hm!' said the bottle-maker reflectively, and was silent for at least ten minutes. Then he took out his check-book. 'Look here,' he demanded. 'Can I book two hundred square feet of exhibit space at that exposition?'"

Body Found on Tracks.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—The mangled body of a man, believed to be A. G. Tait of Ottawa, from papers found in the pockets, was found yesterday afternoon beside the G.T.R. tracks, in rear of the Sunlight soap works, at the foot of Eastern avenue, by Geo. Banks of the American Hotel. It may have been there several days.

The pockets were found to contain a ticket case bearing the name A. G. Tait. There were also three insurance tags. Two were those of the C.P.R. Accident Insurance Co., one numbered 206,762, and the other unnumbered. The third was from the Dominion of Canada Accident Insurance Co. At the office of the former company it was learned that the number quoted would be issued at Ottawa.

It is thought the man was walking on the tracks when struck. He was about 25 years of age, five feet ten inches in height, medium build and smooth shaven. He wore a black suit, tan shoes, a black fedora hat, a soft woolen shirt with a soft collar.

Changed Her Mind.

Montreal, Sept. 28.—A strenuous Atlantic romance ended in the marriage of young and pretty Ethel Gertrude Thomas of London, Eng., and George Stuart Richards of Winnipeg. The girl came to Canada on the last trip of the Allan liner Sardinian to wed Thomas, but on the trip made such an impression on Victor Turner, a London journalist, that she agreed to throw over Richards and wed the scribe. Both sought employment in Montreal, Turner joining the staff of The Gazette.

Mr. Richards, who had come from Winnipeg to meet his bride-to-be, at once laid information with the immigration authorities, who took charge of Miss Thomas and asked her to decide whether she would marry Richards or go back to England at the cost of the Immigration Department. She decided to marry her Winnipeg lover.

Buried In a Well.

Kamsack, Sask., Sept. 28.—A funeral service, attended by circumstances that are unique in the history of Canada, took place Saturday on the farm of John Bowes, 16 miles south of here. At the top of a 73-foot shaft that had been sunk for a well, and at the bottom of which lay the remains of Elwer Olson, aged 35, of Yorkton, Rev. J. Morrison conducted the service for the dead. The shaft has been closed up, and the body will remain in this deep grave. Olso was overcome by coal gas while digging the well.

MONTREAL'S CAVERNS

LITTLE KNOWN SEPULCHRES WHERE CLERGY LIE BURIED.

Beneath the Roar of the Great City's Life Are to Be Found Hundreds of Tombs Where Rest the Earthly Remains of Men Who Served the Altars Above—They Range From Archbishops to Humblest Priests.

Far from the roar of life, the dead sleep their long sleep behind the mountain; but not all who die in Montreal are sepultured in the quiet "city of the dead."

The dust of many is beneath the streets over which modern life moves with feverish activity.

Pious custom in the Roman Catholic Church, has decreed that those who serve altars shall sleep beneath them when labor is ended; and in a city so distinctively Roman Catholic as Montreal, the number of such sepulchres might be expected to be large.

Archbishops, bishops, hundreds of priests, rest beneath the sanctuaries of the various Roman Catholic churches in Montreal.

A various and eager life passes over their heads, but "cannot break their sleep."

In a past day, they were influential. They filled their sacred position with ability, and with zeal. They spoke the living word.

They delivered their solemn message, and now they rest from their labors beneath those altars which are served by others.

One can see their graves in the darkness of subterranean depths.

By the flickering light, you can see the coffin-shaped mounds, made of concrete, which tells of sepulchre beneath; decipher the Latin inscriptions on the walls, which set forth the vanity of all things mortal, and the tragedy of human mutation.

"Vanitas; vanitatum."

The little army of priests of the Sulpician Order, which was founded in Paris in 1641 by Monsieur Jean Jacques Oliver, and a branch of which was set up in Montreal in 1657, and who labored in the young colony under hardships of the most poignant nature, sleep under the vaults in the great Notre Dame Church which is shortly to be the scene of unequalled splendors in connection with the Eucharistic Congress.

All told, there are 135 buried under the sanctuary in Notre Dame.

Their names are kept in the registers of the Grand Seminary.

"Come I will show you," said Cure Troie, of the great parish church, in that gentle voice of his.

Down the long flight of steps, deep down into the bowels of the earth, and one sees, by the aid of the electric flash, a great stone wall, stretching across the width of the church.

"So this, then, is the door which leads to the catacombs?"

"No, you are mistaken. This door leads to the vault in which we keep the ornaments of the church."

"Ornaments? Souvenirs?"

"Yes; souvenirs of the past; gifts, relics, things of value from their age and the associations linked with them.

"But here you see the vault which contains the dead. At least, you cannot see it actually, for you see it is sealed up.

"This vault, which contains the remains of the Sulpician priests, has been sealed up since 1875. Since that date none have been buried at Notre Dame. This church was built in 1829. We took over from the crypt of the old parish church all the bodies that were there, and deposited them in this vault. We have gone on burying in this church from that date until 1875, since which all the burials have taken place in the Grand Seminary vaults on Sherbrooke street.

"Well, when the burials ceased, we closed up the vault. We placed this marble slab against it. And above the slab you see this picture, which tells of prayer in the presence of death."

"Now, if one could break down this wall, what would one see?"

"You would see a large cross in the centre of a level space. That is all."

"The coffins have not been placed in tiers?"

"Oh, no. They have been placed in the earth, side by side, and, of course, one on top of the other; but not ranged in the shelf-like way which you will see in the catacombs of Rome."

"There is nothing visible, then?"

"Nothing. There is simply the level earth, beneath which the remains rest."

"How many would you say?"

"Well, the list of names is carefully kept by the Grand Seminary on Sherbrooke street; but there is probably over one hundred priests buried there, belonging to the Sulpician Order—priests who served the young colony long before the Cession, and who were sent out to this country from France."

"And bishops?"

"One bishop—Mgr. Ponbriand. The rest are all priests. Now, since 1875, all the priests are buried in the vaults on Sherbrooke street."

"Now, since that date, this vault has never been opened?"

"Never."

"And there is no thought of opening it?"

"To what end? The remains are dust. We have the register. We know each name."

At St. Ann's church, in Griffintown, the priests of the Redemptorist Order are buried in vaults which are arranged on the successive tier plan. The coffins are placed along the walls, layer upon layer, until the ceiling is reached.

Each coffin is, of course, covered in with brick, and a brick lining separates each coffin, but the principle is that of the catacombs.

A similar principle is carried out at the Hotel Dieu, with respect to the burial of the cloistered nuns.

The French military authorities in Africa are bending every effort to increase the number of a species of camels which can travel more than twice as swiftly as the ordinary camel of commerce.

A Love Story

The Teller Brings About a Real Ending Herself.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

I am an old maid. I have never had a love affair and never expect to have one. Perhaps this is why I take an interest in the loves of other people. Nothing is so attractive to me as to watch a young couple drifting into that current which at first moves so imperceptibly that they are not aware they are in it. Indeed, so unconscious are they of being incipient lovers that it does not occur to them to conceal the fact from any one else.

I remember one day sitting at my window sewing when a boy and a girl passed on the other side of the road. The boy's straw hat was dingy, and there was plenty of ventilation in its crown. His only other clothing was a shirt and trousers. No shoes or stockings, nothing around his throat, his collar being open and displaying the tanned skin. The girl's clothing was neither better nor worse, and there was about as much of it.

The two were evidently absorbed in each other. What they were talking about I was too far from them to hear, but it was of vital importance. It may be that the boy had been "kept in" after school and they were indignant over time thus lost to play. It may be that some urchin had smashed the china head of the girl's doll. Whatever it was it was being discussed with animation.

And I maintain that these childish interests are of more real importance for the time being than those which come later. No addition to an adult's stock of wealth gives the same test as a new toy to one of these little people.

Often afterward I saw these two, and always together. In this they were different from other children who play, boys with boys and girls with girls. I learned that they were Henry Morse and Lila Bunker, a farmer's boy and farmer's girl. Indeed, we were all farmer folk, all knew one another, everybody being interested in some degree at least in every one else; a simple community and more than usually free from the petty jealousies common to mankind.

Henry Morse's father was determined that his son should have a good education, and the boy was sent away to school. After this I used to see Lila going by our house, but no companion supplied Henry's place. She was always alone, and I fancied her thinking of her other self. But this was simply fancy on my part. As I have said in the beginning, not having had any love affairs of my own, I conjure up love affairs for others. In this case of Henry and Lila I knew nothing of what was passing between them except from observation, so I may be excused for filling in occasionally that the story may not seem too disconnected. At the last I was present and shall not have to draw on my imagination.

When Henry came back from school there was a more modish appearance to his clothes and on his manners. Poor Lila, who had remained on the farm, had only an unadorned beauty, freshened by pure air and sunshine. They were now about sixteen years old, though Henry was half a head taller, and I could not see that their interest in each other had waned, though the childish unconsciousness that they were of different sex had disappeared. I used to see them go by the house together as formerly, but the prattle of childhood had given place to the more sober conversation of youth. I often wished I could hear what they were saying to each other.

Henry did so well at school that his father decided to send him to college. I wondered what effect his four years' association with young men and women of the world would have on my pet love affair. I feared that Henry, having become used to the polished girls he would meet, would return to see in Lila a country girl lacking the airs and graces of her sisters of the city. Would this alienate him? It was to be expected that it would. And though country born and bred myself, I don't know that those of us who go to the city and acquire city ways are to be blamed when we return and yield to dissatisfaction at country ways.

Henry remained away a year at college before he came back to the farm. Then one July morning, when sitting at my window darning socks, I looked up, and there on the opposite side of the road were the couple I had first noticed eight or nine years ago as children. Though Henry was plainly dressed, his clothes were not country clothes. It seemed to me that he might pass anywhere as a city bred young man. And Lila—how my heart went out to the poor child in her effort to dress in a fashion more in keeping with the apparel of those girls to whom Henry had been accustomed! It was all inference with me, but it was plain to see that she had prepared herself against his return to modify the difference between her and their habiliments.

I wondered if he noticed this and if it pleased or displeased him. Surely her effort was not very successful. In the country one may get city fashions, but it is not every worker who can make them up. But in the few moments they were passing it was impossible for me to tell if there had been any change in Henry's feelings for Lila. So I pieced out the story in this wise: Henry was beginning to see the difference between her and the girls he had met. I mean by "her" her clothes—a certain deficiency in what city people call chic. I am not referring to Lila as a soul, not even as a body, for in bodily beauty she would doubtless far surpass many a city girl. Well, what do I refer to? Why, clothes and manner; that's all.

After this Henry seldom came home during vacations. I heard that he usually went camping with his fellow students. At any rate, I lost track of my lovers. I was reluctantly obliged to consider my story, if not finished, at least passing through a stage of interruption. Henry had become interested in a career which would have nothing to do with farms or farmer people. When he was graduated I learned that he was intending to study medicine. But before he entered a medical college his father, who spared no expense on his education, sent him abroad. When I heard of all these matters, which were taking him farther and farther away from provincialism and his provincial sweetheart, I groaned in spirit, for I saw that my love story was likely to end in nothing.

It was some time before Henry was to leave the medical college that I heard bad news of Lila. They said she had some trouble that was dragging her down, but the doctors could not discover what it was. They could not diagnose it—that is what they called it. Her father sent to the city and brought a doctor to the farm especially to see if he couldn't tell what was the matter with her. The doctor said he couldn't find any organic trouble, whatever that means, and the only remedy he thought might benefit her was change of scene. He advised her father to take her on a trip. But Farmer Bunker couldn't afford to do that, and Lila didn't care to go.

I considered this merely a part of my love story. It was plain to me that Henry Morse had drifted away from the little girl I had seen him going by our house with when they were children, and the parting was killing her.

They say story writers often fall in love with their imaginary characters. Therefore it's not strange that a story creator like myself should fall in love with a real person of flesh and blood. I had always known the Bunkers, so I went to see Lila. That was in the spring—May, I think. I found her sitting in an easy chair at her window, pale, languid and without interest in anything. It may be that she devined by my bearing toward her that I knew what was the matter with her. At any rate, when I went up to her, took her hand and drew her head down on my shoulder she left it there and seemed to get relief from the tears that came.

While she was weeping on my shoulder I was thinking. Not having any lover to bring back for myself, I wished I could bring back one for this poor girl. And I formed a plan.

But it was some time before I carried it out, not till summer came. Then I told Lila's parents that I thought it would do her good to come and make me a visit. Since Lila said she would like to do so, they consented, and within a few days she was in my room, the room from which I had first seen her go by with her child lover. I said nothing about Henry Morse either as boy or man any more than if he didn't exist. But when I put Lila in an easy chair at the very window from which I used to watch her and him and thought of her as she was then and saw her as she was now I made up my mind that if I was going to make a good, real story of her case I couldn't rely on things to happen themselves. I'd have to bring them about myself.

I was thinking, too, that my love story had been going on long enough and it was time it was brought to a close. Besides Lila was so weak that I feared in her condition she'd contract some real disease. So I wrote Dr. Henry Morse, who had just been admitted to practice, that I had a patient in my family who was dying of some disease that none of our country doctors could tell anything about and I would pay him whatever he asked if he would make a flying trip and diagnose—I spelled it diagknous—the case.

He wrote back that he remembered me very well and would run down in a few days.

Of course I didn't let on to Lila what I had done. She, poor child, wasn't dreaming what an influence my seeing her go by my window so many years before would have on her life. I hoped Henry would come as soon as possible, for she was drooping more and more every day.

Well, one morning he came. He said he had answered my call after his arrival even before going home. I was glad of this, for I was fearful he'd hear something that might interfere with my plan. I just led him upstairs, opened the door, and he went in and I closed it behind him.

I reckon he didn't make as long a call as that on a patient for a good many years. I don't know what happened between them—didn't see the surprise of either of them. All I know is that when he came out two or three hours after he went in he looked at me as though he was going to say something, but pressed my hand instead. Then I went in to Lila. She had the happiest smile on her face I ever saw. She put her arms around my neck and cried and laughed. And that's the end of the story.

I don't see why real story writers don't do something themselves to finish their own stories.

BACKWOODS' PHILOSOPHY.

Being Some Extracts From Old Abe Ward's Diary.

Abe Ward lived many years ago in the backwoods of Northern Ontario, when those parts were only just becoming known to the outside world. He was a good bushman, with a kind heart and a wise old head. In fact, his memory is kept green by the present generation around Simon Creek by numerous tales of the "sage of the bush."

Far away from the influence of progressive civilization, Abe thought and worked and lived by rules of his own, and even set wise precepts for his neighbors. Nobody could tell anything about Abe. His past life was a closed book. Where he came from and what he had been was never known. Abe rarely talked, and when he did he would not be drawn into a conversation about himself. He was a great favorite, however, with the whole countryside. Even Jim Faber and Peter Staker, who were the most dissolute fellows for miles, would speak in high terms of Abe, and when one cold December morning he was found dead in his lonely shack, it was a mournful procession that laid his body reverently to rest a few hours later. Travelers to those parts to-day linger long over the stone erected by the boys, bearing the strange epitaph, "A dead man must be more useful than either."

When Abe died, among his earthly treasures were a bundle of pieces of bark on which were scratched numerous notes. These have been preserved and are known around Simon Creek as "Abe's Diary." Everybody for miles around has read the diary, but until now none of it has ever been published.

Here are some extracts from Abe's Diary. This part is known in Simon Creek as "The Bushman's Creed."

"I believe there is a source to every creek, a root to every tree, and a God at the beginning of both.

"I believe in a strong arm, a cool head, and a sharp axe with a stout shaft.

"I believe the best way to split a tough proposition is to use a good set of wedges, and swing a beadle.

"I believe in a future existence. If dead trees make good timber, and dead leaves enrich the ground, a dead man must be more useful than either.

"I believe the strongest part of a pine is the smell; the surest thing about the hemlock, its color, and the noblest thing about a man, his character. The pine-smell can travel a mile. The hemlock-blood dye a hide, but the influence of a good character is unbounded.

"I believe there is only one way possible for a tree to fall, and that is the way it leans living. So with a man.

"I believe in gathering up the brush as I go along. It keeps the path clear for others."

But for the almost religious care taken of Abe's diary by doting friends, it would 'ere now have followed the fate of all other pieces of bark. It is a source of lasting credit to the inhabitants of Simon Creek that they had the wisdom and foresight to keep the unique diary intact. Abe touched on many subjects of human interest, and because he expressed himself in an original way, heedless of the dictates of orthodoxy, casting aside the rigid claims of a narrow, rutty-minded generation, his words immediately took new life and presented truths in simple language.

Here are two others of his short philosophical sayings, referring to human life in general:

"The highest form of life in this world is human, and as the acorn is to the oak, so human life contains the seed of something greater.

"A tree that bears branches on one side only cannot grow stately."

Regina Living Prices.

Regina is no place for a man to live who is out of a job. The cost of living is higher than in Winnipeg. It is noticed most, perhaps, in foodstuffs and house rent. The driving out of the rancher and the devotion of the farmer entirely to his crops makes it necessary to ship in the meat supply. One will find that he is eating Australian mutton or American bacon.

Sirloin steak is about 22 or 23 cents. This, of course, is the opportunity of the settlers in the northern part of the province who go into mixed farming and raise cattle and hogs very largely. Prices in Regina seem to be much higher in some cases than in near-by towns, the dealers apparently charging all they can get. Last week, when fresh eggs were 30 cents there, they could be bought for 20 cents at Penso 16 miles away. The coal bill is another important item here. Pennsylvania hard coal is $12 or $12.50, anthracite from the C.P.R. mines at Banff $10 to $11, Galt coal from Lethbridge, $7 to $8. Lignite, a fairly good steam coal, is found south of the city, and can be laid down there for about $3.50.

In the matter of house rent, the owner of a frame house out toward the outskirts of the city—and not by any means a warm winter house—does not hesitate to ask $4,000 for it, and he gets $40 monthly rent. There is about 33 feet frontage.

The Timber Census.

The census of the forest products of Canada, to be taken on 1st June, 1911, will embrace square, fancy or flat timber, logs for lumber and miscellaneous products.

In the first class are included ash, birch, elm, maple, oak, pine and all other timber cut as square, fancy or flat, and in the enumeration will be reported for cubic feet and value.

Logs for lumber, which are included in the second class, are in such woods as elm, hickory, hemlock, oak, pine and spruce. They will be enumerated in the census by quantities of 1,000 feet board measure, with value in the same unit.

Coughs Up a Lizard.

A rare case occurred at Brantford recently. Reginald Duckworth, stepson of Adam Aird, who has been very ill, during a heavy coughing attack brought up a three-inch lizard. Duckworth is recovering rapidly.

In Nuremburg, Germany, there still are in use more than 1700 houses that were built in the sixteenth century and more than 3500 erected in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

A Bridge Fight

It Broke an Engagement.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

It stretched across the salt marsh and connected two villages. Harborhead folk called it "the red bridge," while Portside people grimly referred to it as "the white bridge." As a matter of fact, it had never been painted at all, and now, after two years' exposure to wind and weather, the new wood had taken on soft gray tints that blended with the silver tide that ebbed and flowed between the piles.

Although Harborhead and Portside were connected by the new bridge and the vehicles of both villages rumbled to and fro over the planks, the inhabitants were widely separated by a growing bitterness.

Parson Lane of Portside had pounded the pulpit vigorously over the matter. "Pots of paint! Pots of paint!" he exclaimed one memorable Sunday; "Have my people drowned their souls in pots of paint? The good Lord made it possible for these villages to be united by a beautiful bridge, and you wrangle over the painting of it as if the color mattered! Brethren, see that your souls are as white as you would have the bridge painted. Let not the red smirch of anger sully its purity!"

After that sermon the bitterness was intensified. The Harborhead people who weekly crossed the bridge to attend Parson Lane's church fluttered homeward to spread the good man's words far and wide with most unhappy results.

Noah Wade and Almira Turner were to be married in June. Three times a week Noah crossed the bridge to Harborhead to see his sweetheart. They had never discussed the bridge matter because they had been too happy to talk about anything except their own wonderful affairs.

The Tuesday after Parson Lane's sermon Almira waited at the front gate for Noah. She could see him stepping quickly across the bridge, tall, erect, with his head poised high. All the Wades were proud. The girl's blue eyes did not soften at her lover's approach. A new expression came into them.

"Waiting for me?" smiled Noah, taking the hat from his brown hair and covering Almira's little hand with his own sunburned fingers.

She drew her hand quietly from beneath his touch. "Yes," she said gravely. "Come with me, Noah; I have something to say to you. Let us go to the orchard."

"What is the matter? Are you in trouble? Has anything happened?" demanded Noah anxiously, falling into step be[illegible]r.

[illegible] ook her head. In silence t[illegible] nt across the grass to the orch[illegible] and paused in the shade of the gnarled old apple trees.

"What is the matter, Almira?" repeated Noah at last.

"I can't marry you, Noah," replied Almira quietly.

"Why not?" Noah spoke gruffly. He was angry at Almira's strange manner, at the coldness in her voice and her sudden aloofness.

She looked at the distant sails with steadfast eyes. "Father says I shan't marry any one from over 'the white bridge,' and I don't know that I want to."

"Personally I don't care a rap what color the bridge is," retorted Noah. "I've crossed it for two years to see you, Almira, and now at this late day you suddenly drop me and say it's because I live over the bridge—a flimsy excuse. Why don't you say outright that you don't care for me and never did?" His face was growing whiter, and the hand pressed against the tree trunk was clinched until the knuckles were livid.

Suddenly Noah swung away from the tree and without one backward glance tramped across the grass, leaped the fence into a winding lane and disappeared along the shore road.

After that it became known that Almira's wedding garments were carefully laid away out of sight, and Noah Wade no longer crossed the bridge three times a week.

Then followed a summer unprecedented for its lack of rain. Weeks followed days, and months followed weeks, while the sun poured relentlessly down on the sister town and burned the vegetation to crisp brownness. Only the salt grass that was wet by the tides remained green. Crops died in the baked earth.

September came, fiercely hot. One breathless evening Almira Turner walked listlessly along the bridge. It was said that whatever breeze there might be would be felt on the long wooden structure that united the two villages, yet in its way formed a barrier between many hearts.

Others were walking on the bridge, but it was noticeable that Portside folks walked only as far as the middle of the bridge and then retraced their steps. Harborhead people did the same thing at their end, so there was no passing over the bridge save by those who had business to attend to. Where friendly relations were established between families in the warring villages it was considered most amicable and politic to visit by way of the long road around the shore and avoid the unhappy bridge.

Almira was thinking bitterly of what her father had said when she announced that her engagement to Noah Wade had been broken. He had stared incredulously at her.

"Why, Miry, honey, I was only joking! Now, you go along and make it up with Noah this minute. There'll be bridges standing long after we poor mortals are through trying to be happy in this world."

But Almira could not make it up with Noah Wade. He did not give her a chance. He went away from Portside and found work elsewhere, and she had not seen him through the long summer. Now she was thinking of him and of her foolish excuse for giving him up.

A loud rumble of thunder sent the pedestrians on the bridge scurrying home, but Almira lingered, watching the lightning leap from cloud to cloud in that ominous black mountain in the northwest, listening to the crackle and volley of thunder, harking to the sibilant hiss of the high tide among the bridge timbers.

Just as she turned her steps homeward there came a blinding crash that seemed to enwrap the whole village of Harborhead in yellow light; then all sound ceased for an instant, and out of the murky darkness there sprang a bright flame and another and another. The lightning had struck in Harborhead.

Almira hurried toward home as the wild clamor of the church bells rang out. If the Portside people refused to bring out their fire apparatus to the rescue of Harborhead the closely populated little village was doomed. It was known that Portsiders were very bitter against the people over the bridge.

Just as she reached the gate there came another sound, mingled with the roar of thunder, the clash of bells and the shouts of men. It was the high, sweet clang of the Portside fire bell, and it was followed by the rumble of the little engine across the bridge. It dashed past Almira's gate, dragged by a score of strong, willing hands. The hook and ladder truck came in its wake, and there, sitting high on the seat, steering the truck, was Noah Wade, his face tense and set in the glare of the fire.

The devastating storm died away while the valiant men fought the flames that licked greedily at the frame store buildings and threatened many a nearby home with destruction. Portside men and men of Harborhead worked side by side, and differences were forgotten in the single aim that prompted all.

Many times that night Almira's heart failed within her as she watched Noah risk his life within the flaming buildings. Once he brought out a little child from the tenements over the stores, and the tenderness with which he bore the child and placed it in its mother's arms brought tears to the girl's sad eyes.

And then came the moment when their eyes met across the flames. The sudden leap of recognition in Noah's glance was answered by Almira's appealing eyes, and then the smoke hung between them once more.

The weeks that followed after the fire were not soon forgotten. Differences were patched up and mended so that they would not again break. Portside and Harborhead people mingled together as they had before the days of the bridge trouble. There were church festivals and entertainments that were enjoyed by everybody, and over all was the feeling of satisfaction that the bridge trouble was at an end.

The Harborhead people had gratefully announced their willingness that the bridge should be painted white in view of the prompt and neighborly services of the Portside firemen. Portside people agreed to abide by a choice by vote.

When the vote was counted it was found that all Harborhead had voted for a white painted bridge, while Portside had courteously voted for red, and the vote was tied.

Then the question was solved by a suggestion to paint the bridge green, and it was done, and so peace reigned at last, and there was much passing to and fro.

At last Noah came over to Harborhead and stopped at Almira's gate. Mrs. Turner greeted him pleasantly.

"Almira went over the bridge awhile ago, Noah. If you walk back you may meet her," she said.

Noah walked back slowly, watching for Almira's slender form and dreading to see it beside that of some other admirer. At last she came, stepping quickly, with now and then a glance at the rising full moon.

Halfway across she met Noah, and they both stopped. Noah guided her gently to the railing where they could look along the bright moonlit path that wrinkled the water.

"I've been to see you, Almira. Your mother said I might meet you," he said wistfully.

"I—went to Portside to mail a letter—to you, Noah. I thought you might get it sooner—tonight—and perhaps you would come. I wanted to tell you how foolish I've been"—

Noah stopped her words with a swift caress. "And I was on the way to tell you what a fool I've been, but we've met halfway after all."

When the wedding day came round both sides thought it would be a suitable occasion on which to celebrate the return of peace, and nothing would do but that the bridal procession should pass over the bridge which had caused so much dissention.

France Sends Reply To Kaiser William

Will Construct Aerial Fleet That Will Be The Most Powerful In The World-- Government Decides to Give Big Prizes For Perfection of Aeroplanes.

Paris, Sept. 24.—It has been no secret among those who are in touch with French politics that the French Government and people have been profoundly disturbed by the recent extraordinary speech of the Kaiser, when he once more kicked over the constitutional traces. Nowhere are the performances, oratorical or otherwise, of the German Emperor followed with closer attention than in France. The Kaiser is still the hereditary enemy—one might say the hereditary bugbear—who is expected to fall upon them with torch and sword without a moment's warning.

Rightly or wrongly, France feels that it was she who was specially menaced by the recent speech, and she is seeking to guard herself and her territory against a self-confessed irresponsible monarch, who happens to command the largest army in Europe.

What War Office Says.

An announcement which the Minister of War just made is sure to be read with interest in Germany. It is intended to be an indirect and effective reply to the German Emperor's boast of parliamentary irresponsibility.

The announcement is to the effect that a very considerable increase is to be made at once in the French aerial fleet. The Minister of War has ordered ten Bleriot monoplanes and twenty Farman biplanes for almost immediate delivery. The monoplanes must be handed over to the military authorities in six weeks, and the biplanes must be delivered within three months. These are to be capable of carrying two passengers besides the pilot.

By the beginning of next year France will thus possess the most powerful aerial navy in the world, and will be able to mobilize sixty aeroplanes, properly manned, equipped and ready for immediate service under trained military pilots. France is, in short, determined to continue building aerial craft uninterruptedly and to outdistance every possible rival.

"Our policy is very simple," said a military officer yesterday. "We wish to be as supreme in the air as England is on the sea. Therefore, we have in view a two-power and ,if necessary, a three-power aerial standard. We will build two or three airships to every ship built by other nations. Germany may devote herself to Dreadnoughts; we intend to obtain and retain the supremacy of the air.

Dreadnoughts of the Air.

"When the day comes that will bring the next big European war the Dreadnoughts on the sea will, I think, cut a sorry figure when they are attacked by the Dreadnoughts of the air. We are a peace-loving people, but in bringing into being an aerial navy that will be the first in the world we are convinced that we shall possess a most powerful argument for peace."

The Government is not stopping here. By authority of the Minister of War, General Roquet, who is chief of the aeronautical service of the French army, has announced that the Government is prepared to pay a bonus of $20,000 to any French constructor who will devise an improved type of aeroplane suitable for military purposes. It is stipulated that the new model must be able to carry a dead weight of 666 pounds and to travel 186 miles without stopping at an average of twenty-eight miles an hour.

SURPRISE PARTY AND PRESENTATION.

The home of Mr. Wm. Clazie, Front Road, Thurlow, was the scene of a very pleasant event on Wednesday evening, Sept. 21st, when a number of their neighbors, and friends of the Shannonville Presbyterian church, met to bid farewell to Mr. Clazie's oldest daughter, Mabel, who is soon to leave for Formosa to take up the work of a missionary..

Between thirty and forty guests were present, and after a couple of hours spent in social converse, music and games, the Rev. A. E. Cameron B. A., Pastor of the Shannonville Presbyterian church, called them to order and an impromptu programme was rendered. Miss Grace Hill read an address from the congregation, in which they expressed their appreciation of Miss Clazie's work and influence among them, and tendered her their best wishes for a safe and pleasant journey and success in her work in the mission field.

Miss Sabra Elliott then presented a well-filled purse as a token of their regard. Miss Clazie's reply was simple but eloquent with heartfelt appreciation of the kindness and good wishes of her many friends.

The Rev. Mr. Cameron, the Rev Mr. Wickett of the Shannonville Methodist church. Dr. Moore, and several others gave appropriate addresses. All who spoke expressed their esteem for Miss Clazie ,their pleasure in seeing her entering upon such noble work and their sympathy and good wishes for her success.

After this, refreshments were served by the ladies.

Mary Sullivan, a pupil read the following address while Floyd Armstrong presented Miss McMullen with a beautiful cut glass fruit dish.

Mabee School Section, Sept. 22nd 1910

Dear Miss McMullen—

We, your devoted pupils have learned with much regret of your early departure from our midst and of your resignation as teacher of our school. Because of our rightful love and devotion to you for the great interest, care and arduous toil in behalf of our educational training, your anxiety for our moral welfare and your intercourse with us as our true friend and counseller, manifested during your term as teacher of our school we therefore would not allow you to leave us without expressing to you the very high regard in which you are held by your pupils, the parents and the whole community. As you leave us for the Normal School remember your memory is cherished in our hearts and homes and our well wishes and prayers go with you for success in your chosen calling with the hope that we may often meet in coming years to renew the tender ties and cherished friendship of these days.

As a slight token of the esteem in which you are held by us we ask you to accept this cut-glass fruit dish and with it our heartfulness of love.

Signed on behalf of Mabee School.

ANYONE CAN PURIFY.

Drs. Nasmith and Graham of Provincial Board of Health Sterilize Water in Ten Minutes.

Toronto Telegram.

How to provide pure water inside of ten minutes ready for use in the home or field, by the housewife or river driver has been discovered by Dr. G. G. Nasmith and Dr. Graham of the Provincial Board of Health. The whole equipment necessary for the work consists of an ounce or two of good chloride of lime, a spoon and a cup and a pail.

Dr. Nasmith believes this discovery should prove invaluable to miners, prospectors and travellers in northern Ontario. He declares that this method will produce almost sterile water in ten minutes.

How to Purify It.

The operation consists in rubbing up in a cup of water, a teaspoonful of the chloride of lime, diluting this cup with three more cups of water, and then adding a teaspoonful of this solution to a two-gallon pail of water to be purified, mixing up the pailful thoroughly This will give between four and five parts of free chlorine in a million parts of water and will effectually destroy in a few minutes all typhoid and colon bacilli or other dysentery producing organisms in the water. The water so treated is without taste or odor, and the trace of chlorine which is in itself harmless, rapidly disappears.

Tried It on Bay Water.

Drs. Graham and Nasmith have experimented together on Toronto bay water and tap water, which had been inoculated with billions of typhoid and colon bacilli, "with the invariable result that all the pathogenic organisms have been destroyed."

MOVING PICTURES.

Wind Is Quite an Important Factor In Their Effectiveness.

"What makes the wind blow so in the pictures?" is a question asked by almost every one who has been bitten by the bug of the moving picture show. It is a fact that in many of the scenes there seems to be a tornado, or at least a brisk gale, disporting itself among the trees of the background and the skirts of the harassed heroine in the front. A moving picture man solved the problem.

"That's easy," he replied in answer to an inquiry. "If the pictures were taken when the air was perfectly still, then when the living characters happened to be still the pictures would be as dead looking as a thirty-five cent chromo. So a time is selected for the photographing when the wind is playing old hob with things generally, trees swaying and skirts fluttering and hair flying—haven't you ever noticed how much more effective a woman is when her hair is streaming behind her like the burgee on a race boat? Then, too, when everything is busy it looks like something's doing all round.

"Even in indoor scenes we've found it better to have a little air stirring to move the oleanders and the rubber plant when the girl swoons lifeless. So we install electric fans and keep the foliage busy while the photographer is taking his views. It's a good deal handier than the wandering zephyr, too, for you can regulate your breeze with a throttle then and make it respond to the emotions of the heroine. Yes, wind's a great thing in our business."—Washington Star.

SUCCESS IN GOLF.

The Secret Lies In Keeping the Eye Unswervingly Upon the Ball.

"To succeed in keeping the eye unswervingly upon the ball is the one and only real secret success in golf." So says J. H. Taylor, professional, champion and author of a big book on golf.

How culpable an entity the mind is, and how often it disobeys the simplest of injunctions, the following narrative will show. I had a little conservation recently with one of the most scrupulously careful of players, a gentleman who, during his pupilage at all events, read book upon book on golf and laboriously endeavored to carry out the precepts therein contained; who at every tee spent an interminable period of valuable time in planting his feet, measuring his distance, making sure of the grip of each particular digit of each particular hand; in waggling and considering and taking thought with himself before actually making his stroke. (There really ought to be a time limit for the address). I had a little conversation with the gentleman. He had been last year somewhat off his game and had been taking lessons. "And what," said I, "does your professional say is the matter?"

"Well," was the answer, somewhat hesitatingly enunciated, "he says I am taking my eye off the ball."

If these things are done in a green tree, what shall be done in a dry?—Arnold Haultman in Atlantic.

The Soft Answer.

Two men were occupying a double seat in a crowded car. One of them was a long distance whistler and the other was evidently annoyed. "You don't seem to like my whistling?" said the noisy one after a five minute continuous performance. "No, I don't," was the frank reply. "Well," continued the other, "maybe you think you are man enough to stop it?" "No, I don't think I am," rejoined the other "but I hope you are." And the whistling was discontinued.—Argonaut.

Technical Education Movement Endorsed At Gathering Here.

Representative Meeting of Business Men And Others Held Last Night to Make Arrangements For The Techinical Education Commission on Saturday.

The joint meeting of the City Council, Board of Education, and Board of Trade held last evening in the Council Chamber was fairly representative. Its object was to discuss technical education and to make arrangements for the reception of the Commission on this matter which will arrive here Saturday. Among those present were Aldermen Robinson, Canning Adams and Carlaw. Messrs. J. F. Wills, S. Russell, J. W. Johnson, M. P. P., H. J. Clarke, D, R. Leavens, J. Rabbitts, W. B. Deacon, H. F. Ketcheson, J. Kerr, B. Mallory, W. Springer, W. S. Smith, F. S. Deacon, H. Pringle, E. H. Tickell, Wm. Thompson, J. Elliott, J. W. Diamond, J. Collins, D. Barragar, F. S. Deacon, Dr. Coughlin and Col. Ponton.

Mr. W. B. Deacon, President of the Board of Trade, occupied the chair and Col. Ponton was appointed secretary of the meeting.

The chairman stated that the Dominion Government appointed a Commission on technical education and the Commission would be in Belleville on Saturday, October 1st. The object of this gathering was to make arrangements for the holding of a meeting in this city.

The Secretary read a document setting forth the scope of the work of the commission which was to enquire into all matters appertaining to technical education.

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M. P. P., being called upon, said that the question of technical education was introduced at the last session of the Legislature by Mr. Studholme, member for Hamilton, but as the Dominion Government had appointed a commission, the Legislature did not do anything definite in the matter. He (the speaker) was in accord with the technical education movement and the Ontario Legislature had done something in this direction by especially providing higher education for the agricuturalists. The business colleges of this country had adopted technical training especially in commercial pursuits. As far as he could assist in aiding the young mechanics of this county he would be only too pleased to do so.

Dr. Coughlin, Superintendent of the Deaf and Dumb Institution, was called upon and spoke briefly. At the Institution the Commission could be shown what is being done and the benefits derived therefrom. At the Institution the pupils are given an education which will fit them for the duties of life. They are given an industrial training which is necessary to those unfortunate children. If there is one place where industrial training is necessary it is at the residential schools. At the Institution educational training, such as shoe-making, carpenter work, printing, etc., is carried on among the boys, and domestic service is taught the girls. He would be pleased if the Commission would visit the Institution during their stay in the city.

Mr. Henry Pringle said he was in hearty accord with the technical education idea. We find that by observation the young men who have technical education are the young men who succeed in the pursuits of life. They have a genius which has been developed by technical training. Nothing is too good for this country, and if technical education could be incorporated in the public school curriculum it would no doubt prove to be of great value. Anything he could do to forward technical education he would be most happy to do.' He wanted to do all he could for the workingmen of this country.

Mr. W. S. Smith said industrial education was recognized to be an essential element in education to-day. He was heartily in favor of the same.

Mr. Springer stated that he would be pleased to have the Commission visit the manufacturing concern he represented.

Col. Ponton said there was a practical side of the meeting of the Commission here, namely to secure for Belleville some of the Government aid for technical education.

Mr. Wm. Thompson stated that technical education was necessary and he was in hearty accord with the same. He would be pleased to have the Commission visit his place of manufacture.

Mr. E. H. Tickell said if boys had some technical training in the schools they would no doubt be better qualified as workmen in factories, etc. It was a move in the right direction.

Mr. F. S. Deacon, after speaking in support of technical education, moved that the Mayor, President of the Board of Trade, Chairman of the Board of Education and Col. Ponton be a deputation to meet the Commission and escort them to various industries and see to their entertainment.

Mr. Elliott seconded the resolution, which was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Colling, Principal of the High School, stated that he once had the opportunity of presiding over an institution where technical education was taught and it was certainly beneficial. He was of the opinion that if technical education was universally established in the High Schools of the country the average attendance would be materially increased.

Mr. J. A. Kerr stated that in this county there were some 97 cheese factories and 23 in the adjoining County of Prince Edward, and he thought it would be advisable for the Commission to visit a near-by cheese factory. Prof. Robertson, who is a member of the Commission, was at one time the Dairy Commissioner for Canada. Even the making of cheese was within the scope of the Commission's work.

Mr. H. J. Clarke spoke strongly in favor of technical education and the benefits to be derived from the same.

Mr. W. B. Deacon, in a few remarks, said that all should assist in making the coming meeting of the Commission the best held in Ontario. One and all should help to boom the city, and we were in a position to do so. "Let us all do what we can to educate the children in order that they may be able to take their places in the higher walks of life," said he in conclusion.

Ald. Carlow said, Belleville was a great centre and why could not we impress upon the Government the necessity of establishing in this city a technical school. This would be a practical solution of the matter.

Ald. Robertson had no doubt that Belleville was booming and a greater boom was in store, and he would do all he could to assist in booming the city.

Ald. Adams was in favor of doing all that could be done to develop the boys in educational matters.

Ald. Canning was in sympathy with all education that assisted the children.

Mr. James Rabbitts said it would be a great incentive to the children of this city if technical education was introduced.

This concluded the speech-making, and the meeting adjourned.

The Manifestations Of Eye-Strain

Continued.

The physician who is called upon to treat a so-called "functional nerve disorder," and fails to eliminate the element of eye-strain, fails in his duty both to himself and to his patient, for there is no functional trouble that may be due to eye-strain.

I have dilated on the deleterious results of nerve-waste through eye-strain because I feel itis such an important subject, and so little attention is devoted to it in the general text-books and even in monographs on neurasthenia

There is a very important matter in connection with the depression attending nerve-waste which deserves serious attention. A great deal may be done for those patients who are liable to acquire, or who have acquired, the drug habit.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Hal. Chase, peerless first baseman, is the manager of the Highlanders, vice George T. Stallings, deposed. President Frank J. Farrell made this formal announcemen this afetrnoon at the end of a three hours' conference with Stallings, at the club's offices. Mr. Farrel issued the following statement:

"Mr. Stallings has been relieved of the management of the team, and I shall notify Captain Chase that he is permanently in charge of the Highlanders, with absolute authority. The charges lodged against Chase by Stallings have been investigated thoroughly, and have been shown to be unfounded.

"The elevation of Chase to the management of the team is not an experiment. He is a great player, and I think he will make a splendid leader.'

"I do not care to say anything," remarked Stallings. "I am out of the club, and Chase is the new manager. That is all the fans want to know, so what's the use of talking any further."

Stallings seems to think that he will be prevented by President Johnson from securing another engagement in either of the big leagues. He blames Johnson for his present plight , and to-night he consented to tell the real cause of Johnson's animosity.

"I was playing right field and managing the Detroit's in the American League in 1901," said Stallings bitterly, "'when there came a close game with the White Socks in Chicago. The Sox were making a hard fight for the pennant. In this game I caught a low fly right off my shoe laces at a critical point, but the umpire, Joe Cantillon said I trapped the ball and called the batsman safe.

"I rushed to the plate to explain the play, when Cantillon called me a 'nigger.' That was an insult I wouldn't stand for, so I pulled Cantillon's nose. Of course, there was a row on the field and Johnson, who was present, notified me then and there that he would drive me out of baseball. I was hot at the time, and probably said some things that were impolite. Among them was a statement that Johnson wanted the umpires in the American League to favor the White Sox because of his close relations with their owner, Comiskey. Because of that break Johnson decided to get me, and he's been after my scalp ever since. The story that I tried to sell out Detroit to the National League is untrue, and merely a subterfuge.'"

Chase, the new manager is conceded to be the best first baseman i the game.

Rube Waddell, the erratic southpaw, who is helping Joe McGinnity in his futile effort to capture the Eastern League pennant, likes Newark so well that he has written President Hedges of the St. Louis Americans, to be allowed to remain with the Tigers next season, according to a New York report.

Rube also intends to take an active part in soccer football, at which he is no novice. During the winter months he intends to remain in Newark and get into the game. He played with several teams in St. Louis, and is rated as a good goal tender. This position he will fill next Sunday for the Scottish-Americans of Newark, in the game with the Hyde Park Blues.

Manager McGraw has announced privately that in future he will adopt the tactics of the Highlanders' owner in building up the Giants with young players. McGraw says he realizes that old-timers do not possess the same amount of ambition that youngsters show and that the Giants' scouts will scour the country for new talent of a promising nature. McGraw is averse to adopting radical methods, but the success of the Hillmen has opened his eyes to the fact that players who are coming are preferable to those who are on the down grade. The Giants' scouts are William Lush, the old Toronto outfielder, and the veteran, Adrian C, Anson.

Some recent criticism of Sam Crawford because of his falling off in batting and slowing up in speed brought from the player an answer in which he stated that too much Cobb was the reason the Tigers lost the pennant this year. He said that he and Bush were not on speaking terms with the Georgian, though when Cobb first joined the team Crawford used to take his part when other players "called" him for his "freshness."

"He finally became unbearable," said Sam.

Crawford criticized the policy of the club in permitting Cobb to do practically as he pleased, saying it made harmony in the ranks impossible.

Sam also blamed the offering of an automobile as a batting prize for a share in the Tiger slump. "It made Cobb forget team play and look only for base hits,"

GOLF

Miss Dorothy Campbell woman golf champion, will leave Hamilton on Friday for Detroit, where she will take day and Monday, and after that she and and Monday, and after that she will go to Chicago, where between October 10 and 15 she will defend her American championship title at the Homewood Golf Club.

Miss Campbell will be accompanied by Miss Florence Harvey, Hamilton; Miss Effie Nesbitt, Woodstock Golf and Country Club; Miss Mabel Thomson, St. John, N. B., and Mrs. Albert Mussen, Montreal.

RUNNING

Frank Lukeman, the crack Montreal sprinter, who it is reported is going to take up his residence in Ottawa will be a worthy wearer of Kerr's mantle if the champion is serious in his intention to retire from the cinder path. Lukeman has accomplished some noteworthy feats this year, but his meritorious performance was in the championships in Montreal Saturday. He won his heat in the hundred in 10 flat, but in the final, when running neck and neck with Cloughen, he was unfortunate to break a spike in his shoe, but was only beaten a foot. In the 220 he beat Cloughen three yards in 21 4-5, only 2-5 of a second outside of Kerr's record. Had he been pressed he would probably have bettered the record. Not satisfied with this success, Lukeman followed it up by winning the 720 yards hurdle and broad jump. As an all round performer, the Montrealer has few equals.

In The Wide World Of Woman.

THE SMILE IN ADVERSITY.

Does it ever occur to you when something very unpleasant happens that it isn't as bad as if it were twice as bad?

Among my friends I have one incurable optimist.

From every unkind blow that fate deals him—and it has dealt him several very harsh ones—he recovers himself with a smile.

And it isn't by any means the silly grin of the cheerful idiot—who doesn't know enough to be down in the mouth either. It is the rainbow of "—the man worth while,

The man who can smile.
When everything goes dead wrong."

In sheer amazement at his refusal to appear in the least disconcerted just after a knock-down blow that would have made most men go about looking like walking tombstones, I insisted one day that he explain himself, and he gave me that first sentence as the key to his optimism:

"When I was a little boy and anything I didn't like happened, I always tried to comfort myself with that "'Tisn't as bad as if it were twice as bad."

"No matter what the trouble was—whether I broke my leg or one of my pet rabbits died, or it rained the day of the Sunday School picnic, or I didn't get the skates I wanted for Christmas, I'd always cheer myself up with that 'Tisn't as bad as if it were twice as bad.'

"And still I do."

A funny little notion isn't it?

But isn't there a whole philosophy of life in it?

There are two points of view from which to look on life, and I am more and more coming to think that the question of happiness and unhappiness depends far more on which point of view you take than on the circumstances of your life.

Seems to me as if all the world might be divided into two classes—the people who dwell on the mountain top of "Tisn't as bad as if it were twice as bad," and the people who dwell in the valley of "It's never as good as if it were better."

The people on the mountain are always looking compassionately down and seeing folks less fortunate than they.

The people in the valley are always looking enviously up and seeing folks who have much more joy than they.

The people on the mountain top have a way of always looking at the good things they possess.

The people in the valley never seem to see anything but the desirable things they lack.

There was an epigram in Life the other day to this effect:

"The feminine pessimist worries because she is not as young as she once was; the optimist rejoices that she is not as old as she will be."

The first, you see, lived in the valley of "It's never as good as if it were better," and the second on the mountain of "'Tisn't as bad as if it were twice as bad."

Of course they're both right. They both see things as they are.

The only difference is that the mountain dwellers are happy and the valley dwellers are not.

Which class do you belong to?

Or are you apt, like me, to migrate from one to the other?

If you are, why don't you do as I think I shall—have the motto of the mountain dwellers printed and hung where I can daily see it and daily be reminded into optimism by it;

"'Tisn't as bad as if it were twice as bad."

THE AUTUMN TROUSSEAU.

Of course, the size of the bride's trousseau will depend entirely upon how and where she is to spend her winter—after her October wedding. If there is to be a long season of travel smart coat and skirt costumes and pretty dinner gowns will be about all that she will need. If housekeeping is to be set up in a little town her costumes will necessarily be much simpler than if a gay winter in the city is to be the plan.

Here is a list of costumes that will prove practical and satisfactory to the average bride in an average social circle:

One smartly cut and correctly made tailored wool suit.
Two pretty evening frocks in dancing length.
Two graceful house frock for afternoons at home or receptions.
One smart utility coat to cover light frocks in the street.
One evening wrap.

The list does not include the several pretty and simple little house dresses which the wise bride will provide for wear at home on evenings when there is no particular social festivity in view; nor the graceful tea gowns and negliges which are included in every properly appointed trousseau.

MAKING CRIPPEN LAUGH.

How Captain Kendall Managed to Have a Look at His Teeth.

In that long, gruesome history of the London cellar murder, now become famous to Canada because Dr. Hawley H. Crippen and his companion, Miss Leneve, were taken prisoners on Canadian shores, there is one little joke which twinkles forth like a bright star from a bank of ominous clouds.

Captain Kendall of the Montrose, it will be remembered, tallied up two of his passengers, Philo Robinson, a merchant of Detroit, and his son, a student, as being the much wanted doctor and his typist. He had read the descriptions of the pair published in the London papers with the greatest assiduity, and came to the conclusion that, to make absolutely certain of the identity of his passengers, he must have a look at Robinson's teeth. Crippen was described as having an excellent set of false grinders. Robinson was in the habit of talking with his mouth well closed, almost numbling his words, and grunting instead of smiling.

To make Robinson open his mouth and give himself away without arousing his suspicions was the captain's task. He bethought himself of a joke to make him laugh. Here is the joke, a rather gruesome joke to tell a suspected murderer:

"I had a friend in London once," commenced the sailorman, "a merchant, who had a choice lot of very strong Lymburger cheese which he was desirous of shipping to a firm in Glasgow. The stuff was so high and smelled so rank that all the railway companies refused to carry it as freight. Finally he hit upon a bright idea. He made a coffin and shipped the cheese, a shilling a mile, mind you, as a stiff. He himself dressed in black, put on a very mournful air, and accompanied the 'body' as all sorrowing relatives should.

"When the train arrived at Glasgow, the merchant went forward to the express car to await delivery. He was standing on the platform with his handkerchief tucked becomingly into his eye, when a guard stepped up and asked sympathetically:

"'Relative, sir?'
"'Yes.'
"'Near relative?'
"'Yes.'
"'Well, he sure is dead, aint he?'"

"Haw, haw, haw," laughed Crippen, as he leaned back in his deck chair in high good humor.

Kendall's eyes nearly popped out of his ruddy weather-beaten face as he pierced the cavern of Crippen's gorge. He got a good look, as did the chief engineer, Mr. Vine, who was in on the secret, and each winked complacently, highly satisfied that their ruse had fathomed the secret.

Connaught, the Canadian.

Miss E. Pauline Johnson, the well-known Indian poet, has been taking a deep interest in the proposed appointment of the Duke of Connaught as the successor at Rideau Hall of Earl Grey. She writes "How many Canadians are aware that should the Duke of Connaught, the only surviving son of Queen Victoria, be appointed to represent King George in Canada, they will at least have, what many wish for, a 'native' Canadian, bearing an ancient Canadian title, as Governor-General of the Dominion."

It seems that in 1869, when as Prince Arthur, the duke was visiting this country for the first time, he received an invitation from his royal mother's Indian children, out on the Grand River reserve, Brant County, to visit the reserve. He did so on October 1 of that year; and in the old Mohawk Church, supported by Onwanonsyshow, head chief of the Mohawks, Prince Arthur was consecrated chief of the Six Nations of Indians.

Mr. Pugsley a Dry Humorist.

When Hon. Mr. Pugsley was Attorney-General of New Brunswick he was once prosecuting a murder case in the County of Carleton.

It was admitted that the prisoner had shot the deceased, but it was contended that her death resulted from unskilful treatment, and counsel for the prisoner had led several of the medical witnesses to admit that the rifle bullet in passing through the air would become heated and practically sterilized and would carry no poisonous germs into the wound.

The Attorney-General interposed: "Probably my learned friend means that these bullets were first treated with some antiseptic solution that rendered them absolutely harmless," he suggested gravely.

The Aviator's First Lessons Taken With the Use of a Glider.

More gliders are made and used nowadays than ever. The glider is practically a flying machine without an engine, and it is by the use of a glider that the aviator gets his elementary knowledge of the art of flying.

In a glider you first get accustomed to the sense of being off the earth and first come to have some knowledge of the effect of wind and air currents on the planes. The use of the glider is, in fact, the necessary primary schooling for anybody who would learn to fly.

In a glider the air man gets the feel of things with himself suspended in the air and moving through it carried by a highly sensitive support. He must learn as far as he can the control of this support, and he must learn also self control in this novel situation before he can begin to undertake the control of a machine driven through the air by an engine which also he must control, and the glider and the flying machine are two very different propositions. It is recalled that the Wright brothers and all other aviators began and long continued practice with gliders before installing engines and essaying flight.

There are now more and more flying machines, their number is increasing almost daily, and there are now also more gliders, more and more men and boys building gliders and floating or learning to float through the air. The great majority of those now making and using gliders will never get beyond the primary stage, but it is from among the gliders of the present day that the ranks of the flying machine operators of the immediate future will be recruited.—New York Sun.

A Singular Request.

A peculiar fate is said to overhang the family of the late Sir Julian Goldsmid. An ancestor of his, so says the legend, once gave shelter to a rabbi, who at his death left to him a bequest of a mysterious box which was on no account to be opened until after the customary seven days of mourning.. If opened before that time a curse would fall upon the family. Curiosity got the better of superstition, and the box was opened before the seven days were up. In it was found a document which said that as the injunction of the rabbi had not been heeded no future owner of the estate would be succeeded by a son. And such, strangely enough, has been the case ever since.

Loudest Voice In the Lords.

The credit of having the loudest voice in the House of Lords belongs to Lord Ashbourne. The tones that were once his pride have been modified by time, use, and age, but he can still, like John Peel, "awaken the dead." There is a story that when Mr. Gibson, as he then was, made his debut as an Irish law officer in the Commons a colleague, hurrying into the House, met another coming out. "Why, where are you going? Don't you know that Gibson is up?" "Yes, I know, and I am going to the Lords." "To the Lords! Don't you want to hear him?" "I fancy I shall hear him with more comfort from the distance."

Champion of Women's Suffrage.

Mr. David Shackleton, who introduced the Women's Franchise Bill, in the British House, is the son of an Accrington watchmaker. When he was nine he started work as a half-timer in the mills, and such were his energy and industry that before he was thirteen he had charge of three looms—a record in the weaving industry. "I was a good elementary scholar," says Mr. Shackleton, "and so nearly all my time as a pupil at the elementary school was spent as a teacher, instructing men old enough to be my father in the three R's. The result was that I had to educate myself after leaving that school."

EVERYONE SEEMS TO BE TAKING "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Demand Always Increasing

Because "Fruit-a-tives" Cures

The real value of any article may be judged by the demand for it. Steadily increasing sales are the surest indication of intrinsic merit. This applies to a medicine as well as to a breakfast food.

First introduced to the public in Ottawa, the fame of "Fruit-a-tives" quickly spread until to-day these fruit juice tablets are known and used in every section of the Dominion.

The only reason for this extraordinary demand is that "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit, and is the only remedy that will positively cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Backache, Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Bladder and Kidney Troubles. One has only to read the testimonials given to "Fruit-a-tives" by some of the best known and most highly esteemed people of Canada, to appreciate the wonderful amount of good that this grand fruit medicine has done and is doing for the sick and suffering.

Rolling Pins.

When the young housekeeper is buying a rolling pin she might as well buy a pretty one as an ugly one, especially as there is no difference in the price. Some wooden pins are as highly polished as a fine piece of furniture and china rolling pins may be either perfectly white or of delft blue and white. In selecting a rolling pin, however, a thought must be given to cleanliness. A wooden pin may not be as pretty as a china one, but if the wooden handle of the china one does not fit closely into the roller the dough will get inside and there is no way to get it out. So, however pretty the china roller, see that the wooden handle fits snugly. There are glass pins which many housekeepers prefer to either china or the wooden.

In the making of hot starch soapy water should always be used. This gives the necessary shine to the linen, while it prevents any chance of the iron sticking to the surface of the article.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 29.—Hon. Mr. Fielding and family returned here this morning and although the Minister of Finance is not seriously ill a partial facial paralysis necessitates rest and will probably postpone reciprocity negot'ations with the United States.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Sept. 29.—The

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

Assessment Department gives Brantford a population of twenty-two thousand, being twelve hundred increase. With suburbs to be annexed shortly, Brantford has a populat'on of twenty-five thousand.

HAS NEURALGIA.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 29.—Hon. Mr. Fielding, Minister of Finance, is here in the doctors care, but he personally denied this morning that he was suffering from anything worse than neuralgia, which is chronic with him.

DIAMOND THIEF.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 29.—Chief Carpenter received word to-day from Boston of the arrest there of Jacob Lechtin, aged 24, charged with the theft of forty thousand dollars' worth of diamonds from Boston and New York stores. There is a charge of theft of twelve-hundred dollars wo:th in Montreal against Lechtin.

BOY BURGLAR.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 29.—A boy burglar named Roberts, who, with a thief named Steadman, made a sensational escape from the London jail, was recaptured to-day at Windsor. He is wanted at Badaxe, Mich.

POTATOES SCARCE.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 29.—That Western Canada will require large importations of potatoes from Ontario and elsewhere is indicated by the fact that the present price of ninety cents a bushel is unprecedented for this time of year.

McNULTY'S TRIAL.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

BARRIE, Ont., Sept. 29.—Thomas McNulty, a married man being tried here for complicity in the murder of a child which Mary Dolan has already been convicted of killing, hung his head to-day, apparently seeing and hearing nothing, as the girl, between sobs and fits of hysteria, continued her story in the witness box to-day. She denied that she had ever tried to put a child in an orphanage at another mans expense. John McGregor, school teacher, told of a conversation with the girl in which she said the child featured another man in town not McNulty. The judge prevented the lawyer putting questions to male witnesses dealing with their relations with the girl.

APPLIES FOR HER RELEASE.

(Intelligencer Spec'al.)

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 29.—Because she was brought here by Mrs. Johnston, woman bailiff, Alice O'Brien's lawyer applied at Osgoode Hall for her release under habeas corpus on the plea that the law does not recognize women court officials.

STILL MYSTIFIED.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

GODERICH, Ont., Sept. 29.—"We are still mystified," said Detective Greer this afternoon when, with the local police chief, he returned from scouring the country for the murderer of Lizzie Anderson. The funeral of the dead girl this morning to Dungannon cemetery was very largely attended. The parents are prostrated.

SCAFFOLDING COLLAPSES.

(Intelligencer Special)

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 29.—Wm. Sanscone, a bricklayer, was fatally injured and three others seriously, when the scaffolding at the bui'ding on Main street collapsed this morning.

T. R.'S Gubernatorial Candidate Nominated.

Former President Gives Second Blow to The Old Guard--Henry L. Stimson Candidate of The Republican Party For Governor of the State of New York.

Saratoga, N.Y., Sept. 29.—The Republican State Convention last evening nominated Henry L. Stimson, New York, as its candidate for governor. The nomination of Mr. Stimson was one more victory for Theodore Roosevelt, who personally led the fight for the nomination of his candidate.

The rest of the ticket folows: For lieutenant-governor, Edw. Shoenock, Syracuse; secretary of state, Samuel S. Koonig, New York (re-nominated); state comptroller, James Thompson, Valley Falls, Rensselaer County; state treasurer, Thomas F. Fennell, Elmira; state engineer, Frank M. Williams, Oneida (re-nominated); attorney-general, Edw. R. O'Malley, Buffalo (re-nominated); associate judge of the Court of Appeals, Irving G. Vann, Syracuse (re-nominated).

The vote for governor: Henry L. Stimson, 684; Wm. S. Bennet, 242; Thos. B. Dunn, 38; James B. McEwan, 28; Scattering, 23.

The slate, as made up yesterday morning by Col. Roosevelt, Senator Root and their advisers, went through without a hitch. Except for governor and comptroller, there were contests. Representative Bennet, who conducted the only open campaign for the nomination for governor, kept up the fight to the end, and his persistency and his strength with the New York delegation threatened yesterday afternoon to break up the slate.

It is understood that Roosevelt will stump the state for the ticket. He is reported to have said yesterday that he would.

At the close of the convention, Jas. W. Wadsworth, jr., speaker of the assembly, announced his withdrawal from the Legislature.

Democrats After Roosevelt.

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 29.—E. W. Shepard of New York, James S. Havens of Rochester, and Herman Ridder of New York are the three names being mentioned most to-day as candidates for first place on the ticket which the Democratic state convention will name Friday. And their relative chances appear to rank in the order in which their names are mentioned.

The most important planks in the platform will have to do with direct nominations, tariff reform and a denunciation of Rooseveltism, or what is called the "New Nationalism" It looks as if the Democratic platform builders were determined to go the Republicans one better so far as the direct nomination question is concerned. Forecasts of the platform declare that the direct nominations' clause will be about as radical as language can make it.

Girl Breaks Down on Witness Stand.

Mary Dolan's Terrible Story--Citizens of Barrie Heated Over The Treatment Accorded The Girl By Her Lover Mc Nulty,

Barrie, Sept. 29.—Little new evidence was brought forward yesterday in the trial of Thomas McNulty for having advised Mary Dolan to strangle her child, the same witnesses who gave evidence in regard to the girl repeating their stories. Mary Dolan, who is being used as the chief witness against McNulty, was in the box four hours, while being put through a rigid cross-examination. Counsel for the defence endeavored to show that McNulty was not the only one who had had intimated relations with the girl. Instances of other men being cited, but this the girl denied.

Her story was practically a repetition of what she told Tuesday, with some details added.

McNulty wrote telling her to take the child to Hawkstone, and to strangle it between there and Orillia, he enclosed $5 with the letter.

When she informed McNulty of what she had done, he advised her not to worry, but warned her not to say anything to anybody, adding: "They cannot do anything to me, as I never saw the child." After the baby's body was found in July, McNulty urged her not to give him away.

The witness said she would not have killed the child if she had not been told to do so by McNulty.

At an allusion to the killing, she became incoherent, and the proceedings were frequently checked by her cries.

Lucy Lamb, who visited at the Dolans, swore she slept with Mary one night in the same bed, and woke up towards morning in time to see McNulty leaving by the window.

The girl's father swore he did not know she was a mother until she was arrested. He vehemently declared he did not turn her away from home.

After four hours, the witness broke down completely and screamed aloud: "Oh my darling baby; my darling baby, McNulty killed him; he did, he did." She had to be carried from the court house, which rang with her cries.

An effort was made to resume her examination at 5 o'clock, but the distressing scene of the morning was repeated. Her jaws were rigid and had to be forced to administer an opiate.

Feeling against McNulty and sympathy for the girl runs high.

McNulty's indifference to the girl's condition has continued. A number of letters from him, containing the terms of endearment: "Dear sweetheart," "Dear Mary," were read, in which he continually begs her to meet him secretly, and continue their illicit interests.

In reference to the girl's condition, Justice Britton said no one was responsible, it growing out of the necessary steps of those in charge of the case.

The trial will be continued to-day.

Surprise In Store In Goderich Case.

Police Are Working Quietly on Clue-- Bloodstained Lap-Robe Found But The Man Who Had The Buggy Tells a Story Which Exonerates Him.

Goderich, Sept. 29.—There is a lack of sensation in the Anderson murder mystery to-day. The police are working quietly on some clue of their own, and expect to have someone to answer to the startling evidence that is promised by the physicians who made the postmortem examination when the inquest meets again next week. They are agreed that the girl was first stunned by a blow on the forehead, while the stains on the clothing show the throat was cut before the garments were removed. The clothing was cut away with a knife. The doctors are reasonably certain that the murderer did not accomplish the evident purpose of his crime.

What seemed yesterday to be preliminary to sensational developments, is declared by Crown Attorney Seagar to have flattened out. This was the discovery of a blood-stained robe in a buggy, which had been hired at a livery at 10.30 from the night of the crime, and was not returned until 3 a.m. A barrister in the town, who returned the rig, while unable to explain the presence of the bloodstains, told a straight story of what had happened. He and a showman, manager of a troupe of actors at the fair, had met a couple of young women, who had suggested a drive about town. At midnight the actor and one of the women had gotten out at the hotel, while the lawyer and his companion went for another drive.

The crown attorney telephoned to Seaforth yesterday about a tramp who had been seen around there with a scratched-up face. Nothing resulted from that investigation, however.

It is learned that the missing Frank Smith has been in Seaforth and worked there till Saturday night when he left. There is nothing doing in that direction, said Mr. Seagar. There was a report that the body of Smith had been found in the lake at Port Albert, but this is wrong.

The girl's body was taken from the undertaking rooms to her home in Saltford last night. The funeral took place to Dungannon this morning.

THIS JOY CART TURNS TURTLE.

Frank Hyde and Three Others Thrown Into Canal Near Dunnville.

TRIED TO AVERT MUDHOLE.

Machine Skidded And Plunged Into Water — One Woman In the Party Pinned in the Mud and Had Two Ribs Broken.

Dunnville, Sept. 29.—Frank Hyde, proprietor of the Victoria Hotel here, was driving his automobile along the bank of the feeder to the Welland Canal, about four miles east of Dunnville, yesterday afternoon, in which were his mother and brother, Sidney, of Courtright, Ont., and his niece, Miss Eva Richardson of Detroit, when in trying to avert a mudhole he steered too near the edge of the bank, and was unable to stop the machine before it skidded and plunged into the water, about seven feet below, the car tumbling turtle with its occupants.

Sidney Hyde and Miss Richardson were thrown out when the car first turned over. Frank Hyde, who was thrown into the water, luckily, reached shore, and, with the assistance of his brother, turned over the car, which was partly floating owing to the tires buoying it up.

Mrs. Hyde, who was sitting on the rear seat, was pinned down into the mud by the weight of the car for about three minutes before she was released.

The assistance of Mr. Mumby, a farmer living near-by, was secured, and, after reviving Mrs. Hyde as much as possible, he drove the party to town. Dr. Clark was called, and found that Mrs. Hyde had two ribs broken, besides numerous bruises. The others escaped uninjured.

Death to the Poisoners.

Rome, Sept. 29.—The official report issued last night states that during the past twenty-four hours thirteen new cases of Asiatic cholera have appeared in the city of Naples, with nine deaths, four new cases, and one death in the province of Naples, outside the city, and three new cases and one death in the province of Bari. These do not include the so-called cases of gastro enteritis.

A despatch from Naples says that two strangers seeking lodgings in a poor quarter yesterday aroused the suspicion of the residents, who cried out that they were spreading the cholera. The strangers were attacked by the mob, when they attempted to give candy to some children, with cries of "death to the poisoners," and were severely injured before the police could come to their rescue.

Vannutelli at the Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 29.—His Eminence Cardinal Vannutelli, special legate [illegible] Pope Pius X., and cardinal [illegible] of the Carmelite Order, and [illegible] other notable priests connected with the Pope's household, were guests at the Monastery of Mt. Carmel, yesterday morning. Bishop O'Connol of California, Prince lu Croy, Rev. Dr. Kelley of Church Extension Society, Chicago, Mgr. Tampieri, Mgr. Liza, Father Ugiute, Count Vannutelli, and Bishop Muldoon were among the party. The distinguished party arrived at 6 o'clock, when the cardinal celebrated mass in Our Lady of Peace Church. At 2.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon the party went to Buffalo, where they were entertained by Bishop Colton, leaving at 10.45 for Washington, where they will spend some time.

Buncoed by a Bridegroom.

Prescott, Sept. 29.—The Methodist minister here was the victim of a pretty smooth bunco trick Tuesday evening, whereby he was done out of a fee. A young couple came over from Ogdensburg, and were married by Rev. A. E. Runnels. The bride stepped out and down the street while the groom stood talking with the minister after the ceremony. The groom suddenly told Mr. Runnels his wife had all the money, and he would hurry after her to get the fee, but he did not come back.

Brother and Sister Had Never Met.

Detroit, Sept. 29.—A man and woman, brother and sister, who have lived less than 150 miles apart, each believing the other dead, met for the first time in their lives at Pontiac, Mich. Mrs. Katherine Howard, of London, aged 58 years, became separated from her family before her brother, Charles D. Sievers, aged 50, was born. Sievers lives in Pontiac. She was told of Sievers by friends, who remarked on the resemblance. She went to Pontiac and the relationship was established.

Bourassa Coming Back.

Montreal, Sept. 29.—It is stated on excellent authority that H. Bourassa, M.P.P., told a friend the other day that he would return to the House of Commons at the next federal elections. It is now well understood that the Nationalist leader is disappointed with the result of his offer to dislodge Sir Lomer Gouin, and will get back to the larger field at the first opportunity.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY.

CURRENT EVENTS.

Probably the most disagreeable thing in the world is being caught.—Ever find it so?

Fifty western United States clergymen have resigned; they could not live on their salaries. "Salvation is free," but congregations ought to remember that grub and clothing is not.

The Kentucky minister who was asked by his congregation to resign because he played baseball and thus sinned horribly shows to what depth of depravity some clergymen sink when they enter upon the downward path. His fate should serve as a warning to others who may be tempted and who even now may be upon the brink." So says the Milwaukee Journal. Sensible men would come to the conclusion that the congregation was the greatest sinner of the two.

Western Beef Trust man says that only two and one-half per cent. is made by the packers.—In business just for the love of the thing. Pity these unselfish mortals are so little appreciated.

"Is a hen a bird?" This much discussed question, which the United States Treasury officials passed up as hopeless, will probably come before the Court of Customs Appeals. If birds' eggs are free under the tariff, and hen's eggs are taxed five cents a dozen, why isn't a hen a bird?

The Premier of Nova Scotia is en route to Chicago to secure an artificial leg. This will never be found necessary for Premier Laurier, as he and his Government now have artificial legs in each Province on which they endeavor to stand.

Do You Know the value of OLIVE OIL?

Its action is midly laxative and its being a nutritious food. it should be taken by all who are of a habit constipated to any degree.

No prescribed dosing is required, you are simply to take as much as you care for on your food probably on salads and in meat or fish dressings.

Our French Olive Oil is the kind to use. It is absolutely pure,

TOLD TO LEAVE CITY.

Harry McDonough, a stranger who was arrested here a week ago on a charge of vagrancy and remanded to jail for a week was this morning discharged by the Magistrate upon promising to leave the city. McDonough was the man on whom was found a large number of small envelopes on which was printed an appeal for assistance as the bearer was a cripple

AT THE POLICE COURT.

John Duffy, who was working on the new roundhouse, was arrested last evening for being drunk, also for using threatening language towards a fellow employee named Scheritt. This morning, before Magistrate Masson, he admitted being drunk, but did not remember using the language toward Scheritt, as charged. A fine of $5 was imposed, which Duffy paid. Robert Harwood, another stranger, on a charge of drunkenness was allowed to go.

DEATH OF MISS PRATT.

After an illness of five weeks duration, Miss Margaret Pratt passed away this morning at the family residence Reid street. Deceased, who was 28 years of age, was born in this city where she had resided all her life. She was the only daughter of Mrs. Wm Pratt. Deceased was an estimable young lady. She was a member of St. Andrew's Church, and always took an active part in church work. Miss Pratt had a most amiable disposition and she had a host of friends who will sincerely regret her demise. In addition to the mother, three brothers survive namely, J. P., of Montreal, Wm. J. and Christopher, of Rivers, Man. To the family will be extended the heart felt sympathy of all friends

DEATH OF ROBT. BARBER.

Mr. Robert A. Barber, a well known and highly respected citizen of Trenton passed away last evening after an extended illness. Deceased, who was 53 years of age, was born in the Township of Hungerford and all his life had been spent in this County. Mr Barber was for some time a resident of this city being in the dry goods business. Latterly he had been conducting a similar business in the town of Trenton. Deceased was well known in this section and had a host of friends. He had a genial disposition and was upright in all his business transactions. Mr. Barber was a member of the Masonic fraternity. In religion he was an Anglican and was an ardent supporter of the Conservative principles. A wife and one son, Reid of Trenton, and one daughter, Mrs. A. L. Hicks, of Trenton survive. The deceased was a brother of Mr. John Barber, Mrs. S. A. Lockwood, and Mrs. T. J. Blackburn of this city.

YESTERDAY'S WEDDING.

The marriage of Miss Roma B. Elliott, daughter of Mr. Arthur Elliott, Port Granby, Ont., and Mr. Norman L. Turner, M.A., Belleville, Ont., was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Port Granby, Wednesday afternoon, the 28th inst. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Mr. Kerr, M. A. The bride looked charming in white silk with Irish lace trimmings, and wore the groom's gift, a necklace of diamonds and pearls. The bride carried white roses and lillies of the valley. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Winifred Elliott, and carried pink roses. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a pearl and emerald pin. The best man was Mr. Arthur B. Turner, brother of the groom. Mrs. Herbert G. Elliott, of Barrie, played the wedding march. The happy couple left on the evening train for points west, and upon their return will take up their residence at Belleville.

CHEESE MARKET.

At the cheese board this afternoon there were boarded 2385 boxes of cheese, all white. Of this amount Mr. M. Bird, buyer for Hodgson Bros., Montreal, secured 1700 boxes at 11 3-8c. The balance boarded was sold at 11 1-8c. and 11 3-8c. Last week the highest price paid was 11 1-8c.

SEEKS INFORMATION.

RUDY-HASLIP.

A very pretty wedding took place at 8 o'clock last evening at the Albion House in this city. The bride was Miss Ethel Haslip, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Thomas Haslip, and the groom, Mr. Norman Rudy, of Orillia and formerly of Allentown, Pa. A large number of guests were present to witness the interesting ceremony which was performed by the Rev. R. C. Blagrave, rector of Christ Church Miss Annie O'Neil [illegible] bridesmaid whilst Mr. David Haslip, brother of the bride did honors for the groom The drawing room where the wedding took place was prettily decorated with flowers, After the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room where a most tempting repast was served. At the conclusion of the supper a few brief congratulatory addresses were given by some of the guests who wished the couple every happiness in married life. Later in the evening a delightful social time was spent by the guests, music being furnished by the I. O. O. F. orchestra. That the bride had many friends was evidenced by the large number of costly and beautiful gifts which she received. Mr. and Mrs. Rudy will take up their residence in Orillia. The Intelligencer unites with their many friends in wishing them many years of happy and prosperous wedded life.

Waited Three Weeks.

Edmonton, Sept. 29.—In giving judgment for wages to six G.T.P. laborers, Magistrate Byers declared that the treatment of its employes who come under his notice is disgraceful.

"I myself have known men to have to wait for three weeks before they could leave town when they had other situations ready for them at some other place," he said. "During this time they had to pay their board and wait around for their money, besides suffering the loss of that time. While this may not be very much to a wealthy company like the G.T.P., it is a very large item to the poor workingman, who has to work from day to day in order to live."

It appears that the G.T.P. has no pay office here, and authority must be secured from Winnipeg before pay checks can be endorsed. Since last spring over a hundred of these cases have been settled in the Police Court.

Bluffing Across The Border.

If semi-scrupulous American politicians wish to shout reciprocity in the ears of predatory American manufacturers, let them do so. It's their privilege. For many prerogatives are granted the man who plays the game of politics. But for Canadians to seriously consider the question of reciprocity, is the most colossal folly imaginable. One year of reciprocity would put Canada back ten. And those who are spreading the reciprocity propaganda in this country to-day are this country's greatest enemies.

Seemingly, however, both the Republicans and the Democrats are now thoroughly alive to the fact that the word reciprocity is one to conjure with in certain sections of the United States. For some years the Democrats of Massachusetts and other Atlantic coast states have been talking reciprocity, and they have found that it pays. Now the Republicans are beginning to realize that they, too, should talk reciprocity, not because they seriously believe in it, but because it is a most convenient instrument with which to defeat the Democrats. So that reciprocity with Canada has in reality become the football of party politics in the United States. Already the Republicans and Democrats are fighting and defying each other over it.

"Apparently the idea of the Administration," says the Springfield Republican, "is to anticipate a chief issue of "the Democratic campaign in Massa-"chusetts and other manufacturing "States, and present an offset." But Congressman Foss hastens to say that the move will be ineffectual. "The "Republican party," he declares, "has "had its opportunity to give us re-"ciprocity, and has failed to do so." "The people want the real thing, and "only the Democratic party can give "them that."

Mr. Foss, who is perhaps the most ardent advocate of reciprocity in the east, is apparently imbued with the idea that the election of the Democratic party would immediately result in establishing free trade between the United States and Canada. He evidently fails to recognize that his northern neighbors are a sane and sensible people and not yet ready to place their country in the keeping of American Democrats, or any other American party in power. For that is virtually what reciprocity would mean. If free trade were established between the two countries we might just as well close up shop at Ottawa and permit Washington to guide our destinies. For by far the most important duty developing upon those in power at Ottawa is the regulating of our tariff, the shaping of our fiscal policy. If we are to continue to grow and prosper we must continue to maintain the policy of the Liberal-Conservative party—the policy of protection. The adoption of the policy of reciprocity, as everyone knows, would place us immediately at the mercy of the United States.

Let our southern neighbors use reciprocity with Canada as a football in party politics if they will; at that we can afford to be calmly amused. But let us see that the matter goes no farther. For if it does, and reciprocity becomes a fact, it will be the whole industrial system of Canada which will become the football of American party politics. Where, then, will be Canada's industrial freedom? It will be gone, lost.

Another Grievance.

The French Canadians who are grumbling about the appointment of Archbishop Gauthier to the See of Ottawa seem to find little sympathy from their English-speaking neighbors. In spite of the abnormally large birth rate among the French-Canadians, English speaking Canada is growing at a much faster rate than that of the latin tongue. Many French-Canadians such as Mr. Bourassa, are somewhat alarmed over the prospect of conditions becoming too one-sided, and are seeking by every means to preserve in Canada, as far as possible, the French tongue, the French spirit and French traditions. If Canada doesn't take care she will some day face a condition in Quebec similar to the one which England has faced in Ireland for many a day.

Discussing the attitude of the French-Canadians toward the appointment of Archbishop Gauthier, the Toronto News observes:—

"Many of the French papers regret to report that Mgr. Gauthier has been named Archbishop of Ottawa. The prelate has a French name, but he is counted as an English-speaking Catholic. His training has been similar to that of Archbishop McEvay or Bishop Fallon. He has the English viewpoint. Therefore, French Catholics of Nationalist tendency are discontented because he succeeds the late Archbishop Duhamel.

"Some weeks ago Mr. Bourassa wrote in Le Devoir a strong article setting forth his objections to Mgr. Gauthier or any other English-speaking prelate as head of the Archiepiscopal See of Ottawa. Mgr. Gauthier's name already had been mentioned. Mr. Bourassa said that the large majority of the Roman Catholics of the diocese were French-speaking and that they were entitled to a French bishop. The fear amongst those interested in the Nationalist propaganda is that the new Archbishop may not support the demand for bi-lingual schools in Ontario, that he may not be a tool in the hands of Mr. Bourassa and Mr. Lavergne for the extension and the glorification of the French language at the expense of English. La Temps says: 'We will resist any attempt to restrain French teaching in the schools of Ontario, because it is our good pleasure, and because we desire to conserve our language.'

"All the Nationalists speak as if 'The traitor's hand is on thy throat, O French language.' No one objects to a Frenchman speaking French. And it would be an excellent thing if the English Canadians also spoke it. French is a beautiful and exact language. It does not need conserving. Moliere and Corneille and Balzac and De Maupassant attended to its conservation long ago. The trouble is that Mr. Bourassa and his associates have a wrong impression of the meaning of 'conservation.' They seem to think that to conserve anything you must thrust it down someone's throat.

"The English-speaking Catholics of this Province have a right to demand that their children be taught the grammar, literature and composition of their mother tongue. The effort of certain Quebec agitators to Gallicise the schools of this Province is a species of interference which verges upon impudence. Perhaps a French-speaking Archbishop at Ottawa might have favored this Nationalist plan so far as he could. The late Archbishop Duhamel often used his power, wittingly or unwittingly, for the special advantage of his French parishioners. Then Mgr. Fallon of London was parish priest of St. Patrick's, Ottawa. He protested and finally was forced to leave the Capital and go to Buffalo.

"Mgr. Gauthier is not likely to interrupt the religious duties of his office by outside political or Nationalist activity. He is to be an Archbishop, not a subordinate of the Nationalist party nor even a contributing editor of Le Devoir."

And the Kingston Whig ends a half column thus:—"Canada is hearing too much about the French flag, the French language and the French spirit. The church has heard too much about them, and the church is not in the humor to discuss grievances which exist only in the imagination."

A New York company which maintains a burglar alarm system for business building now installs a garages apparatus which registers in its office the leaving and returning time of automobiles to prevent their use without their owner's consent.

The argument advanced in favor of a new phonograph which has its records in the form of endless belts is that it is possible to provide much longer selections than by the older methods.

CANIFTON.

The home of Mr. Jas. Grills of the third concession of Thurlow, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday evening, Sept. 7th, when his daughter, Ethel, became the wife of Mr. Frederick W. Noakes, of Plainfield. The service was conducted by the Rev. S. A. Kemp, in the presence of about 50 guests who came from far and near. Att 7.30 in the evening the bridal party entered the drawing-ing room and passed under an arch of foliage and flowers, the bride leaning upon the arm of her father, who gave her away. She was dressed in white dotted silk trimmed with satin, chiffon plaiting and pearls and carried a bouquet of white carnations and ferns. The bridesmaid was Miss Elda Haight, was dressed in cream poplin, with overlace and gilt trimming and carried a bouquet of pink carnations and ferns. The groom was well supported by Mr. Percy Farnham, of Canifton, while little Miss Elda, sister of the bride, acted as flower girl, gowned in white lawn. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl brooch, to the bridesmaid an amethyst brooch, to the flower girl a signet ring and to the groomsman a pair of gold cuff links.

After the ceremony the party sat down to an elaborate supper which was very much enjoyed as the hour was rather late. The presents were many, useful and valuable and bore testimony to the popularity of the young couple. The bride's travelling dress was of blue serge with black hat which was very becoming to her indeed. The happy couple took the midnight train for Toronto spending some time in the city and at Niagara Falls. They will probably settle at Plainfield where a host of friends are ready to welcome them and to wish them a long and happy life together.

Dandruff Causes Falling Hair and Baldness

BALDNESS AND ITCHING SCALP ARE CAUSED BY MICROBES.

There is no doubt about it. Doctor Sabourand proved it when he infected a guinea pig with dandruff germs and all its hair disappeared in a short time. The entire medical world has accepted Dr. Sabourand's discovery as final. Ask any worthy physician.

Paris leads the world in knowledge of diseases of the hair and remedies for the same.

And Parisian Sage which can now be obtained at leading druggists all over Canada is the one great remedy that kills the dandruff germs.

And that is why J. V. Doyle says to every reader of the Intelligencer if Parisian Sage does not banish dandruff, stop falling hair or itching scalp in two weeks, he will refund the purchase price.

Dandruff is the forerunner of baldness Take care of your hair while you have hair to take care of. Kill the dandruff germs now before the dandruff germs kill the hair.

Use Parisian Sage, the guaranteed dandruff cure and delightful hair dressing.

It is used extensively by ladies of refinement, because it keeps the scalp absolutely clean and gives a bewitching lustre to the hair. Price 50 cents at J. V. "I was told of your great remedy, Parisian Sage, that it would grow hair on bald heads, so I got a bottle and tried it, and it is fine. I am a young man, and only 25, and was completely bald on the top of my head, and now I have hair one inch long, with the use of only one bottle. I shall certainly keep on using it until I have a good head of hair, which I have no doubt it will bring."—Oscar Armstrong, engineer, Belleville Horseshoe and Rolling Mill Co., Belleville, Ont., Aug. 21, 1909.

HER SMILE.

Where Other Things Failed It Worked Wonders.

By EDWARD C. BINGHAM.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

I am an attorney in a village about which cluster a number of prosperous farmers.

One day a [illegible] Hugh Jorbert came into my office and asked me to take a case for him. Jorbert was thirty-two years old and a fine specimen of a man. He was well looking, well off and a bachelor. When he stated his case I was astonished. A young widow from the city, twenty-four years old, had spent a summer in the neighborhood and had turned the heads of half the young men who had met her. Jorbert wished me to bring suit for him against her for $25,000 for breach of promise to marry him.

No such suit had ever before been brought in the county. Such a suit had rarely anywhere been entered by a man against a woman, and Jorbert was the last man I should ever suspect of wishing to demand damages for his blighted affections.

I endeavored to dissuade him from taking action in the matter, saying that it would only injure him in the community and would do no good. Now and again one of these fascinators are let loose on the community and do a lot of harm among the men; there was no way to stop them or to punish them; the best way was to ignore them. If men were so foolish as to be duped by them they must take the consequences.

But Jorbert was bent on pressing his suit, so I wrote a preliminary note to the widow, informing her that I was instructed by my client to claim damages for his wounded affections and would be pleased to receive from her a proposition for settlement. Although it was September, she had not yet returned to the city, and within a day or two she came into my office.

"I SAW THE JUDGE."

Mrs. Kate Alvord was unique. Small, slender, with a black eye never at rest and a perpetual smile forever playing about a pair of exquisitely cut lips, she appeared to be quite able to walk through a whole regiment of men, mowing them down as she proceeded. She had not been in the office five minutes before I began to feel myself coming under a spell. I endeavored to induce her to consider the matter in hand seriously, but failed. I asked her if she proposed to settle or stand suit. She smiled and said that she hadn't made up her mind. I proposed that she have an interview with my client. She smiled again and replied, "Not at present." When she left me not one step had been taken toward compromising the case or fighting it. I had gained no evidence from her as to how far the matter had gone between her and my client, whether he had a good or a poor case, whether she would settle or fight, whether she really cared anything for him or not. Indeed, I was no better informed than I had been before she came into the office.

Nevertheless one thing I had learned. It was this. Mrs. Alvord was a witch. I was a bachelor and had never been in the slightest degree affected by any woman. Yet here within half an hour a woman had infatuated me. When she had left me with such a smile as she might have given me had I been her attorney instead of Jorbert's, and the door closing shut her from my view, it seemed as if I had taken hashish or some other drug to set my brain waltzing through paradise. I spent the afternoon attempting to fix my mind on my routine work, but despite all I could do I was still talking with the young widow about a suit I was to bring against her for breach of promise, which seemed to me ridiculous.

Within a week the widow came to see me three times. Her object, so she said, was to find a way out of the matter. It occurred to me that she was more likely to find her way into another matter of the same kind, with me for accuser. The second week she did not need to come to my office, for I found myself constantly going to her home. We were still engaged upon the question of avoiding—at least I thought we were—a trial of the case, but got no nearer a solution. Then all of a sudden the lady returned to the city, leaving matters just where they had stood from the first.

I put into operation the legal machinery preliminary to a trial. I am bound to admit that Jorbert had a good case. There was very little evidence in writing, but what there was would count for a good deal. For my part, having made the acquaintance of the widow, I did not attach any serious meaning to what she had written, but the cold pen and ink words apparently meant quite enough to justify a finding for the plaintiff. I laid out my plan of attack, got my written evidence all where I could lay my hands on it and put all the papers in the safe pending the trial. But I did not put the widow in the safe. That is, I put her there, but she would not stay there. She was constantly looking at me from anywhere, nowhere, with those eyes of hers and that imperturbable smile, as much as to say: "Dear me! What a funny affair this is!"

When the case came up for trial I made the discovery that a young lawyer just admitted to the bar, one of the men whose hearts she had wrecked, was to conduct her case. I also learned that the defendant had been in town a fortnight, and, although she had not been to see me, she had made the acquaintance of the judge before whom the case would be tried. I knew then that I had nothing to hope for in the way of rulings from that judge. I considered it fortunate that the jury would not be impaneled until the beginning of the trial or she would doubtless hold every one of them by the heartstrings. As they were being selected and she was asked if she objected to a juror she said, "Oh, no, not the slightest," and smiled, just smiled at him; that's all she needed to do to make sure that he would find a verdict for her.

For my part, I found a temporary antidote in my professional position. I became absorbed in my work of placing my evidence before the jury in its most favorable light. Though I say it myself, I did my work well and made a very strong case. As for the defense, there was no defense made worthy of the name. But all the while the widow sat in the presence of the court and smiled. If the judge was called upon to make a ruling she smiled at him and he ruled in her favor. If I was making a strong point against her she smiled at me and I desisted; she smiled at the jury, the spectators, the reporters—any one, every one in the courtroom.

When the evidence was all in and the rebuttal had been made—or, rather, had not been made—the case was submitted to the jury. I knew before they retired that the widow had made the impression on them, as she had on every one, that the whole affair was a farce, besides having captivated them. They were out ten minutes and returned, finding for the plaintiff and awarding a damage of 2 cents.

A very small sum to pay for a broken heart.

When the widow left the courtroom every man in it arose and bowed to her as she passed out. She smiled on us all. It was not a smile of triumph; it was a smile of good will. Any other kind than the latter was not to be conceived of from this woman, who seemed to possess a heart big enough to take in all mankind.

The matter being settled, I saw no reason why I should not call upon Mrs. Alvord. As I entered I met her attorney coming out. He looked like a man bent on suicide. Strange to say, his condition did not prevent me from taking his place, proposing to the widow and receiving in reply a smile and a refusal. I had not got a block away from the house when I saw the judge who had conducted the trial walking in the direction from which I had come. I knew that he was going to follow in my footsteps and to meet the same fate. I could not learn that any of the jurymen tumbled in on me and the judge, but none of them had any acquaintance with the widow.

A few days after the trial and our defeat Jorbert came into my office to settle up. He was the only man connected with the case who had had no connection with it except to bring the suit. Of all of us he seemed in the most contemptible position. The jury had virtually snubbed him by deciding in his favor and assuming that his broken heart was worth but two cents. But he showed no mortification at his defeat. I assumed that, having done the best he could to show the condemnation of the woman who had ensnared him, he was content to let the matter rest. He paid my charges and went away.

Soon after this I received a note from Mrs. Alvord asking me if there would be an appeal. I replied that I had not received from my client any notification of such. This brought another note in which the writer said that if the plaintiff thought of making an appeal she would prefer that he make it to her instead of in the courts.

At last after all this fuss, after winning over not only her opponent's counsel (myself), but judge and jury, this woman had shown her colors. Cramming back my feelings, I sent my client the note.

He wrote me a reply directing me to inform the late defendant to his suit that, having shown her methods to the world as a caution signal to all young men, he had no further interest in the affair.

This was my last official act in the case. The widow went back to the city engaged to the plaintiff and is now Mrs. Jorbert.

myself in Russia with this wild Prince! He might fancy that I know too much! I might never leave that land of savage barbarity! As the yacht goes to Odessa, I will slip off at Messina!" for Josef reasoned sagely with himself: "I have no friend in this haughty she-devil! She will rule the mad Russian for a time! I might be in her way as well as in his!"

When the saucy Aphrodite rocked idly under the cliffs, where the sated Roman Emperors once toyed with the voluptuous beauties of their realm, Josef modestly asked for his discharge.

The princely Lothario was fain to dismiss Josef with a rich douceur. He left the yacht without a word to the lovely recluse, whom he had served at Stahrenstein. Josef was a past graduate in intrigue. He had learned his lesson since he joined the dead Austrian Don Juan, as his trusted menial.

"This woman has a history. This American haunted the Rue de Jena, and has followed Stahrenstein to his death! There is surely money in this for me! This woman is a prize! I will run back to Nice! The 'story of Campoformio' is worth a high price! I will hold it back until I get my pay; but I will not fall into the hands of the cruel Russian, or this bright-eyed devil who carries only death and ruin in her train!" Four days later, Josef discreetly made his inquiries at the Hotel Chauvain.

"Mr. Alfred Brayton" was too ill to see any one;—but his friend and second, Orton, was keenly observant of Josef, who told him that Odessa was the destination of the Russian lover and his blood-bought Sultana."

"I will hold the Compoformio business to the last,—for money,—for a great price! Besides if I am there, I can run over into Austria in four hours! The new Lord of Stahrenstein may give me a home! I will at least be safe! Money, money I must have! Why do they all hound the beautiful stranger down?"

Orton was puzzled by the cool assurance of the menial companion of Max Stahrenstein's varied adventures. Spy, tool, and instrument of evil, Josef was the depository of the secrets of the glittering social esclandres of the dead votary of Pleasure. "I will tell you the rest at Campoformio!" said the valet.

"This fellow knows more than he admits. He can put me on the right track if he wishes! It will take solid gold to loosen his lips! But I will find her yet through him! I will not worry poor Brayton until he is well! It may be after all, that Jenks and Gordon are the right men! The three are all chasing this 'Mees' Isabel,'—this flaunting Masked Venus,—I wonder how many more 'alias' names she has already figured under! Where has she nurtured? What early adventure turned her loose, at once wanton and vampire? I am am certainly safe!" the worldly-wise "Hawkshaw" chuckled. "I have a choice of three employers; and a stylish European trip is not disagreeable! But why does not Lieutenant Gordon come over here himself? I suppose his soldierly pride will not let him leave his regiment while it is on active service!"

"Josef!" said Orton, who was never eager, his professional coolness restraining him, "you must now go down to Villefranche and stay at my hotel. Remain there, subject to my orders! I will go over to Campoformio with you as soon as my wounded friend goes home to America. He does not care to be pointed out every hour as the slayer of Baron Adolf!"

"I am at your service!" Josef remarked.

"And be sure to pick up all the gossip you can about this affair! You can run up to Monte Carlo; but keep away from Nice!" Orton was satisfied with the outlook. "By Jove! I have it now! I will let Brayton give me his definite orders! When I have loyally executed them, I am free to deal later with Jenks or the Lieutenant! I am also operating on my own account! I believe there is some great estate mixed up in this mystery! A reckless woman, usually, is allowed to go to the dogs in her own fashion, but everybody seems to want the Masked Venus!"

Three weeks later, Beverly Seaton entered, at Nice, the express train for Paris. "Go along a few stations with me, Orton!" said he; "I want to lose this town from sight as soon as I can! Now, let us close up our business first! I wish you to take a run over to the Italian ports, and then go over the Brenner route to Furstenfeld. I feel that I can trust you to do what is right!" The wounded man leaned back in the compartment and gazed inquiringly at Orton. It tires me to talk," he resumed. What are your suggestions?"

"I only wish to know how far you wish me to go in expense;—and your limitations as to time!" Orton answered. "Moreover, to whom do I report? I am at your service!"

"Send your letters to me, care of Inspector Walling, General Police Headquarters, New York City. Use three months, if you need the time, and stop at five thousand dollars expense. If you close up the work sooner, come home at once. Leave a full report for me with the Inspector at New York. I may go away for a time! I wish to forget!" and Seaton indicated the receding city of Nice by a nod. "Get every detail of the life led by the woman at Schloss Stahrenstein. You need not pursue her farther. It is too late,—too late!"

Beverly Seaton dropped his head in his hands, and seemed to dream. "I'll write you from Paris to the Hotel Chauvain,—and after I reach America, I will send my letters to the American Exchange, Paris;—write them your changing addresses!"

The silence was awkward. Orton was already provided with money, and a few necessary notes as to his duties. The train whistled loudly,—a station was near. "Good-bye, old fellow!" said the duellist. "You stood by me like a man! I will never forget you!"

As Orton wrung Seaton's hand and jumped from the train, he felt in his heart that his generous employer was glad to part with him, for the ghost of Adolf Stahrenstein might be called up by the presence of the man who stood beside his slayer on the unforgotten night of the Bal Masque.

Phineas Orton walked the Promenades des Anglais thoughtfully the day after his return, smoking his evening cigar, and watching "the white and ghostly flight of schooners out to sea."—"A roving commission, with full power, and liberal terms! My only trouble is, where to begin!" he meditated thus. Casting a glance at the bright stars, swinging up in the sapphire east, he murmured: "She is over there! By Jove! I would like to unravel that mystery! I would like to catch her! But I have nothing to hold her on!" And it suddenly flashed over him that "Mr. Alfred Brayton" had carried away all the proofs and evidence; for the disgruntled Jenks had written him how sternly "Brayton" had withheld all the tokens of "Mees' Isabel's" complicity, and also Irene Hope's supposed guilt.

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—MRS. CHAS. BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

Arrested; Ends Life.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 29.—Alex. Crowe of Ottawa, the victim of a girl's revenge, died last night from the effects of eating a quantity of paris green Saturday.

The police received a tip from a woman in Saginaw, with whom Crowe was infatuated, but had trouble with, to the effect that Roberts, the man who had escaped from the London, Ont., county jail, was arrested for another robbery at Bad Axe, and made his escape, was living here under the name of Crowe.

Crowe was promptly arrested and lodged in jail, where he remained for 48 hours before he was given a chance to vindicate himself.

His mother and sister arrived here just before he died, but he was unable to recognize them.

Two Warehouses Burned.

Iroquois, Sept. 29.—Two large warehouses belonging to A. J. Ross of the firm of Ross Bros., were totally destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. It is supposed a spark from the engine of No. 7 westbound train caused the fire. A strong north wind was blowing, which carried the flames across to the residences of James Flanagan, Mrs. Adams and the English Church sheds and rectory, but the efforts of the fire brigade and the good water pressure saved these buildings.

The loss to the warehouses is about $3,000; insurance $300 on one and $350 on the other building.

May Protest Appointment.

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—An important conference of French-Canadians from all over the Province of Ontario will be held here on Oct. 4 to consider the question of Archbishop Gauthier's appointment to the archdiocese of Ottawa.

It is allagede that certain documents, which should have reached Rome, and which were in the interests of French-Canadians, here especially, have not reached there, and French-Canadians want to know the reason why. It is possible that a cable of protest against Archbishop Gauthier's appointment will be sent to the Vatican.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Hogs Weak on Buffalo and New York Exchanges.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—London and Liverpool cables quote American cattle steady at 12c to 15c per pound, dressed weight; refrigerator beef at 10½c to 11¼c per pound.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 28.—(Special.)—There has been no important change in the condition of the export live stock trade of late, prices in all the leading foreign markets having ruled remarkably steady, with the exception of Glasgow, which has been stronger. The demand for ocean freight space is fairly good, and all the space to Liverpool for the month of October has been booked up at 30s to 32s 6d per head, which rates show an advance of 2s 6d per head over what steamship agents realized for September. The rates to London rule about steady at 22s 6d to 25s per head, and the bulk of the space to that port has also been let for October. There is only a limited demand for Glasgow space, altho the agents have agreed to limit the numbers on each vessel to 300 head. The Manchester vessels are carrying very few cattle, for which they are getting 25s per head.

At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market offerings this morning were 700 cattle, 900 sheep and lambs 1500 hogs and 300 calves. Choice steers sold at 5½c, good at 5¼c, fairly good at 5c, fair at 4¾c to 4½c per lb., and common at 4c to 4¼c per lb. Cows brought from 3½c to 5c and bulls, 2¾c to 3c per lb. There was also a weaker feeling for sheep and lambs. Sheep sold at 3½c to 4c, and lambs, at 5c to 5½c per lb. Calves were scarce and stronger at from $3 to $15 each. The run of hogs was fairly large and sales were made at $9 per cwt. At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market, there were offered 500 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 600 hogs and 100 calves. Prices realized much the same as quoted above with the exception of hogs, which showed an advance of 10c to 20c per cwt., since Monday, and sales of selected lots were made at $9.50 to $9.60.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Sept. 28.—Cattle—Steady; prices unchanged.

Veals—Receipts, 75 head; active and 25c to 50c higher, $7 to $11.

Hogs—Receipts, 4000 head; slow and 15c to 25c lower; heavy, $9.25 to $9.40; mixed, $9.40 to $9.50; yorkers, $9.25 to $9.55; pigs, $9 to $9.25; roughs, $8 to $8.35; stags, $6 to $7; dairies, $9 to $9.40.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 5200 head; sheep active; ewes 10c lower; lambs slow and 15c lower; lambs, $5.50 to $7.30; yearlings, $5.50 to $5.75; ewes, $4.25 to $4.50; sheep, mixed, $2 to $4.60.

New York Live Stock.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Beeves—Receipts, 2990; market irregular; steers, $4.25 to $7; bulls, $3.50 to $4.50; cows, $2.25 to $1.50; dressed beef dull, at 8c to 12c. Exports, 1550 quarters of beef.

Calves—Receipts, 1756; good veals about steady; others lower; veals, $7.75 to $11; culls, $5 to $7; grassers, $4 to $5; westerns, nominal; dressed calves slow; city dressed veals, 14c to 17c; country dressed, 10c to 15c.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 9471; market lower; sheep, $3 to $4.50; culls, $2.50; lambs, $5.50 to $7.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 6350; market 15c to 25c lower, at $9 to $9.60.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Cattle—Receipts, 20,000; market, dull, weak; beeves, $4.65 to $8.20; Texas steers $3.50 to $5.70; western steers, $4.20 to $6.85; stockers and feeders, $4.15 to $5.75; cows and heifers, $2.25 to $6.40; calves, $7 to $10.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 20,000; market, weak for light; others, steady; light, $8.90 to $9.35; mixed, $8.40 to $9.35; heavy, $8.35 to $9.20; roughs, $8.35 to $8.45; good to choice heavy, $8.45 to $9.20; pigs, $8.25 to $9.15; bulk of sales, $8.55 to $9.

Sheep—Receipts, 38,000; market, weak; natives, $2.60 to $4.25; westerns, $3 to $4.20; yearlings, $4.50 to $5.60; lambs, native, $4.75 to $7.10; western lambs, $5 to $7.10.

GURNEY-OXFORD

ARCHIVES OF ST. SULPICE.

Great Store of Historical Records Kept In Montreal Seminary.

Whoever desires to write the complete history of the French regime in this country will have to consult the archives of the Seminary of St. Sulpice, Montreal.

Even the hurried layman would pause if he was suddenly brought up against the vast record, elaborated with infinite care and patience, which is contained in a large apartment of the old Seminary on Notre Dame street.

Stocks are vital. Cobalts are supreme. But the least sentimental creature could not observe, unquickened those hundreds of volumes, fashioned for the most part, by hand, and bound with patience, and collated with love, and which, in their minutiae, have left nothing unnoticed of human worth.

From the beginning of the French regime, the record is laboriously kept. The rise of the colony; the difficulties; the fighting; the set backs; the mutual bickerings; the transactions of the Intendants; the parcelling out of the land; the progress of religion and education; the establishment of the Order, its work and influence; the growth of population; the marked advance of the colony after the Cession; every large and small happening; every family record—all are in these volumes, mostly fashioned by hand.

And upon every record the finger can be placed at a moment's notice.

For there are elaborate indexes, annotations, compendiums, glossaries, mostly carried out by Cure Troie, with the help of several assistants, who have been continuously at work for over half a century.

"Yes; we do our best to make the records accurate," said the gentle Cure, to a press representative, who glanced at the great volumes, thickly placed together, in the archive room. "This has been a labor of love to me and my assistants.

"Look at these indexes. You will find here a correct indication which will place you in possession of what you want at a moment's notice."

One saw the delicate chirography, which had, with patience, traveled over the spotless page.

Admiration being expressed for the work, the Cure said, laughingly—"Why, I have just made a blot myself. Ah, the penalty of old age. Never grow old,—if you can help it.

"But, in fact, we do take great care. And we have in these hundreds of volumes a complete record since the foundation of the French colony.

"One could write a history from them. They are, in fact, a complete history in themselves; but a popular history could be written from the material we could supply.

"These volumes required great care in the formation.

"We have had to make many enquiries, pursue this or that hint or hearsay, to make it fact, and so forth.

"The archives are elaborate, as you see, and they relate, not merely to church matters, though these are given a prominent place, but to all matters affecting the young colony at the time. And it has been kept up to date since. These volumes would mean a transcript of the life of the young colony, especially in the earlier years."

Halifax Is Proud.

No great personage has ever come to Canada without visiting Halifax. King Edward did so, when as Prince of Wales, he paid his only visit to this country. King George did so on one or two visits. In connection with his visit of 1901, a Halifax paper has the following:—

"Chatting with City Clerk Monaghan at the City Hall yesterday our reporter asked him what souvenir the city had of King George V. Mr. Monaghan prides himself upon his system of keeping public documents and immediately produced the address signed personally by the King and which was read by His Majesty to the citizens of Halifax, Oct. 19, 1901, upon his visit here as Duke of Cornwall and York. In view of the establishment of a Canadian navy it is interesting to note the words of the King: 'Your capital, which stands unrivalled among the naval ports of the world.'"

Barr Colonists Making Good.

The Barr colonists, who went out to Lloydminster, Sask., from England and took up land in 1903, have made good—at least a considerable number of them have. It was a hard struggling experience for the first few years, but they are now getting on their feet. One can get no idea of their farms from the railroad, for they are farther back, but the crops are good this year, the wheat averaging over 25 bushels; the oats about 55 or 60 and barley 33 to 40 bushels. Last year they had a bumper crop, and, indeed, there has not been a failure from drought since they settled there.

There are at least fifteen steam or gasoline plows within a radius of twelve miles at work now breaking up new land, so that next year the acreage under crop will be largely increased.

For Canada's Archives.

Dr. Doughty, Dominion archivist, has returned from a visit paid to England in the interests of the work of the archives, and has brought back with him an exceedingly interesting collection of historical papers and prints.

Dr. Doughty spent a month in England, during which time he was busy making arrangements for the transfer here of certain old papers relating to Canadian history and collecting prints. Altogether about 100 prints have been added to Canada's collection as a result of the visit. They include a very good series of early governors of Canada, military scenes and some early impressions of the Rockies.

The papers include a number relating to Lord Durham's mission to Canada, and were presented to the archives by the Durham family. Others will arrive later. They include a diary in Lord Durham's own handwriting and another in that of his secretary.

The Sea Gull.

There are over fifty species of this great scavenger of the waters, but the bird that makes our Canadian bays and lakes his home is the ring-billed and herring gull. There is scarcely any perceptible difference between these two birds, in fact they flock together, feed together and in every way enjoy a buoyant, free and noisy existence in each other's company.

The gull does not dive, as is commonly supposed, but picks up his food from the surface of the waters. He is a voracious feeder and an untiring flyer and he loves the company of his fellows. His characteristic coloration is white with a pearly blush mantle which under morning or twilight light tints assumes a beautiful rosy hue.

The bird is protected by the Government and a heavy fine is imposed on any gunner found guilty of killing the friendly little scavenger of our lakes.

THE AVIATOR AFLOAT.

Count De Lesseps Was Less at Home In a Boat Than In La Scarabee.

When a flying-machine man has been best of a mile up above the mean average level of human experience; when he has negotiated wind-storms and pockets of rarefied air; after he has wrestled with the vagaries of gasoline thousands of feet above the surface of the earth from which the gasoline came out and has looked over the landscape and the waters of the earth with the sublime eye of a lord of space and motion—it's scarcely to be expected that he will be much bothered by the caprices of any land-lubber vehicle or of anti-water craft whatsoever. But a few weeks ago Count de Lesseps, the prince of aviators, had some jarring sensations on board a sail-boat up on one of the northern little lakes. A young Canadian had him in tow for a few days giving the Count what seemed to be almost his first experiences in a sailing craft on water. What the Count didn't know about water seemed to be about as extensive as what he does know about air. Once the boat ran full tilt under a small gale slam upon some rocks and the unwary manipulator of the Scarabee on the upperways measured his full sudden length on the bottom of the boat. Once again something happened to lop off the top of the main-mast and down she came striking the Count on the head. Everywhere and anywhere the Count seemed to be in his own way on the boat; probably because he has been so used to having things all his own way in the regions above. For a monoplane isn't much like a sailing boat. Just how much different it is the Count had a desire to communicate to this young Canadian, half offering to take him up for a sail where there is nothing harder to bump into than clouds; but the passenger capacity of the monoplane was too limited; so the Count had to be content with doing a sensational flight above Montreal all alone in his glory and much safer than ever he had felt in a sail-boat on the waters of the northern lakes. His next new experience should be automobiling over Canadian country roads at sixty miles.

The New Northwest.

To the north and west of Edmonton is a vast region that promises homes for millions after the West between the Great Lakes and the Rockies has been all appropriated and occupied as homesteads. This region is the hinterland of Alberta and Saskatchewan, and a considerable portion of it is drained by the Peace River. Of this new Northwest the valley of that river is one of the best known and most promising parts. It already contains farmers, and wherever tried farming has been a success. This valley, says a man who has spent a third of a century in that country, for a thousand miles east and west presents the best stretch of mixed farming land ever opened to agricultural industry in Canada.

This reminds one how rapidly Canada has been deepening during the past ten years. It used to be said that Canada possessed too much the properties of a line, length without breadth. At one time the West beyond Ontario was little more than a ribbon stretched across the map; and the international boundary and the northern frontier were, as compared with their length, not far apart.

But the oncoming tide of settlement has steadily pushed the frontier northward. Before the plough it has silently but steadily retreated, obeying, as it were, industry's command to move on.

What was once the Far North is now the Middle West, and the North land finds itself yearly growing smaller. It is now on the point of surrendering to settlement the extensive region through which the Peace River flows. Here will grow up a new northwest which, says an old resident of the district, will some day, and not distant either, "blossom like the rose."

Every year Canada's future expands and brightens.

But the Little One Had a Queer Way of Expressing It.

Mr. Brown's business kept him so occupied during the daytime that he had little opportunity to enjoy the society of his own children. When some national holiday gave him a day of leisure his young son was usually his chosen companion. One day, however, Mr. Brown, reproached by the wistful eyes of his seven-year-old daughter, reversed the order of things and invited the little girl to go with him for a long walk.

She was a shy, silent, small person, and during the two hours' stroll not a single word could Mr. Brown induce the little maid to speak, but her shining eyes attested that she appreciated his efforts to amuse her—indeed, she fairly glowed with suppressed happiness.

Just before they reached home, however, the child managed, but only after a tremendous struggle with her inherent timidity, to find words to express her gratitude.

"Papa, what flower do you like best?" she asked.

"Why, I don't know, my dear—sunflowers, I guess."

"Then," cried the little girl, beaming with gratitude, "that's what I'll plant on your grave!"—Exchange.

Tennyson's Tactlessness.

Several stories are told of Tennyson's thoughtless speeches. "What fish is this?" he once asked his hostess where he was dining. "Whiting," she replied. "The meanest fish there is," he remarked, quite unconscious that he could have wounded any one's feelings.

Yet his kindness of heart was such that when his partridge was afterward given him almost raw he ate steadily through it for fear his hostess might be vexed.

On one occasion Tennyson was very rude to Mrs. Brotherton, a neighbor at Freshwater. The next day he came to her house with a great cabbage under each arm.

"I heard you like these, so I brought them," he said genialy. It was his idea of a peace offering.

"JERRY."

The Story of an Artist and a Little Child.

By AGNES G. BROGAN.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

"Do you know of any one who would like to adopt a little girl? I promised Martha Dale as she died that I would find homes for her children. The minister's wife will take care of the boy, but no one around here seems to want girls."

The farmer's wife looked exceedingly troubled, and the young man smiled consolingly.

"I am afraid that I cannot help you out," he replied. "The boy might have been made useful about my studio for a time; but, being a lonely orphan myself, I can only sympathize with the little girl."

"Perhaps," the woman mused hopefully, "Mrs. Gray might change and let you have the boy."

But Phillip Dryden protested quickly. "I don't want either of them," he said. He was leaving the picturesque village that evening to spend the summer quietly at his old homestead, where the faithful housekeeper alone remained to bid him welcome. In the fall he intended going abroad to pursue his art studies. He made his way slowly up the brow of the hill, pausing to rest beneath a tree whose branches were laden with spring blossoms.

Presently a child's figure emerged from the shadows, a very tiny lad whose solemn dark eyes gazed wonderingly out from the brim of his faded red cap.

"If you please," he said simply, "I am ready to go with you."

The young man stared incredulously. "I could clean the paint brushes," the small voice added persuasively, "and I will be very good."

Philip jumped to his feet. "You poor little rascal," he exclaimed, "you can't go with me!"

"But I am Jerry Dale," the child insisted. "You told Mrs. Westly you would take the boy."

"She ought not to have sent you here," the young man said angrily. He looked at his watch—just fifteen minutes to reach the station. "Run back as quick as you can, Jerry," he said. But the child clung to him desperately.

"I AM PHILIP DRYDEN," HE EXPLAINED.

"I am goin' with you," he sobbed; "I'm goin' to live with you."

Philip stood irresolute for a moment; then, following an uncontrollable impulse, he caught the pathetic little figure up in his arms and ran to catch the train.

"We will give him one good summer," he explained apologetically to the surprised housekeeper, "then find a home for him some place."

It would have been difficult to tell which of the two enjoyed that summer most, the child, who throve like a plant with good care, or the man who planned for his pleasure. And when at last the day of Philip's departure came he determined that the little lad should always be waiting at the old homestead to greet him when he returned from his travels.

The first letter which reached him at the end of his journey was written in a childish scrawl, and he smiled at the brief message:

Dear Philip—I love you. JERRY.

Then followed a laboriously penned epistle, which Philip read and reread with a puzzled frown. It was from the housekeeper.

"Jerry has gone back to where you found him," she wrote. "He is going to stay at that minister's house. He says 'it's too lonely here.'"

The young man looked around the bare studio and sighed. "You are an ungrateful little beggar, Jerry," he said, "but perhaps that will be a better arrangement after all."

The years passed, and Philip did not visit the old homestead, for there was no voice to call him across the sea, but he studied unceasingly and painted many pictures, until at length as he worked upon a shadowy canvas gradually there appeared the faint outlines of a child's face, from which shone great dark eyes so pleading that one standing before the picture would be irresistibly drawn to look again and still again.

The artist threw down his brushes with a sigh of satisfaction, and then beneath the painting he wrote, "A Waif."

His wonderful picture attracted widespread attention, and Philip was brought into sudden prominence and made much of. But now that his one great aim had been accomplished he was possessed of an overwhelming desire to return to his own land. And when upon the homeward journey the train stopped for a few moments at the sleepy little village he remembered so well Philip decided suddenly to visit again the quaint streets and byways that had furnished material for so many crude sketches. He walked slowly down the hill and passed the blossoming tree where his little lad had spoken to him out of the shadows. Perhaps even after a lapse of ten years he might still hear news of the boy.

His attention was attracted by the happy laughter of children just released from school. They crowded eagerly about the girlish teacher, who flashed a glance of inquiry at him in passing. Fleeting as that glance had been, it moved the man with a strange sense of loss and longing, for the eyes looking out from the girl's sweet face were the haunting eyes of Jerry.

"This must be his sister," he concluded, and he would meet her upon the following day to learn how the boy had prospered.

He was waiting as she came alone up the fragrant pathway. "Miss Dale?" he asked smilingly, and she bowed her head in assent.

"I am Philip Dryden," he explained, "the man who would have adopted your brother Jerry long ago had he not deserted me. I am still anxious to hear what became of him."

"How do you know," she asked slowly, "that the boy was my brother?"

"The likeness," he replied, "is unmistakable."

"It is a pitiful story," she said. "Listen, and I will explain.

"There were two little homeless ones that night, Tom, the boy,"—she smiled involuntarily—"and Jerusha, his sister. Girls did not seem to be desirable, so this little girl, whom nobody wanted, sat screened by a curtain of vines, listening breathlessly as a woman tried to persuade a strange young man to find a home for her among his people. She has never forgotten his laughing reply, though it was all very serious then, and the child's heart went out to the man, who was a lonely orphan himself. The ever fortunate boy might have been made useful about the studio, he had said, and it was then that little 'Jerry' formed the wild plan which seemed to her a very simple way out of a great difficulty."

"Clad in a shabby suit of her brother's, never dreaming of failure, she met you here in the twilight." The girl's eyes shone. "Then followed the golden days at the farm, and later, when she had been taught the sin of deceiving, 'Jerry' reasoned that the only reparation in her power would be to relieve you of the burden which you had not desired and to go back again to the only place she had known."

She was silent for a few moments. "The old housekeeper has been my trusted friend," she continued, "and in long letters we have rejoiced together over the success of your remarkable painting." She put out her hands impulsively. "It is rather late to beg forgiveness," she said, "and I can never hope to repay my great debt of gratitude."

Eagerly he clasped the extended hands. "My dear girl," he said, "when you speak of debt do you realize that it is your face that has won for me both fame and fortune?"

Then they walked side by side to the white gate of the parsonage.

"I shall stop over here for a time," he said at parting. "This is a splendid place for making sketches."

So she found him often busily working as she passed upon her homeward way, and they would linger to laugh and talk in friendly fashion. It was very natural to call him Philip, as he had taught her so long ago, and to come to him again with her small perplexities. And each day the man grew more firm in his purpose—he would take her back to the peaceful old homestead, where the loneliness of their two lives would be changed into happiness, like the ending of a fairy tale.

When he spoke of this great hope she resolutely turned from his pleading. "It is pity, not love, which prompts you to say this," she said and ran swiftly up the pathway and into the house. Neither could he persuade her to listen to him during the days which followed, while his many fervent notes were unanswered.

At length a peremptory telegram summoned him to the city, and, penning a few words of farewell to the obdurate one, Philip Dryden ascended the hill leading up to the station in much the same frame of mind that he had departed upon a like journey ten years ago. He paused now, as then, to rest beneath the spreading tree, his brows wrinkled in troubled thought.

"If you please," said a very meek voice near by, "I am ready to go with you." And the moon, bursting radiantly from beneath a cloud, shone full upon "Jerry's" face.

The girl laughed a little unsteadily. "I could clean the paint brushes," she repeated slowly, "and—and I will be very good."

"Jerry," the man cried sharply, "what does this mean?"

She looked at him with the elfish smile he so well remembered and raised her arm in the moonlight to trace an imaginary letter. "Dear Philip," she quoted softly, "I love you."

And as the obliging old moon hid beneath another cloud the "little girl whom nobody wanted" had found her own at last.

A fool is unable to see his own faults. A wise man, seeing his own faults, is able to keep other people from noticing them.—Chicago Record Herald.

Mammy's Dream

It Was Thought to Be Superstition, but It Was True.

By HARRIET L. GEDDES.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

In Alabama in antebellum days was a fair plantation comprising many hundred acres and many hundred slaves. On an elevated spot stood the mansion, a great square house with "galleries" surrounding every story and shaded by high trees. In the rear were the homes of the negroes, a line of cabins, kept clean by frequent coats of whitewash. The plantation, now cut up, is the site of large cotton mills.

This property was owned by a child six months old. Its grandfather and its father had both died within a brief period, leaving a young widow, mother of the heir at law, as his guardian and manager of the plantation.

Edward Le Moyne, this child's uncle and brother of his father, was a forcible man, who, under the pretense of assisting his sister-in-law in the management of her property, established himself in the house and assumed control. Mrs. Julian Le Moyne, the widow, had not invited him to do so, but, being a very gentle feminine person, had not the will power to prevent him. Edward Le Moyne in his youth had been wild. Indeed, he had disgraced himself, and his father had willed the property to his brother Julian. When Julian died and Edward commenced the role of assistant to the mother of the child, who had inherited the property, the mother was sure his object was to get rid of the heir that he might become the owner himself.

Edward Le Moyne had married a woman beneath his family, by whom he had a son. Had Edward brought them to the plantation to live Mrs. Julian would not have had the will power to prevent his doing so. Instead he established them in a town near by, and Mrs. Julian knew very well that the next move would be, when Edward had got rid of her son, to the manor house.

As might have been expected, the child fell ill. Edward Le Moyne saw him lying in his mother's arms unconscious. She accused him of having poisoned the boy and, summoning more fortitude than she had displayed before, ordered him out of the room. Quailing before her, he retired. Two days later he saw a little coffin carried to the family burying ground on a hill near by, followed by the widow and a number of her house servants, who were devoted to her. When she returned to the manor house she packed her belongings and the same day took her departure.

Edward Le Moyne took possession of the plantation, brought his wife and son, then ten years old, to the mansion and lived there a lonely life. None of the neighboring planters would have anything to do with him, and his slaves hated him.

Twenty years later his son, Tom, who had come into possession of the property, with a view to establish relations with the neighboring planters, gave a ball. He was no better liked than his father had been, and the acceptances were few. Nevertheless they were sufficient for a merrymaking. Among the guests was Proctor St. Clair, a young man who had been brought up by a relative and extremely popular on account of his high sense of honor, his independent character and other manly traits. Another guest was Caroline Archard, the belle of the country round about. Tom Le Moyne was ambitious to win this girl, thinking that a marriage with her would gain him an entree into the aristocratic families in his neighborhood.

But hardly had the guests arrived and the festivities begun before Le Moyne observed that Miss Archard was manifesting a decided preference for young St. Clair. The traits of the father showed themselves in the son. He resolved to work by underhand means, relying largely on assurance to carry his point. When his guests were ready to depart he invited them all to remain as a house party for as long as they would. A dozen accepted, among them Mr. St. Clair and Miss Archard, both secretly desiring to avail themselves of the opportunity to be together. Le Moyne was especially urgent that St. Clair should remain, promising him every facility for enjoyment.

Le Moyne used his privileges as host to assign himself in all rides, drives and other amusements to escort Miss Archard. Nevertheless he saw that the moment she was free she and St. Clair seemed to fall together naturally. One morning after breakfast St. Clair returned to his room for some article of clothing and was hunting for it in the closet when, hearing a step, he turned and saw Le Moyne come quickly into the room, pull out a bureau drawer, drop something in it and retire hastily, as he had come in. St. Clair, being in the closet, had not been seen. A moment after his host had left the room he went to the bureau drawer and took out a small box containing several articles of jewelry.

He was filled with astonishment, horror and indignation. It was evident to him that Le Moyne had placed the jewels in his drawer, intending to accuse him of having stolen them. St. Clair closed the door and spent half an hour deliberating. At the end of that time he took the jewels to Miss Archard and told her how he had come by them. She had experienced enough of Le Moyne's attentions to her to divine his object. Then St. Clair took the jewels to Le Moyne, whom he found with several of his guests, and told him where he had found them. Le Moyne colored and stammered that some of the house servants must have stolen them and temporarily hidden them in St. Clair's room.

"You lie!" said St. Clair. "I saw you come to my room and place the box in my drawer."

Le Moyne raised his cane and struck his accuser. St. Clair attempted to strike back, but the others interfered.

At that time in the south such an affair must be settled under the code duello. The accusation against Le Moyne could only be wiped out in blood. He knew that it could not be wiped out at all. There was not one of his guests but would believe the word of St. Clair in preference to his own.

With the dogged spirit that possessed him, Le Moyne proposed that they should settle the affair at once. St. Clair was agreeable, and, though the others present advised delay, the two principals were too hot for it. Rapiers were the weapons most used, and there was sufficient space in the room where they were. The adversaries, in shirt and trousers, faced each other, swords were handed them, and they began to fence.

Le Moyne, true to the instincts of his race, was cool. Not even the truth of the charge could unnerve him. St. Clair, on the contrary, was so shocked, so indignant, at the base attempt to put a stigma upon him and rob him of the girl with whom he had just plighted his troth that he fought wild. The result was that in a few minutes he received a sword wound in the side which took him out of the fight.

He was carried to his room and a surgeon sent for, who pronounced him in danger of his life. Of course removal was out of the question.

The first Miss Archard heard of the matter was that her lover had been stabbed by her host and was lying in his chamber in a critical condition. She flew upstairs and in another moment was bending over him.

"Why," she moaned, "did we come into this house? It is accursed."

At the moment an old negro woman entered and heard the words.

"No, missy," she said, "de house ain't cu'sed. Hit's de people in it. Don' worry, honey. I had a dream las' night. I dreamed I saw a picession goin' to a grave takin' a baby coffin. An' I saw 'em buryin' de coffin. Den when dey all go way I saw de baby rise out o' de groun', an' he was growed to be a fine young man. An' he said, "Mammy, my dear ole mammy!" He put his arm around my neck an' kissed me. 'I's come of age today.'

"I know wha' de dream meant. Don' yo worry, honey. Hit's all comin' out right."

The lovers well knew the superstition of the colored race and thought nothing of her words. But her prediction that it would all come out right proved true. It was a month before St. Clair could be moved, and during this period Miss Archard came every day to nurse him, though never once did she deign to notice Le Moyne. One day, shortly before the surgeon gave permission for the removal, the negro who had told her dream came into the room in which St. Clair was lying, Miss Archard sitting beside him. The old woman locked the door and approached the bed with her finger on her lips.

"Is it de fif' ob August?" she asked.

"Yes, aunty."

"Lis'en! I got a secret I'm gwine to tell yo'. I promise missy I nebber tell twill dis day, cos dis de day yo', Mars' Julian"—

"Julian! I'm not Julian. I'm Proctor. Something is the matter with you, aunty. You're gone daft."

"Jus' yo' wait, honey. Mars' Julian, yo' twenty-one years ole dis berry day. Reckon I ought to know. I'm yo' mammy."

By this time she had caught their attention.

"Yo' ma, she lib heah, an' Mars' Le Moyne, Mars' Tom Le Moyne's father, he come in to run de plantation. Missy 'fraid her baby git poisoned so Mars Le Moyne 'ud own de prop'ty. Yo', de baby, git sick. Missy t'ink Mars' Le Moyne poison yo'. So she pe'tend yo' daid. She git a coffin an' she fill it with stones, an' she said to me: 'In heah is de proofs dat my boy is not in de coffin. Yo'll know all about him, an' on de fif' ob August, 18—, yo' tell him who he is. Den he kin claim de plantation his own self.'"

When the old woman finished the lovers, whose eyes had been opening wider with every word, looked at each other in astonishment.

"And this is the mystery that has been hanging over me all my life!" said Julian.

"And I believe it's all true," added the girl, clasping her hands and drawing a long breath.

"Well, aunty, or, rather, my dear mammy, you've kept the secret so long; keep it longer."

"Dat I will, honey."

It was more than a month later when one night Julian Le Moyne appeared as a resurrectionist on the hill near the plantation and took up a little coffin lined with lead. In it were stones and the proofs of the identity of the child it was supposed to contain. The proofs established the fact that Proctor St. Clair was Julian Le Moyne and heir to the Le Moyne estate.

He dispossessed his cousin, took possession of his property and married Caroline Archard.

A wood graining machine invented by two Pennsylvanians consists of an endless rubber band, on which is a raised design, held in contact with a roller fed from a paint or varnish fountain.

For each person in the United States one-third of a pound of tea and a dozen paper napkins are imported from Japan each year.

If boiled water is used for drinking purposes, care should be taken that the water boils for 15 minutes before it is poured off.

Death After a Scratch.

Morris Quatzam, an eleven year old Windsor boy, fell off his bicycle and scratched his wrist. He thought nothing of the injury, but blood poison set in and he is dead.

Such incidents as these—by no means infrequent—ought to make people realize the danger that may lie even in the smallest flesh wound.

Take a simple illustration. When a knife, a rusty needle, a splinter of dirty wood, a barbed wire fence, or a thorn, scratches the hand, the latter is inoculated with germs, of which the air about us is full. Directly these germs are introduced through the breach in the skin, a battle royal ensues between them and certain organisms in our blood.

The way to avoid serious results is to cleanse the wound and apply Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is a powerful, yet painless germ-killer, and when applied to the broken skin is absorbed into the tissue, instantly destroying the germs that spread disease and inflammation.

As soon as applied to a sore or a cut, Zam-Buk stops the pain and smarting. That is why it is so popular with children.

The flesh thus soothed and purified, the wound is made perfectly healthy, and all poison and cause of festering removed. Having done this, Zam-Buk then proceeds to heal the wound or sore, and new healthy tissue is built up in a quick, painless and perfect manner.

Zam-Buk must not be confused with ordinary ointments. Zam-Buk is a unique healing balm, but it is also a skin food. For all skin diseases and injuries—cuts, bruises, burns, eczema, chafing, ulcers, ringworm, etc., it is without equal. It is also used widely for piles, for which it may be regarded as a specific. All druggists and stores sell at 50 cents a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Harmful imitations should be always refused.

"Go On And Prosper," Advises Sir Charles.

In His 90th Year Former Canadian Statesman Regrets That Necessity Rather Than Choice Compels Him to Reside In England Instead of in Canada

London, September 28.—After the stress of nearly half a century in the political life of Canada, Sir Charles Tupper, one of the fathers of Confederation and former Prime Minister is living a secluded life in rural England.

"It's a case of 'ex necessitate'," he said, when asked why he lived in England. The health of Lady Tupper, while it has improved, will not permit her to take an ocean voyage. I should certainly prefer to live in Canada."

Speaking to Sir Charles it is difficult to believe that Canada's famous statesman is in his 90th year; the fact that at this advanced age he still plays golf evidences his wonderful vitality. The passing of the last ten years has made little impression on the renowned son of Nova Scotia; that familiar stoop is not more pronounced than when he last appeared in the House of Commons.

Interviewed at his residence "The Mount," Bexley Heath, Kent Sir Charles displayed all the courtesy and charm of manner which in the old days endeared him both to his political friends and opponents. Speaking of the wonderful development of the Dominion he said:

"I have witnessed the immense progress of Canada with intense satisfaction. Forty years ago I was regarded as a very sanguine man when I prophesied the future of Canada; but its development has passed my most sanguine expectations, and occupying as it does the best portion of the North American Continent it is obvious that at no very distant date it will hold a most commanding position in the world.'

"Do you think that Canada as it develops in importance will want to take a larger part in the government of the British Empire?" was asked.

"The present generation," he replied "will in my opinion, see the population of Canada surpass that of the United Kingdom, but I see no reason to suppose that Canada and the other Dominions however great and important they may become will not be proud to enjoy the position of sister nations Of course all the importance that attaches to any portion of the Empire will be greatly enhanced by the future greatness of Canada, and the Empire by the development of its outlying parts will command still greater influence in international affairs than it wields at present.

In the much discussed question of annexation to the United States Sir Charles was quite emphatic.

ANNEXATION—NEVER!

The question of annexation was settled on the contest of 1891 and in my judgment settled for ever," he said.

Speaking of the German war scare, Sir Charles was asked what position he thought Canada would take in the event of a European war. He declined to give an opinion. When it was suggested that a defensive alliance between the United States and Great Britain would be a happy solution and would dispel any fear of England being overwhelmed in an European conflict he was warmly sympathetic."

"If Great Britain and the United States would stand together,' he said "no combination of powers could affect their position. They could keep the peace of the world. I do not mean that they could prevent the antagonisms of European countries among themselves, but they could caintain the supremacy of the Anglo-Saxon race."

BELIEVES IN PROTECTION.

Sir Charles is an ardent believer of the benefits of Protection.

"Canada owes all its present greatness to the protective policy and that policy will be maintained. Protection in Canada will not be abandoned," he said.

Discussing the question of Imperial Preference Sir Charles said: "I look upon a mutual preferential tariff between the Dominion and the other portions of the British Empire as a policy that will be attended by the happiest results, by creating a strong bond of mutual self-interest to add to the sentimental loyalty that now exists in all parts of the Empire.'

VERY FOND OF GOLFING.

Sir Charles' recreations are driving and golfing. Frequently, he is to be seen on the links which adjoin his house.

"I am very fond of golf," he said "but my medical adviser restricts my participation in the game to putting. It is a consolation, however, to know that all championships are decided on the putting green," he added jovially

Sir Charles son, Mr. J. Stewart Tupper, K. C., of Winnipeg, and his wife and family are at present visitors at "The Mount." Mr. Tupper is in England pleading cases before the Judicial committee of the Privy Council. Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, of Vancouver, and Mr. William Tupper of Winnipeg, are expected shortly.

"It has been a source of unbounded satisfaction to me," said Sir Charles "that all the great measures in which I was permitted to take part have been solved practically in the direction of my exertions; the Confederation of Canada, the binding together by steel bonds of the provinces from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and the opening up of that great granary between the Red River and the Rocky Mountains, which under a policy of protection Canada was able to achieve enable me to look back with great satisfaction on the consummation of the great questions with which in my public life I was occupied.

GO ON AND PROSPER.

"You ask me to give you a message to Canada. It is this "Go on and prosper." No country in the world, in my judgment, is prosepring to such a great extent as Canada or on so sure a foundation and it would pass the most prophetic vision to say what position she will obtain in the not distant future."

Canada's Morals Good.

London, Sept. 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At the church congress at Cambridge, Canon E. A. Welch, formerly of Toronto, in the course of a discussion on Christian unity, speaking from a Canadian viewpoint, testified to the amount of co-operation for moral and social reform among the religious denominations of Canada in consequence of which the general morality, at least in some respects, was better than in England. He referred to the snobbishness which some times characterized relations between the church and nonconformity here. It rarely happened in the case of Canadian Methodist or Baptist that a substantial increase bank balance gave birth to convictions of the truly apostolic character of the Anglican Church. Intemperance in Canada was an almost negligible factor. There was no divorce court and the Lord's Day was observed far better than in England.

No Coal, But Iron Ore.

Kingston, Sept. 29.—Prof. M. B. Baker, professor of geology in Queen's University, has returned to the city after spending the summer in a geological examination of the alleged "coal finds" of New Ontario for the Bureau of Mines, Toronto. They are non-existent. Prof. Baker reports, however, that about twenty miles farther down the Metagami, at Grand Rapids, a promising area of limonite iron ore is found. This red or brown iron ore is of excellent quality, being free from sulphur and with only the smallest traces of phosphorous.

Want Electric Franchise.

Kingston, Sept. 29.—The Seymour Power & Electric Co. wants a franchise to sell power in Kingston. It proposes that the city shall supply all customers using less than 25 horsepower, the company to supply those who take over that amount. There will be opposition to giving any franchise at all to the company. The members of the City Council favor receiving the power from the company at the city's switchboard, the city to do all the distributing.

Suicided in Jail.

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 29.—Five minutes after receiving a five years' sentence for stealing jewelry from his fiancee, Carrie Warner of Winchester, Ky., C. L. Frasier of Indianapolis, committed suicide with carbolic acid in the Winchester jail Tuesday night. Frasier also had three charges of bigamy and charges of theft from all over the south against him.

Librarian of Militia Dead.

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—After a brief illness the death occurred yesterday at his residence, 55 Metcalfe street, of Henry D. J. Lane, librarian of the Militia Department. The deceased, who was 61 years of age, was a son of the late G. H. Lane, deputy registrar of Canada.

Co-operative Stores Bill.

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—It is expected by many that a bill authorizing co-operative stores will be passed this session by the Dominion Government. It was defeated last year. If this goes through the civil servants of Ottawa will take up co-operative stores at once.

No Grain Moving.

Montreal, Sept. 29.—The elevators are full of grain at this port. Prices rule so low on the other side that the owners refuse to ship just now, consequently the Dundonian had to leave port yesterday empty, and proceed to Three Rivers and load lumber.

Bishop Fallon at Buffalo.

Buffalo, Sept. 29.—The fifth biennial national convention of the United Irish League closed last evening amid a remarkable scene of devotion to the motherland and fealty to the leaders of the Irish Nationalist movement who have attended the gathering. A recommendation by the committee on ways and means, that $100,000 be subscribed to the work of the Irish Parliamentary party for the next two years, was raised to $150,000 by the committee on resolutions. The latter report was unanimously adopted, and within half an hour a total of $151,000 had been paid in or pledged. While the secretary was recording the the amounts given, the delegates in their enthusiasm several times doubled and trebled their original subscriptions, many of which ranged from $1,000 to $20,000.

Buried His Money.

Peterboro, Sept. 29.—County High Constable Cochrane suspected that Oliver, the man sentenced to seven years and 30 lashes for incest, had money concealed about the premises. Wishing to impound the money for the support of Oliver's children, who, after the arrest, were turned over to the Children's Aid Society, Cochrane took Oliver after he was sentenced to his house in Smith Township. The latter showed where money amounting to $100 was buried under the foundation. The money was in quarter and half dollar pieces, enclosed in an inch and a half lead pipe, hermetically sealed at the ends and totalling in length 25 inches.

Capt. Moodie Injured.

Hamilton, Sept. 29.—A serious accident happened to Capt. Roy Moodie of the 91st Highlanders last night. While on his way to the armories in his automobile to attend the weekly parade of the regiment, one of his arms was broken, as the result of the steering gear breaking. He was making a sharp turn of a corner, when the stearing rod gave way. His arm was thrown so hard against the guard that it was broken. He was taken home.

To Check Amateur Shooters.

London, Sept. 29.—Local hunters are organizing a movement to have the game laws amended so that everyone owning a gun must have a license. They claim that the amount of indiscriminate shooting that is done by amateurs is exterminating many of the real useful varieties of birds and putting discredit on the real hunters. A petition is now being prepared for presentation to the authorities.

Prosecuted for Immoral Publication.

Winnipeg, Sept. 29.—Charles E. Coling, formerly on the police force, is being tried for publishing and circulating obscene matter. Coling had literary aspirations and left the police force, starting a weekly publication known as The Live Wire, which the crown prosecutor described as lewd obscene, immoral and filthy.

PITTENDRIGH'S REMINISCENCES.

Valiant Captain Tells Many a Story of Sir William Russell in Crimea.

Captain Pittendrigh, who is now stipendiary magistrate at New Westminster, B.C., who served in the 18th Manchester Regiment in the Crimean War, tells many interesting stories of his experiences in the Near East. Among these is one dealing with the late Sir William Russell, then plain William Howard Russell, the famous war correspondent.

Mr. Russell was with the army before Sebastopol at the time in question and had his headquarters in that part of the lines held by the 88th Connaught Rangers, a regiment which has the reputation of being one of the toughest in the British army—in fact it is regarded as being the prototype of Kipling's "Black Tyrones."

It happened one night that the Russians made a night attack on this part of the British lines. The sentinels had been on duty for many hours and were weary, and the consequence was that they were surprised and the Russians were in the lines before the regiment was prepared. There was desperate work in the dark, and before reinforcements appeared the Irishmen had given back.

Mr. Russell saw fit to send a full account of the incident to his paper, and knowing the reputation of the regiment, he knew that it was no false alarm when some time later his body servant came and told him that he had better move his quarters, as, if he did not, he stood an excellent chance of getting a bullet in his back some day.

Mr. Russell, however, did not leave the lines. Instead he went to the colonel. The upshot was that a few hours later the colonel ordered the regiment to assemble. When the men had paraded the colonel brought forward the war correspondent and told the men that henceforward he was under the protection of the colors. The regiment was then sent back to quarters and Mr. Russell resumed his old place in the lines.

For the remainder of the campaign he was with the 88th and never suffered the slightest molestation.

"American" Not His Sister.

That Canadian sentiment is strong in Western Canada was illustrated by an amusing incident at the home of Wm. W. Rutan, member for Prince Albert in the House of Commons.

Mr. Rutan's eldest daughter and eldest son were born while the family lived in Missouri. His younger son and younger daughter, however, were born since the family came back to Canada.

The younger brother recently did some little thing that the eldest sister didn't like, and the latter, mentioning the name of the younger sister, said: "You wouldn't do that to her, would you?"

"No," said the little boy, "but she's my sister."

"Well, am I not your sister, too?" asked the one of the injured feelings.

"No," said the little fellow emphatically.

"Well, what am I then?" asked the big sister in great surprise.

"Why," answered the youngster with a tone indicating great superiority, "you're just an American immigrant."

No Reward.

"How long a term does the vice president serve, pa?"

"Four years, my son."

"Doesn't he get anything off for good behavior?"—Lippincott's.

The Manifestations Of Eye-Strain

Continued

The alcoholic habit begins with the apparently harmless dose of whisky or brandy, taken to relieve the depression by stimulation. The appetite grows by what is feeds upon, the necessity for being stimulated occurs more and more frequently, and finally the alcoholic habit is established.

If the necessity for being so stimulated be removed—in other words, if the vital energy is stored up instead of being wasted— the nips of alconol become unnecessary, and the pernicious habit is killed.

And as with stimulants, so with sedatives, such as morphia, opium, and the like, which are taken to soothe the irritability so often present in those suffering from functional nervous disorders.

Miss Wilmot Falls From Pony at Show.

Bathgate--Swell Fails To Negotate Stone Wall At Montreal, and Horse and Rider Go Down--Neither Rider Nor Pony Hurt.

There were four jumps in the open jumping class at the Montreal Horse Show Tuesday night, but there was hardly an animal of the twenty-eight horses and one pony which stood out as a clean fencer.

The pony was that well known little beast Bathgate Swell, the property of Mr. Charles Wilmot of Belleville, which has cleaned up, along with his stable mates, in most of the pony classes recently. "Bathgate Swell is a fine animal, but the open jumping class against some of the world beaters is no place for a thirteen and a half hand pony," says the Montreal Herald. "To make matters worse, Mr. Wilmot put his daughter astride in the saddle—and there was trouble. A false start in the first place led to a fall, and though when the actual test did come Bathgate Swell bucked himself over the rails, he walked clean into the stone-wall jump and his rider came off—got badly shaken up and was trodden on into the bargain. The pony was not hurt. Miss Wilmot got an ovation for her plucky rides, though the opinion was freely expressed that it was an error in judgment to put a pony is among the open jumpers."

The Montreal Star says it was the stone wall which put a large number of the entries out of the running for the prizes, as they practically all knocked over the top bar of this jump. "It seems that the light was bad at this one spot. The color being a light grey, it was explained that it was very hard to see it when looking down. Several horses in an attempt to take this jump, completely knocked the wall down. In fact this jump caused one accident. Mr. Charles Wilmot of Belleville exhibited his pony, Bathgate Swell, in the open jumping. Miss Wilmot rode the pony, on which she had captured a large number of prizes in the jumping contests both at the Toronto and Montreal Shows during the past year. Last night, however, she seemed to have a little difficulty in holding her seat, and on two occasions the attendants had to come and help her onto her pony after she had taken the jumps. On the second round, the stone wall gave Miss Wilmot more trouble. Her pony took the jump too late, and as a result stumbled over the boards. Both horse and rider went down, and for a time it looked as though Miss Wilmot had been injured. However, the young lady sustained no serious hurts and stayed for the remainder of the show.

Longest Interurban In West.

Vancouver, Sept. 29.—The last spike in the 60-mile interurban tram line from Vancouver to Chilliwack, the longest in Western Canada, will be driven on Monday. The line and equipment have cost over three millions. It traverses the entire valley of the Lower Fraser.

Joint Service to Jamaica.

London, Sept. 29.—The Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. and the Quebec Steamship Co. have mutually agreed to a joint service between New York and Bermuda.

Hebrews Choose Protestant Schools.

Montreal, Sept. 29.—The difficulties of educating the Protestant population here was shown strongly yesterday, when twenty children were refused admittance to Rosemount school because they did not know their alphabet. The accommodation is so small, according to the number of children, that this rule has to be put into force to have some basis of selection. The reason of the congestion is largely that the Hebrew population of 30,000, very many of whom are children, have the right to say which schools they will pay their taxes to, and the whole colony voted Protestant.

Safe Roads for Inebriates.

Montreal, Sept. 29.—Whether a man is drunk or sober, the municipalitiy is bound to provide him with a safe road, is in effect the decision of the Court of Appeal yesterday in the case of Dame Ostigney of St. Hubert, who sued the municipality for $15,000 damages for the death of her husband. The council peaded that the man was drunk. The woman lost in the lower court, but the Court of Appeal reversed the judgment on the above grounds.

Atlantic City, N.J., Sept. 29.—Sitting as a board of strategy on the problems of a trans-Atlantic journey by airship, Walter Wellman, Melvin Vanimanna and Murray Simon went over the chances for disaster. They concluded the chances of escaping alive in case of an accident were more than 90 in 100, and the chances of successfully getting across more than 4 in 5. They decided on a 20-knot gait.

Hunters May Be Lost.

Kenora, Sept. 28.—Charles Jones, foreman in the Canadian Pacific, and a young companion named McCannon left last Tuesday in the latter's launch for, a hunting trip down the lake. They were due back on Friday, but, not returning, a search party was sent out. The party found their launch, containing Jones' coat, and provisions almost untouched, at Rich Bay, 25 miles down the lake.

Two Drowned In Gull Lake.

Port Arthur, Sept. 29.—W. M. Coleman of Renfrew, and Albert Dixon of Saskatoon are reported as having been drowned in Gull Lake, 150 miles north of Sioux Lookout, on the G.T.P., on Saturday. The sole survivor of the drowning was Nick Ellwood, who clung eight hours to the upturned canoe, and then walked sixty miles without food to report the fatality to Sioux Lookout. The three men were going to Rat Lake to trap for the winter.

McFarland refused to weigh in at 3 o'clock, and it was said that he carried 140 pounds into the ring instead of 135, as agreed upon.

RUNNING

Alfred Shrubb left last night for Boston to take charge of the Harvard cross country runners. He will be away about three months, and as he will train with the collage boys, he expects to be in the best of shape soon When he returns to Toronto he would like to meet the well-knowns in matched races. He is trying to get Longboat interested again. He will run a few races in Boston if his leg gets strong.

The seventeenth Hamilton Herald road race will be held on Thanksgiving Day, October 31, at 9 o'clock in the morning. The big race, which was the main factor in reviving the Grecian Marathon, will be held under A. A. U. C. auspices, and is open to all registered amateur athletes. The course will be from the Herald Office around Burlington Bay, a distance of 19 miles 168 yards. The record for the race is 1.48.43, held by Sammy Meilor jun., of Yonkers, N. Y. Cups will be given to the first three competitors, same to become the property of the athletes An entry fee of 50 cents per man will be charged, and no entry will be accepted unless accompanied by fee. Entries close with the secretary on Wednesday, October 26. No post entries will be accepted. The manager of the race is W. C. McMullen of the Herald, and the secretary is Billy Carroll, 104 James street north, Hamilon.

BASEBALL

Greek will meet Greek for second sacking honors when the Cubs and Athletics collide for the world's baseball supremacy. The principals in this duel of rare promise—Johnny Evers and Eddie Collins—belong at the head of the procession in both leagues. Any small boy will tell you Evers is king of 'em all in the National League. Collins has but one peer in the American—the lithe-limbed easy-going Lajoie—but when truly greats are up for consideration, the names are synonymous. The all-consuming riddle—which is the greater in all aroung play—will probably be aired backward, forward and both ways from the middle when the decks are cleared next month for the big clash. "Inside" baseball is Johnny's middle name, and he goes by it the year round.. To pull off the unexpected, to outguess his opponent and to coin runs, all valuable assets in baseball triumphs, is pie for the well known shoe trader. He has the daring that stamps Collins champion base stealer of the American League but John wasn't created to clock the "century" dash in ten seconds or thereabouts. That's where fate was kind to Collins. To date Eddie, who is better known in private life as the "Tarrytown Terror," has pilfered over seventy bases, almost forty more than the scrappy Trojan. In all round play Collins has contributed a lion's share to the success of Mack's band this season, while Evers, by his frequent combats with the umpires, almost cost his mates the league leadership. As a specialist on hitting to any field speaking over two-base wallops on ordinary singles and playing the bag for a runner Collins is a marvel. All season he has openly defied the classiest backstoppers of the American League, stealing almost at will. But will he rattle the veterans—Kling and Archer—in the big series? That's the problem. As a swatter Collins stands among the select, clouting way above the .300 notch. Evers at no time this season has approached the coveted statistics. Critics say the National League pitchers excel their shipmates earning wages in the younger circuit These and countless other questions of all round supremacy are booked for decision only when the series is set in motion.

CLOSE GAME HERE.

Many spectators were present at the Armouries last evening to witness a game of indoor baseball between teams representing the right and left halves of the Fifteenth regiment. It proved to be one of the best games ever played here. The teams were evenly matchd and played a snappy game In the early part of the match the right half team tock a decided lead, but when the seventh innings was completed the teams were a tie both having secured eight runs. During the next two innings the right half team made two runs whilst their opponents were only able to add one to their score. The final score was 10 to 9 in favor of the right half team. During the progress of the game some good plays were made by members of both teams. Mr. Wm. Cochrane was umpire and performed his duties in a most satisfactory manner. The line-up of the teams was as follows:

Right Half	Left Half
French, p.	Sharpe, p
Hyland, c.	Clarke, c.
Lloyd, 1stb.	Mills, 1stb
Ketcheson, 2ndb.	Bateson, 2ndb
Moore, 3rdb.	Barrett, 3rdb
Wallace, s.s.	Dowrie, s.s
McGie, r.f.	Westover, r.f
R Harryett, l.f.	Alexander, l.f
H. Harryett, c.f.	Harkins, c.f.

The score by innings was as follows:

Right Half — 1 2 2 1 1 0 1 0 2 — 10
Left Half — 0 1 0 0 3 2 2 1 0 — 9

An exhibition of a tug of war was given by a number of those present, but not by regular teams. During the evening the regimental band, which was present, rendered a number of selections, which were well executed and much appreciated by the spectators.

It is the intention of the officers to endeavor to have a programme of events presented every Wednesday evening during the winter months.

THE AUTO

Alough the entries for the sixth Vanderbilt cup race next Saturday closed at midnight Saturday night with 42 cars listed to start, it is probable that there will be 48 entries in all, several firms having wired that their entry checks had been put in the mails before the time limit expired. This is understood to be the largest number of entries ever received for an automobile race.

The unprecedented entry list has made it necessary to dig 18 new repair pits in front of the grand stand, nine being added at each end, making a total of 46 pits.

At daybreak next Saturday morning when Starter Fred J Wagner fires the send-off pistol, another history making automobile race will have been begun for the sixth classic contest for the William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., cup is due to start at that time and for the greater part of Saturday forenoon cars and drivers will chase each other around the 12.65 miles circuit with the modernized intensity of the chariot racers of old.

The officials of the race were made known yesterday for the first time They are as follows: Referee. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr.; Judges, Henry Sanderson, Colgate Hoyt, Dave Mennen Morris, Robert Lee Morrell and Samuel M. Butler, Technical Committee, A. L. McMurtry, Henry Souther and Alexander Churchward. A. A. A. Representative, Frank G. Webb; Assistant to the President, A. R. Pardington; Starter, Fred J. Wagner.

In The Wide World Of Woman.

ECONOMY IN YOUR CLOTHES.

An American woman's paper with an enormous circulation is offering prizes for the best outline of how to dress on fifty dollars a year, and how to dress on one hundred dollars a year Even if a woman dces not dress within either of these amounts it is both interesting and profitable to figure out how it can be done. There is scarcely any department of expenditure which admits so much extravagance and careless spending as that of clothes. In no department does the personal equation count for so much. Some women are well-dressed on a hundred a year, others are badly dressed on a thousand.

The first thing when considering economy and wise expenditure in clothes is to arrange for a good appearance on the street A pretty little house frock can be made by almost any girl or woman or an inexpensive dressmaker. But a good suit must be tailor-made to look anything. Suits made to order are almost outside the limit set by the economical dresser but fortunately ready-made suits are getting better and cheaper year by year. Much can be done by judicious buying. For instance, at sale time suits are much below the price paid for them at the height of the season One girl, dressing on a very small allowance, got her winter suit in August for just half price and the style is perfectly good for the coming year. Fifteen to twenty dollars should be set aside for the tailor suit. Then the hat should be chosen to go with this Hats are one of the most fertile causes of extravagance. If economy must be considered light hats and white flowers and feathers must be eschewed entirely. All flowers are extravagant except a very good rose or some small decoration warranted not to fade. There is nothing like ribbon or silk for trimming. Some of the very smartest hats turned out this autumn have absolutely nothing on them but ribbon bows. Get a becoming shape and color and trim at home with crisp loops and ends. Another favorite mode of trimming is a velvet band and one single flower. A pretty French idea is to have one or two small flowers half enclosed in gold tissue. Any woman should be able to trim her own hats successfully by studying the models in good shops After the suit and hat the blouse to wear with the suit should be considered. A pretty and extremely useful style is to have a chiffon over-blouse the color of the suit. These are expensive to buy but not so expensive to make. The model is made all in one with the short kimona sleeve. The neck is cut fairly low and a band of hand embroidery gives it quite a Parisian air. These chiffon over-blouses can be worn over the summer lingerie blouses and give the effect of a blouse made for the suit. After the suit a party frock is wanted by every young woman. These, either high or low necked, are very simple this year and should present no difficulties to the home dressmaker if she has a kindly hand to help. All frocks for either formal or informal wear are made to clear the ground. This is a most economical fashion. The remainder of this wardrobe on little will be considered later.

WOMEN IN THE FAR EAST.

"Western Women in Eastern Lands" by Helen Barrett Montgomery is a graphic representation of what has been done for women in the East, and of what has been and is being accomplished in this direction. Woman's condition seems to be best in Japan or China, and worst in India, with the possible exception of Korea. This best is lamentably below the Western standard; still, the degredation is not a part of the national creed. Confucius never laid down anything like what we find in the Law of Manu; "Though destitute of virtue, or seeking pleasure elsewhere, or devoid of good qualities, yet a husband must be constantly worshipped as a god by a faithful wife." All this is painful reading, and we turn with relief to the story of what is being done by the missionary societies on both sides of the Atlantic to grapple with the evil Their efforts seem to touch but the outside fringe; yet the beginning counts for a great deal more than we can see. A specially interesting part of the book is to be found in the life sketches of some of the "Western women" who have given themselves to the work. Conspicuous among these is Mrs. Doremus. Beautiful, wealthy of high social position, she labored with a self-sacrificing zeal to which it would be difficult indeed to find a parallel. "She provided the outfits for missionaries going to the field; she personally welcomed them as they returned." Going on one such errand "she found on board a sick missionary of another society with his wife and six children, and cared for them as if they were her own." She was not less busy with philanthropic work at home. She held services in the jail, aided discharged prisoners visited the hospital as regularly as any physician," and all the while she was the life of a bright and beautiful home, "the devoted mother of nine children, besides adopting and caring for several others."

When starching Holland pinafores put a little tea into the starch. It will help to keep their color.

The French inventor of a drop-frame skirts to ride has given it the name of "motosacoche."

Why the Sky Is Blue.

The cause of the blue tint of the sky has recently been the subject of renewed discussion. According to one view, the blue color is the effect of chemical matter in the air acting by absorption, but most physicists deny this on the ground that these chemical substances present in the air would cause the setting sun to be blue instead of red. It seems probable that the blue of the sky is, in any case, not due to particles of dust or of water, as has long been supposed, but in reality to the dispersal of light by the actual molecules of the air itself.

A Prophetic Plant.

The abrus plant, which grows wild in Cuba and parts of India, has a reputation in the tropics for sensitiveness to weather changes. This attracted the attention of Baron Nowack, an Austrian naturalist, many years ago, and he has continued since then to study the curious properties of the plant. He now contends that its behavior not only forecasts storms and shows firedamp in mines, but also gives reliable warnings of the approach of earthquakes.

Simplicity is the keynote of good hairdressing for most occasions, but in the evening coiffure there is much license allowed. In fact, one may be as picturesque in the matter of arranging one's hair as the costume and face will stand.

For the girl who goes in for fanciful effects the illustration showing a smart style of hairdressing worn at a Paris theater recently may offer several valuable suggestions.

Curried Fowl.

Boil a small fowl till tender, seasoning with salt and a little garlic. Stand aside to get cold, then disjoint, removing all skin. Mix together a tablespoonful curry powder, a teaspoonful dry mustard, a pinch of cayenne, a tablespoonful Worcestershire sauce, the same of olive oil and melted butter. Spread this over the pieces of fowl and broil till brown over the gas or clear fire. Serve imbedded in rice.

Blackberry Wine.

Wash the berries and to every gallon allow thre quarts of water. Cook and strain. Allow to each gallon of the mixture two and a half pounds white sugar. Let stand forty-eight hours in a large tub, stirring once a day and skimming off all the impurities that rise to the surface. Put this a cask not quite full and close. Bung and seal.

[illegible]. As a result there are now 2,108 American bison in Canada and the United States. Of these 625 are in Canada. In nearly every municipal zoological garden there are a few. The number is increasing annually and the prospects are that, in the great national reservations, children of coming generations may see herds almost as great in size as those which were encountered ordinarily by the overland immigrant in the days of the making of the West.

Something to Live For.

Three little girls were playing. The mother of one came into the room and engaged the children in conversation. "Marian, what are you going to be when you grow up?" she asked.

"I am going to be a famous singer," she replied.

"And you, Susie, what are you to be?"

"Oh, I am going to write stories when I grow up," she answered.

"And what is Marjorie to be?" continued the mother.

Marjorie, aged five, thought seriously a moment, and then said, "Well, I am not sure, but I think I'll be a widow."—Delineator.

Having Her Way.

"So you are going to housekeeping as soon as you're married? I thought you had made up your mind to board."

"Yes, but George is equally determined to have a house of our own."

"And so you are going to keep house in order to please George?"

"No, I'm going to keep house so that George will be glad to board."—Ideas.

Women's Time Schedules.

Few women speak of a train starting slightly off the even hour, as the 3:01 train, for example, or the 3:12. "Three" will do. It bothers a man a heap to go hunting for a 3 o'clock train by feminine directions when it is a 3:11 train. For some women "3" will do for the 2:54 train; it's near enough Then the man following feminine directions, unless he is on his guard against these pitfalls, is lost. Probably if it weren't for his business training, which teaches a man that 3:02 is not 3, not 3:01, not 3:01½, not 3:01¾ but 3:02, he'd be better natured about women's time schedules.—Boston Post

Canada's Sea-Dog.

Rear-Admiral Kingsmill is returning to Canada. He has been in England looking after the Canadian navy. He will report that the Niobe —not all tears, however—will be despatched in September and be put into commission in the Gulf of St. Lawrence as a training station. The Rainbow also has been renovated and will swing out soon via the Suez Canal for Esquimalt on a fisheries protection assignment. Then there are four cruisers and six destroyers to build—in Canada. Admiral Kingsmill is interested in having work begun quickly. Probabilities are in favor of shipbuilding plants and drydocks at Montreal, Quebec and Halifax—just as soon as the Government are able to decide the ticklish problem of which is entitled to how much.

The Shah's Dagger.

One of the treasures of the Shah of Persia is a diamond set in one of his scimiters, which renders its possessor invincible. There is also a dagger with the same property, but it is ordained that those who use it should perish by it. It is therefore carefully shut up in a sandalwood box on which is engraved a verse from the Koran.

Verdict of Manslaughter Returned Against Men Who Played a Joke.

NAPANEE MAN DROPS DEAD.

Fears Are Entertained For the Safety of Canadian Missionaries in Hunan Province, China, Where Another Boxer Outbreak Is Imminent.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 30.—There is a rush of inquiry at the Mission headquarters here concerning the safety of missionaries in Hunan Province, China, where, according to some morning cables, a repetition of the Boxer rising is imminent. From Manila, in the Philippines, comes word that United States warships and troops are under sailing orders in expectation of trouble. The feeling against the Manchu dynasty is near the explosion point. Missionary leaders here express uneasiness, but have no word.

BROCKVILLE HAS POISONING CASE

Charles Landon Charged With Attempting to Poison Thomas Sheridan.

POISONED TEA.

Constable, In Hiding, Swears He Saw Accused Shake Hand Over Dinner Pail Belonging to Sheridan—Defence to Make Straight Denial.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Sept. 30—Charles Landon, charged with an attempt to poison Thomas Sheridan, surrendered his bail and appeared before Judge O'Reilly this afternoon for trial. At the request of the local judges the case was taken by the Cornwall jurist. The case is a peculiar one. The defendant, a tinsmith, was in the employ of Sheridan and Power, and in June last, it is alleged, he attempted to poison Sheridan, a member of the firm, by placing a powder in the tea carried to the store by Sheridan in his lunch basket. It is claimed the attempt was made on the complainant's life on several occasions, but Sheridan, detecting the bitter taste of the fluid, refrained from drinking it. Sheridan became suspicious of Landon by reason of his actions, and, accordingly, laid a trap for him by placing Constable Dyer in the basement of the store, where, though hidden from view, he says he saw the accused raise the cover of the lunch basket and tamper with the tea-can containing water, a sample of which was submitted to the provincial analyst. Sheridan preserved other samples, all of which tasted similarly. The evidence was much the same as submitted at the preliminary hearing. The witnesses sworn were the complainant, Thos. Sheridan, his daughter Ella, Constable Dyer, and Dr. Moles.

The defence drew from Sheridan the fact that the samples of adulterated water and tea have been exclusively in his custody since the case developed, and were exhibited in court bearing his own labels. Sheridan testified to Landon's good character, but intimated that for the past few years he had not given satisfaction in his work, being frequently reprimanded for losing time.

The defence, it is understood, will be a straight denial of the accusation.

Landon's bail was renewed until the adjourned hearing.

McNulty and Girl Both Sentenced To Be Hanged Dec. 14th

Mr. Justice Britton's Sentence Without a Precedent In The Annals of Canadian Criminal Justice--An Appeal Will Be Made.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

BARRIE, Sept. 30.—To be hanged on the fourteenth of December. This was the terrible sentence pronounced by Mr. Justice Britton this morning on both Mary Dolan and Thomas McNulty, convicted of murdering their illegitimate baby and throwing it into the cold waters, coffined in a suit case. It is a sentence without a precedent in the annals of Canadian criminal justice, inasmuch as the male prisoner never laid hands on the babe, yet he is condemned to die for murdering it. It was a strange scene in the court room this morning. The wife of the condemned man was there to shed her tears in his defence, despite his infidelity to her. Relatives of both prisoners were out in force.

Everything was so quiet you could hear a pin drop.

His Lordship asked the convicted girl if she had anything to say. "I want to say," she said, "that all I said in this court room is true. I got a letter telling me to strangle the baby. I want you to be as light as you can on McNulty."

His Lordship merely expressed his sorrow for poor McNulty and the girl. He omitted the black cap.

The words of the sentence fell like death bells on the audience. "You shall be taken hence on the 14th of December, 1910, and hanged by the neck until you are dead." The girl shrieked and fell to the floor.

McNulty, when called, denied that he had written the letter. The Judge advised him not to expect much from the mercy recommendation which he would forward to Ottawa. Then he pronounced the same sentence. The prisoner moaned and stumbled out with the assistance of a guard, followed by his faithful wife, apparently stunned by the blow. There will be an appeal.

Barrie, Sept. 30.—Thomas McNulty of Orillia was yesterday found guilty of murdering the unnamed infant of Mary Dolan, which he had never seen. The jury was out three and a half hours. Mary Dolan was found guilty of the same crime on Tuesday. The sentences will in all likelihood be pronounced by Justice Britton at the resumption of the assizes to-day.

It was one of the wildest emotional scenes that have ever been enacted in an Ontario court-room when the [illegible] pronounced the [illegible] "guilty!"

McNulty's wife, who had frequently interrupted the court with her crying, broke into ill-repressed shrieks.

Then, as the verdict was repeated, McNulty burst out crying, and his wife, leaning over the side of the dock, wrapped her arms around him. Thus they continued, moaning loudly, while the 12 jurors were polled, and their cries were supplemented by sobs from McNulty's sister-in-law and the whines of his dog, which somehow had pushed its way through the crowded aisles just as the foreman announced his finding.

As the constable tore the man from his wife's arms, she cried "My poor husband, and my poor little baby!" She had to be firmly escorted from the court-room. Outside, her screams could be heard, louder than before, while she poured forth a tirade of condemnation on the convicted girl.

"She was a bad, bad girl," she shrieked. "She went around the country ruining every home she could!"

Throughout the whole case Mrs. McNulty sat as close to the prisoners' dock as she could squeeze. Several times Crown Prosecutor Blackstock had to halt in his seathing arraignment of the prisoner because of her cries of protest, but when they tried to remove her, she stolidy refused to leave his side.

"No, he has not," she broke in when Mr. Blackstock informed the jurors that the man was not on trial for seduction, nor for wrecking the life of his wife. Again, when crown counsel was reading McNulty's ardent avowals of love in his letters to Miss Dolan, she hissed, "And to think I let the sneak stay in my house, and she was there all the time when I was having my baby!"

The case all through has been remarkable for its emotional scenes. The convicted Dolan girl had three frightful nervous spasms Wednesday, and every few minutes, while giving evidence yesterday, had to be restored by a physician. Constable Wright fainted in the witness-box on Tuesday.

The case will also go down in history as the first in Ontario at least, where the alleged father of an illegitimate child had been convicted of murder for counseling or procuring its death. Justice Britton charged the jury with the importance of this aspect. He also made reference to the "astounding prevalence of infantile murder."

AERIAL RECORDS AGAIN SMASHED

Walter Brookins Breaks Two in a Flight of One Hundred and Eighty-Five Miles.

MAKES TWO STOPS.

Average Speed From Sprinfield to Chicago Thirty-Two Miles an Hour—Brookins Captures a Prize of $10,000.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 30.—Walter E. Brookins, the young aviator, landed at the State fair grounds here this afternoon at 4.26 and was cheered by the 50,000 spectators after he had finished his flight of 185 miles from Chicago. He left Chicago at 9.16 a.m. The time, including stops, was 7.10.00. The actual time in the air was 5.41 and his average speed for the distance with stops eliminated was about 32 miles an hour.

Brookins arrived in Springfield two minutes ahead of the special train with which he had raced from Gilman.

In accomplishing this feat he won the $10,000 prize for which he was striving and demolished two records, one of them the world's record for continuous cross-country flights, and the other the American record for sustained flight.

A third record, that of the longest sustained flight ever made in the world, barely missed being set by the young airman from Chicago, a piece of bad luck forcing him to descend to the ground a second time just beyond Mount Pulaski. This was 88 miles from Gilman, where a first stop was made, and 169 miles from Chicago. Brookins' second stop of the day, at Mount Pulaski, was a brief one, the aviator being down only 25 minutes.

Michael Fraser in a Serious Condition Declares His Lawyer In Court.

A CELEBRATED CASE.

Woman Seeks to Annul The Marriage of her Eighty Year Old Second Cousin on the Ground of Insanity—First Shot Fired.

Barrie, Sept. 30.—The celebrated case of Catharine McCormick, to annul the marriage of her 80-year-old second cousin, Michael Fraser, on the ground of insanity, comes before Justice Britton to-day. The first shot was fired last night, while the jury were out in the McNulty murder trial.

John King, K.C., counsel for Fraser and his new wife (Miss Robertson), asked his lordship to excuse the old gentleman from coming down to Barrie.

"We object very strongly to having him brought from Orillia, as he is in a very serious state with 'arteris sclerosis.' Dr. Raikes, his family physician, has been attending him regularly of late, and has made an affidavit that it would be a very dangerous thing to move him down here for the examination for discovery, and it was taken to Midland.

"I suggest, my lord, that you go up there and interview him, as it would be too great a risk to bring him down here."

Judge Britton: "Would it be a greater risk to him to come here than for me to go to Orillia? I certain do not propose to take a trip of that kind."

Mr. McDonald, K.C., counsel for Mrs. McCormick, also objected.

"It has been my learned friend's tactics all through to delay. I am informed that Fraser has been out in a canoe lately, and he goes out driving and riding in an automobile."

"Are you going to advance canoeing as an evidence of his insanity?" laughed the judge.

"Well, I certainly do object to those affidavits."

NEW YORK CURB HOUSE RAIDED

Sensational Haul Made by United States Commissioner Yesterday.

B. H. SCHEFTELS & CO.

Firm Charged With Using The Mails To Sell Worthless Mining Stock—Had a Staff of Thirty-Five Typists to Hustle Business.

New York, Sept. 30.—Following one of the most sensational raids ever engineered by federal authorities in this city, directed yesterday against the firm of B. H. Scheftels & Co., curb brokers in Broad street, a number of members of the company, including B. H. Scheftels, its president, were held in heavy bail by U. S. Commissioner Shields, for hearing on Oct. 5, on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

Last night search was being made by the police and by Government inspectors, for George Graham Rice, whose real name is said to be Simon Herzig, who is declared to be the real head of the concern.

Simultaneously with the raid here, warrants were served on the managers of the company's branch offices in Boston, Providence, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago and Milwaukee. According to agents of the Department of Justice, the Scheftels' company had been engaged in promoting the sale of mining securities of doubtful value in all parts of the country. Estimates of the firm's dealings are placed as high as $5,000,000.

The seven arraigned here are: B. H. Scheftels, Charles F. Belser, secretary of the company; George T. Sullivan, Clarence McCormack, John Delaney, William T. Seagrave and Charles B. Stone. Warrants for 16 men had been issued, but the others, including Rice and Charles S. Perseg, eluded the raiders. Scheftels, Seagraves, Stone and Delaney secured bail, but Belser, McCormack and Sullivan were committed to the Tombs, as bondsmen were not forthcoming.

While the hearing was set for Oct. 6, it is expected that the federal grand jury will have taken action before that time.

The firm of B. H. Scheftels & Co. was organized about two years ago, and had conducted a large business, mainly through an extensive advertising propaganda. Mining specialties were its chief offering to investors. A weekly newspaper was published, to reach clients, and a corps of 35 stenographers is said to have been required to attend to its correspondence. After the arrest yesterday two patrol wagonloads of papers, books and memoranda were seized by the inspectors for examination.

The raid was made while the curb market was in full swing, and attracted great attention. Thousands rushed to the scene, and police reserves had to be called out to clear a path for the patrol wagons.

Mgr. Fallon's Troubles.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—A member of the school board of Notre Dame du Lac, Walkerville, Ont., writes La Patrie as follows: "I am afraid that Mgr. Fallon cannot get away from the accusation that weighs upon his head for having forbidden the use of the French language in the schools of his diocese.

"As a matter of fact, the bishop's edict has caused trouble in all the schools of the County of Essex. We have, for instance, had an interview with the Sisters of Notre Dame du Lac, and we asked the superior who gave the order to suppress the use of French in the schools, and even forbid the language to be spoken. The directress replied that the mother superior of the Convent de St. Joseph, London, had been called to the bishop's palace in London, and had received her instructions from Mgr. Fallon himself.

"In fact, it is my duty to add that all the troubles the French-Canadians of Ontario are now having came from London."

Waiting Word From Ottawa.

Washington, Sept. 30.—The Department of State, under President Taft's direction, has made all preparations to act as soon as word is received from Ottawa indcating the intentions of the Dominion Government concerning the proposed reciprocity negotiations.

With the return of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the various Cabinet Ministers to the Canadian capital, and with the recent arbitration at The Hague, eliminating the Newfoundland fisheries dispute from all controversy, the ways have been cleared for negotiations for commercial agreements between Canada and Newfoundland respectively on one side and the United States on the other.

Hung Himself In Root House.

Wingham, Sept. 30.—Yesterday Donald Ross, a young farmer of about 30 years of age, who resided with his mother and sister in the Township of Kinless, near Whitechurch, committed suicide by hanging. The young man left home to assist a neighbor threshing, and being wanted, it was found that he had not been there. A search was instituted and the dead body was found suspended from a beam in the roothouse. He must have been dead some hours. No reason can be assigned, as he was of a very cheerful disposition.

Beautiful Autumn Millinery
That Is Sure to Please

We can consistently state that our showing of Autumn Millinery is the most beautiful and comprehensive ever assembled in this city, and our hats have received the unqualified endorsement of every lady visiting this department.

The wonderful richness and variety of materials this season has given milliners more than their usual scope to display their artistic talents and the broad assortment of styles shown makes it easy for us to please every taste.

Among the prettiest street hats are the cloche models with sloping brims and rather large high crowns, but the close fitting draped turbans are also greatly favored.

Very beautiful are the large dress hats of rich panne velvet, satin and beaver with trimmings of lovely feather mounts, clusters of ostrich feathers or long willow plumes falling gracefully on crown and brim.

Everything that is new and correct is here and worthy of particular emphasis are the splendid values.

CURRENT EVENTS.

"A Bigger and Better Belleville."

Canada is not known in France says Senator Dandurand. Well, don't worry about it. France is well known in Canada.

Bishop Fallon of London said when speaking on the question of intemperance: "Nobody wants a drunkard"—Wrong Bishop!—What about the gin mills and grog shops?

Of late years in Hastings County it is an unknown thing to get a conviction in a murder trial, but then this County is right in line with Chicago where 693 homicides occurred and only two suffered capital punishment while life imprisonment was only imposed in 42 cases.

The London, England, Express of recent date says:

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier will, by his latest speech, excite the admiring envy of those many persons who wish to have the best of both worlds It is a high and usually vain aspiration. But Sir Wilfrid Laurier, has so to speak, done the trick. He is a Free Trader-Protectionist. He says in effect to the farmers of Western Canada, 'You are free traders and I am a free trader. I swear by Cobden, I swear by Gladstone, by Asquith and by George. But, oh, my dear friends, let us never forget that this is a young and frail country. Let us, dear brethren, sing our fiscal convictions and continue to collect the necessary revenue by customs duties. Thus shall a statesman be all thing to all men and preserve both theory and practice in separate compartments. A great wit was once asked his age. 'When I am with old people, he said, ''I am a hundred and when I am with children I am ten.' Sir Wilfrid Laurier also has great intelligence. When he is in the West he is a free trader who must protect himself. When he is in the east he becomes a protectionist with academic sympathy for free trade. Thus may the compass be accurately boxed.

An Appeal to Wives.

CURE THE DRINKING HUSBAND BY USING ORRINE—CAN BE GIVEN SECRETLY.

No more terrible affliction can come to any home than the craving for strong drink of husband and father. We appeal to wives, mothers and sisters to save the husband and father or the brother with Orrine, a scientific cure for the liquor habit. Can be given secretly.

Orrine is sold under an absolute guarantee that it will cure the drink habit or money will be refunded. Save the happiness and prosperity of the home with Orrine. $1 per box. Write for free booklet, "How to Cure Drunkenness." Orrine Co., 963 Orrine Building, Washington, D.C. Orrine is sold in the city by J. S. McKeown.

Do You Know the value of OLIVE OIL?

Its action is midly laxative and its being a nutritious food. it should be taken by all who are of a habit constipated to any degree.

No prescribed dosing is required, you are simply to take as much as you care for on your food probably on salads and in meat or fish dressings.

Our French Olive Oil is the kind to use. It is absolutely pure,

"Ten thousand in the old town will be thinking of you to-night."

B. L. BRICKMAN DEAD.

Mr. B. L. Brickman who resided on Frank street died this morning after a lengthy illness from Bright's disease. In the year 1843 the deceased was born in Prince Edward County where he resided until three years ago when he took up his residence in this city. Mr. Brickman was a successful yeoman and a man highly respected. He had been for years a member of the Methodist Church. Mrs. Brickman died some years ago. One daughter, Mrs. C. Adams, survives.

GETS ONE MONTH.

Wm. McDonald, who hails from the eastern part of the Province was this morning up before Magistrate Masson On the eighth inst. McDonald was arrested charged with entering three houses in east Belleville under false pretences. He represented to the inmates that he was sent to the places by the water works department to see about some water pipes which were out of repair. This was proven to be a false statement. McDonald claimed that he was under the influence of liquor at the time and was not aware of what he was doing. He claimed he had no intention of doing anything wrong. The Magistrate after giving McDonald some timely advice sentenced him to one month in jail the sentence to commence with his conviction on the 10th inst.

MOFFATT-LANCASTER.

At Havelock yesterday afternoon Miss Eva R. Lancaster, of that place was married to Mr. Jack Moffatt of this city. The ceremony was performed at St. John's Anglican Church by the Rector, Rev. C. H. Holdsworth. Miss Verna Coe of Sudbury, was bridesmaid and Mr. Earl Lancaster did honors for the groom. An elaborate wedding repast was partaken of at the residence of the bride's father Mr. T. P. Lancaster. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful mink muff, to the bridesmaid a signet ring and to the groomsman cuff links Among the beautiful gifts received was a piano from the bride's brother, Mr. T. P. Lancaster, a quartered oak dining room set from the groom's parents, and a hall mirror from St John's congregation. The young couple left on the 3.40 train amid a shower of confetti for their home in Belleville, the bride travelling in a navy blue suit, with brown beaver hat and mink furs.

THE ROYAL COMMISSION.

Col. Ponton this afternoon informed a representative of the Intelligencer that nothing definite had been received from the Technical Education Commission as to when they would arrive here. It is expected, however, that they will come here at 8.30 this evening from Kingston. It is not known just what members of the Commission will visit this city. Every arrangement has been made for receiving the distinguished guests by the Mayor, President of the Board of Trade, and other influential citizens. It is possible that a public meeting will be held here to-morrow evening. In the morning industries about the city will be visited. The Commission will give particular attention to the manufacturing industries, to agriculture, to domestic occupations, to mining, to the fisheries, to the lumber interests, to the building trades, to the transportation services, as well as to the technical training required for commercial operations. The Commission will also make inquiry into the needs of existing industries in respect to labor, the quality of labor which is available and the needs of each labor for industrial training and technical education. The Commission will appreciate co-operation in any manner which may be considered appropriate regarding any or all of these matters.

At The Opera House To-Night.

A large and satisfied audience sat through and witnessed a pleasant evening's entertainment at Griffin's, Opera House last night.

O'Neil & Guilford presented a refined Irish act in which they talked, sang, and executed some extraordinary buck and wing and acrobatic dances.

Mr. Quigley, of Quigley & Adair, never for one moment allowed the audience to lose its smile, as his antics on the roller skates were extremely funny. Miss Adair's personality and songs gained well deserved applause.

The greatest western picture ever shown in Belleville arrived to-day. It is Selig's "Ranch Life in the South-West," and during the action of the picture, Pat Long, champion at steer bulldogging, Chas. Fuqua, Johnny Mullens, champion ropers, Tom Mix, ex-U. S. Marshall and champion roper and broncho buster, and Henry Brammar, champion of the world, are all shown at work at their hazardous callings.

The New Education.

To-morrow Belleville will have a visit from the Royal Commission on Industrial Education and Technical Training. The presence of the Commission in this city brings prominently before the people a department of instruction which is in a special degree necessary for the development of our national strength. Probably there never was so much talk about education as now, not even when "Emile." appeared and everyone with pretension to culture or intelligence had his ideas of Rousseau's teaching. To-day the world is very much larger in the educational sense, and with the vigorous competition for international trade among the industrial nations, the desire is greater than it has been to get behind words and forms and traditions to the central truth about education, to see what it can do and what it cannot.

As the Montrael Herald expresses it, educationally, Canada, at this stage of her development offers a most interesting field for study. We have shown that we have been faithful—too faithful—to what is old and now we are opening our arms, in time we hope, to what is new. There are two marks of the movement towards advancement in education, the need of a strong sense of the responsibility of the state for the up-bringing of its future citizens and the equally strong sense of the need for individuality in training and at the same time a recognition of the varieties of individual conviction. But that technical education is desirable and a portion, at least, of our public school curriculum of the present day, undesirable, no one will dispute. And the sooner our educational system is righted the better. Bestow the sort of knowledge upon the boy and girl which will be useful to them after they quit school and not the sort with which they're afterlife will have no connection. It is a common thing to hear persons express surprise at the inability of the boys and girls who left brilliant records behind them at school to become somebody in after life and the apparent ease with which some of the greatest dullards at school mount the ladder of fame and fortune. Too much that was useless and too little that was useful was crammed into the head of the medalist. We will cheerfully welcome a change. It can come none too soon.

Mr. Roosevelt's Triumph

Theodore Roosevelt's triumph at Saratoga this week should win admirers for him rather than lose them. Hunting wild beasts in the African jungle travelling in state through Europe or even busting trusts are puny undertakings compared with that which Mr. Roosevelt accomplished this week For one man to break a political machine so thoroughly organized and so powerful as that led by Woodruff and Barnes in New York State is little short of astounding, especially when it is considered that there was little if any, preliminary work.

The men who voted for Mr. Roosevelt at Saratoga are the sort of men a great political party needs. They're honest. They were promised nothing; they expect nothing. It is doubtful if the same may be said of most of those who voted against Mr. Roosevelt. They belong to the machine that was.

Mr. Roosevelt felt that he could do his state and his country a good turn by crushing the bosses of his party at home. He has ever been a stickler for honesty in his party and out of it His main object now is to give New York State clean Government and it is to be hoped that he succeeds.

When boss rule is mentioned to his opponents now they sneeringly retort that in Mr. Roosevelt is found the most complete boss the nation has ever known. Well, it is a pity, that each of the other nations of the union hadn't a boss as strong in every sense of the word as Mr. Roosevelt.

MARTYRS.

SUPERSTITIOUS.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

Superstitions persist even in this practical and materialistic age. A crew of sailors refused to start out with a new boat from Toronto last week, because the day was Friday, and the date the 23rd. Sailors are proverbially a superstitous lot; but even sailors have no monopoly of superstition.

LARGELY WATER.

(Buffalo Courier.)

Combination of interests in Canada proceeds at a fairly active rate. In the past year twenty mergers have been effected, absorbing 135 individual capital amounts to $200,000,000, and, as is incidentally reported, "a proportion of the new securities consists of water."

EQUIPPED FOR DUTY.

THE FITTING FLAG.

(Brantford Expositor.)

The Mayor of Montreal has been censured for giving more prominence to the Irish flag than to the tri-color in the city hall decorations during the recent Eucharistic congress. An easy way to prevent similar flag incidents in the future is to use the Union Jack entirely for decorative purposes. On civic buildings, more particularly, there is no reason why this should not be done.

WHAT THEY THINK.

(John D. Wells in Buffalo News.)

Not wishing to die without having accomplished something in the world, we rise to urge good citizens to force reform of the various brands of vitagraph melodrama, now running in the city's nickleodeons. After inspecting several, with no small strain on our nerves and patience, we conclude that the average child in the formative period, if he or she be a regular attendant at these new-every-week performances, will grow up to be a false lover a counterfeiter, a cowpuncher, a holdup man, an obstreperous convict, a deep-dyed villain of the silk-hatted type, train robber, or something else in that long and shady category. Film manufacturers think there is license for everything so long as virtue triumphs on the last 75 feet of it.

CANADA'S NATIONAL NEWSPAPER.

IN LIGHTER VEIN.

Two busy individuals at a general headquarters in the Western Union building are Miss Ouida Kinezl, official stenographer, who wirtes a thousand—more or less—letters a day for visiting Templars, and Miss Emily Schitel, telegraph operator, who sends off an equal number of telegrams daily for Knights for whom the mail is too slow.

At really busy moments Knights stand six deep around Miss Kinzel and reach over each other's shoulders to put in a bid for the privilege of dictating the next letter.

"What I call a man in a hurry," said Miss Kinzel, "is a man who will hand me a card with an address on it and a few notes of what he wants said, and tells me to write the letter and mail it, and hurry away. I have quite a few of those.

The most interesting man I had was one who stopped and gave me a visiting card. His name was engraved in a lower corner. He handed me a dollar with the card and said: "Please write a letter for me.' I said 'Certainly. To whom?' 'To my wife,' he answered; 'that is my name you have on the card.' 'I understand that,' I told him, 'but what shall I write about?'

"'Oh, write about a page,'" he replied, and strolled away."—Chicago Tribune.

NEW NAVAL WATCHDOG.

About a year ago the British Admiralty began experimenting with a specially bred type of dog for watchman use at its land stations. The tests have proved satisfactory and a supply of the dogs has now been ordered from a well known English breeder of bloodhounds. The new animal is, apparently, a cross between the retriever, Airedale and collie. It has a wonderful scent and hearing and is watchful and savage. It can hear the slightest sound at ranges far beyond that of the human ear, and its nose is almost as good as that of the bloodhound.—London Telegraph.

NO INSULT INTENDED.

"Haven't we met before?" inquired the inquisitive, bent-nosed man in the day coach.

"I hope not," said the short-haired man, who was sharing his seat.

"You hope not!" ejaculatorily repeated the first speaker. "Do you mean that, sir, for an insult?"

"I intend it for just the reverse of an insult, my friend," responded the man with the cropped hair, "and I think you will appreciate my sentiment and feel like thanking me for its expression when I tell you that this is the first day in thirty years that I have been out of the State's prison."—Chicago Daily News.

AND SHE KNEW.

A wise woman once said that there were three follies of men which always amused her. The first was climbing trees to shake the fruit down, when, if they would wait long enough, the fruit would fall itself. The second was going to war to kill each other, when, if they only waited, they would die naturally, and the third was that they should run after women, when, if they did not do so, the women would be sure to run after them.—Atchison Globe.

GOING UP.

"As a politician, that man was a disgrace to the city."

"Well, he has risen in the political world since then. Now he's a disgrace to the state."—Puck.

"My wife said that most men are mere nobodies," said Mr. Meekton, cheerily.

"Did you endure the slight?"

"No, sir, I made her retract before I would hook her dress up the back."—Washington Star.

"Widowers or Nothing."

Astute women have been heard to say that widowers make the best husbands. They are like horses already broken. They are submissive to the bit and bridle. Some young New York spinsters are so convinced of the truth of this that they are reported to have formed a club with the motto "Widowers or nothing." That is to say, they will go husbandless through life rather than marry men who have not been married before. All sorts of penalties are provided—fines for a member if she flirts with a mere bachelor, expulsion if she marries one. The club numbers thirty-four, so thirty-four widowers are doomed unless—can it be that these spinsters, knowing man's penchant for that which seems unattainable, have formed this club to lure desirable bachelors on?—New York Tribune.

Road History.

A novelty at the Brussels International exposition is a graphic history of roads, from the Roman road to the most perfected modern form. An avenue about a third of a mile in length leads up to the pavilion of civil engineering and is divided into sections, each two meters long, representing all the different types of roads that have been employed by civilized nations. Thus the visitor is enabled to make a direct comparison showing the peculiarities and advantages of all the various kinds of highways that man has devised to enable him to move about easily on the surface of his planet, on foot, on horseback and in carriages and wagons.

When the Baby Sleeps.

Do not permit a baby to sleep with its head under the bedclothes. Trained nurses who are supposed to know better are often responsible for this habit. They keep the head of an infant so carefully wrapped for fear of draft that the child becomes accustomed to muffling. [illegible]

A Public-Private Stenographer.

"I am a married woman living in a small town," said a woman recently, "and my husband's work is of such a nature that it has its dull and its busy season. During the former the family purse sometimes gets very low, and I am glad to say that I have been able to help replenish it by making use of the business experience I had before marriage.

"I am a stenographer, and, being the only one in the town, I have many opportunities to make money by taking depositions, reporting conventions and doing amanuensis work.

"I also teach shorthand and typewriting and am seldom without one or two scholars. I often do work for the guests of the hotels here too. This work pays very well, and in our town, being a small one, a public stenographer (which I might say I am, although my office is my home) is often very much in demand."

Girls' Camps.

Summer camps in the mountains and woods are the things now for young girls and boys whose parents are off on trips to Europe, or obliged to be separated from them. The camps are conducted by experienced chaperons, who watch over the young people, planning interesting days for them, with a division of time for study, sport and social life. Thus the children fortunate enough to go to these can lead a wholesome life, and their parents, conscious that they are being well taken care of, can attend to their affairs elsewhere.

For Eyelet Workers.

When making large round or oblong eyelets or those that are petal shaped, all difficulty may be obviated by working first and cutting away the central material afterward with tiny manicure scissors. If carefully done by this method the laundering will have only a beneficial effect upon the eyelet instead of wearing it out.

The ...Veiled Lady...

"By Heavens! I wonder! I swear I cannot tell! Is this man friend or foe, to the Masked Venus?" And the tigerlike look on Brayton's face, as he leaped on Stahrenstein, came back to his memory. He struck him without a word, and called out, "This is my quarrel!" He had only seen the card then! He knew the name, but not the face! What can he be? A modern Menelaus, chasing a very unscrupulous Helen,—a dissappointed lover, an old protector, or a relative? No! He can be no relative; he would have wnown more from the first! Did Gordon betray, and then ship away, his 'light o'love'?

"I will drift awhile! I am now alone! Every one knows me here. If I am watched, they will surely approach me, sooner or later. Josef I will call up here at once! I will operate on his cupidity! A little money now,—a little more by-and-by,—and much promised, which Josef will not get! I suppose he robbed the luggage of the brothers; trust him for that! I will show myself freely around the haunts of this gay town!—No one will harm me! As for the finale, Vogue la galere! it will be all the same in fifty years! Just the same, whether the Masked Venus lived a crowned rosiere, or did a wealthy Messalina, with a store of jewels and a fund of interesting reminiscences! Your chaste nun, and your painted Ninon de l'Enclos, alike sleep quietly, where in the common fosse, or under a huge stone, besprinkled with egregious lies, chiselled in crumbling marble!"

Phineas Orton was a bit of a homespun philosopher.

"Ah! Very good!" he murmured, as the polite Chef de Bureau handed him a telegram, on entring his hostelry.

"Pinkerton! I suppose! Some new job!" Orton mused. The telegram, from the American exchange at Paris, read:—

"Important documents from America mailed you, registered to-day. Report their receipt. Instructions cabled us for their immediate delivery. Answer immediately."

"I suppose some American Bank President has walked away with an actress; or, the faithful cashier has milked the financial cow dry, and may now be enjoying an enforced furlough! Possibly some loving heart has 'coveted his neighbor's wife';—some callow youth is missed, whose hand has been thrust into an unguarded pocket! It's all the same,—only different phases of Vanity Fair! Well, I will practise on Josef till tomorrow night's mail arrives."

Orton, escaping observation, in a fishing boat, drifted next day along the shores, and in a long conference, found in Josef a "foeman worthy of his steel." "By Jove! He really brightens me up! He is a rare scoundrel,—a pearl among valets,—a most judicious villain!"

Late that night, the detective pored over his letters. He was astonished. "I am glad Brayton is gone; I have no scruples now!" For his correspondent was none other than Lieutenant John Gordon, K troop,—Seventh U. S. Cavalry."

The same mail brought him a note from "Alfred Brayton": "I will just catch the lightning mail train through to Liverpool. I get the fast Cunarder."

"This is becoming a serious matter! I don't know if I am on my head or my heels! Two women now; one dead and one living! this is a ten strike! I must hang onto Josef! That's what this devil was holding back! Then there were two women mixed up in Neill's murder! Gordon and Irene Hope must have helped one away. Great Heavens! Could it have been Gordon's sister?" For Orton knew not the genealogy of the haughty Gordons of Belvoir.

"Show me a woman, and I will show you a mystery," says the Frenchman. "By Heavens! here are two women and two first class mysteries!" The puzzled detective mused as he read Gordon's orders over and over. "I'll go right on to Campoformio and let this devil of a valet make the game there, but he will never slyly finger my papers. I'll send him on a day or so in advance."

With morning light, Josef, clinking a handful of bright napoleons in his pocket, joyfully boarded the train for Campoformio.

"I am en train de faire ma fortune," he grinned, as he thought of the rosy future.

"Now! I am free!" Orton gladly cried as his advance guard left! "Let me think. Lieutenant Gordon commissions me to remove the remains of the lady who died at Campoformio last year, and was there buried, under the name of Isabel Percy. He has given me all the legal authorities, and directs the closest inquiry into every detail of her illness and death. I am to cable to his St. Louis Bank the receipt of my orders, and then a picture of the dead woman will be sent by them to aid my researches. The utmost secrecy and delicacy to be observed, and the whole commission to remain a private matter. Notify the Bank of St. Louis, and draw on them, sending needed telegrams to their care. Ah! what's this,—these crossed lines? 'I am going on an expedition, to be gone some months; I found out your foreign address from the Pinkertons; I rely entirely on you; and whatever you do, never mention this to any American.'

"What is the motive for secrecy? Interest or shame? And which is Isabel Percy,—the dead woman or the 'Mees' Isabel'? I have enough before me!"

Orton promptly telegraphed to the St. Louis Bank, and to the exchange in Paris, and gave his permanent address as Hotel Chauvain. "I am now ready to see the little town where Napoleon humbled haughty Austria's pride in the treaty of 1797, near Udine? Well, I will leave my orders for mail here, and make this my base of operations." Quick-witted Orton easily reached his goal in Vendkia.

The inn-keeper of the "Golden Cross" at Campoformio was happy in bustling for the comfort of his liberal guest, who ordered the best accommodations in his house as he descended from the diligence. "Liberality pays—sometimes," thought Orton, as Josef deftly arranged all his new master's luggage.

In a carriage, the pride of the village, the impatient Orton soon reconoitred the modest town. Passing the Campo Santo, without a remark, he noted Josef furtively gazing at its cypress-shaded walks. "I now know the lay of the land," the detective thought. "After dinner I will open my batteries. Josef!" said Orton sharply, when he had leisurely sipped his last glass of Marsala, "tell me now all about this affair! What have you now to say here? I am pressed for time! Let us come to business."

"What have you to pay here?" quietly queried the valet.

"That depends on your information," the detective answered. "You had better tell me all; I will be liberal."

"Not less than a thousand francs!" Josef remarked, cautiously hedging.

"All right, if you don't lie; if you do, you get nothing. I may need you again."

"Well then, give me the money and I will take you to everybody; I will tell you the whole swindle!"

"On whom?" queried Orton, tantalizing Josef with a thousand-franc note, twirled before his nose.

"On the Capitaine Gordon, of the Cavalerie Americaine!" said the anxious servant.

I would not be a butterfly;
I envy not the bird.
The wings that lift him to the sky—
I hope to have some by and by,
But that may be deferred.

Mere wings, for all the poets say,
Would be more toil than gain,
But when the thing has "come to stay,"
When it's quite safe, I hope I may Possess an aeroplane.

The stranger beating at my door
Whom I have cause to shun
Would not annoy me as before.
I should not shiver at the bore
Or tremble at the dun.

But lightly to my rooftree spring
And on mine airy craft
Serenely from his presence wing,
Leaving him there to knock and ring
Till he were dead or daft.

And then to sally far and wide,
To see as from a cloud
The haunts of privacy or pride,
Places one wants to see inside
Because it's not allowed;

The grounds about the ducal hall,
The parvenu's abode,
The park, the palace, most of all
The nunnery behind the wall,
So baffling from the road—

In truth, 'twould be a dear delight
These hidden realms to see;
But, oh, it is the secret night
When the advantages of flight
Mostly appeal to me!

There is a certain man I hate.
With divers plot and plan
I have schemed early and schemed late,
Seeking a just and adequate
Revenge upon that man.

Yet one by one they came to naught.
Some were too gentle; some
Involved the risk of being caught,
Which wouldn't do at all. I thought
My chance would never come.

But now—some night I hope to go
In one of these machines,
Armed with a good stout bomb, and, oh,
Rapture! With any luck I'll blow
That man to smithereens!

The Only Dry Place.

A stingy angler was fishing on a Scottish loch on a pouring wet day. He had been consoling himself from his flask and forgetting his gillie. Presently he asked the gillie if there was a dry place in the boat on which to strike a match.

"You might try my throat," said the gillie. "It's dry enough!"—Fishing Gazette.

HIS DAUGHTER KNEW THE RIGHT REMEDY

To Cure Kidney Trouble

The United States is all right, you know, but Uncle Sam's doctors have not found a cure for serious Kidney Trouble. When sick folks down there want to get well, they send to Canada for Gin Pills.

At least, that is the way Mr. H. S. Ball, of Oxford, Ohio, was cured of a bad case of Kidney Disease.

Mr. Ball took the usual remedies prescribed by the doctors, and wore plasters, and was rubbed with liniments—but steadily grew worse. In a letter to his daughter, who lived in Canada, Mr. Ball wrote of his serious condition. His daughter immediately sent him two boxes of Gin Pills, which did him so much good that he knew he had found the right remedy at last.

July 25th, 1909.

"Find enclosed one dollar for which please send me two boxes of Gin Pills. My daughter sent me two boxes and I had a bad case and am getting well fast. I find lots of men down here in the same fix that I was in, and I shall surely recommend Gin Pills to everybody."

H. S. BALL.

Gin Pills are a product that every Canadian may take pride in, and one that thousands endorse. They are made by the largest wholesale drug house in Canada, who fully guarantee every box. In fact, Gin Pills are sold with a positive guarantee. If, after taking Gin Pills according to directions, you can honestly say that they have not done you any good, simply return the empty boxes to your dealer and your money will be promptly refunded.

For Kidney Trouble, for irritated and inflamed Bladder, for Pain in the Back, for Constipation and Biliousness which usually accompany Kidney and Bladder Troubles—Gin Pills are a certain and speedy cure. 50c. a box—6 for $2.50. CURED OF CONSTIPATON

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never comes single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I read about these Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box. 2

Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG,
SICK WOMEN WELL.

It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Honest medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good." It is non-secret, non-alcoholic and has a record of forty years of cures. ASK YOUR NEIGHBORS. They probably know of some of its many cures.

If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 50 stamps. Address Dr. R.V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

Finland.

Finland, the national constitution of which the Russian duma has voted away, is in many ways an exceedingly interesting country. Some travelers say the most delightful city in northern Europe is Helsingfors, the capital. Its population is 80,000. It is a city of boulevards and cafes set in a sea of Mediterranean blue and against a background of pine clad hills. It has no slums. Finland is a paradise for the suffragette. Women there can be anything from stonemasons and members of parliament to bank cashiers. They take an important part in the government.

A FACE IN THE CROWD.

The Story of a Pretty Little Love Romance.

By KEITH GORDON.

After awhile she came to look for him when the train stopped at the Fifty-third street station in the morning—the tall, broad shouldered man with the aggressive chin and determined mouth. She felt vaguely disappointed when she did not see him.

Insensibly he became the touch of romance in the dreary monotony of her days, five and a half out of seven of which were spent in Wall street, a place where the advantages of being a woman are not glaringly apparent.

Often during the flagging afternoons of summer, when business was dull and the hands of the clock approached 5 but slowly, she would sit resting on her face on her hands and wondering about him. Who was he? What was he? Was he married or single?

The noise of the street below, dulled by distance until it was as dreamy as the humming of bees at noonday, ironed softly in her ears a sort of living melody, and her thoughts defied office hours and went far afield in a fantastic search for the reality about him among the crowd of possibilities.

Over and over she gave him a local habitation and a name, but these changed always with her mood. No name that she could hit upon seemed to express his personality, and she finally discarded them all and thought of him only as The Man.

The weeks melted into months, but her interest in him did not flag. Rather it became deeper as time went on. Curiously enough, it was—what might be termed the nonessentials that baffled her. About the man himself—his character and what he would do in any given emergency—she felt the same assurance that she did about herself.

She had decided that he was a lawyer, though precisely why she thought so she could not have told. Then one day she saw him with a child, a girl of ten, who bore a certain fleeting resemblance to him.

He was married, then! An almost imperceptible sigh escaped her. Then, as the absurdity of the matter dawned upon her, she laughed softly to herself. What difference? Josephine and Marie Louise had never dampened her affection for Napoleon. She even began to feel a mild interest in the lady.

Sometimes, for two or three weeks at a stretch, they would not encounter each other. It was after one of these breaks that, watching him as he entered the car, her interest and satisfaction at seeing him again shone all unconsciously in her face, and his glance was arrested by it.

As the faint color touched her cheeks under his gaze he looked casually away. For a moment he had thought her some half forgotten acquaintance from the welcome that he had surprised in her eyes, but her quick annoyance as she returned to her reading forbade that idea.

She did not look toward him again, but more than once his keen blue eyes rested upon her as she sat there, slim and straight, with masses of pale brown hair piled upon her small head. After this he, too, began to watch of a morning. A habit is very easily formed!

Then for weeks he disappeared. The girl wondered anxiously what had become of him. Had he gone abroad? Mayhap he was ill—or dead! At the thought she shrank like one hurt, for he had become, in a whimsical way, a part of her life. He had become as near and dear as only ideals can be.

When he did appear one morning, towering above a crowd of lesser men like a god, there was a new gravity in his face which held her attention even before she noticed that he was in mourning.

That, then, was what these weeks of absence from business meant—sickness and suffering and death. His wife undoubtedly, from the sorrow and oppression that he showed. The quick sympathy that she felt hovered in her soft, wide eyes as they rested briefly upon his face. And he, reading that look, felt a curious thrill.

Long since he had begun to regard her with a sort of tacit, silent friendship, "the little girl with her soul in her face," as he once described her to a friend, shaking his head deprecatingly at the thought of a woman like her having to wrestle with the world. She seemed to him too exquisite for the ups and downs of such a life.

He watched her surreptitiously now, wondering idly who she was and whether he should ever meet her. There was a way—he might follow her and bestow a quarter on the elevator boy, and the thing would be done. But the coarseness of such methods repelled him. She seemed the sort of woman who would resent that kind of thing.

Moreover, in his heart of hearts and in spite of his bigness and worldliness he was a fatalist. If it were written from the beginning it would occur! No man could dabble in the affairs of fate!

It was nearing the end of the third year. He took the same train now with a regularity which made her suspicious. The results of chance were never so unerring. Intention was apparent.

But through it all save at unexpected moments when the curtain would lift for a second and an unintentional glance betray a deeper knowledge they regarded each other with the baffling, impassive eyes we keep for the unknown. No twentieth century romance ever moved so slowly.

Then Billy Stoughton, who in this particular case was the instrument of fate, awakened one morning with an unaccountable but imperative yearning for Broadway. Five years earlier an equally compelling desire had landed him on the ranch, where he had bided contentedly enough up to that particular morning. The evening of the next day found him in Denver, from which place he proceeded with as much haste as the railroad facilities would permit to New York.

On the day of his arrival he planned to dine with Renwick, the closest of his college friends. He had just time to catch him by telephone before he left his office, which he did, arranging to meet him at the elevated station and go up town with him.

The first effervescence of their meeting over, Stoughton's beaming eyes roved over the other passengers. A slight figure at the far end of the car held his glance. He looked again to be sure.

"Pardon me a minute, Jack," he said, rising and making his way toward the girl, with whom a moment later he was shaking hands cordially and talking with the ease of long friendship. Presently he returned to Renwick, and as he did so a revealing look passed between the two. A bridge at last!

"It's Natica Alston, a cousin of mine, you know," he explained to Renwick. "Tough luck they had, I tell you. But she's a plucky girl. She has earned her own living now for four years."

"Will you present me?" demanded Renwick eagerly.

"Certainly. I'll take you up there with me. Natica will be glad to receive any friend of mine."

"Thank you, old fellow; thank you." Renwick paused awkwardly. He seemed to have something else to say, but scarcely knew how to say it.

"When I said—asked you to introduce me—I didn't mean the usual thing. I'm going to ask you to do something queer and to do it without asking too many questions."

"What kind of a mystery is this?" inquired Stoughton. "If I didn't know that there isn't a grain of romance in you I should certainly think"—

"Now, don't think—there's a good fellow," soothed Renwick. "Just follow instructions. Tell Miss Alston all about me, and mind that you tell her everything good that you can or I'll wring your neck, and make an appointment for me to call. Don't make any mistake. I want to see her, and see her alone. I don't want you there."

When poor, mystified Bill Stoughton broached the subject to Natica her behavior was doubly mysterious. No, she didn't want to know anything about him. Then a moment later:

"Did you say he is a bachelor?" (Innocently) "I thought he was a widower."

Stoughton, indignantly, "I thought you knew nothing about him?"

"I don't, but he wore mourning."

"That was for his mother."

In the dim little parlor of the small apartment where she and her mother lived they met for the first time alone save for the dead and gone Alstons that looked down upon them from the walls. Surely never was such a first meeting before.

When the maid ushered him in, Natica, looking rather more like a lily than usual in her long, soft black gown, rose with every intention of greeting him in the most formal manner. Then a most unlooked for thing occurred.

For a moment they looked into each other's eyes. Then he stretched out his hands toward her, and she placed hers in them. A moment later she was swept up into his arms as if she had been a child as he murmured softly, "My dear, dear love!"

"What shall we tell mamma?" wailed Natica in despair a half hour later. "How can we ever explain ourselves?"

"We can't," replied Renwick comfortably. "We might just as well resign ourselves to being thought mad. It all comes from the ridiculous superstition that in order to know people you must talk to them."

And then—well, then they forgot the world and its opinions to talk of far lovelier things.

The Sunny Side of a Tree.

In Charleston, S. C., the writer came across a man transplanting palmetto trees in a public square. He noticed that each tree had a small white string tied to one leaf frond. Not seeing how such a thing could identify any particular tree, as all the strings were exactly similar, he asked what they were for. He was informed that before the tree was dug up a string was tied to the part facing the morning sun, so that when the tree was replanted it could be placed with the same face to the east, that a palmetto tree would die if transplanted in any other manner.

Is it possible that in all tree transplanting this rule is followed? It certainly is not necessary in plants of one or two seasons' existence. The reason apparently is not hard to understand. If a plant gets used to having one side warmed first every morning for several years, its sap there consequently expanding and becoming quickened, it is extremely probable that certain automatic actions are set up that require the same routine for good working. However, no explanation of the phenomenon can be recalled.—Chicago Record-Herald.

MODERN PANDORA

A Blunder That Brought Happy Results in Its Train.

By LUELLEN TETERS.

Janet Allston quickly seized her suit case and started out as the train thundered into the station at the little resort, eager to make her escape before Carrington, who sat in the back of the car, should espy her. In his party she recognized a supercilious beauty whose name had lately been significantly linked with his, and several comfortable looking dowagers who had come down, as she, to either stay with friends or at the big hotel over the regular Saturday night hop.

She felt ashamed of her innumerable bundles, each breathing its own secret of chocolates, early hothouse peaches for dear Aunt Caroline, and some magazines.

Cousin Tom's happy, ruddy face was not visible among the crowd of people on the platform. She glanced around in desperation, anxious to secure the services of a hackman to carry her at once to her destination, but beyond a few private vehicles there was nothing available.

Over her shoulder sounded Carrington's deep voice and Lillian Royer's silvery, airy laughter. She started nervously, dropping the telltale parcel of peaches, which scattered compromisingly in all directions through the throng.

"Let me help you?" Carrington jumped with alacrity to her aid, restoring the downy, pink cheeked fruit to her arms.

An icy "Thank you" rewarded him. Womanlike, angry at the innocent offender, she felt like venting her displeasure on him.

"I suppose your cousin meets you?" he inquired, pausing for a second as the ladies accompanying him moved on.

"Oh, yes," she replied lightly, hoping that he would not detect the delinquent's absence.

She squared her back on the group as the Carrington trap, in the hands of a trim groom, rolled noiselessly up, and the ladies were helped in. There was a whir of rushing wheels, and a cloud of dust indicated its flight down the country road. Tears of mortification and anger welled up in her eyes. Were it not so far she would walk the distance, bundles, suit case and all. A black speck was coming rapidly toward her far up the highway. It finally revealed red and black wheels. A sensation of mingled annoyance, pride and timidity swept over her as she saw that, after all, it was not her cousin, but Carrington, who had evidently lost no time in returning from his stables.

"I suppose your relatives didn't expect you until the 5:30," he said pleasantly as he drove up. "I was afraid you would attempt to walk the distance. Won't you let me drive you over?"

"Thank you, I will wait for Tom," she said, blushing at the falsity of her position.

"I came back purposely to get you," he went on, ignoring her discouraging glance. "It's hard on the peaches. They'll be overripe if you keep them in this hot sun much longer. Come, please."

She hesitated visibly. "For the sake of the peaches then," she assented, reaching him her parcels.

"I will not question the conditions," he replied.

"It would be of no use," she answered in his vein, "for I never argue."

They drove smoothly over the white, threadlike road under the canopy of trees, talking indifferently on superficial subjects, the man not insensible to the charm of her laughing eyes and nut brown face, the girl responsive to every flash of his blue eyes and inwardly delighting in his slightest mannerism. Between them lay the unconfessed joy of a past summer time when he had been her constant attendant at this same place, until golden haired Lillian Royer arrived one day as a guest of his mother. Involuntarily she sighed, and the man, finding its echo in his own heart, repeated it.

"You will be at the hop tonight?" he asked as he deposited her at her destination.

"My frock is here." She pointed to her suit case.

"You cousin said Egerton was coming down too." He watched her face narrowly as he spoke.

"A later train," she said evenly. "I decided to come on the 3 o'clock special."

He could make nothing of her explanation, however, as he thought her words over after leaving her. Surely, if report were true that the two were in love and to be married, it looked odd that they did not plan to arrive on the same train. His mind revolved on Janet's speech in spite of his attempts to dismiss it.

Janet promptly thought no more about him, unable long ago to find an excuse for his changed behavior. Opening her suit case, she began to draw out her small wardrobe. The articles seemed peculiarly unfamiliar. She shut it hastily, intently scanning the modest initials, "J. A." on the side. It surely was hers, but how could it be when before her was a vision of fluffy, lace trimmed pink crepe de chine, with a low cut bodice bordered with dainty wild roses; pink silk stockings, a pink fan, a rose spray for the hair and down in one corner a pair of high heeled pink slippers? What hallucination of the brain was this, or was it the triumph of an aggregation of the day's annoyances?

She laughed and cried hysterically. They belonged to somebody else, but she either had to wear them or remain at home. The ample dimensions of Aunt Caroline's dresses forbade any further consideration of them.

Like her prototype, Pandora, when she opened the case she let the witches out. The woman who hesitates meets the proverbial fate. By the aid of pins the waist was adjusted trimly to her more slender figure, the toes of the frivolous slippers were stuffed out with tissue paper, and the balance of the toilet was made to her complete satisfaction.

The hop progressed as all similar affairs do where there is a sprinkling of black coats and pretty girls. Janet, promenading the room on Egerton's arm, recognized a familiar white frock coming toward her. With sickening dread of an impending scene she saw that its wearer was Lillian Royer, and Carrington walked beside her.

"I am afraid there has been some mistake in our suit cases," Miss Royer cried sharply. "I don't see how it could possibly have happened. You must have taken mine—by mistake."

Janet drew herself up ominously, indignant at the insinuation.

"The initials were the same as mine," she explained, with very red cheeks. "To all outward appearance it looked like my suit case. Since I came down here for the dance I had no alternative but to wear this dress or stay at home. It was no fault of mine that the mistake was made, I assure you."

Miss Royer glanced contemptuously at the white dress she wore. "I was forced to wear yours," she said, "not having any other with me. I took my sister's suit case, Mrs. Adams—Julia's. She used mine, for it held more. I am sure you will not object to coming with me now to the dressing room and exchanging."

"Certainly not," Janet said proudly.

There was a frown settling on Carrington's brow. He was conscious of a strong desire to take Janet in his arms and anathematize Miss Royer in forcible terms. But the sting of a broken half promise and forgotten vows held him aloof.

"What a little hyprocrite she is!" Miss Royer exclaimed to him as she took her across the floor. "She knew all along it was mine." Carrington made no comment.

Half an hour later, after a solitary smoke in a retired corner of the piazza, he came upon a little white figure crying all alone.

"Janet," he whispered anxiously, bending tenderly over her, "don't cry. Where is that confounded Egerton? He shouldn't leave you here alone."

She raised her head proudly, her tear clouded eyes flashing. "Why always that man?" she cried childishly. "I hate him. I only want to be alone. Please go away."

"You're not engaged to him? You don't like him?" He could hardly accredit what his ears heard. "They told me the day was set and"—

Janet put a soft little hand over his mouth.

"You did not seem to care sufficiently to find out—the truth," she said.

"I was afraid of hearing the deathblow to my own hopes," he answered her. "Janet"—he grasped her hands boldly in his—"tell me now—I want my fate settled at once—can't we go back to that last sweet summer time and start all over again, you and I? Can't we, dear? And we'll let the world know it tonight, so that they will leave us alone hereafter. Will you, Janet?"

The throb of the orchestra drowned the silence. Carrington put his arms around her, and she did not protest against it.

The Rose.

From Chaucer to Alfred Austin the English poets have labored untiringly and on small wages to advertise the beauty of the rose and its appeal to the tender sentiments. No other flower has ever been considered as "soft" as the rose, or as "welcome," or even as "fragrant." Shakespeare, propounding the question of what's in a name, takes for his example:

> That which we call a rose
> By any other name would smell as sweet.

Even this immortal, it would seem, could think of nothing sweeter. Milton in "Paradise Lost" speaks of—

> A smile that glowed
> Celestial rosy red, love's proper hue.

In the opinion of Burns, the rose was "unrivaled." And when he seeks the highest compliment that he can pay to one of those several bonnie lassies whom he loved with all his heart he sings:

> Oh, my luve's like a red, red rose
> That's newly sprung in June!

The word "rosy" has come to be synonymous for bright and beautiful. Even "rose colored" signifies far more than the mere hue. It means "very fine or pleasing, alluring" as well.—Collier's.

Ancient Greek Calendars.

Among the Greeks and Romans almanacs and calendars were not written for the general public, but were preserved as part of the esoteric learning of the priests, whom the people had to consult not only for the dates of the festivals, but for the proper times when various legal proceedings might be instituted. About 300 B. C., however, one Encius Flavius, secretary to Appius Claudius, stole these secrets by repeated applications to the priests and collated the information so gained. It was really publishing an almanac when, as Livy relates, Flavius exhibited the fasti on white tables around the Forum. From this time similar tablets containing the calendar, the festivals, astronomical phenomena and sometimes allusions to historical events became quite common. They have been dug up in Pompeii and elsewhere.

Plan To Protest The Ottawa Appointment

French-Canadians Of Ontario Will Hold Conference on October 4--Ottawa Archbishopric Filled Before Pope Received Documents Urging Choice

OTTAWA, Sept. 29.—A conference of French-Canadians of Ontario has been called to meet in Ottawa on October 4, to consider the appointment of Archbishop Gauthier, of Kingston, to the Ottawa Archiepiscopal See. It is alleged that certain documents forwarded to Rome urging the appointment of a French Archbishop for Ottawa have not yet reached their destination. It is planned to send a message from the conference to the Vatican, urging that some action be taken by the authorities upon the matter.

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—The news of the French-Canadian convention at Ottawa came as a general surprise to Montrealers, even to those who are most in the confidence of the French clergy. Mr. Bourassa had received no word of the matter until the despatch came to his paper, Le Devoir, from Ottawa, and the editors were inclined to discredit it pending official confirmation.

If the convention has been called, it is the issue of a campaign which has been going on for several months, and which reached its climax in the utterances of Le Temps, the Ottawa French paper, after the announcement of Archbishop Gauthiers' preferment. Ottawa has always been regarded as a French bishopric, and Mgr. Gauthier, in spite of his name, is looked upon at Ottawa as belonging to the English Catholic element. Le Temps a day or two ago counselled its readers to exhibit all "external" signs of respect for the new prelate.

Envoys from the principal French newspapers have been busy in the French districts of the western part of Ontario, and it is presumed that one object of the convention is to unite the French of all parts of the province in a single energetic protest. To this purpose the campaign which has lately been waged against the new Bishop of London, Mgr. Fallon, on grounds of alleged hostility to the French tongue, would lend itself admirably.

Girl Leaps to Death To Save Sweetheart

Springs From Roof of Five Story Building To Avoid Testifying Against Frainie, Said To Have Attacked Her Father

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Rather than testify in court against her sweetheart, charged with attempting to kill her father, Frances Paterno, eighteen years old, a handsome Italian girl, today leaped to her death from the roof of the five-story tenement at No. 420 West Thirty-Ninth street. She was crushed on the sidewalk in front of her father's shop. Death was instantaneous.

The young woman for some time past had been receiving the attention of a young Italian, Pangi Donato, who is employed by the Knickerbocker Bottling Company and lives at No. 528 Tenth avenue. The young people were very devoted to each other, but the girl's parents did not look with favor upon the match.

However, the girl's parents did not make known their objections seriously until Sunday night, when after the young couple had been together for several hours Lougi Paterno, the girl's father, who keeps a butcher shop on the ground floor of the Thirty-Ninth street house, came into the parlor in the rear of the store and told the young man that his attentions must cease.

The young man and his sweetheart pleaded with the father, who is reputed to be wealthy, that they be allowed to continue their courtship, but the father was determined. The three argued for some time and the conference resulted in the young man losing his head and saying something which enraged the elder man. A fight followed.

The girl tried to calm her father and sweetheart, when suddenly, according to the father, Donato pulled a revolver and fired five shots at Paterno. None of the shots took effect, and when his gun was empty the young man ran out of the house.

Policeman John Barry heard the shots and ran into the building in time to see Donato going up the stairs, with the revolver in his hand. The policeman gave chase and followed Donato to the roof and down the scuttle of a house in the same row. Here the policeman caught Donato and the young man submitted to arrest. He was taken to the West Thirty-Seventh street station, where Paterno charged him with attempted felonous assault.

Parliament Not To Meet in November.

It May Be Months Before It Does--Mr. Fielding's Illness May Be Made The Excuse But The Real Reason Is That The Government Dreads The Next Session.

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—It is stated, on what appears to be excellent authority, that Parliament will not meet in November, as was intended, and it may be months before it does meet. Mr. Fielding's illness may be made the excuse, but the real reason is that the Government dreads next session.

Disturbing questions, which will involve statesmanship of the highest order, are to be dealt with. There is the tariff, also the naval question, the elevators, and the multitude of promises made by the Premier on his western tour. No work has been done by the Cabinet yet, in the way of preparation for next session.

Hon. W. S. Fielding arrived in the city yesterday. The Minister of Finance seemed to be in a cheerful mood, but it was very evident that the paralysis of the left side of the face, which attacked him a few days ago, has taken a good deal out of him. His step lacked the brisk buoyancy that has always been one of his characteristics. His left eye was protected by a guard, which covered also a portion of his cheek, but his face was drawn, and he looked years older than when he left here for England last

It is stated that Mr. Fielding's condition is not serious, "The doctors' reports are very reassuring," is the statement made to-day. It is added that Mr. Fielding will have to take a complete rest.

Just how successful the Minister of Finance will be in overcoming the restless energy of his nature, may be forcasted by his failure to obey doctors' instructions already. In spite of his illness, he paid a visit to his office in the eastern block yesterday afternoon, and insisted upon looking into some matters of importance which have been awaiting his return. "He simply can't rest," was the remark of an official of the Department.

A despatch from Washington states that the U. S. Department of State, under the President's direction, has made preparations to act as soon as word is received from Ottawa indicating the intention of the Dominion Government concerning the proposed reciprocity negotiations.

It is understood in Ottawa that any move towards negotiations may be delayed until the Minister of Finance has had that rest which has been rendered necessary by his illness.

Servant Problem 3,000 Years Old.

It is rather comforting for distraught housewives who have difficulties with their domestics to know the servant problem is nothing modern and not, as has been surmised, an effect of a perpetual war between capital and labor. Mistress and maid, man and master, have always been in antagonism to each other. Reverse the situation and it would be the same, as it has been ever since the world began. A Philadelphia authority rejoices because at Fordham university it has come to light that nearly 3,000 years B. C. the Egyptians were having as poor a time with servants as some people in the United States are experiencing this very day. It was not all rapture and roses in the best families of Egypt owing to this branch of domestic life not bearing proper fruit. From some ancient papyri which have recently been unearthed in a tomb near Memphis maxims have been deciphered that are eye openers. The Egyptians must have had a terrible time in their households when such sentiments as these survive the centuries: "In sooth thou shalt find it hard to satisfy thy servants despite thy earnest desires, for if thou be harsh with them they shall say: 'He is a cruel master. Lo, we shall go!'" Solomon knew what he was talking about when he said there is nothing new under the sun, for it made no difference to Pharaoh's servant, "even though thou give princely gifts of gold (tips, of course) and precious stones to thy higher servants, content is not in them, for they shall say: 'Lo, the master is suddenly grown gracious! We shall go.'" If any more of these manuscripts dealing with this subject are found it is hoped they may be deciphered for the consolation of the world. Misery always loves company, and even these musty maxims of 3,000 years ago are as fresh as daisies.

Newspaper Artist Missing.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—Ralph Edward an artist, employed on the staff of The Morning Star, has been missing since Tuesday afternoon, and there is every reason to believe that he has met his death on Lake St. Louis. On Tuesday afternoon, Richard South, a boy employed by Henry Dobell at his summer home in Dixie, saw a man rowing up the lake in the direction of Dorval Island. An hour later he picked up the boat near the Dixie shore, where it had drifted. The former occupant of the rowboat had disappeared, and subsequent search established the fact that he was not on the island.

Hon. D. C. Fraser Buried.

New Glasgow, Sept. 30.—The funeral of the late Lieutenant-Governor, D. C. Fraser, took place yesterday afternoon with the simple ceremony of the Presbyterian Church. At the late Lieutenant-Governor's request, there was no official funeral, no display, but there was an outpouring of people from the surrounding towns. Gen. Drury, head of the Canadian forces in the maritime provinces, represented the Government and Governor-General, and Col. Page represented the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec. Acting Premier McLean and the members of the Government were present.

Bourassa Suspicious.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—The little Canadian named Henri Bourassa sees imperialism in everything. Now Le Devoir wants to know what the Quebec Government is going to do about the Strathcona Fund, as it will be remembered that some time ago the Canadian High Commissioner gave a quarter of a million for the instruction of the Canadian youth in military and physical drill.

Le Devour reminds its readers that Lord Strathcona is an ardent imperialist, and says that this fund should be watched.

Change Not Wanted.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—Speaking for the Province of Quebec, La Presse says that Quebec does not want any part in the proposed modification of the B.N.A. Act, with a view to give to the smaller provinces a larger representation in the House of Commons. The French daily concludes thus: "When we sign a just and equitable arrangement, we are ready to support the consequences without complaint.

Kingston, Sept. 30.—There is talk among Gananoque temperance people of instituting a campaign for local option, the vote to be submitted to the electors at the municipal election in January.

Fishing a Failure.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 30.—Owing to the almost complete failure of the shore fishing, it is feared that the privations of the Labrador fishermen will be particularly severe during the coming winter. The season's catch is believed to be the smallest in the annals of the organized fisheries. It was estimated yesterday that the total fish export from Labrador will not reach 50,000 quintals, while last year, which was itself an exceptionally poor one for fishermen, the exports amounted to 160,000 quintals.

Must Improve Service.

Chatham, Sept. 30.—Mr. Dixon of the Railway Commission was in the city yesterday in consultation with city and county officials in reference to the train service on the Pere Marquette, as a result of which that company will be compelled to arrange their schedule to provide better accommodation, and the C.P.R. also may be asked to install gates at all of their city crossings, with watchmen to guard over them.

Preferred Altar to Jury Box.

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—A novel case came up before Judge Champagne in the Hull superior court yesterday, when a witness wrote that he could not attend because he was being married. In his letter he says he laid the case before his fiancee, but she only smiled and said: "I need you more than the judge does." The excuse of the witness was accepted, and he will not be made liable for contempt of court.

Montreal to Welcome T. P.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—Preparations have been going on here for some time to fitly welcome T. P. O'Connor, who will speak at the Monument National on Thursday evening, Oct. 6. Mayor Guerin will preside, if his worship gets back in time from New York, where he will attend the consecration of St. Patrick's Cathedral, and the Irish envoy will be introduced by C. J. Doherty, M.P. for St. Anns.

Acquitted on Shooting Charge.

Toronto, Sept. 30.—Victor Castilano, an Italian, was acquitted by the sessions jury of shooting with intent at Carle Ross in a row in a house on Chandos avenue, in August. There had been a general fight following upon a much mixed love affair, in which Castilano and another were rival suitors, and Ross an intending peacemaker.

The Manifestations Of Eye-Strain

Continued.

The alcoholic habit begins with the apparently harmless dose of whisky or brandy, taken to relieve the depression by stimulation. The appetite grows by what is feeds upon, the necessity for being stimulated occurs more and more frequently, and finally the alcoholic habit is established.

If the necessity for being so stimulated be removed—in other words, if the vital energy is stored up instead of being wasted— the nips of alcohol become unnecessary, and the pernicious habit is killed.

And as with stimulants, so with sedatives, such as morphia, opium, and the like, which are taken to soothe the irritability so often present in those suffering from functional nervous disorders.

C. A. and to start from the time the building is under construction.

Two Desislet Women Given Their Freedom

Girl Blames Mrs. Meath For All Her Trouble Judge Deroche Allows Both Mother and Daughter To Go on Suspended Sentence

His Honor Judge Deroche this morning delivered judgment in the case of Mrs. Mary Desislet and her daughter Vina Desislet of Trenton who were found guilty of the charge of unlawfully disposing of the body of an infant born to the daughter. His Honor in giving judgment said their actions in this case were not by any means of a guiltless nature. What they did was decidedly wrong but he would give them the benefit of he doubt. In answer to an enquiry from His Honor the girl stated that she had become what she was at the suggestion of a Mrs. Meath, who resides at Trenton, ter (the girl's) trouble originated at that house. Mrs. Meath's son was the father of the child. His Honor said he believed the girl's story and that Mrs. Meath was more to blame than the girl was. At Mrs. Meath's suggestion Vina went astray. All the trouble evidently originated through Mrs. Meath. Under the circumstances the Judge said he would allow both women to go under a suspended sentence to be called upon any time within a year for sentence If they got into no further trouble they would never be called upon. The woman thanked the Judge for dealing as he had done in their case. They were allowed their liberty.

Change at Griffins.

Owing to the volume of business consummated at the Opera House on Saturday nights, Manager Hurley has decided to inaugurate a new procedure.

In view of the fact that he is giving a Saturday matinee, at which time all seats are five cents, he advises children under fifteen years to take advantage of this offer, as hereafter on Saturday nights all children unaccompanied by their parents will be seated in the gallery.

This change is to afford all purchasers of adult tickets an opportunity of securing the best seats.

Spoken of in Highest Terms.

Manager Hurley has received glowing reports of the musical comedy, "A Winning Miss," which he has booked for the Opera House on Monday, Oct. 10.

From the Commercial Tribune of Cincinnati, Ohio, where the show ran one week, comes the following complimentary notice:

"A Winning Miss" had its first local presentation at the Walnut yesterday. It is a musical comedy of the prevailing pattern, but well trimmed with all the needful adornments of good humor and tuneful songs. The lyrics, in fact, hit the fancy with unerring accuracy, and Boyle Woolfolk and Harold Attridge are to be applauded as their authors.

Max Bloom is a comedian of something more than promise. He has passed safely beyond the halfway station of popularity; he is well up with the leaders in the musical comedy race, and yesterday at the Walnut was a "winning mister" in "A Winning Miss."

The little Cincinnati girl, Loaraine Lester, was not, however, ungraciously shouldered aside because of admiration for Mr. Bloom. She came gracefully and modestly upon the scene early in the first act. She was received generously, and after her first song, "Did You Ever See So Many Funny Looking Hats?" instantly became a top-notcher in the esteem of the audience. Every woman in the house seemed to have some reason for the examination of her hat, and that of her neighbor, upon the conclusion of the pleasantly sarcastic ditty Miss Lester carries the title role, A Winning Miss, with such surety that there can be no discussion as to its fitness.

There is a wealthy widow among the dramatis personae, a Mrs. Churchill-Downs, one of those impossible but, nevertheless, delightful fictions of the always unreal musical comedy stage, and it is most delightfully played by Miss Grace Manlove. The gorgeous gowns of Miss Manlove give a believable kind of charm to the character, aside from its clever acting. As a vocalist, this widow of the millions, as embodied by Miss Manlove, and exemplified in her voice, is quite an ornament to the cast. She was never poor in honors, either, measuring her popularity by the applause.

Now "Bill" Clymer is mentioned as a possible successor to Stallings as manager of the New York Highlanders. Quite a jump for "Bill." Not sa many years ago Clymer was manager of the Ottawa team transferred from Rochester, and he was burdened down with troubles. The players were in arrears of salary and Clymer had to resort to every subterfuge to stave them off. Life was a misery to him; he had to peek around corners, step into doorways, and in fact keep his eyes open all the time to evade his "hired men" when off the field. Finally President Power stepped in and relieved him of his load of worry. Since then he has had a successful career, thrice winning an American Association pennant for Columbus. and last season turning out a winner at Wilkesbarre Clymer is a hustler and a good judge of a ball-player, but it is doubtful whether his methods would carry him along in the big league.

President John T. Brush, of the New York National League Baseball Club, who has been in Chicago several months, left for his home in New York yesterday.

Mr. Brush said that he will make arrangements for a post-season series of games between his team and the New York Americans as soon as he finds out that the New York public wants such a series.

Watch Connie Mack in the world's series.

They are discussing Eddie Collins, Coombs, Bender, Plank, Baker, Barry and others with the names of Evers Tinker, Brown, Overall, Kling, Archer Chance et al., on the other side comparing their respective ability and so forth, but the greatest of them has been omitted in most instances.

Connie Mack will be opposed to Frank Chance. The first named known in some quarters as "The Old Fox," and the other as "The Peerless Leaded." The battle between these two will be more important than the struggle on the field, and it will be the dominating fight in the coming series for the world's championship.

The career of Mack has been a career of surprises. He has done things that others would sidestep as impracticable; he has filled his line-ups with average players and developed them into champions; he has done these things and others.

Philadelphia has won the pennant with a team that probably would finish second or third with any other leader, excepting three in the major leagues, at its head. He achieved much success by doing the unexpected, and in this coming series depend on Mack to again do what will not be expected of him.

The leader of the Athletics has several plans already prepared. The character of these plans may be estimated by considering one of them.

Amos Strunk, utility outfielder of the Athletics, will be started on the regular line-up in the world series.

This statement comes from a man close to Mack, a man whose word has never been doubted. The information was revealed to-day.

Now, the name of Strunk has not even been mentioned by those who are doping out the chances the Athletics have against the Cubs. He has played 11 games this year, and no one has given him a serious thought—no one but Mack.

"Why will you use Strunk with all these experienced outfielders around?" Connie was asked.

"Because I have confidence in him."

That may be one reason, and there may be others; there probably are Here may be one of them:

Strunk's average for 11 games:

A.B.	R.	H.	T.B.	Av.
32	7	14	16	.438

Now, a man with that sort of a record ought to have some ability, and Connie firmly believes that Strunk has He has said so on several occasions and he also admits that he has been saving him for the big series.

If Strunk should go in and tear things up, he would not be setting a precedent. Remember George Rohe in 1906? He had as much to do with winning a world's championship for the White Sox as any man, and Rohe was only a utility outfielder. But he came through with all sorts of dazzling fielding stunts that won a reputation for him which has lasted, although he passed from the league the next season.

Strunk was born in Philadelphia, in 1889. He is a six-footer and weighs in the neighborhood of 165 pounds. Last spring, immediately after school was out, Strunk joined the Athletics Connie farmed him to Minneapolis for a higher baseball experience, but pulled him back this spring and has kept him on the bench with the exception of the 11 games he played.

RUNNING

R. E. Walker, of the Polytechnic H. and Olympic 100 meters champion and A. A. A. 100 yards ex-champion, has decided to join the ranks of the professional runners, and has come out with a challenge to run Jack Donaldson, the Australian sprinter, 100 yards on level terms for the championship of the world and $500 a side, the race to take place in South Africa in December.

THE RING.

HEGEWISCH, Ill., Sept. 28. — If Battling Nelson survives the motor car trip he is planning, he will be back in the ring not later than February or March, providing, again, that one Ad. Wolgast decides to fight, as becomes a real champion, and quit the stalling which has characterized his every action since he won the title from Nelson on Washington's birthday.

Nelson, in an interview given out here to-day, seems determined to force Wolgast into a return match. The Dane, as usual, is going about the affair in a business-like manner, and believes that a strong campaign of publicity will soon create a demand on the part of the public which Wolgast cannot afford to ignore.

"Since winning the title from me Wolgast has fought one battle," says Nelson. "That was an easy ten-round no-decision affair with Jack Redmond a good fighter, but not in the championship running. He has consistently ignored the demands made upon him by myself and other high-grade lightweights, and has become known as the champion staller, rather than the champion lightweight. He is a disgrace to the ring. He has now mapped out four imaginary battles to quiet the public, but he has again ignored the man who is most entitled to a battle

"Any champion who loses the title after the battle I gave Wolgast is entitled to a return match. I gave return matches to Corbett, Britt, Gans, Herrera, and in fact any man who thought he had a chance after I defeated him. My title was clear cut and undisputed. I passed up nobody, while Wolgast, on the other hand has fought nobody. In forcing him into a return match, I am not asking anything unreasonable, or anything that I have denied others. We can fight and fight to a finish at Reno, and get a barrel of money for it, too.

"I am now starting on a motor-car trip with Abdul the Turk, my trainer, and Mr. Towney, of Kansas City, and will be gone three months. I weigh 150 pounds, and have something on which to train, a statement I could not make when I fought Wolgast before. The public has always accorded me the distinction of being absolutely on the level and I am sure the press and public will stand by me in my demands for a return match for my title."

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 29. — Pal Moore, of this city, was beaten by Owen Moran of England, in a six round bout, before the National Athletic Club last night, notwithstanding that the local lad almost put the Englishman out in the third round with a vicious smash which landed low and which sent Moran to his knees in agony.

After a moment's rest the Englishman signified his willingness to resume the battle, but the men had scarcely set themselves for another punch when Moore again hit Moran below the belt. This time Moran walked to his corner, and the referee, after warning Moore that if he again struck low he would be disqualified, announced that Moran would agree to go on again.

Moran had the advantage in every round except the first and second, which were even. He did nearly all the leading and forced the fight. His blows had more steam than Moore's. The latter did not seem to be at his best and frequently missed with both left and right swings.

No less an expert on things pugilistic than Madden, sometimes known as "Billy," and at other times as the "Adonis of Fourteenth street," New York, has expressed the deliberate and carefully weighed opinion that at his present rate of speed Johnson will not be champion of the ring for more than two years. He is living too luxuriantly to retain the strength and stamina necessary for the practice of the strenuous art. Some day he will meet his equal in boxing, and his superior in fitness, and then Johnson will forget to "to take home the bacon to mamma." Well, two years are quite a time, and even should Johnson then part company with fame and fortune, the old world would do its best to stand the shock; in fact, he might quit at any time now without seriously disturbing anything that most people consider worth while.

In The Wide World Of Woman.

FUR-LINED COZINESS.

A warm red coat made with a big collar of oppossum and a double row of large buttons, the coat being made in loose fitting style with the sleeves stitched at the wrist, supplies a very charming and becoming garment while rought tweeds will be very much to the fore, and very dull shades of purple, red and blue are the favorite colors. As regards the latter, one of the coming tones represents a cross between cornflower and navy, kings blue in short, and a suit of this blend, trimmed with black braid, would be very hard to excel, the fastening of the short coat consisting of thick ropes and loops of braid connecting a couple of braid buttons placed in a bias line.

WITH SAILOR COLLARS.

Large sailor collars are applied to many of the new coats, and these will be much in requisition for young girls' costumes, while the coat of the eighties, which was trimmed with a narrow band of fur down the front as well as all round the base, has returned to favor, and is very simple and pretty for a girl of 14 or 15, where a short-skirted coat and skirt are concerned.

FABRIC HATS

Fabric hats for the early autumn are the latest whim of fashion, which dictates that millinery composed of some kind of material shall hold pre-eminent sway, and in the term fabric are included a large number of plain and figured stuffs.

Perhaps the fabric hat that is to rank as chief favorite is velvet, and velvet, moreover, in its darkest shade, but as nothing proves more becoming to woman's complexion than black velvet millinery, this should be received as good news by the feminine world

The predominance of black velvet this autumn for millinery is, of course merely the outcome of the craze for this fabric which was in evidence during the summer, when even on the warmest days women were content to carry black velvet parasols and wear broderie Anglaise frocks combined with black velvet.

THE COLORS.

They're lovely.

And black remains.

White is also continued.

But beautiful hues are plentiful.

Navy is good for smart tailor-mades

A new shade is the dull cinnamon brown.

Ibis pink is one of the new and fascinating colors.

Pruelle is one of the rich dark colors, being dark, very soft purple shade

BUY ZMAS GIFTS NOW.

This is a good month to buy Christmas presents, if a wise selection is made. Silk stockings are a favorite gift to girls and can be had for less now than in December. If, however you find lovely ones in lace effects for almost nothing, remember that lace stockings are almost unrecognized now by fashionable women, and the favorite is a sheer, thin silk, with clocks or solid embroidery in self tones.

You may be tempted again to get that feather boa which is so much cheaper than any you ever saw. Perhaps you think it will be just the gift for the friend to whom you are under such obligations. A strict answer to the "Why?" would reveal that feather boas are conspicuous by their absence just now; it is the purchase for some girl who does not keep to the top notch of style, but an embarrassment to the friend who does

In purchasing bargains for gifts go in less for personal things than for dainty pieces of china, glass, silver, or antiques that are much reduced. It is an excellent time to buy wedding presents, if there is an appalling array of brides for the autumn.

Bits of jewellery, novel hat pins belt buckles, that are in good style now will be equally good at Christmas. The same cannot be said of neckwear and blouses. A pretty corset cover or combination and fine nightdress will invariably make an acceptable gift.

KEEPING A MATTRESS CLEAN.

An immaculate mattress is more than the sign of a good housewife. It is essential to good health. Even a clean sheet will not keep a sensitive person from shrinking if the mattress looks queer.

There need be little excuse for any dust if care be taken. Every mattress should have a twilled muslin cover that buttons on, so that it can be frequently washed.

If a mattress for a big double bed it should be in two parts for easier turning. The extra careful housewife pulls the mattress up over the footboard each morning, so that it airs on all sides. It should at least be turned once a day, not always in the same direction. This prevents the ugly ridge when two are sleeping in the bed.

Rubber sheeting should be used under the linen in cases of sickness. In an emergency folded newspapers are a good substitute.

The easiest way to clean a mattress is by the vacuum cleaner. If it must be done at home, put it in a slightly dampened sheet and beat with a wicker carpet beater until all the dirt seems to be out; then take a new sheet, turn the mattress and repeat.

THE SIZE OF THE CORSET.

You must be quite as particular about the size of your corsets as about their length. They should be three inches smaller than your waist measure, is the opinion of an expert in October Delineator. If your waist is twenty four inches you should get a twenty-one inch corset. Of course you can wear them smaller by using longer lacings, but they won't fit you and you will suffer for it.

The underarm seams will be drawn out of line and the corset drawn out of its natural position. You will not have the proper lines and the effect of the corset will be ruined. A good many women buy small corsets, not because of any personal vanity on the subject, but because they really think corsets should separate three or four inches at the back. In reality they should only separate an inch or an inch and a half at the waistline and two inches and a half above and below it. Corsets should never be laced tighter above, and below the waistline than at it, or the bones will turn on edge and dig into the figure.

HUNTING THE WALRUS.

The Eskimo Takes Advantage of the Animal's Curiosity.

In his frail skinboat it is a difficult and dangerous task for the Eskimo to go out to sea forty to sixty miles and intercept the walrus as he passes on his migration into the Arctic.

One carcass will fill his boat, for it weighs from 1,000 to 3,000 pounds. He hunts the walrus when they are lying asleep on the ice floes in herds from ten to several hundred. Death must be instantaneous, else with a few rolls or the peculiar lumbering, humping movement (seen of the seal when ashore), he makes the few feet to the water and then is lost, as he has not sufficient blubber and air to float. He has much natural curiosity, and if not scared by shots will come up close to your boat or the ice floe on which you are sitting, spurting, snorting and rolling his eyes; with his gleaming tusks and bristled snout he has an uncanny, goblin, monster-like appearance. A herd of fifty or sixty of them will come up en masse, raise high out of the water to stare at you, then snort, spurt and disappear again, only to come up on the same spot and repeat the maneuver indefinitely. Taking advantage of this the Eskimos hide behind ice hummocks and throw a harpoon into one, then snub the tough rawhide line around an ice cake. He must perforce come up to blow, and he is then killed with the rifle. The thick skin and the mass of blubber and meat beneath render him almost invulnerable.—Pacific Monthly.

RAVAGES OF THE RAT.

Dreadful Record of Disease That Marks His Loathsome Trail.

For one of the most terrible of all diseases the rat is now certainly known to be responsible—the bubonic plague, or "black death." No scourge of mankind is more dreadful than this, states a writer in McClure's. It was slaying the Egyptians at the beginning of recorded history. A single epidemic cost Athens a third of her citizens. At Lyons in 1572 the pestilence killed 50,000 persons. Venice in 1576 lost 70,000. During the great plague of London in 1665 68,596 died out of a population of 460,000, and the dead lay in the streets, because the living were too few to bury them.

Even as late as 1771 an epidemic of the bubonic plague cost Moscow nearly a fourth of its 250,000 souls. But after the last Parthian arrow the disease retired to India and the region westward toward the Mediterranean, which seems to have been its original home, and after 1850 Europe and Africa were free.

It broke out again in 1894 from a peculiarly virulent strain that had its habitat in certain districts of northern China. The army supply trains carried the rats and the rats carried the bacillus pestis from the Manchurian frontier to the sea. From there it made its way back by junks to Canton, where between March and August of 1894 it killed upward of 100,000 persons. Thence the Chinese strain of the plague bacillus passed by ship to Bombay and diffused itself through India. Five million persons died of the pestilence in India during the six years that ended with 1908, and it was only with 1909 that the annual mortality fell below 200,000.

Before it was discovered that quarantine must include rats as well as men this new Indo-Chinese strain had spread over the whole civilized world.

Took an Unfair Advantage.

Mrs. Dorkins — Yesterday I called Mrs. Grundage's attention to the fact that she had left the gate between our back yards open and that her chickens had come through and scratched up our flower beds, and she looked as if she would have liked to bite my head off. How foolish it is for people to get angry when you remind them that they have been careless about something they had no business to overlook!

Mr. Dorkins—I am glad to hear you say that, Maria. You won't mind if I mention that when I came home last night I found that you'd left both the back doors unlocked.

Mrs. Dorkins — Yes; you're always watching to see if you can't catch me in some little fault, and it makes you perfectly happy when you do!—New York Tribune.

Will be Used As The Chief Witness Against the Manager of the Farmer's Bank Who is Charged with Embezzlement.

Brockville, Oct. 1.—On the [illegible] inst., Robert E. Cughan, manager of the Farmers' Bank in Athens, and Melvin Forrest, teller in the same institution, were arrested and brought here to answer to a charge of theft.

The accusation against Cughan is "that within the past five months he did steal and convert to his own use a sum believed to be in the neighborhood of $900. The same charge rests against Forrest, with the amount at $500. Both cases came up yesterday for a preliminary hearing before Police Magistrate Deacon.

Forrest elected to be tried summarily and pleaded guilty. He was remanded for sentence, and will be used by the crown as a witness against Cughan, who pleaded not guilty.

Forrest, it is understood, will make restitution and throw himself upon the court for mercy.

Three Killed In Mad Race of Death Over Vanderbilt Cup Track

Famous Race Today Has Many Tragic Features--Besides The Drivers Who Met Death Nineteen Were Injured--Explosion in Los Angeles Building Results in the Death of Twenty.

(Intelligencer Special.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Three killed and thirteen more or less injured. This is the toll of casualties in the famous Vanderbilt Cup Race this morning. Harry Grant, in an Alco car, won, his time for the entire course being a little better than sixty-one miles an hour. At times he atained a speed of seventy-eight miles an hour. There were fifty-one starters.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 1.—Twenty were killed and twenty-two injured this morning in a fire following an explosion in the office of the Times newspaper. General Otis, the proprietor, was famous for fighting organized labor.

Managing Editor Andrews has given out this statement:—

"The Times building was destroyed by dynamite this morning by the enemies of industrial freedom.'

LARGE AUDIENCE HEARS "TAY PAY"

Head of Irish League Addresses a Mass Meeting in Toronto.

RAISES $2000.

Mr. O'Connor Also Addresses The Toronto Press Club — Is the Guest of Mr. D. D. Mann — To Remain in Toronto Over Sunday.

Toronto, Oct. 1.—T. P. O'Connor, M.P., founder of The Star, The Sun, The Weekly Sun, "M.A.P.," and "P.T.O.," editor-in-chief of The Era, president of the United Irish League for a quarter of a century, was the greatest Irishman in Canada yesterday, and will remain long enough to celebrate his 62nd birthday on Oct. 5 on Canadian soil.

"Tay Pay" was here four years ago, and as he approaches the grand climacteric, gives every evidence of having developed and mellowed into one of the ripest and sanest-minded men in British politics to-day. His address last night on "The New Ireland" was a model of moderation and eloquent exposition.

Mr. O'Connor also addressed the Toronto Press Club last night, and it is no breach of confidence to say that a more high-minded standard was never set up for any body of professional men. Mr. O'Connor carries his ideals into his own journalistic practice and into his politics. They may be briefly defined as fair and clean. Mr. O'Connor while in Toronto is the guest of D. D. Mann and will attend the Woodbine to-day and remain over Sunday in the city.

He is here for the purpose of assisting in the replenishment of the warchest of the Irish parliamentary party. Mr. O'Connor would prefer to call it the peace-chest, perhaps, but it would not be so generally recognized under that designation. It was under the banner of peace, however, that last night the replenishment went up in the neighborhood of $2,000. If all the other Canadian and United States burghs do as well the $100,000 asked for will not be long wanting.

An Irish concert preceded the address. President Roche of the local branch of the league introduced Hon. J. J. Foy, acting premier, as chairman of the meeting. Consequently there was no treason talked, and the sanguinary Sassenach was comfortably buried away and unmentioned even in the briefest obituary notice.

DEMOCRATS NAME THE CANDIDATES.

Ticket For New York State Offices Settled at Rochester Convention.

DIX FOR GOVERNOR.

Nomination Followed See-Sawing and Bickering of Two Days—Leaders of Party Appeared to be Afraid of Hearst.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Sept. 30.—The following ticket for state offices was nominated by the Democratic Convention shortly before midnight to-night:—Governor, John A. Dix, Albany; Lieut.-Governor, Thomas F. Conway, Clinton; Secretary of State, Edward Lazansky, Kings; Comptroller, William Sohmer, New York.

The nomination of Mr. Dix was the result of see-sawing and bickering that lasted two days. While it was made unanimous, it was not altogether harmonious. There was a decided sentiment in favor of William Sulzer for Governor and his name went before the convention in opposition to Mr. Dix. Although he was nominated and seconded by several counties, when the voting came his strength dwindled away and the result of the balloting was 434 to 16 in favor of Mr. Dix.

One reason for the indecision of the leaders regarding a candidate for Governor was a desire to name a man who would not be objectionable to Hearst. At times it seemed as if there was a positive fear of Hearst.

SUDDEN DEATH OF LADY EDGAR

Widow of Late Sir James David Edgar Was In London With Daughters.

PROMINENT IN SOCIETY.

Was President of the Canadian National Council of Women And Well Known For Her Literary Ability — Had Been in Good Health.

Toronto, Oct. 1.—The death took place suddenly yesterday in London, Eng., of Lady Edgar, widow of the late Sir James David Edgar, K.C.M.G., P.C., the death of whose brother, Col. Bramley Ridout, was chronicled only yesterday.

Lady Edgar, accompanied by two of her daughters, Miss Beatrice and Miss Marjorie, left Toronto last spring for a prolonged visit to England and the continent. After a visit to Rome she returned to London in June to be present at the marriage of her son, Keith Edgar, an officer of the Royal Engineers stationed in India. After this Lady Edgar spent the season touring abroad or with friends in England and Scotland. For some time during the summer they were the guests of Lord and Lady Aberdeen at the vice-regal lodge in Ireland. Up to the last Lady Edgar had been in the best of health.

Matilda Ridout, Lady Edgar, was a daughter of the late Thomas Gibbs Ridout, and a grand-daughter of Hon. John Ridout, who was surveyor-general of Canada from 1810 to 1829. She inherited literary tastes, writing several interesting and valuable books dealing with Canadian affairs. One of these, "The Years of Upper Canada, in War and Peace," was largely compiled from records and letters left by her father and grandfather, both of whom took an active part as officers during the troublous times of the war of 1812. Another work well-known to students of Canadian history is a contribution to the Makers of Canada series, the "Life of Gen. Brock."

Matilda Ridout married James David Edgar in 1869. She was actively interested in her husband's political career, accompanying him to British Columbia when he was despatched thither on an important political mission by the Mackenzie Government in 1874. In her former residence on Bloor street she was noted as a most charming hostess, and later, from 1896 to 1899, as wife of the Speaker of the House of Commons at Ottawa, she filled an important social position with grace and dignity.

As president of the Woman's National Council, Lady Edgar accompanied that great organization to the Pacific coast in the summer of 1907.

STRANGE CASE OF MICHAEL FRASER

Relatives Tell Stories of the Old Man's Peculiarities on Witness Stand at Barrie.

SEVERAL HEARD.

Doctors are Prepared to Testify Both For and Against The Old Man's Sanity — Justice Britton The Presiding Judge.

Barrie, Oct. 1.—"The idiocyncrasies of the 83-year-old bridegroom," would seem an appropriate title for the peculiar law suit that confronted Justice Britton in the assizes here yesterday, by which Catharine McCormick, maiden lady, hopes to have her octogenarian second cousin, Michael Fraser, declared insane and incapable of handling his own affairs, whereby she hopes to annul his marriage to 35-year-old Hannah M. O. Robertson of Dundas, last January, and thus prevent an estate of $80,000 passing into the hands of strangers upon his death.

For a so-called "civil" suit, the evidence yesterday showed anything but amity between the opposing factions, and the court-room, which, yesterday morning, was the scene of one of the saddest tragedies, when two people were sentenced to death, was suddenly converted into a theatre of crude burlesque. Wave after wave of laughter swept the crowded room, and as ridiculous instances pertaining to the case came to light from the witness stand.

There are three eminent sanity experts ranged on one side against equally eminent experts on the other, three who will attempt to show that old Michael Fraser was and is of sufficiently sound mind to appreciate the seriousness of taking unto himself a wife, and three who will say that he is a lunatic.

The defence of the marriage will be supported by the expert testimony of Doctors N. H. Beemer, superintendent Mimico Asylum; C. K. Clarke, Toronto Asylum, and J. H. Cameron, M.D., insanity specialist of Toronto University. Associated with them are: Doctors Russell, ex-superintendent Hamilton Asylum; P. H. Spohn, ex-superintendent Penetang Asylum, George Bowman, Penetang, and Dr. Richard Raike, of Midland. On the side of the plaintiffs are Drs. Arthur Jukes Johnson, and J. M. Cotton of Toronto, and Edward Ryan, superintendent Rockwood Asylum, Kingston. Dr. Ryan gave evidence last evening to show that Fraser was a victim of senile dementia, and it was unshaken in a rigorous cross-examination by Counsel J. K. King, K.C.

Justice Britton decided to hold the balance of expert testimony for Osgoode Hall. The judge also intimated to Mr. King last night that he would not bring old man Fraser down to-day from Midland.

The evidence of Robert McCormick and Catharine McCormick went to show that insanity was prevalent in the Fraser family, from the father of the seven boys down to Michael. Of the whole seven boys, Samuel, who, was once reeve of Tay Township, was the only one that didn't show insane proclivities, they swore.

Richard Hartley and Wm. Smith, neighbors, corroborated the observations of the McCormicks as to Michael Fraser's peculiarities, and told of the measures the second cousins adopted to try and prevent the alleged marriage. From Smith it developed that a self-appointed committee assumed charge of Michael's affairs upon the death of the last surviving brother, John, and through this committee, Robert McCormick got $3,000 and his sister $1,000 from Michael, after his brother's demise, Aug. 31, 1909.

On Sept. 30, Michael and Miss Robertson planned to get married, which the "committee" succeeded in thwarting, it appears. Mrs. Robertson then threatened to bring a breach of promise suit, and Dr. McGill, on the "committee," told her to go ahead and he would make the judge laugh at her by relating Fraser's physical and mental incapacity.

Miss Catharine McCormick, plaintiff, was put on the stand by A. E. Creswicke, K.C., and corroborated in detail the testimony of her brother as to the tendencies of the whole Fraser family.

"What other indications did you observe of insanity?"

"He cursed and swore about taxes, and the town and the country in general, though he didn't swear in former years."

Justice Britton: "Apparently, then, he was afflicted with some mania against schools and taxes, as his brother John was?"

"Yes, just the same." From John's death on Aug. 31, he had acted queerly towards women. "He asked me to marry him on the day of John's funeral, and again on the second of October. While the funeral service was on he asked Miss Brown to play the piano, and he wanted both her and me to sit on his lap."

Miss McCormick intimated that it was an evidence of insanity on Michael's part to want to marry his second cousin.

Articles of old furniture are sometimes made to appear like new by washing them with lime water and then applying a coat of oil.

Beautiful Autumn Millinery
That Is Sure to Please

We can consistently state that our showing of Autumn Millinery is the most beautiful and comprehensive ever assembled in this city, and our hats have received the unqualified endorsement of every lady visiting this department.

The wonderful richness and variety of materials this season has given milliners more than their usual scope to display their artistic talents and the broad assortment of styles shown makes it easy for us to please every taste.

Among the prettiest street hats are the cloche models with sloping brims and rather large high crowns, but the close fitting draped turbans are also greatly favored.

Very beautiful are the large dress hats of rich panne velvet, satin and beaver with trimmings of lovely feather mounts, clusters of ostrich feathers or long willow plumes falling gracefully on crown and brim.

Everything that is new and correct is here and worthy of particular emphasis are the splendid values.

Ladies' Black Silk Waists at $3.75

Two very pretty styles made from an excellent quality chiffon taffeta; front and back made with clusters of pin tucks and pleats, new sleeve, open front or back, all sizes 34 to 44, splendid value at $3.75

Pretty Warm Coats for Little Tots

We want mothers to see our display of Children's Imported Bearcloth Coats. They were personally selected by our buyer on his last visit to England and are the prettiest and best finished little coats that we have ever shown.

There is a good assortment of styles, with large collars of wide broadcloth or self material, trimmed prettily with braid and fastened with frogs or pearl buttons, lined throughout with flannelette, size 1 to 4 years, splendid values at .... $2.25 to $6.00

Infants' and Children's White Coats of Cashmere, Bedford Cord, Serge, etc., pretty styles at .... $2.50 to $4.75

Children's and Misses' Cloth Coats in all wanted materials in navy, cardinal, wine, olive, myrtle and brown, newest styles, all sizes at .... $3.75 to $12.75

Three Special Values in Ladies' Cloth Coats

AT $5.00, Ladies' Long Coats of good black Kersey Cloth, made in neat semi-fitting style, double breasted front, trimmed with braid and velvet on collar and cuffs, wonderful value at the price.

AT $8.50, Ladies' Coats, of splendid beaver cloth; new full length models with Military collars or notche revers; choice of black or navy.

AT $10.00 Ladies' Coats, made in newest semi and close fitting styles, of plain beaver and diagonal in navy green, gray and black.

Dozens of styles in all the new rough surfaced fabrics, plain broadcloths, beavers, etc., in all the new shades, at $12.00, $13.00, $15.00, $16.00 up to $45.00.

CURRENT EVENTS.

"A Bigger and Better Belleville."

What's the use—Fellow out West stole $1000 worth of gold nuggets —Caught with the goods—It was ever thus.

McNulty and the Dolan woman may well think now of the old adage that the way of the transgressor is hard.

A permanent roadway between Victoria Avenue and Bridge street sounds well—a little at a time we suppose.—Citizens will never be satisfied until it is a permanently paved driveway from Upper Bridge to Wharf —from Quinte to Lower Bridge. No doubt all this will come in time.

At a great pow-wow of Indians at Fort George, the Redskins decided to on no account surrender the reservation to the Grand Trunk Pacific as a townsite and divisional point, Countless ancestors are buried there—notwithstanding by George the G. T. P people will get Fort George if they want it.

Edmonton is to have an Armory modelled after the one at Peterboro Those progressive folks at Edmonton had better come down to Belleville visit the Hotel Quinte and model their next eating house after the swellest small town hotel in America.

It is alleged that whooping cough is prevalent at one of the city schools. If this is so, could not children afflicted stay at home until fully recovered? What's the use of spreading the disease. Who's move is it?

Cried Day and Night.

Mrs. R. E. Sanford, Inverary, Ont., writes:—"My baby was sickly for over a week with bowel and stomach trouble and cried night and day. Nothing I did helped her in the least till I began giving her Baby's Own Tablets. They helped baby right away and now she is a big healthy child with fine rosy cheeks. The Tablets are certainly a wonderful medicine, and I recommend them to all my friends who have children in the house."

What Baby's Own Tablets have done for Mrs. Sanford's baby they have done for thousands of other little ones, simply because they go to the root of so many childhood ailments—that is, they drive all impurities from the stomach and leave it sweet and healthy. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HUNTERS' EXCURSIONS.

FINED FOR KILLING DEER.

Capt. Hunter, Inspector of game and fisheries was at Arden this week and imposed upon Robert Scott a fine of $50 for killing a deer out of season.

DEATH OF INFANT.

Frank Babcock, infant son of Mr and Mrs. Barton Babcock of Rednersville died yesterday afternoon. The little one had been ill for some days.

RELIEVED OF WATCH.

Mr. Sandy Wardhaugh reports to the police that he was relieved of a watch but he is unable to state where and when the time piece was taken from him.

HUNTING PARTY.

A hunting party consisting of Messrs. H. Corby, J. V. Jenkins, J. W Walker, C. Corby, C. O'Hara and Dr Clinton leave on Monday for Mr. Corby's camp which is situated at West Macoon Lake, in the northern part of the County.

ARBITRATION.

An application was made to Judge Deroche to-day to act as arbitrator and fix the value of a piece of land of about one-quarter of an acre which has been expropriated for School Section No. 4, Township of Thurlow. Mr. E. G. Porter, K.C., was present on behalf of the property owner.

HILARIOUS ITALIANS.

Last evening some Italians whose names have not yet been secured were having a hilarious time driving about the city in a rather reckless manner Whilst they did no particular harm in particular they occasionally frightened some pedestrians. A police court case will in all probability follow.

ONE CRIMINAL CASE.

At one o'clock Monday afternoon the High Court will open here before the Hon. Justice Mulock. There is but one criminal case upon the docket, namely, King vs. Parker. Parker is accused of murdering Wm. Masters. The civil docket is not large, but seven jury cases and two non-jury cases having been entered for trial.

A RICH DISCOVERY.

Mr. James Liverton, Second Concession of Tyendinago, discovered a swarm of bees in the chimney of his house last spring. They were unmolested for the summer, and when the hive was emptied a few days ago, one hundred and thirty-five pounds of good clean honey was secured.

ASSAULT CASE.

Alexander Reid was this afternoon before Judge Deroche on a charge of assaulting his cousin, Harford Reid. The parties reside in Rawdon Township and it is alleged the defendant struck complainant in the face with a hammer, causing grievious bodily harm. Mr. Anderson for the Crown. Mr. Carnew, private prosecutor, and Mr. O'Flynn for the accused.

SCHOOL TEACHERS

The annual meeting of the Public School Teacher's Association of the city was held at Queen Victoria School yesterday afternoon at the close of school hours. All the teachers were in attendance. The officers elected were as follows:

President—Mr. C. F. Simpkins.
Vice-President—Miss C. Urquhart.
Sec.-Treas.—Miss V. Handley.

DESTROYED BY LIGHTNING.

During the thunderstorm which passed over this section of the community at an early hour this morning the residence of Mr. Charles Wellman of Canifton village was struck by lightning and destroyed. It was a frame building and burned with such rapidity that the inmates barely escaped with their lives. Only a few odd pieces of clothing were taken out. The Intelligencer is informed that the insurance will only partially cover the loss sustained.

THE MAYOR'S VIEWS.

The News of Toronto is seeking the views of the Mayors of Ontario towns and cities on the reciprocity question Following is the reply sent by Mayor Marsh of this city:—

Belleville, Sept. 30

Replying to your telegram the inquiry is hardly sufficiently definite. I think there are some matters in which a reciprocal arrangement with the United States would be of benefit to Canada and her manufacturers, but this country is not seeking favors and must have a quid pro quo for any concessions.

L. W. MARSH, Mayor.

THE MARKET.

Despite a counter attraction namely the fair at Roblin's Mills, the market this morning was one of the largest held here for some time. A large quantity of produce was offered for sale and good prices were realized. The ruling price for butter was 28 cents per pound, and eggs sold at 25c and 26c per dozen. Dressed poultry was plentiful and found a ready sale Chickens sold at from 50c to 90c per pair and ducks from $1.00 to $1.50 per pair. The display of fruit and vegetables was good.

NEW PASTOR ARRIVES.

Rev. Charles G. Smith who was pastor of the Grand Avenue Baptist church at New Haven, Conn., was some time ago called as Pastor of the Baptist church in this city. The Rev gentleman accepted the call and has arrived to take over the new charge He will to-morrow occupy the pulpit for the first time as pastor of the church. That the Rev. Mr. Smith and his family were highly esteemed in New Haven is evidenced by a farewell reception which was tendered them at the Grand Avenue Baptist Church on Tuesday evening upon their departure to this city. The chapel where the reception was held was prettily decorated with cut flowers presenting an attractive appearance. Deacon N. A Beebe acted as Master of Ceremonies and on behalf of the parishioners presented Rev. Mr. Smith with two handsomely bound volumes of "The Heart of the Antarctic," and to Mrs Smith a centrepiece handsomely worked. Rev. D. D. Munro, Rev Dr. Sneath Rev. Dr. Ford, Rev. Daniel Trick, Rev C. E. Scoville, and Mr. Thos. Rogerson, who were present were called upon on breathing cordial friendship to Mr. and Mrs. Smith, and expressing regret because of their leaving New Haven. All wished the Rev. gentleman God speed and success in his new and important field of labor. Rev. Mr Smith in replying on behalf of his wife and self thanked all for the reception and the gifts bestowed. They would never forget it whilst memory lasted. During the evening refreshments were served and the gathering was brought to a close by the singing of a hymn "Blest be the Tie That Binds," and the benediction pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Smith.

A Silly Wish.

The Kingston Whig prays for the day "when no matrimonial alliance can be contracted until the parties to it have presented themselves to a public official, a medical expert and secured his certificate." The Whig would have a law placed on our statute books which would prevent the marriage of persons mentally or physically defective. It is not alone in its advocacy. Many have expressed the same wish. With such a proposal however, we have little sympathy. It would not be, as it is claimed by its champions, a step forward, but on the contrary a step backward. Such a law would bring about a much worse condition than exists to-day. It would encourage immorality as nothing else could possibly do and people the world with illegitimate children many of whom, no doubt, would be defective either mentally or physically. Inform a man that he cannot marry and he will probably laugh in the face of his informant. He will find a way to outwit the law if, indeed, he hasn't already found one, which is more than likely Cases of infanticide and cases of a similar nature are daily heard in our police courts. We venture to say that if a law were enacted such as the Whig and others advocate we would be under the painful necessity of establishing a separate court, to hear such cases exclusively.

And there is another phase of the matter. All the misfits in life are not the offsprings of defective parents Many a couple physically and mentally sound produce children who are unsound and a couple, one or both of whom are defective in some manner often produce children who are mentally and physically fit.

The birth of incompetents is something which the world can neither lessen nor suppress, for so many different things are to be held accountable for it, such as the constant worrying of a certain type of men and women and the excessive drinking of another type. We have enough silly laws now without adding another, such as the Whig advocates, to our Statute books

Danger of Reciprocity

Advocates of closer trade relations with the United States should pause. A correspondent of The New York Evening Post has said that a reciprocity treaty between the United States and Newfoundland would place "the cork of the St. Lawrence" and the key of Canada in the hands of the Republic. A man who is a leading political figure in the eastern States, argues that a wide measure of reciprocity with Canada cannot be had without political fusion. The New York American, which is the most widely read newspaper in the United States, declares that "the political annexation of Canada may be delayed a little, but commercial annexation is due." Our friends across the line are over-sanguine, says the Toronto News. But Canadians, to whom the ideal of a great British nation on this continent is dear, will not lend themselves unreservedly to any movement for reciprocity which may in the long run threaten the integrity of the Dominion. No tariff treaty should be made with the United States. We should not sacrifice our fiscal freedom. It may be necessary on our own account to lower the duties on agricultural implements and some other articles, but Ottawa's tariff policy must not be made at Washington.

EXCHANGES

TAXING LAND VALUES.

(Kingston Whig.)

Ottawa will again make application to the Ontario Legislature for a change in the Assessment Act, and in order to make land values the basis of taxation. It is a Henry George idea that has been slow in taking hold of the people or in finding a place in the workable legislation of the day.

THE QUALITY OF MERCY.

(New York Life.)

At an evening party a very elderly woman was dancing with a young partner. A stranger approached Douglas Jerrold, who was looking on, and said:

"Pray, Sir, can you tell me, who is the young man dancing with that elderly woman?"

"One of the Humane Society, I should think," replied Jerrold.

MANY BLIND ONES

(Philadelphia Ledger.)

"I read that a chauffeur had been blinded by an accident.'

"Poor fellow. Wonder if it will make any difference in his style of driving."

IN LONDON.

(Harper's Bazar.)

"Did you present your letter of introduction to Lady Gay?"

"No, but I expect to in the course of a month or two."

"Why the delay?"

"She's in prison."

OVERHEARD ON THE TROLLEY

(Lippincott's Magazine.)

"Say, Mayme, did you ever have any turtle soup?" asked a rawboned youth of the girl beside him.

"No," admitted the maiden, "but," added she, with the conscious dignity of one who has not been lacking in social experience, "I've been where it was."

TOUGH!

(Exchange.)

"What can I get you, sir?" asked the waiter; "chop, steak or roast beef?"

"I had a steak yesterday," replied the dyspeptic-looking client.

"Will you have the same again, sir?"

"Yes, if no one else is using it," replied the other, wearily, as he reached for a sharper knife.

Would You Enjoy Vigorous Old Age?

Then use Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. It brings health and strength to every one along life's pathway. It aids digestion, stimulates and enriches the blood, invigorates the brain, builds nerve tissue, tones up the heart, fortifies the system against disease germs, makes the old feel young and prolongs life.

Mr. A. H. Young of Cuba, N.Y., has lived a strenuous life, but he is strong, vigorous and active at 84 years of age. Recently he wrote: "I use Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey regularly, and think there is no better medicine for old people in their declining age. A few months ago there was published a little history of my early life as the oldest man now living in the town of Cuba, N.Y. I have lived a strenuous life, in earlier days following the river on lumber to Pittsburg and Cincinnati and hunting all over the northern part of Pennsylvania."

Change at Griffins.

Owing to the volume of business consummated at the Opera House on Saturday nights, Manager Hurley has decided to inaugurate a new procedure.

In view of the fact that he is giving a Saturday matinee, at which time all seats are five cents, he advises children under fifteen years to take advantage of this offer, as hereafter on Saturday nights all children unaccompanied by their parents will be seated in the gallery.

This change is to afford all purchasers of adult tickets an opportunity of securing the best seats. oldtf

CANADA'S BOUNDLESS RESOURCES.

A party of Agricultural Editors who recently made a trip through Western Canada, were so impressed with what they saw that they are writing columns of favorable articles in connection with the resources of that part of the country.

The "American Agriculturist" of New York under date Sept. 3rd, 1910 has the following to say:

Great is Canada West; great are the actualities of that vast stretch of prairie provinces in grain production, and great the possibilities in animal husbandry. Well may the United States look with wholesome respect upon the rapid development of that new country which is only the beginning of its realization of strength and inniate forcefulness, in production, in manufacturing in commerce.

Well may the farmers of our own country note the taking form of a competition in grain growing, right now, that is of no mean proportions. Yet there is nothing new in all this, if one goes back in history but a scant half dozen years. Then, no cereal production worth considering, now a hundred million bushels of wheat a year and this capable of untold expansion —for scarcely 5 per cent of Western Canada is yet under the plow. These are the impelling thoughts occasioned by an editorial journey in August covering 3000 miles over the three great railway systems of Canada These are stretching their long fingers of steel throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The high lights are many, Space forbids, at the moment, touching but a few, and these the merest mention The crops are not as large as last year, owing to some unexpected drouth, yet generous, in wheat; oats barley and flax. Railway extension is rapid, and of the best possible campaign of developing the land. Homesteads, the free gift of the Dominion government, are now very largely exhausted, unless one goes back in the country many miles from a railroad Canadians want lower tariff on farm machinery. Incoming settlers include thousands of our best men from Wisconsin and Iowa westward. The recent report of large numbers of dissatisfied Americans farmers leaving Canada and returning to "the states" is a canard, according to United States Consul Jones, stationed at Winnipeg On the contrary, the many erstwhile Americans met by American Agriculturist's editorial representative were enthusiastic boosters for their new home.

These are absolute facts. It is just as well for our people to know their Western Canada is rapidly developing along the very best lines. The pity is that these two grand countries should be forever politically divided by the 49th parallel of latitude. One lesson for our own farmers is to practice better agriculture and get more bushels of wheat from an acre; and in some of the states in our own northwest to further develop the live stock end of farming. Great is Canada; great also, is Uncle Sam.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY

Orange Lily is daily curing the most obstinate cases of Female Disorders. Falling of the Womb, Leucorrhoea, Painful and Suppressed Menstruation, etc., etc., are all of them relieved from the start by its use, and a few weeks' or months' treatment accomplishes a complete cure. This remedy is a positive, scientific preparation, and is based on the discoveries of Pasteur and Lister. It is an applied treatment; that is, it is not taken internally, but is applied direct to the suffering parts, and it, therefore, acts with all the certainty of the known laws of chemical action. As it comes in direct contact with the diseased tissue, its antiseptic and nerve-food properties cannot help have a beneficent influence. I receive from 10 to 50 letters daily, speaking of the benefits and cures it is performing, and so sure am I that it will do what is claimed for it that I will send, absolutely free, a 35c box to every suffering woman who will write for it. Price, $1 per box, which is sufficient for one months' treatment. Address, MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, WINDSOR, ONT. 3

The ...Veiled Lady...

Orton's eyes flashed one keen glance at him. "He's not lying!—There you are, Josef!" said Orton, quietly giving him the bill. "There's more for you in the future." Josef spoke out freely, and Orton rapidly made his notes. He was overjoyed, yet maintained his habitual calm.

"You have told me you know how the 'Mees' Isabel' got to Stahrenstein," said the valet. You can guess what went on there, before Prince Demidoff and Baron Adolf came. But the 'Mees' Isabel' was 'on guard,'—she was afraid?—No, not of the devil! After I am two weeks at the Schloss, the old Graf calls me: 'Josef! You know Antonio Savelli, who was my old Intendant here, and is now in charge of my estates at Campoformio, and is the Syndic there!' It was true, for once a year the Graf went to see his great property here. I went with him always."

Orton started. Light was dawning on him. Josef resumed:—

"'Here are letters for Antonio,' said the Graf. 'Here is money. I have telegraphed him you are coming. Stay with him till all is over! Do as he tells you! See the whole business well done! I shall reward you! Keep your mouth shut about it!' He was a kind master," sighed Josef. "He always paid me well!"

"And what was the business?" eagerly demanded Orton.

"I was directed to see Antonio, and then wait at a little town on the Austrian frontier, till a coffin was to come by rail. When Syndic Antonio joined me, we were to have the funeral in the Catholic Church here!" Josef pointed from the window. "And I was to be one witness, and sign the papers and certificates for the Graf. I was to read all the other papers and sign, for the law requires two witnesses, and the Doctor Rastalli was one,—I was the other; and the Doctor, Savelli brought him along. They would all die for the Graf! —The only one we had to deceive was the old priest. I went there as ordered; in one week, all was over! The old priest grumbled at burying a heretic in consecrated ground. But," said Josef, "the Syndic Savelli gave him a new set of bells for the church. I saw the whole funeral. I know the grave!—It was a swindle on the Capitaine!"

"Why?" demanded Orton, quite cool.

"Because it was not the 'Mees' Isabel'—it was another woman who was buried."

"How do you know?" the detective asked.

"We have examined quietly,—the Syndic, and myself,—only he and I know! The Doctor knew not. He would sign any papers for the Syndic. It was an old,—little old woman, from the Austrian border."

"And the rest?" Orton was eager.

"I had the letters, and the papers, and a diamond ring, the Graf had given me! Magnifique!" said he. "And we examined them. In the ring was the picture of the Capitaine Gordon behind a blue shining stone,—a saphir! We had made a full legal proces-verbal, and the Doctor signed all, without a single look! All was then sent by the Syndic to the Capitaine Gordon, to the Bank of St. Louis. I obtained the legal papers and the receipts from the Poste Reale!—I copied all the names, and I know the Syndic also copied all the papers. He will not tell you! He will fear now! The great Graf is dead! Ah! Savelli is sly! He would go to prison for this."

"Well, afterwards?" Orton sharply asked.

"I took the certificates and papers Savelli gave me, back to the Graf. They were of the death of the Americaine lady, Isabel Percy,—of age, twenty three years. Also, that she died under the care of the Doctor, and requested the papers and goods to go to the Capitaine Gordon!"

"By Heaven! It was Gordon's sister; or his wife!" Orton ejaculated. "I see it now! The real Isabel Percy was drinking Tokay on the terrace at Stahrenstein, and laughing with her lover at her dead self. And on your return?"

He resumed: "All was gay! The Graf was happy,—and the 'Mees' Isabel' sent all her trunks and goods to the Bank at Paris. But first, they were sent to this town! I brought them over." Josef laughed. "And I signed the papers, and the Syndic shipped them all to Paris."

"To whom?" asked Orton, with a growing disgust.

"To the Capitaine Gordon,—to the care of the Bank of St. Louis! Ah! she was a smart one! The old Graf and the lovely woman would laugh,—oh, —so gaily laugh! I waited alone on their little private dinners at Stahrenstein. She is a cold hearted human devil!"

Orton walked up and down the room. "This woman is a reckless fiend! Before she entered on her Carnival of Deviltry, she threw poor Gordon off the track! By Jove! I could strangle her myself! That is why Gordon never came over!—He is breaking his loyal heart at home, over this devilish modern Faustine! What shall I do? Well, I'll sleep anyway!"

"Josef!" said Orton, "I am tired! To-morrow you will show me the grave and the church-register. I will see the priest and the Syndic later. Don't let them know a word of my affairs. I want you to go to Stahrenstein for me. I will come over there in a week. You had better be true to me. You might join the Syndic in the prison."

"That is so," said the valet. "Count on me."

When the sun drove the mists away from the old grave-surrounded church, next day, Phineas Orton stood beside the humble mound, roughly marked "Isabel Percy," with the inscribed date of her death.

"Very neat," murmured Orton, "a sly trick."

A wheezy old sacristan dragged out the bulky registers; and wondered at the twenty-lire note handed him by the American. "A prince," he piously ejaculated, as Orton carefully copied the entries. All was in regular order. Isabel Percy was legally dead and buried.

"It is an unholy swindle! A cold-blooded fraud! And what can I do? I will not break Gordon's heart. He is a thorough-bred. I will not write him; but I will nail the proofs of this graveyard imposture, and put it out of their power to deny it. I will send Josef over to the crags of Furstenfeld. I must now work alone. Neither Jenks, Brayton, nor Gordon himself can checkmate me now. And where is the Masked Venus" Orton's blood was boiling at the cruel fraud. "Carousing madly in St. Petersburg with the Tartar prince. Man, she seems to defy. I will leave her to the future. God will strike her down in her pride of sin. But I dare not write the lonely officer this disclosure," he continued, cutting off the tall weeds with his cane. "I feel I should report in person. I must ponder over every side of this case."

Governor Acquitted.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 1.—The jury in the libel case against Governor Carroll has returned a verdict of not guilty. Governor Carroll was placed on trial a week ago, charged with criminally libeling John Downie, former chairman of the state board of control.

Yanks Getting Whip Hand.

Liverpool, Oct. 1.—Mr. Justice Grantham arrived by the Empress of Ireland. He says at present Americans are getting the whip hand in Canada. The Canadians are loyal, but economy might outweigh this.

Joke Ends In Manslaughter.

Montreal, Oct. 1.—Sentence will be pronounced by Justice St. Pierre on Monday on Louis Garceau and Joseph Pittote, who were found guilty of manslaughter with a recommendation to mercy on a charge of having caused the death of Faustin Peltier on June 28.

Peltier, who was asleep in a coal yard, where he and the two prisoners were employed, was tipped out of a cart as a prank. Falling on his head he died from the injuries received.

Cotton Mills Close Down.

London, Oct. 1.—The Board of Trade intervened yesterday in an attempt to avert the lockout in the cotton mill industry, which was threatened for Oct. 3.

The masters and the workmen met at Manchester last evening, but the conference broke up without a settlement having been reached. The employers' federation therefore ordered their mills to close at noon to-day.

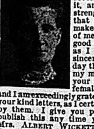
Headquarters of the Camorra.

Cinicinnati, O., Oct. 1.—Detectives who are investigating the murder of Joseph Luvers, an Italian, two days ago, say they have located the American headquarters of the Camorra, or "Black Hand," through the confession of an unnamed Italian.

The officers say they have positive proof that the headquarters are located in a little town in New York.

Hearst a Factor.

Rochester, Oct. 1.—The first session of the Democratic convention opened yesterday, but it is not believed the slate will be written till to-day. It is believed that, in view of the elimination of Mayor Gaynor from the contest for governor, Mr. Hearst becomes a factor to reckon with.



THE BEST REMEDY

For Women—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Belleville, Ont.—"I was so weak and worn out from a female weakness that I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took several bottles of it, and I gained strength so rapidly that it seemed to make a new woman of me. I can do as good a day's work as I ever did. I sincerely bless the day that I made up my mind to take your medicine for female weakness, and I am exceedingly grateful to you for your kind letters, as I certainly profited by them. I give you permission to publish this any time you wish."—Mrs. ALBERT WICKETT, Belleville, Ontario, Canada.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will cure female weakness and so successfully carry women through the Change of Life as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

For 30 years it has been curing women from the worst forms of female ills—inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and nervous prostration.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

THE FORMULA OF "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Is On The Outside Of Every Box For All The World To See

Every user of "Fruit-a-tives" knows exactly what is being taken. The formula of this famous fruit medicine is printed plainly on the outside of every box. We have stated many times--and now state clearly—that "Fruit-a-tives" is made of the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, with valuable heart and nerve tonics and antiseptics.

Everyone knows that fruit juice is healthful—but perhaps some do not understand why this is true.

Fruit juice consists of about 91% water, 8% of sweet principle, and 1% of a bitter substance. It is the quantity of bitter principle in fruit that gives the fruit value as a medicine. An eminent physician of Ottawa, after years of experimenting, found a method of increasing the bitter principle in fruit juice, thus increasing the medicinal or curative qualities.

The juices are first extracted from fresh, ripe oranges, apples, figs and prunes. By a secret process, some of the sweet atoms are replaced by the bitter principle. Then tonics and antiseptics are added, and the whole made into tablets, now known far and wide as "Fruit-a-tives."

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world that is made of fruit juices, and is one of the few remedies that have let their composition be known from their introduction to the public.

"Fruit-a-tives" is nature's stimulant for the liver, bowels, kidneys and skin. In cases of obstinate Constipation, Liver Trouble, Indigestion, Backache, Rheumatism, Headaches and Impure Blood, this wonderful fruit medicine cures when everything else fails.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold everywhere at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c., or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited. Ottawa.

Bogus Marquis Had Interesting Career

Queer Tale of Adoption To Act as A Decoy--Many Women Duped By Klimm And His Confederate--Swindles Perpetrated In London and Berlin.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Berlin "lion" hunters who have feted idolised, and, worse still, cashed cheques for the French Marquis de la Ramee were horrified in the week at the revelation that the self-styled nobleman was plain Bela Klimm, son of a Hungarian schoolteacher and a member of a notorious gang of international swindlers.

The marquis was arrested at The Hague at the request of the German police, being wanted on a number of charges, including criminal fraud, obtaining money by false pretences, using a fictitious title, and practicing cardsharping as a means of subsistence. He is said to have duped many women.

When arrested, the "Marquis" resided with his wife and a number of servants at the leading hotel at The Hague, where he attracted the attention of the other guests by frequenting the corridors and lounging in an ornate dressing gown.

The German police declare that the man's real name is Bela Klimm, and that he is the son of a lecturer at a technical college at Buda-Pesth. His father left him $20,000 when he was only eighteen. He became involved, they aver, with a notorious cardsharper, who used him as a decoy to attract wealthy victims in various continental cities.

The cardsharper, who was known variously as Margolin and Hauer, soon recognized the desirability of increasing Klimm's usefulness by procuring him a title of nobility. A careful search was made for some extinct title, and that of de la Ramee was selected, the last member of that family having died more than a century ago.

The process of obtaining this extinct title for the young Hungarian was most curious and instructive, inasmuch as it reveals the necessity for caution when dealing with holders of continental titles, whose credentials are not absolutely beyond doubt.

Hauer discovered in Paris a poor workman named Marie la Ramee, whose wife was the daughter of a shoemaker. This couple formally adopted Bela Klimm and authorized him to call himself la Ramee. Hauer and Klimm, by means of audacious forgeries, then changed the legal document certifying the adoption of the name of la Ramee into a patent of nobility bearing the title of Marquis de la Ramee.

A second document was then forged, from which it appeared that Bela Klimm was really entitled to bear the name and title of Marquis de la Ramee.

Equipped with this title Klimm found no difficulty in obtaining access to the best society circles in several continental capitals. After becoming a conspicuous figure in Paris and elsewhere he settled in Berlin. Here he associated with some leading families and obtained admittance to the fashionable clubs.

Last spring the "Marquis" won the heart and the hand of Fraulein Alice Hecht, the daughter of the late Berlin millionaire, Herr Hecht, and married her in London, despite the opposition of her widowed mother. Instead of the expected huge dowry, however, he found that his bride had only a paltry income of $5,000 a year—a sum hardly sufficient to pay the tailor of the "Marquis."

He was thus getting deeper and deeper into debt when finally Margolin arranged a trick to get him out of his difficulties. He took an actress, wearing a thick veil, to the house of a well-known money lender, where she pretended to be the widow of the deceased millionaire, and sigend a mortgage on Herr Hecht's property. The moneylender advanced on the mortgage a sum of about $50,000, which Margolin and the "Marquis" shared, leaving the country together the same day.

Numbers of people in good society have been swindled by Margolin and the "Marquis de la Ramee," whose trial will be the "cause celebre" of the season.

The Berlin police since his arrest have gained possession of a remarkable series of letters which the sham marquis wrote in expansive moments to a Miss M., and in which he gave full details of his misdeeds.

An extraordinary struggle took place at one time over these documents. The wife tried every argument to obtain possession of the compromising letters, in order to destroy them, and give her husband a chance to make a fresh start; her mother tried to obtain them in order to lay an undesirable son-in-law by the heels; while the woman refused to give them up in the hope of bringing the faithless lover to her side again.

In despair Miss M. finally gave the letters to the police, hoping that the result would be that the wife would obtain a divorce. Now, however, she has found that the only result has been the man's arrest.

The story is told at Berlin that at one time the pseudo marquis was engaged to an Egyptian princess, who was more than forty years of age, while he was just twenty-eight, but the marriage was prevented by the woman's relatives. After this matrimonial plan had been frustrated the man came straight to Berlin and met his present wife.

During his stay in London the pretended marquis became acquainted at a West End hotel with a foreign countess, whose maid fell ill and had to be removed to hospital. He offered to find another maid for the countess, and telegraphed to Berlin to Miss M. to take the position. She refused, but Klimm secured another girl, who hastened to London and entered the countess's service. Two days later the countess missed a diamond necklace of great value, and the girl disappeared. Parts of the necklace were sold subsequently in London, Paris and Berlin.

Klimm once barely escaped arrest in Cairo, when the police raided a gambling resort, by jumping through a window.

The letters in the possession of the police show that Miss M. lent Klimm $5,000 and pawned all her jewelry to supply him with money which he wanted.

They Did Not Talk.

Some persons like one sort of shoe and some another, but the kind which was desired by Pierre, the French-Canadian mill-hand, has never enjoyed a wide popularity.

"Shoes for Sunday," Pierre stated to the young man who advanced to meet him as he entered the salesroom of the big shoe factory.

He then sat heavily down on one of the red plush seats and allowed the salesman to insert his feet in a pair of bright yellow shoes. When they were fairly on, Pierre stood, moved his feet this way and that, took a few steps, and shaking his head, sat down again.

"What's the matter?" asked the clerk. "Do they hurt? Are they too tight?"

Pierre shook his head violently.

"She no tight," he said, "but also she no talk. Shoes for Sunday must talk, talk, all the way up in church for to soun' stylish, see?"

First Woman Appointed.

Helen MacMurchy, M.D., Toronto, is the name of the first woman appointed to the Permanent International Committee of the Congress of Hygiene at Paris.

It was in the face of stern opposition that the name of Toronto's prominent woman doctor was enrolled. European medical men are very conservative and several would not hear of a woman being appointed to the sommittee.

Sir Lauder Brunton of London, urged the appointment of Dr. MacMurchy. "One of the foremost women in the ranks of school hygienists," he termed her, and after a long debate, the Toronto lady was admitted.

Australian Sheep Output.

A Government report recently issued at Sydney shows that Australia leads the world in sheep farming. The estimated value of the Australian flocks is $220,000,000 and their annual gross output is estimated at 75 per cent. of the value. The number of sheep in the countries leading in the sheep industry are given in Mr. Baker's report as follows: Australia, 87,043,266; Argentina, 77,581,100; Russia 56,510,523; United States, 54,631,000, and United Kingdom, 30,011,833.

Fascinating Hair.

WOMEN WHO USE PARISIAN SAGE HAVE IT AND KEEP IT.

You never saw a beautiful woman who did not have beautiful hair. The charm of a beautiful woman lies in her hair.

Many women do not realize the attractions they possess because they do not give proper attention to the hair.

The women of Paris are famed for their beauty, not because their facial features are superior to those of other women, but because they know how to keep young by supplying vigor, lustre and strength to the hair.

Up to three years ago Parisian Sage could hardly be obtained in Canada. But now this delightful hair restorer can be had in every town in Canada. J. V. Doyle sells it in Belleville for 50 cents a large bottle, and he guarantees it to grow beautiful, luxuriant hair; to turn dull, lifeless hair into lustrous hair; to stop falling hair; to stop itching of the scalp. Understand J. V. Doyle will give you your money back if it fails. Made only in Canada by Giroux Mfg. Co., For. Erie, Ont. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle.

Let us buy a 50-cent bottle of Psychine (pronounced Si-keen) from your druggist and give it to you (free) to prove its great value.

Psychine is the greatest vitality builder of the age.

For thirty years Psychine has been curing almost every disease that is due to run-down vitality.

Hundreds of thousands have used Psychine with wonderful beneficial results.

We have received thousands of unsolicited testimonials from people whom Psychine has cured, of in many cases, hopeless ailments.

There are still thousands of people suffering from disease, however, whom Psychine can benefit.

There are still thousands who are trying to cure themselves by wrong methods, who are using dangerous and hurtful medicines.

There are still thousands who are gradually losing their vitality—from whose body the necessary resisting power to disease is slowly but surely slipping away.

There are still those who soon will hear the dread "call in the night" if they do not take prompt action.

To these we have the above message, viz.:

"Let us buy a 50-cent bottle of Psychine from your druggist and give it to you, free, to prove its great value."

That 50-cent bottle of Psychine will tell you more powerfully than mere words can how tremendously beneficial Psychine will be for you.

It will give you an unmistakable indication of its wonderful power to renew the bodily vitality, to strengthen the phagocytes (the white corpuscles), the policemen or scavengers of the body.

The Surgical Department of the Japanese Army, in the Japo-Russian war, first drew the attention of the scientific world to the function of the white corpuscles of the blood or phagocytes.

Foreign medical men were astounded to see Japanese soldiers with wounds that had not been cleansed or dressed for days, that were apparently dirty, ill-kept, and altogether unsanitary.

Yet these dirty wounds healed marvellously; no army the world had ever known had such a wonderful record for the recovery of their wounded as the Japanese army.

And all because the Japanese knew how to let the white corpuscles cure.

There are two kinds of corpuscles in your blood, you know, red and white.

The red carry nutrition, the white are the policemen or scavengers of the body.

Whenever a disease germ enters the body, these white corpuscles attack and literally eat it.

A wound that attracts disease germs from the air is cleansed and healed by billions of phagocytes, or white corpuscles, devouring these unwelcome disease germs.

Any disease can be cured by these white corpuscles if they be in sufficient number or strong enough to attack and devour the germs that cause the disease.

If they are not in sufficient numbers or strength, then the disease germs eat them and disease claims the body.

That's the cause of every disease to which humanity is heir.

For centuries the cure of disease has been by means of herbs—nature's remedies.

It is only within recent times that we have come to know how these herbs act.

Now scientists tell us they increase the strength and numbers of the white corpuscles or phagocytes.

In Psychine we have some of the most healing and beneficial herbs in the world, herbs that increase and strengthen the white corpuscles.

From Arabia comes one herb, from South America another, China and Japan produce a third, while the jungle of India yields a fourth.

All these herbs are recognized by the medical profession as being the most beneficial to health that they know.

That's why Psychine, in the third of a century it has been made, has cured hundreds of thousands of people who suffered from the following diseases:

La Grippe
Bronchitis
Hemorrhages
Sore Throat
Anaemia
Female Weakness
Indigestion
Poor Appetite
Chills and Fevers
Sleeplessness and Nervous Troubles
Bronchial Coughs
Weak Lungs
Weak Voice
Spring Weakness
Early Decline
Catarrhal Affections
Catarrh of Stomach
Night Sweats
Obstinate Coughs
Laryngitis and Dyspepsia
After-effects of Pleurisy, Pneumonia and La Grippe.

That's why we believe it will be beneficial to you.

Now we don't ask you to take our word for the tremendously beneficial effect of Psychine. Fill out the coupon below, mail it to us, and we'll give you an order on your druggist (for which we pay him the regular retail price) for a 50-cent bottle of Psychine to be given you free of cost.

We will undoubtedly buy and distribute in this manner, hundreds of thousands of these 50-cent bottles of Psychine.

And we do that to show our entire confidence in this wonderful preparation.

A confidence that has been based on our 30 years' experience with this splendid preparation with a full knowledge of the hundreds of thousands of cures it has made.

Accidental Drowning.

Goderich, Oct. 1.—The adjourned inquest investigating the drowning of Colin McIvor on the 20th inst., was reopened last night, and the coroner's jury brought in a verdict of accidental drowning.

From the evidence given by his two companions in the sailing boat, the whole party were more or less under the influence of liquor. McIvor was sitting on the lee rail of the boat, just behind the foresail, and was to a certain extent hidden by the mainsail from the view of his companions, who were sitting in the stern of the boat. While sailing along quietly McIvor fell overboard backwards, striking the water headfirst, and sank immediately.

Quarrel In Crowd Ends In Murder.

New York, Oct. 1.—An express train in the subway was the scene of a mysterious murder at 1 o'clock yesterday morning. A well-dressed young man, apparently returning from the theatre, was the victim.

His assailant, according to the police, was Charles Wright of Elizabeth, N.J., who was arrested.

According to bystanders, the two men stood near each other in a crowded car. They did not appear to be acquainted, but suddenly it was noticed that they were having a violent quarrel about something. Then came a shot.

A High-Handed Act.

Winnipeg, Oct. 1.—T. L. Humberstone, M.A., B.Sc., of the University of London, who is in Canada arranging plans for the Congress of Universities of the Empire, which is being held in England in 1912, complains that he was ejected from the Soo train, which leaves Winnipeg for Chicago at 6 o'clock, by American immigration officials here. Humberstone had a ticket for Toronto, and hoped to make the trip by way of Chicago.

MAKE THEM LAUGH.

A Bachelor's Idea of the Way Children Should Be Trained.

"The people who don't have to do things can always do them better than the people who are obliged to do them," said the cynical bachelor. "If you want to know how to invest money, ask a fellow who has never had any to invest. I suppose it's the same with raising children. Nevertheless, I am fond of children, and never having had an opportunity of raising any of my own, I am critical about the way other people, more fortunate than I, raise theirs.

"My brother has a youngster, a boy about six years old, and everything that kid wants he cries for. The minute he begins to cry he gets it, which, according to my reasoning, is all wrong.

"Why not make him laugh for it? It's just as easy for a child to laugh as to cry, and it's far more healthful, besides being much more cheerful for the surrounding populace.

"I've tried the experiment with him, and it works like a charm. If I happen to have anything he wants, and he cries for it, I make fun of him. 'That isn't the way to get it,' I say. 'Don't cry for it. Laugh for it.'

"It took only about two lessons for him to understand this, and you have no idea what a wonderful difference it has made in the disposition of that kid. Still, I'm only an old bachelor, and I'm not supposed to know anything about such things."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Mental Jam Pot Defended.

It's so easy to get on with Dr. Woods Hutchinson. He loves to come out bravely and tell us that we ought to do just what we want to do, and how popular that does make him with everybody!

He reminds one of a fond parent who was taken to task by his wife for not being more strict with their small daughter. He was told that he did not discipline her sufficiently.

"Discipline her!" he exclaimed in astonishment. "Why should I discipline her when we always want to do the same thing?"

It was no case for discipline—if small daughter wanted to dip into the sugar bowl or pull flowers out of her mother's garden that seemed to her good father to be the eminently proper thing to do at the time.

And so it is with Woods Hutchinson. Awhile ago he pleased us all immensely by telling us that we really ought to eat candy and that the jam pot was of all things the most salubrious for children. Nice Woods Hutchinson—pleasant man!

Now he comes out and tells us that, like the jam pot, light fiction is really good for us.

Moreover, stories—exciting ones, too, and plenty of them—are good for children. The imagination of a child should be fed. It craves a wholesome stimulant and should have it by all means, while for an adult a good novel may be better than a box of pills or a week at a sanitarium.

To quote from an article in the August number of Good Housekeeping, this obliging doctor says:

"The most restful thing for a tired brain and overwrought nervous system is a brisk, enjoyable walk or a keen, eager game in the open air, followed by a hundred pages or so of a good novel. You will sleep better, go back to your work next day fresher and better rested than you would if you had endeavored to crowd your brain with additional information for practical use in your life work.

"If you are tired a good novel will rest you; if you are worried it will make you forget your worries and yourself; if you are sick it is one of your best medicines. The man or woman who in the sunset afterglow of life can enjoy a good story has found the secret of perpetual youth."

The Holland government is considering the passage of a new patent law, inventors having been without protection in that country since the repeal of an old law in 1869.

False Friends Left Him.

Sioux Lookout, Ont., Oct. 1.—George Ford has come back to civilization after being marooned on an island in Lac Seul for 43 days.

He had a terrible experience, and his nervous system is still in bad shape. He came up from Duluth to Prospect to trap along the English River, but was deserted by his companions, who took his boat, both guns, all his valuables and a large share of the provisions.

Ford did his best to attract the attention of the Hudson Bay Co. steamer which passed occasionally, but was foiled many times. He finally changed the location of his camp and lighted a huge bonfire. The steamer then bore down on his improvised home and rescued him. The police are looking for the false friends who deserted him.

Fugitive From Russian Douma.

Winnipeg, Oct. 1.—Longinus Theador Gerus, fugitive member of the Russian Douma, has arrived here from Chicago to give evidence on behalf of Savva Fedorenko, whose extradition is sought by the Russian Government.

Gerus was one of 55 members of the Douma who were indicted and one of nine who escaped. He was pursued across country for seven months, but finally made his way out with the assistance of a forged passport. Interest in the Fedorenko case is increasing on account of the prominent refugees who are fighting to have the prisoner released.

To Enlarge 24th Regiment.

Chatham, Oct. 1.—At the meeting of the Kent County W.C.T.U., it was decided to institute a campaign against the use of cigarettes by minors. The association will personally see that the law is more strictly enforced. They will also seek to have the evils of intemperance taught in the public schools. Mrs. Holmstead of Wallaceburg was elected president

Col. Hodginson, D.O.C., of London, has approved the plans to enlarge the 24th Regiment to make it a county regiment. Several towns have indicated a desire to contribute companies. The companies in Wallaceburg will be the first to enter.

Charles Chenell, a Swede, employed on J. S. Fraser's farm, in Dover Township, yesterday morning tried to adjust some of the machinery under the engine without first shutting off the steam. The machine started, and he was crushed to death.

William Evans, a little son of William Evans of Wallaceburg, fell from a tree yesterday morning and was seriously hurt. His companions dared him to climb up and he lost his hold.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 1.—Battling against time, members of the public affairs committee of the Commercial Club, gave the visiting members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, three hours of the most strenuous entertainment yesterday.

A special train bearing 160 Canadian boosters did not arrive until noon. An address had been prepared by Mayor Haynes, and Wallace C. Nye of the Commercial Club, A. E. Zonne, chairman of the public affairs committee, and Frank J. Meyst, chairman of entertainment committee, spent the early morning preparing speeches, all had to be eliminated. The Canadians were hungry and the committee was anxious to utilize the automobiles which it had recruited to take the party on a joy ride.

An interesting incident came when a delegation of the women made a hurried visit to all the leading retail stores.

King Caesar.

An outdoor game for boys. Two bases are marked out, one at each of the extreme ends of the playground. The players divide and one party takes possession of each space. One player is "out" and stands in the middle. He is called "King Caesar." The others run to and fro, from boundary to boundary, and it is the business of the king to try and catch them as they pass.

When he catches one he taps him on the head, saying, "I crown thee king." The player thus caught then joins in the capture of the others and the making of more kings till all are caught. When all have been crowned the game may begin over again.

Gold, Valued at $17,000, Missing.

Vancouver, Oct. 1.—It has just leaked out that a big mail robbery took place at White Pass on the Yukon Railway, between White Horse and Skagway, on Aug. 17, when lead brick was substituted for gold bullion.

This following the theft of bullion between Fairbanks and Seattle seems to indicate an organized gang on the Yukon River route.

Postoffice Inspector Greenfield from Vancouver, and several other officers are working on the case.

The missing gold is valued at $17,000, and although the robbery took place on American territory, it was a consignment from Dawson, and looted from the Canadian mails.

Indict Police.

New York, Oct. 1.—As a result of the disclosures of vice conditions at Coney Island, following the recent official investigation under Acting Mayor Mitchell's direction, a dozen indictments, said to be of police officers charged with responsibility for law observance at the resort, were returned yesterday by the King's County grand jury. It was unofficially stated that one of the indictments was against Police Inspector John J. O'Brien. The indictments, with others, returned against proprietors of alleged disorderly resorts, swell to 30 or more, the total of persons under indictment as a result of the Coney Island scandals.

Customs Increase.

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—Another increase of over one million dollars in a month is shown by the customs figures for September, which are out to-day. The total collections for the month were $6,467,739, as against $5,427,458 for September last year.

For the first six months of the fiscal year the collections have totalled $35,559,544, an increase of $6,778,476.

Sentence Suspended.

Belleville, Oct. 1.—Mrs. Mary Désilet and daughter, Vina Desilet of Trenton, who were convicted of unlawfully disposing of the body of an infant, were yesterday, owing to extenuating circumstances allowed their liberty on suspended sentence.

Lieut. Gzowski Buried.

London, Oct. 1.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At Aldershot yesterday several thousand spectators witnessed the funeral of Lieut. Gzowski in the military cemetery. The interment was of the most impressive character. The Buffs, to which the Queen's Own was affiliated during their stay, furnished a firing party. The band and drums of the batallion followed. Among the chief mourners were Lord Strathcona and about 100 officers, with a detachment from nearly all the corps in camp.

G.T.R. Engineers Get Increase.

Montreal, Oct. 1.—The Grand Trunk announced officially last night that a satisfactory settlement has been reached with their engineers, the latters' representatives leaving for home later in the evening.

It is stated that the men were given an increase of 12 per cent.

Burglars Visit Home Of Sheriff Morrison

Enter Sleeping Apartments of Inmates at Night, and Carry off Many Valuable Furs and other Articles--Police at Work on Case, But No Clue To Perpetrator Has As Yet Developed.s

Some person or persons not invited visited Sheriff Morrison's residence on George street, Thursday night and made a fairly good haul. It was evident that various rooms in the house were ransacked notwithstanding the fact that the Sheriff, his wife and servant were sleeping on the premises Not a sound was heard by them and the robbery was not discovered until the family arose yesterday morning In the bed room occupied by the Sheriff his trousers were taken from the bed and a small sum of money extracted from the pockets. In another room a drawer was opened and a valuable dress belonging to Mrs. Morrison was taken.

The biggest haul was made upstairs A handsome fur stole and muff the property of Mrs. Morrison valued at about $200 was purloined. Some other small articles were also taken from various parts of the house. Upon investigation the only place where the intruder or intruders could have entered was through a window of the bedroom occupied by the Sheriff and his wife. This was found opened to its full extent. The doors of the house were all locked before the inmates retired.

The affair was reported to the police but there does not appear to be any clue as to the perpetrators of the act.

Techincal Education Commission Arrives

Visit Paid to The Deaf and Dumb Institution This Morning--Members Express Surprise at Excellence of Work--Factories Inspected--Public Meeting This Afternoon.

The Royal Commission appointed to inquire into industrial training and technical education arrived in the city at 11.30 this morning from Kingston. The visitors were met at the station by Mayor Marsh, Mr. W. B. Deacon, President of the Board of Trade, Col. Ponton and Thos. Ritchie, Esq.

The members who came here were: Jas. W. Robertson, C.M.G., D.Sc., LL.D., chairman, Hon. John N. Armstrong, Rev. Geo. Bryce, M.A., D.D., LL.D., F.R.S.C., David Forsyth, B.A., James Simpson and Thos. Bengough, C.R.S., secretary and reporter.

En route from the station to the city the Commission spent a few minutes at Marsh & Henthorn's establishment on Mill street, where the various departments were visited. The party then were driven direct to the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, where some time was spent. The classes were called and the visitors given an exhibition of the nature of the studies pursued. The various workshops were then visited, and the Commission was delighted and even surprised at some of the handiwork displayed by the pupils. It was indeed a revelation to them. The printing establishment in connectiaon with the Institution was visited, also the bakeshop, and in fact all departments of the Institution. Leaving the Institution the Commission drove down town and proceeded to the Hotel Quinte, where luncheon was partaken of.

Later in the afternoon some manufacturing concerns were visited and a public meeting was opened in the Council Chamber at 3.30, a report of which will appear in Monday's issue.

PORT HOPE TOWN BOOKS

The report of the audit of the Port Hope town books by Mr. J. F. Jeffers, of this city, who was selected to audit the same, was submitted to the Town Council at its Monday evening meeting.

The occasion for the request to the Government desiring the Special Audit was a certain dissatisfaction regarding the audits which have been made in previous years, giving the impression that the funds of the municipality had been carelessly and even dishonestly handled. The charges were as follows:—

First—That the taxes had not been closely and promptly collected.

Secondly—That cheques had been drawn in the name of the School Board which had been used by private individuals.

Thirdly—That the accounts of the Harbor Master had not been kept exactly, and that there had been losses to the Board of Commissioners.

Fourthly—The general sentiment of distrust had become so intense in some sections of the community that a motion was carried in the Town Council and a petition forwarded to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor.

Mr. Jeffers stated that the roll for 1909 showed at the 31st December, that year, $4,498.29 yet to collect.

CHICAGO OLD BOYS.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 30.—The Belleville Club, of Chicago, held an "Old Boys'" experience meeting at the Great Northern Hotel to-night which awoke two millions of people in this city, with its hundred thousand Canadians. William Robertson and Tom Lynch presided. The guests of honor were W. K. Pattison, President of the British Empire Association, and George Sutherland, publisher of the Canadian American and the British American newspapers. Arthur James, Miles Wilkinson, Henry Cullen, Burt Diamond and Chappie Moran were among the speakers.

Rheumatic Pains.

NOT DUE TO COLD, WET WEATHER —THE TROUBLE IS ROOTED IN THE BLOOD.

Many people believe that the twinges and tortures of rheumatism are due to cold, damp or wet weather, and treat themselves by rubbing with liniments and lotions. This is a serious mistake, and one which allows the disease to progress to such an extent that it is often impossible to get it out of the system. Rheumatism comes from poisonous acid in the blood, and it must be cured through the blood. All the liniments and rubbing, and so-called electrical treatment in the world will not cure rheumatism. This is a medical truth which every sufferer from this excruciating trouble should know. Rheumatism can only be cured by driving the poisonous acid out of the blood, and enriching and purifying it. There is no medicine will do this so speedily and surely as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They actually make the new, rich, red blood, which drives out the poisonous acid, upbuilds the system, and makes the sufferer well and strong. It is because they do this that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured thousands of cases of rheumatism after all other treatment had failed. As proof we give the case of Mrs. F. X. Boisseau, St. Jerome, Que., who says: "Almost two years ago I was a terrible sufferer from rheumatism. The trouble first located in my right leg, rendering all work impossible, and walking excessively difficult. I tried to cure myself by means of all sorts of liniments and lotions, but without avail. The trouble was constantly growing worse, and the pain more and more unbearable. Finally the disease spread to my other leg, and I was all but helpless, and I was completely discouraged, thinking I would be a sufferer for the rest of my life. At this time I read an advertisement in our home paper, of this trouble being cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. I first got four boxes of the Pills and after using them for several weeks I could see that the painful rheumatism was gradually disappearing. I continued taking the Pills, however, until I had used about a dozen boxes, when every symptom of the trouble had disappeared, and I could walk as freely as ever I did, and do my housework without the least trouble. I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to every rheumatic sufferer."

The Manifestations Of Eye-Strain

Continued

If the nerve waste be arrested the irritability is lessened or removed, and the drug habit is more easily overcome.

Once we allow that this nerve-waste may exist, we recognize that there seems to be no limit to the various ailments which may, perhaps gradually, and often imperceptibly, follow Dyspepsia and constipation have both been put down to eye-strain, and I think not unreasonably. The dyspepsia may be, as we have seen, a direct reflex irritation from the strained eyes through pneumograstic, and it may also be the result of nerve-waste; for if this nerve-waste causes depression and the due amount of nerve energy for digestion is not available, then the various digestive processes are interfered with, not only in the stomach but throughout the digestive tract.

WHERE EACH TEAM IS AT ITS BEST.

When all is said and done, the Athletics and Cubs, on past performances, size up thus:

The Cubs have the benefit of experience, having participated in three worlds series to date.

The Cubs are veterans who have played together for years.

The Cubs' team work is probably better than that of any team in the world.

The Cubs have infinitely better men behind the bat.

The Cubs are noted for fighting in the face of apparent defeat.

The Athletics have the best pitching staff, and in Coombs the greatest pitcher in the world to-day. His record of 46 consecutive innings without being scored upon is marvelous.

The Athletics lead the Cubs in hitting and fielding.

The Athletics have the benefit of Connie Mack on the bench, a factor to be counted upon.

The Athletics are younger men and as a team have more speed than the Cubs.

The Athletics can rely upon the sacrifice hit because they have pitchers competent to win with a one or two-run lead.

The base running of the two teams is about even, despite general belief in the Cubs' superiority.

BASEBALL

Here is some New York dope on the Stallings affair:

It was not Hal Chase's fault that George Stallings lost his job. There was no underhand work on the part of the star first baseman which caused the split between Stallings and the owners of the New York club.

Stallings' fate was sealed from the very moment that it was found that he had operated a tipping bureau on the New York grounds last season.

The league could not take immediate action against Stallings at that time, for the reason that it would have reflected on owner Farrell, as well as the entire organization. Furthermore, Stallings had made so good a showing with the team that it would have caused a lot of ill-feeling among the patrons of the game there. But Stallings was to go, and in order to make things unpleasant for him, Chase was signed to manage the team next season long before the present campaign was over. It was but natural to suppose that other members of the team knew that Chase would be the manager next year, so it is readily seen that this state of affairs forced Stallings to shoulder an enormous handicap, and virtually forced him to bring his position relative to Chase to an issue.

They are picking all-star teams in the American League. The Detroit News gives the following selections:

FIRST TEAM.

Chase (New York)	1B
Lajoie (Cleveland)	2B
Bush (Detroit)	SS.
Collins (Philadelphia)	3B
Milan (Washington)	R.F.
Cobb (Detroit)	C.F.
Speaker (Boston)	L.F.
Johnson (Washington)	P.
Stanage (Detroit)	C.
Jennings (Detroit)	Manager
Evans	Umpire

SECOND TEAM.

Stahl (Boston)	1B.
Delahanty (Detroit)	2B.
Barry (Philadelphia)	SS.
Lord (Chicago)	3B.
Crawford (Detroit)	R.F.
Wolter (New York)	C.F.
Birmingham (Cleveland)	L.F.
Walsh (Chicago)..	P.
Sweeney (New York)	C.
Mack (Philadelphia)	Manager
Sheridan	Umpire

THIRD TEAM

Stovall (Cleveland)	1B.
Gardner (Boston)	2B.
McBride (Washington)	SS.
Moriarity (Detroit)	3B.
Hooper (Boston)	R.F.
Oldring (Philadelphia)	C.F.
Lewis (Boston)	L.F.
Coombs (Philadelphia)	P.
Street (Washington)	C.
McAleer (Washington)	Manager
O'Loughlin	Umpire

Cleveland's eyes are dim to everything regarding pennant races and the world's series, and are engrossed in watching something that holds a decided interest in the Forest City. That is the race between Larry Lajoie and Ty Cobb for the automobile batting prize. Everything else is submerged in the attention which is paid to this side-show of the great national exhibition. As indicative of the great interest which this smiting contest has aroused, it is but necessary to show how the fans are kept in possession of the batting strength of the rivals.

On the blackboard at the Cleveland grounds where the scores are chalked the fans are shown how Ty is hitting Every time that Ty goes to bat, and the result of his time at the teeing ground is shown, the score is chalked up on the blackboard where the feverish fans can watch.

Buffalo is the first of the Eastern League circuit to decide upon a new manager, and here it is a case of necessity. Billy Smith, who made good for Macon and Atlanta in the Southern and Atlantic leagues, and who managed the Buffalos of the Eastern League during the season just ended, did not wait to ascertain if his services were wanted another year as manager of the Bisons. Not hearing any word from Presiden Stein on the matter and receiving a flattering offer from President O. P. Andrews of the Chattanooga Club of the Southern Association (Class A), Smith tied up there for the next two years.

FOOTBALL

HAMILTON, September 30. — The management of the Tigers have gone through the ranks of the candidates for places on the senior team with a big comb, and the following is the result of the weeding-out process:

Full back, George Smith; centre half Kid Smith; outside halves; Burton, Moore, Kelly, Simpson and Leslie; quarter, Geo. Awrey; outside wings Thompson, Gatenby, Linton and Glassford; middle wings, and inside wings Isbister, Barron, Bramer, Potticarry Mahoney, Walsh and possibly, Jack Grey; scrimmage, Pfeifer, Scott, Squares, Saylor, McFarland, Gerrard and Glessing.

The team that plays the Argonauts on Saturday will be chosen from this bunch. It is the intention of the management to make a liberal use of the substituting men, so that every man who has senior aspirations can have a chance of making good.

There is a chance that Gage, local boy, who distinguished himself on the Varsity champion team, will be on the Tiger-line-up in an outside wing position. He has been out to practices.

EQUINE

The success of the Montreal Horse Show has fired Brockville's ambition and so plans are being formulated for the holding of one of these popular affairs at which beauty and the beast are so conspicuous If the Brockville show has the backing that has been announced its success is practically assured. The Hon. Clifford Sifton and Dr. Webster, of Ottawa; Mr. Robert Beith, the well-known breeder and importer of Bowmanville, Ont., and A C. Hardy and C. W. Maclean, of Brockville, who are said to be particularly friendly to the proposition can bring enough horses into the field to make a good show.

BOWLING

A lively bowling boom is in progress down in Montreal and Ottawa Louis Rubenstein has been bestirring himself with a vengeance, and the prospects are that the Canadian Bowling Association will become a national organization in more than name. In the past the C. B. A. has practically been a Provincial body, although teams from Montreal and Winnipeg have competed at the tournaments Different rules have governed the play in the East. Six-men teams have been the rule, instead of five, as obtains here and the system of scoring has been altogether different, being by totals, instead of games. It is proposed now to adopt the C. B. A. rules and affiliate with the association. The ten-pin game has taken hold with a firm grip all over the country, and it is only a matter of time before it ranks along with hockey and curling as a winter of pastime.

WALKING

Dan O'Leary, the famous old pedestrian has arranged a novel test of his walking powers and endurance, the incentive being a purse of $250, which two physicians, one of Boston, the other of New York, are willing to wager against O'Leary's $500.

The terms of the wager require that O'Leary must walk from the State House in Boston to the City Hall in New York in 72 hours without any sleep or rest of any kind. O'Leary will start on his attempt at 3 o'clock Wednesday morning, October 4, accompanied by the two physicians.

SWIMMING

SYRACUSE, Sept. 30.—The swimming match between William T. Donovan, New England's professional champion, and James E. Ten Eyck, Jr the new University swimming instructor which will be for the championship in the mile of American professionals promises to be a corker.

The swimmers met before at Ottawa Can., on August 27, 1910, and the local lad won. At that time, however Donovan claimed he was not in condition, and so this match was arranged The race will be for $100 a side and a purse of $200, which will be given by the Syracuse Yacht club.

The race will be held to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Yacht Club and will extend over a mile rectangular course, one quarter of a mile on a side. From the way the course will be arranged the whole of the race will be seen from the yacht clubhouse

MISCELLANEOUS

A motor boat crew, racing the other day in the Hudson, had to jump overboard in order to escape from the flames that suddenly burst out and enveloped their craft. Occurrences like this keep motor boats somewhat in the running with flying machines as means for securing adventure. The circumstances of the case also show that in one respect at least the motor boat possesses an advantage. When its crew wish to leave in a hurry they have some place to go to, for there is always water at hand. The man, in the flying machine, who jumps overboard, jumps indeed. A wonderful record is claimed by Throop, the sprinter of the University of Southern California, who, on a downgrade track is said to have run one hundred yards in eight and four-fifths seconds. Of course this is a freak performance, the down grade taking it out of the class of normal sprints. It will be better to keep the hundred yards dash on the level; in fact it is well to have all races conducted on the level.

Four hundred gallons of milk year is the average yield of a healthy cow.

In The Wide World Of Woman.

CHIFFON BLOUSES.

Prettier than ever! That's the remark of every woman who views the chiffon blouses for afternoon or evening. The makers have joined forces with artists in the planning of these models that are as varied as you can wish and even more so!

Chiffon in plain colors is slipped over figured silk, in dresden pattern or the plaid moire that is the very latest product of French looms. Then this scheme is reversed and figured chiffon is used over a brilliant plain foundation.

The peasant sleeve is prominent though it is usually over a sub-cuff that matches the lace or net yoke.

Pipings of gold or silver cord edge the edge, or the entire top of the blouse will be braided with narrow soutache and made a mass of color by silk embroidery.

Speaking of embroidery calls to our mind the extensive use of wooden beads in plaques and plastrons on the sheer chiffon. Who but the French would think of using wood on chiffon

Foulard, taffeta and velvet are combined with chiffon, while the inevitable introduction of black is also seen

The yoke line is not very deep. It is round, square, or in a modified, dropped line and actually shows a line of contrasting color against the lace chemisette.

For occasions that demand something more ornate than a lingerie blouse, the chiffon model solves the problem in a most satisfactory manner. We are happy to meet it again!

HUMANE WORK FOR WOMEN.

In the course of an interesting paper on "How Women Can Help In Humane Work," published in the organ of the Colorado Humane Society it is stated that even a poor sort of a man will yield to a woman's request especially when he knows she is right —it is in the nature of him. But it is just as firmly fixed in his nature to resent and resist an order from a woman. To comply with her request tickles his vanity; to comply with her order hurts that same vanity. So it happens women are generally disappointed and often discouraged when they come to exercise their powers as human cofficers—and all by the workings of this usually unconsidered law of human and especially masculine nature. After having thus indicated the don't side of humane effort, the writer goes on to suggest ways in which women can surely help animals For instance, if the gentler sex would decline to do business with a firm, or receive goods delivered by one whose horses are abused or neglected, they would be using the most powerful instrument of coercion — self-interest No business man is going to lose trade merely to indulge in abuse or neglect his stock. The women of any community have it in their power to make or break any man or firm in it. A mere handful of them very nearly has that power in every community One good customer can enforce good treatment of the horses of almost any firm."

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Many girls are not able to take long tramps on account of the condition of their feet. Feet properly shod so that the ankle and instep are well supported should be ready for good service A well known beauty attributes her lovely complexion to a daily brisk walk of five miles in the fresh air.

Tears have their use, apart from the crying aspect. The eye requires to be kept clear and clean and tears perform this duty. A striking example of this is shown when the eye is hurt. It at once commences to water, and often this natural method of cleansing relieves the pain and removes the cause of discomfort.

Paleness of the face, with dark rings under the eyes, together with loss of appetite, lassitude and nervousness, indicates anaemia, which usually attacks young women For this plenty of plain, nourishing food should be eaten at regular hours, plenty of outdoor exercise should be taken and one should spend as much time as possible outdoors. Sleep with the bedroom window open and on a hard mattress A course of tonic should probably be taken, to improve the appetite, enrich the blood and give tone to the whole system.

FASHION NOTES.

Often the unbecomingness of dead white to the woman with a sallow complexion is offset by a small bow of black velvet or satin at the throat.

Many girls have great trouble to keep their low-cut shoes and pumps from slipping off at the heel. A remedy for this can be found by having very narrow waxed tape run through the binding at the top of the shoe and tied under the rosette or buckle at the front.

It is predicted that brown and black furs will be the favorites for the winter. These rich dark colorings are much more generally becoming than the cold greys of the silver fox, squirrel or astrakan. The white furs are always pretty, but are often trying in the extreme.

The touch of black which has been so popular all summer will continue to be a feature of the fall. The flat pump bow, with often a jabot of lace beneath, is a becoming finish for the Dutch collar or the standing collar. A black tie gives a smart touch to colored frocks and a crisp little black tie with dangling jet earrings and a big black hat makes a most fetching picture.

To what perfection of style the English tailors have brought the outside coat for motoring, and for general rough wear! They have a distinctive cut which one never sees in any other country, and their wonderful Irish and Scotch tweeds, in countless designs and colors—especially in those of a dull, soft, greenish tint, or in the beautiful heather brown, are the smartest things in the world. The possessor of a "Burbery" coat of this material, and made in London, is indeed lucky, for we can show nothing on this side that compares to it.

In the inimitable smart shops of Bond Street (London) shopping bags, card cases and pocketbooks—displayed for the first time during the last ten days—are made of an exquisite, pale cafe au lait suede with mountings of gold, that for delicate beauty and distinction it would be difficult to match. The new shopping bags are much smaller than those that were in use last winter and are rather flat. The English bags described are an expensive novelty, as the leather soils easily and cannot be cleaned satisfactorily. It is well known that the English lead the world in the manufacture of articles in leather, and nowhere else can be found such variety, beauty and perfection in motor bags as are to be seen there at present. These bags are about twelve inches long, ten inches wide, and six inches deep. Made of crimson, dark blue, black or violet leather, the inside is a marvel of compactness and convenience, the toilet articles fitting in side pockets and mounted in gold.

The last word of the present moment in Paris hats—the average length of life of a hat in Paris is one month—is a black silk beaver hat with trimmings of great, pink velvet roses. A wonderfully becoming hat to its wearer, topping a costume of white lace trimmed with black velvet, in a big scoop shape, is trimmed with these great, pink roses set close together about the crown, below a veritable hedge of airy black aigrettes. In front the scoop brim clasps and nearly hides the face to the ears; at the back it lifts high; its space is filled with short, curling, black feathers.

Six minutes is all the time required for brewing Red Rose Tea, and the result is a beverage of matchless flavor and satisfying strength. The verdict of your family will be that

BOY SCOUTS.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 3.—It is most likely that from twenty to thirty Boy Scouts representing various cities of Ontario will go to the King's coronation in June. Despatches received today from Liverpool state that General Baden-Powell is giving most enthusiastic reports of the quality and efficiency of Canadian Boy Scouts.

NEW GOVERNOR.

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—It is rumored that Senator J. D. McGregor, of New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, the First Vice-President of the Nova Scotia Steel Company, will be offered the Lieutenant-Governorship of Nova Scotia in succession to the late D. C. Fraser. The appointment has not yet been considered by the Cabinet but it is considered probable. The ensuing vacancy in the Senate would then probably be filled by Mr. Hance J. Logan, ex-M.P. It is understood that Senator McGregor was once before offered the Governorship.

Pride of Toronto Back After Strenuous Tour

Queen's Own Return Looking The Picture of Health--Earl Grey Reviews The Regiment and Congratulates The Men on The Share They Have Taken in Consolidating The Empire.

Quebec, Oct. 3.—The steamer Canada of the Dominion Line, bringing the Q.O.R. fresh from their English laurels, arrived in port at 10.30 yesterday morning. The commissioner's wharf had been decorated with flags of all nations, on account of the arrival of the regiment.

Earl Grey, accompanied by Lady Grey, stood on the dock and watched the regiment disembark and get into regimental formation. Then he walked in front of each company with Col. Sir Henry Pellatt, and looked the men over. After that he returned to his carriage in front of the corps, mounted that and gave an address. He said:

"I congratulate you, gentlemen, on the parts you have individually and collectively played in what appears to have struck the popular imagination as an almost epoch-making one in the education of the Empire. We have read with pride the reports of the enthusiasm evoked in England by the smartness and efficiency of the Queen's Own, and more especially have we learned with loyal gratification of the royal marks of approval and encouragement the regiment received from our sovereign."

Col. Pellatt is looking the picture of health, having received at sea by wireless good news of his son. He refused to be transferred in midocean from the Canada to the Empress of Britain, to return to England, according to arrangements taken, preferring to stay with his regiment and return his men to Toronto, but he intends to start in eight or ten days from Toronto for London, to bring back his son with him, when he will be well enough to undertake the trip.

Out of thirty-six officers, ten, said Col. Pellatt, has been affected with typhoid fever in England, which, according to him, had been caused by certain poisoned food that they had taten, or bad water they had drunk somewhere. His son had been very low for some days, but he was considered now as out of danger and progressing very favorably. The latest news says all the officers who have been left in the hospital are in fair way of recovery.

The hard work has done wonders for the men physically. Their friends will be surprised when they get home. During manoeuvres the fat ones lost their superfluous flesh, and all hardened up. Those who arrive home lean can blame it on sickness. The ones who were not sick have spent the week getting fat. It is surprising how slump one can become during a week of inactivity after a long season of hard work. However, the seasick ones have been doing fairly well in the eating line for the past two or three days.

On Tuesday a storm sprang up, and about ninety per cent. of the regiment were sick. In calm weather half the regiment is fed at once and the other half the next. During the storm, and for a couple of days after, there was only one sitting, and there was sparse attendance at that. Thursday the biggest storm since March last swept the ocean, but strange to relate, few were ill. The men had become innured to life on "the briny," and took an interest in watching the huge waves. Consequently the attendance at meals was fairly large.

BANK MANAGER TO STAND TRIAL

Robert E. Cugan, Former Manager of Farmer's Bank At Athens Committed.

FORMER TELLER TESTIFIES.

Melvyn Forrest, Who Is Now Awaiting Sentence Tells How Alleged Shortages at Athens Branch Grew.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Oct. 3.—The preliminary hearing in the Athens bank case was continued Saturday before Police Magistrate Deacon, resulting in the committal for trial of Robert E. Cughan, former manager of the Farmers Bank at that place, on a charge of converting to his own use a sum of about $9,000. The prosecution sprung a surprise by having Cughan arrested on a second charge, that of falsifying returns to the head office, concerning which there seems to be indisputable proof.

The investigation of the accusation of theft brought out the other feature of the case, and Inspector Fitzgibbon promptly swore to the information. Cughan was remanded to jail, but hopes to arrange for bail to-morrow, which will likely be granted by the county judge and police magistrate.

The star witness against Cughan is Melvyn Forrest, the former teller, who has pleaded guilty to stealing $500 and is now awaiting sentence. He was on the stand practically the whole of the last session of the court, and gave sensational evidence. He testified that on April 11 last there were accumulated shortages, amounting in all to some $240, taken at various times by Forrest, Cughan and Spence, in the proportion of $89, $131 and $20 respectively. A note to cover the shortages was drawn up in favor of the bank for five months by Cughan, who directed Forrest to sign the name of Abel Cughan, his father, to it.

LE NEVE'S TRIAL MAY BE PUT OFF

Ordeal Will Likely Seriously Affect Health of Young Woman.

INFATUATED WITH CRIPPEN.

But The Young Girl Declares That if She Regains Her Liberty She Will Commit Suicide — Prison Doctor Worried About Her.

London, Oct. 3.—Ethel Le Neve, who is being held for trial on the charge of being an accessory after the fact, to the murder of Belle Elmore, the American actress, whose husband, Dr. Hawley Harvey Crippen, is held as her murderer, is in a delicate condition. The prison doctor fears that if she is placed on trial in her present condition it will have serious effects on her. Miss Le Neve remains unshaken in her infatuation for Crippen, but declares that if she gains her liberty she will commit suicide.

GODERICH ORGAN FACTORY BURNS

Fire Discovered in Basement of Concern Spreads with Great Rapidity.

LOSS IS $100,000.

Spontaneous Combustion Believed to Have Been the Cause of Conflagration — Stratford and Clinton Rush Fire Fighters to the Scene—Part of Town Threatened.

Goderich, Oct. 3—About nine o'clock Saturday night fire was discovered in the basement of the Goderich Organ Co.'s factory on the corner of East street and Cambria road. The firemen arrived promptly on the scene and managed to keep the fire inside the building until about 10.30 p.m., when the flames broke through the roof.

There was a strong northwest wind blowing, almost a gale, and it looked as though one section of the town was doomed. Help was telephoned for from Clinton and Stratford.

Showers of sparks and blazing pieces of wood were blown as far as a quarter of a mile on the windward side of the fire, and the flames almost reached across the street. It was only by the energy of the firemen and the citizens that the nearby houses were saved, and, had these caught fire, nothing would have saved the eastern portion of the town.

At 11 p.m. the building was one mass of flames, the roof and the top story of the walls having fallen. The firemen now used all their endeavors to save the other building belonging to the company. At midnight the fire was under control, but still blazing briskly, owing to the oil and other inflammable material in the building.

The Clinton and Stratford Fire Companies arrived on the G. T. R. train at 1 a.m., the train being held at Stratford to load their equipment. Although the fire was under complete control of the local firemen when the visitors arrived, they did some good work assisting to extinguish the fire. All the huge lumber piles at the back of the factory were saved.

The building, plant and stock which it contained is a total loss, amounting to about $100,000, covered by the usual insurance.

The fire started in the northeast corner of the building, in the basement near the oil house. The cause can only be conjectured, spontaneous combustion being the most likely explanation. The watchman was the only person in the building at the time, and had made his rounds at 8 o'clock, and found everything O. K. At a few minutes to 9 o'clock, in making his rounds, he smelled smoke, and immediately turned in the alarm.

TIMES BUILDING COMPLETE WRECK

Nearly Twenty Dead as Result of Outrage Committed Saturday.

FIRE FOLLOWS EXPLOSION.

Officials Say Union Men are Responsible — Attempt Made to Blow Up Three Other Places By the Perpetrators of the Times Outrage.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 3—The building occupied by The Times Publishing Co. was destroyed by fire Saturday morning and there is a heavy death list, estimated at between 15 and 20.

An attempt to destroy the residence of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, publisher of The Times, by an infernal machine was made following the explosion which earlier destroyed the buildings and plant of The Times. A suspected effort to blow up the auxiliary plant of that paper is also reported. It was however, in the destruction of The Times' buildings that the only serious damage was done.

The fire was proceeded by an explosion and immediately the building was enveloped in flames. The explosion occurred on the second floor of an addition to the old building.

The editorial rooms were on the third floor, but it is believed the greater part of the men on this floor escaped death.

One of the reportorial staff, so far as could be learned, was in the local room at the time of the explosion.

The mortality was not confined to The Times' employes, for one fireman lost his life.

A powerful infernal machine was also found Saturday in the residence of Secretary Zeechandlaar, secretary of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association.

Gen. Otis, who is on his way home from Mexico, and other responsible heads of The Times, unequivocally charge The Times' building disaster and the narrowly averted attempts at further destruction of life and property to labor union sources. The leaders of union labor repudiate the accusation and offer all aid in their power to detect the culprits.

The Times made public the following telegram from Gen. Otis: "Your wire, with its terrible news, reached me this morning. I am amazed at the desperation of the criminal conspirators in destroying The Times' building, and slaying its loyal defenders, whose loss I deeply deplore, but The Times itself will live on, bravely defending the vital and essential principle of industrial freedom, under which law must yet triumph in the entire nation." (Signed) Harrison Gray Otis.

For twenty years, following a quarrel with the Typographical Union, and the changing of The Times to a non-union paper, Gen. Otis has fought unionism. He has been ably seconded in this fight by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, whose secretary's home was the object of a frustrated dynamiting attempt Saturday.

The president of the local Typographical Union issued orders that union printers may work with the non-union printers of The Times in any of the local newspaper offices in setting up copy for The Times. This was announced after a consultation of the union men and the managers of other newspapers.

The City Council met in special session Saturday and appropriated $25,000 to determine the cause of The Times' explosion, and provided a reward of $2,500 for the capture of those responsible for the outrage.

Mayor Alexander and the City Council, meeting with other city officers and labor union leaders during the day, agreed to call off the union labor parade, planned for next Monday night as a demonstration against the local conditions alleged to be hostile to the interests of union labor.

The death list of the disaster probably will total 19. There are four known dead, and 15 are missing, whose bodies probably lie in the still smoking ruins of The Times building.

The entire building was in ruins at 1.45, and but two walls were standing. In addition to the complete plant of The Times, the building contained the large jobbing and commercial plant of the American Engraving Co. The property loss is estimated at $500,000.

The force of the explosion was exerted on the mechanical departments of the paper, and most of the dead and injured were members of these departments.

BARGE SAFE.

(INTELLIGENCER SPECIAL.)

KINGSTON, Oct. 3.—It is believed now that the barge Sherman, which was thought to be lost with all hands, is safe. A steamer reported seeing her safely anchored in a sheltered spot.
